EDITOR'S NOTE

THE text of the present volume is the result of an independent examination of the early Quarto and the First Folio editions of Shakespeare's works. The version used as a basis has been chosen after a separate investigation of the state of the case for each play; and the grounds for the choice have been indicated in the special introductions. In the consideration of the emendations of previous editors, much use has been made of the collations in the monumental works of Messrs. Clark and Wright and of Dr. H. H. Furness, as well as of more recent editions of single plays and of the poems. The text will be found to be, in its adherence to the readings of the early editions, slightly more conservative than those in current use. This is especially the case in the matter of stage directions, entrances, exits, and the like; in the treatment of which it has been rendered possible, for the first time in an edition for general reading, to make the important distinction between directions that are contemporary and those that are due to modern editors. In cases where the directions are modern they are enclosed in [brackets]; where they are substantially those of editions not later than 1623 they are unbracketed, or are set aside by a single bracket only, or, when occurring within a line, are enclosed in (parentheses). Further, in the dialogue itself, when the text of a play is based on, say, that of the First Folio, and passages absent from the Folio are supplied from a Quarto, such passages are also bracketed. This is intended to meet the objection justly made to most current texts that, in the case of such a play as Hamlet, it is usually printed in a composite form, longer than it was in any of the versions in which it was played or published in Shakespeare's own time, and containing, along with all additions, passages meant to be dropped when the others were added.

The punctuation of the early editions is so hopelessly erratic as to be often useless for any but antiquarian purposes; and the current punctuation is modified from the quite unauthoritative practice of the editors of the eighteenth century. I have ventured to re-punctuate frankly throughout according to modern usage, gaining, it is hoped, a considerable advantage in clearness without any additional sacrifice of authority. The use of the apostrophe has raised some difficult and interesting points, the consideration of which has resulted in a decision of some importance in the matter of metre. In spite of the comparative carelessness of the printing of the First Folio, it has been found that there is clearly discernible a somewhat remarkable consistency in the insertion or omission of the e of ed endings. To the practice of the early editions in this regard, therefore, the same respect has been shown as in the case of the text in general; i. e., the original has been departed from only when it seemed fair to believe that there was a mistake of the copyist or printer. The result is that the ed is printed, and was apparently sounded, much more frequently than we are accustomed to see and hear it. In many cases where no new syllable is added to the line, this preservation of the full ending points to a different elision from that usually made, threat'ned, for example, instead of threaten'd. This often leads to a distinct gain in sonority, and sometimes to a marked change in rhythm. The practice of the early editions is exceptional in the case of monosyllables in ied, being on the whole against the use of the apostrophe; so in such cases I have preserved the e even when not syllabic, representing, for example, the Folio dyde by died rather than by the somewhat misleading d'i'd. The method employed in modern editions in this whole matter neither preserves the clues afforded by the originals, nor clearly indicates the pronunciation intended by the editors.

In order to make easy the use of the present volume in connection with such standard works of reference as Bartlett's Concordance, the line-numbering of the Globe edition has been adhered to, with these differences, that the lines are numbered in fives instead of in tens, and the numbering is carried through the prose as well as the verse.

The special introductions are intended to summarize the ascertained facts on such questions as date, authenticity, and sources; and to indicate in connection with the last of these the main features of Shakespeare's treatment of his material in each play.

Scholarly opinion on the dates of the dramas has now reached such a degree of harmony as to suggest the arranging of the plays in chronological order, according to the approximate date of composition. The Folio division into Comedies, Histories, and Tragedies has, however, been preserved; the chronological order being adopted in the case of the Comedies and Tragedies, while for obvious reasons the Histories have been retained in their historical sequence.

The mass of detail to be dealt with in such an undertaking as the constituting of an independent text of Shakespeare is so great that many slips, inconsistencies, and faults of judgement are bound to have occurred. To any one who may draw my attention to these I shall be grateful. Meantime, I wish to express my warmest thanks for assistance and advice received from many friends, and more especially from my colleagues on the faculties of Harvard and Columbia Universities.

PREFATORY NOTE TO THE SECOND EDITION

THE most important change in the present edition is in the inclusion of the introductory matter — preface, dedication, commendatory verses, and the like — from the First Folio of 1623. The importance of these documents to the student of Shakespeare, both from their intrinsic interest and from their historical relation to the first collected edition of his works, is sufficient excuse for reproducing them here. The other changes consist of some dozen corrections of typographical and other mistakes, for drawing my attention to which I am indebted to my friends Professors Gummere, Wendell, Schelling, and Armes, Dr. H. M. Ayres, Mr. H. W. L. Dana, and Mr. H. B. Hinckley, and to members of the staff of the Riverside Press. Further suggestions towards the accuracy of the volume will be thankfully received.

PREFATORY NOTE TO THE THIRD EDITION

IN this third edition a number of further corrections have been made, mainly of details in the text. For bringing the necessity of these changes to my notice, I am under obligation to Professors A. H. Thorndike of Columbia, O. F. Emerson of Western Reserve, and J. Q. Adams of Cornell, and to several of my students, especially Dr. R. G. Martin and Mr. F. C. Walker of Harvard.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

I

THE name of Shakespeare was of wide and frequent occurrence in the midlands of England in the sixteenth and preceding centuries; and this fact, along with the scarcity of exact documentary evidence, makes even the immediate ancestry of the dramatist a matter of less than absolute certainty. But it is much more than probable that he was the son of one John Shakespeare, a dealer in agricultural produce, who at the time of William's birth was a person of increasing importance in the town of Stratford-on-Avon in Warwickshire. John Shakespeare's wife was Mary Arden, the youngest daughter of Robert Arden, a substantial farmer and landowner of Wilmcote, near Stratford. Their first son and third child, William, was baptized on April 26, 1564, the exact date of his birth being unrecorded. The history of his childhood is purely a matter of inference. He would naturally enter, as Rowe says he did, the grammar school of his native town, since he was entitled to free education there; and from what is known of the usual curricula of such schools at that period it is to be supposed that his studies were chiefly in Latin grammar and literature. Four years after the poet's birth, John Shakespeare had reached the most honorable municipal office, that of High Bailiff; but after 1572 there are signs that his fortunes had begun to decline. He absented himself from the meetings of the town council, and was deprived of office; and the nature of his financial transactions indicates that he was sinking deeply into debt. He may have withdrawn his son from school to aid him in business; for Aubrey, who died in 1697, says of the poet, "I have been told heretofore by some of the neighbours that when he was a boy he exercised his father's trade," which, according to this antiquary, was that of a butcher. Aubrey adds the two often-quoted statements: "When he kill'd a calf, he would doe it in a high style and make a speech. There was at that time another butcher's son in this towne, that was held not at all inferior to him for a naturall witt, his acquaintance, and coetanean, but dyed young."

The only additional information we have regarding Shakespeare's early years in Stratford pertains to his marriage, which took place when he was in his nineteenth year. No record of the actual ceremony has been found, but the date is approximately fixed by a document in the registry of the diocese of Worcester, dated November 28, 1582, in which two Stratford farmers gave bonds to free the bishop of responsibility in case of the subsequent discovery of any impediment rendering invalid the prospective marriage of William Shakespeare to Anne Hathaway. This Anne Hathaway is usually identified with Agnes, daughter of Richard Hathaway, a farmer of Shottery, in the parish of Stratford; and from the inscription on her tombstone it appears that she was eight years older than her husband. On May 26, 1583, the Stratford Registers record the baptism of "Susanna, daughter to William Shakspeare;" and in February, 1584, the baptisms of "Hamnet and Judeth sonne and daughter to William Shakspeare." These few facts comprise all that is certainly known about Shakespeare's life before his removal to London; but mention must be made of one famous tradition. It is thus recorded by Rowe in 1709: "He had, by a misfortune common enough to young fellows, fallen into ill company; and amongst them, some that made a frequent practice of Deer-stealing engag'd him with them more than once in robbing a Park that belong'd to Sir Thomas Lucy of Cherlecot, near Stratford. For this he was prosecuted by that gentleman, as he thought, somewhat too severely; and in order to revenge that ill usage, he made a ballad upon him. And tho' this, probably the first essay of his Poetry, be lost, yet it is said to have been so very bitter, that it redoubled the prosecution against him to that degree, that he was oblig'd to leave his business and family in Warwickshire, for some time, and shelter himself in London." This exploit is recorded also by Archdeacon Davies of Saper-ton in Gloucestershire in the latter part of the seventeenth century; and corroboration of a different kind is found in the supposed allusion to Lucy and his coat of arms in the "dozen white luces" on Shallow's "old coat" in The Merry Wives of Windsor, i. i. 1-23. The date of the poaching affair is unknown, but is generally conjectured to have been 1585, and his departure is placed by many biographers in that year or the next. Belief in a germ of truth in the legend, however, does not carry with it the necessity of supposing that Shakespeare's migration to London was due to Lucy's persecution. Interest in the stage, with which he seems to have become connected soon after his arrival in the metropolis, may have begun before he left home. While he was still a small boy, the actors of the Queen's Company and of the Earl of Worcester's Company were officially received in Stratford by his father as High Bailiff; and four companies visited the town in 1587. Those who place his removal as late as 1587, do so chiefly in order to find in the visit of the theatrical companies in that year a possible motive and occasion for the change.

The circumstances and occupation of Shakespeare on his first arrival in London are as uncertain as the date and cause of his leaving Stratford. Various late traditions unite in assigning to him some humble office in connection with the theatre, that of his holding horses outside the door being first printed in 1753. It is known, however, that by 1592 he had achieved considerable reputation as an actor and had begun to write. The company of which he was early a member, and to which he belonged during the greater part, if not the whole, of his career, was that known successively as the Earl of Leicester's (-1588), Lord Strange's (1588-92), Lord Derby's (1592-94), the Lord Chamberlain's (1594-July, 1596), Lord Hunsdon's (July, 1596-March, 1597), the Lord Chamberlain's (1597-1603), and finally, His Majesty's (1603-). Of the two playhouses in London at the beginning of his career, The Theatre is the one in which his later associations make it probable that he first acted. Others in which this company performed were The Rose, Newington Butts, The Curtain, and, after 1599, The Globe. It is doubtful whether Shakespeare was often on the stage after his company began to occupy The Blackfriars about Christmas, 1609. To these must be added the scenes of the performances given in many provincial towns while the company was touring, from Dover to Bristol and from Richmond to Coventry. There is no satisfactory evidence that Shakespeare ever accompanied any of the English actors who performed in Scotland or on the Continent, or, indeed, that he was ever out of England at all. As to his skill as an actor, Chettle stated in 1592 that he was "exelent in the qualitie he professes," and a later report, recorded by Aubrey, says that he acted "exceedingly well." His name ranks high in the actors' lists of his time; he played in Jonson's Every Man in his Humour and Sejanus; and tradition associates his name with the parts of the Ghost in Hamlet and of Adam in As You Like It, neither character, it must be allowed, being one likely to be assigned to the leading performer. That he had thought deeply and wisely on the purpose and methods of theatrical art is proved by the speech of Hamlet to the players.

As early as 1592, Shakespeare's success in theatrical matters was sufficiently marked to call forth an envious attack from Robert Greene, who died in September of that year. Addressing his fellow playwrights, Greene speaks of the actors as "those puppets . . . that speake from our mouths; those anticke garnisht in our colours. Is it not strange that I, to whom they al have beene beholding, is it not like that you to whome they all have beene beholding, shall, were ye in that case that I am now, be both at once of them forsaken? Yes, trust them not: for there is an upstart Crow, beautified with our feathers, that with his Tyggers heart wrapt in a Players hide, supposes he is as well able to bumbast out a blanke verse as the best of you: and being an absolute Johannes Factotum, is in his owne conceit the only Shake-scene in a cuntry. . . . Let those apes imitate your past excellence, and never more acquaint them with your admired inventions; . . . for it is pittie men of such rare wits should be subject to the pleasures of such rude groomes." The words italicized are a parody on the line, "O tiger's heart wrapt in a woman's hide!" which occurs in both The True Tragedie of Richard Duke of Yorke and 3 Henry VI, i. iv. 137; and the word-play in "Shake-scene" confirms the interpretation which finds in the passage a denunciation of Shakespeare for his work in revising plays such as Henry VI, of the earlier forms of which Greene and his friends had presumably been the authors. A Groat's-worth of Wit bought with a Million of Repentance, in which the passage occurs, was published after Greene's death by Henry Chettle, who in December of the same year issued an apology in the prefatory address to his own Kind-Harts Dreame. "I am as sory," he says, and he is understood to be speaking of Shakespeare, "as if the originall fault had been my fault, because myselfe have seene his demeanor no lesse civill, than he exelent in the qualitie he professes; — besides, divers of worship have reported his uprightness of dealing, which argues his honesty, and his facetious grace in writing, that aprooves his art."

We thus find Shakespeare at the age of twenty-eight a person of some importance in theatrical circles, and recognized as a man to be reckoned with both as actor and as writer. In the two following years his versatility showed itself still farther in the publication of the highly popular Venus and Adonis and Lucrece; and the suggestion of good relations with men of rank contained in Chettle's phrase, "divers of worship," is made more definite by the terms of the dedications of these poems to the Earl of Southampton. The history of his next few years is mainly contained in the list of the dramas he produced; but there are other evidences of steady progress in fortune and repute. Already in 1594 he had been summoned to play before the Queen along with the most distinguished actors of the day; and from 1595 till long after his death, appeared a series of publications, poems as well as plays, with which he had nothing to do, but to which unscrupulous publishers attached his name or initials, thus testifying to the market-value of his reputation.

Meantime, in Stratford, his father's affairs were going from bad to worse, until in 1596 the stopping of all actions for debt suggests that the dramatist had returned and restored the family fortunes. In August of that year his only son Hamnet died. In that year, too, an attempt to increase the family prestige was made in the name of John Shakespeare, though probably on the initiative of the poet, by applying to the College of Heralds for the grant of a coat of arms. Two drafts of such a grant are extant dated 1596, assigning to John Shakespeare a shield described thus: "Gould on a bend sable a speare of the first, steeled, argent; and for his creast or cognizance a faulcon, his winges displayed argent, standing on a wrethe of his coullors, supporting a speare gould steeled as aforesaid, sett upon a healmett with mantelles and tasselles as hath been accustomed." The grant does not seem to have been issued at this time; but three years later an application was made for an "exemplification" of the coat, the previous right to wear it being taken for granted. This application was successful, and the Shakespeares were henceforth regarded as entitled to the style of "gentlemen." A more substantial evidence of the improved status of the family was afforded in 1597, when the dramatist bought and repaired New Place, then the largest house in Stratford. He did not, however, take up his permanent residence there till several years later. Various other legal and financial transactions indicate that he had come to be regarded as a man of substance; and his profession was sufficiently remunerative easily to account for this. It has been reckoned that his income as an actor must have averaged before the end of the century about £130 a year, and to this must be added about £20 annually from his plays. After The Globe was built in 1599 he became a shareholder, and the profits from this source are likely to have more than doubled his income. Gifts from patrons were not uncommon, and there may be some ground for the tradition handed down by Rowe from D'Avenant, that Shakespeare received from Southampton the gift of £1000. Money is usually reckoned to have had at that period from five to eight times its present purchasing power; but the difficulty of determining this with certainty, and the fragmentary and inconclusive nature of the bases of our information as to the financial side of the Elizabethan theatre, make it necessary to receive with caution the results of the calculations that have been made of Shakespeare's gains. There is no doubt, however, that he was an extremely successful man, that his affairs were conducted with much practical sense and shrewdness, and that he died rich. In his will he left £350 in money, with a considerable amount of real estate and other property. There is in his life, certainly, no evidence that he shared the alleged incapacity of men of imaginative genius for practical affairs.

Along with this material prosperity, Shakespeare gained steadily in literary reputation. As early as 1598, Francis Meres, in his Palladis Tamia or Wit's Treasury, wrote "A Comparative Discourse of our English Poets with Greek, Latin, and Italian Poets;" and here he awards the highest praise to Shakespeare as both poet and playwright. "As the soule of Euphorbus was thought to live in Pythagoras, so the sweete wittie soule of Ovid lives in mellifluous and hony-tongued Shakespeare; witnes his Venus and Adonis, his Lucrece, his sugred Sonnets among his private friends, etc. As Plautus and Seneca are accounted the best for Comedy and Tragedy among the Latines, so Shakespeare among the English is the most excellent in both kinds for the stage; for Comedy, witnes his Gentlemen of Verona, his Errors, his Love Labours Lost, his Love Labours Wonne, his Midsummer Night Dreame, and his Merchant of Venice; for tragedy, his Richard the 2., Richard the 3., Henry the 4., King John, Titus Andronicus, and his Romeo and Juliet.

"As Epius Stolo said that the Muses would speake with Plautus tongue, if they would speak Latin, so I say that the Muses would speak with Shakespeares fine filed phrase, if they would speake English."

References by his literary contemporaries are fairly numerous, and are in general in this enthusiastic vein. Allusions to his personality reflect a kindly feeling in the speakers, and indicate a genial disposition in the poet, with a love of wit and good fellowship. Legendary gossip suggesting occasional extreme conviviality need not be taken too seriously, and probably implies nothing more than a fondness for making merry with his friends.

The documentary records of the later years of Shakespeare's life are concerned chiefly with law-suits and the investment of money. They are of interest chiefly as showing in Shakespeare some of his father's tendency to litigiousness, and that carefulness of his pecuniary interests already referred to. His father died in 1601; his mother in 1608. He was not a shareholder in any of the London theatres at his death, and it is not known when he sold out; but it is conjectured that about 1611 he disposed of these interests and retired to Stratford to enjoy his means in leisure. On April 23, 1616, he died, and two days later was buried beneath the chancel of Stratford Church according to a right acquired as part-owner of the tithes. Within seven years of his death an elaborate monument to his memory was placed in the wall of the church, and in it a portrait bust. But the so-called restoration of this piece of sculpture in the middle of the eighteenth century appears to have been in fact a substitution, so that the present effigy is of no value as a likeness. The extant pictures of its original state are sufficient to invalidate the restoration, but do not themselves enable us to form a satisfactory picture of the man. The only well-authenticated portrait is the engraving by Martin Droeshout prefixed to the Folio editions of the plays, and this is far from lifelike. It is supposed that Droeshout worked from a painting, but there is yet no general agreement as to which, if any, of the existing claimants was his original. Two seem to have stronger support than the others, that sometimes known as the "Flower Portrait," now hanging in the Memorial Picture Gallery at Stratford; and the "Ely Palace Portrait," now in the possession of the Birthplace Trustees. The former of these is reproduced as the frontispiece to the present volume. Pretended portraits have been fabricated without number, and even those to which no suspicion of fraud attaches, with the one exception of the Droeshout engraving, lack a sufficient pedigree.

Of Shakespeare's immediate family there survived him his wife, his two daughters, and one brother. Mrs. Shakespeare lived till August 6, 1623, dying three months before the publication of the great collected edition of her husband's works known as the First Folio. The elder daughter, Susanna, married Dr. John Hall, and died in 1649, leaving one child, Elizabeth. This Elizabeth Hall, later Mrs. Thomas Nash, and still later Lady Barnard, died in 1670 without issue. The younger daughter, who married Thomas Quiney of Stratford, died in 1662, having outlived her three sons. Lady Barnard was thus the last surviving descendant of the poet.

II

The chronology of the works of Shakespeare is, except in the case of the two long poems and a few plays, the result of inferences of varying degrees of certitude. Four main divisions are generally recognized, and each of them has a fairly distinctive content. The first stretches from the undated beginnings of his work as a dramatist till about 1594, and it contains probably a greater variety of kinds of production than any other. It is no mere guesswork to call this a period of experiment. Besides the poems, we find in it representatives of all three kinds of drama then in vogue, Comedy, History, and Tragedy. In the last of these kinds he created no entirely original work, but in Titus Andronicus and the first draft of Romeo and Juliet he apparently made over plays which had already been performed. From whatever reason, he seems after these experiments to have laid aside Tragedy for a time, to take it up again after he had mastered the more technical elements of his art, and had a larger experience of life on which to draw.

In History also he began with the revision of the work of others in the three parts of Henry VI; and when he constructed plays for himself he was clearly under the influence of Marlowe. In Richard III, conception of theme and manipulation of character are alike Marlowesque; and both in that play and in King John the echo of the "mighty line" of Marlowe is clearly discernible in the versification. Richard II, in spite of its parallelism in theme to Marlowe's Edward II, shows, both in the treatment of the futile king and in his highly poetic utterances, abundant indications of Shakespeare's own characteristic manner.

In Comedy the lines of experiment are drawn with singular clearness. Love's Labour's Lost is a playful burlesque upon current fashions, and it derives its interest mainly from its clever and amusing dialogue, characterization and plot being alike slight. In The Comedy of Errors the interest of the experiment changes from diction to the manipulation of plot and situation; for Shakespeare here found his model in the Latin Comedy, and contented himself, as Plautus did, with a treatment of character typical rather than individual. In the light of his later achievement The Two Gentlemen of Verona is more significant than the two other comedies of this first period, for here he is clearly interested in character, and it was in this respect that he later achieved his preëminence in Comedy. Of the ten or eleven plays, collaborated, revised, or original, with which Shakespeare had to do in the early nineties of the sixteenth century, The Two Gentlemen of Verona most clearly lays down the lines on which he was first to create masterpieces.

The period from 1594 to 1601 is mainly occupied with Comedy, and the Histories written in this period are more than leavened with Comedy. Henry IV, though its serious plot is filled with war and rebellion, owed its popularity to the comic elements centring in Falstaff, and constituting about half of the scenes. Henry V is free from any note of tragedy. From A Midsummer-Night's Dream to Twelfth Night we have a succession of plays of unexampled brilliance, surpassing in structure and dialogue anything that had hitherto been produced on the English stage, and in the creation of character still unrivalled. Touches of seriousness undoubtedly occur in these plays. Again and again, in the midst of the love-in-idleness with which they are chiefly occupied, we are reminded of the real business of life presently to be taken up; not infrequently the humor is mingled with pathos or grave reflection; sometimes the folly of Claudio or the fate of Shylock brings us perilously near the brink of tragedy. Yet all this does not invalidate the statement that the temper of the plays written in the last six years of the century is pre-vaillingly that of Comedy.

Equally undeniable are the change of temper and change of theme after 1601. The intrusion of Troilus and Cressida, Measure for Measure, and All's Well that Ends Well among the great Tragedies cannot be regarded as an objection to the calling of this the tragic period, since their presence serves in no degree to lighten the gloom. It is clear that for eight or nine years Shakespeare's dominant artistic interest was tragic; that is, he was immersed in the problem of presenting dramatically the results of certain elements of weakness and vice in human character.

About 1610 the tone changes once more. In the so-called Dramatic Romances we continue to see pictured the suffering brought about by sin and weakness; but the colors used are less sombre, and in the end the evil men turn from their ways and live.

All this has often been summed up before; and it is done here once more partly to gather and make more significant the chronological details scattered through the special introductions, partly to make intelligible the standing discussion as to whether from this arrangement of Shakespeare's literary activity there can be drawn evidence as to his emotional and spiritual history. The meaning of the experimental period will hardly be disputed. The collaborated and revised plays show that Shakespeare at the beginning of his career was glad to take what work was given him to do; and the original plays show him trying his hand upon all the chief dramatic types in vogue. His Venus and Adonis and Lucrece are only further instances of this versatility and curiosity. Prevailing emotional mood of any distinctive kind in this first period there is none.

With the three later divisions the case is very different. Here the temptation is obvious to interpret them respectively as periods of sunshine, gloom, and placidity in the dramatist's life. Up to a certain point this interpretation need not be quarrelled with. There is an appropriateness to the prime of life in the creation of the buoyant personalities of the Comedies and in the triumphant extrication of them from all the tangle of opposing forces invented only to be foiled. The profundity of reflection and the brooding on the mystery of life, of which the Tragedies give abundant evidence, were only possible, in the degree in which we find them, to a man who had already lived and seen much. It is hardly possible to refrain from associating the victories of good over evil in the Dramatic Romances with a mood natural to a sane spirit contemplating near the close of his career a world which had brought to him in large measure the things for which he had mainly striven. But it is easy to press this method too far. The succession of the various kinds of drama in Shakespeare's production bears a suggestive relation to what appears to have been the popular demand of the time; and if Tragedy was in vogue at a period when Shakespeare was ripe for writing it, then the world was fortunate in the coincidence. Yet the fact of this and similar coincidences should serve to guard us against supposing that the tone of the Tragedies is necessarily a reflection of gloom or pessimism in Shakespeare's soul. Great imaginative creation is, indeed, but rarely the outcome of experience immediately contemporary. Wordsworth's description of poetry as "emotion recollected in tranquillity," though not a universal formula, is most frequently a true account, and ought in itself to caution us against the dogmatism that is based on the assumption that in drama and sonnet alike "Shakespeare unlocked his heart" and left the door ajar for all the world to see. If we are to find in the poet's work a record, not perhaps of his experience, but of his attitude toward human life and human nature, it must be by methods more subtle and cautious than are implied in the kind of inference we are discussing.

III

The height of Shakespeare's preëminence has frequently led to a manner of speaking which sets him apart from his kind as something abnormal and unaccountable. Without entering into a discussion of the natural history of genius, it is desirable to recount those factors in his age and environment which explain many of his characteristics, even if they do not account for the magnitude of his achievement. For that achievement is of a range and quality so stupendous that it required for its accomplishment the highest degree of coincidence between the hour and the man.

The hour was, indeed, the most propitious that had occurred in the history of England. After the long controversies of the Reformation the country was for the time enjoying a comparative truce among warring sects. This truce was partly induced by the necessity of the nation's presenting a united front against the hostility of Spain; and the period of peril had been succeeded by a mood of exhilaration that resulted naturally from the escape from a formidable danger, and the opening up of a national future of untold possibilities of expansion and conquest. The compiling of chronicles and of endless narratives of travel and exploration in the Western Ocean expressed and symbolized the rising pride in England's past and England's future; and it supplied the basis for the most distinctively national part of the drama, that flourishing of Chronicle History which found its culmination in the martial rhetoric of Henry V.

From abroad there reached England at last the full impulse of the Renaissance. The more purely intellectual side of this movement had been delayed by the religious turmoil; but now that this was for the time assuaged, the stimulus to intellectual curiosity and the desire for imaginative entertainment had full scope. Men and books representing all the arts of the Continent poured into England, and hundreds of translations opened to those who could read no language but English the intellectual treasures of antiquity and of modern Italy, France, and Spain. A still less literate public were enabled to share the narrative element in this stream by the presentation of stories on the stage; and the plays based on Plutarch's Lives and French and Italian novelle represent respectively the classical and the contemporary elements in this contribution.

The drama in England had always largely represented what would have been the common reading matter of the people if the people had been able to read. Miracle plays, Moralities, and Interludes were each merely the translation into action and dialogue of the stories from Scripture and the Saints' Lives, of the characteristic medieval mode of allegory, of the bourgeois humorous and satirical anecdote, which the illiterate populace could receive only by the ear. With the Revival of Learning came a vast expansion in the amount and variety of reading matter, especially on the side of secular literature and, more specifically, of the literature of entertainment; and in the reign of Elizabeth the drama showed a responsive development. In the work of Shakespeare's immediate predecessors, Lyly, Marlowe, Peele, Greene, and Kyd, the three forms of Comedy, History, and Tragedy had, partly under the influence of foreign and classical models, taken fairly definite shape. But they were still primarily dramatic arrangements of narrative rather than drama; and to Shakespeare was offered the opportunity, of which he availed himself magnificently yet gradually, of framing and applying the conception of pure drama as a distinct form of art.

In considering his equipment for this momentous task two elements must be constantly kept in mind: that which he received as an actor and manager, and that which he had as a man well-read in the literature of his time. To the former must be credited a large part of his skill as a practical playwright, a factor that has not yet received its due in the interpretation of his dramas, but which accounts for this among other facts, that so large a number of his plays are still capable of effective presentation upon the modern stage. As a student of literature, Shakespeare's range was large, but not extraordinary. Latin he had presumably learned at school, and with the works of some half-dozen Latin writers he had begun an acquaintance while a boy. But, in addition to the learned Jonson's ascription to him of "small Latin and less Greek," we have the evidence of the plays themselves that he used translations when he could get them. French he seems to have known fairly well; Italian he may have mastered to the extent of being able to extract the plot of a novel, but this is less certain. There is no evidence that he knew Spanish or Greek. The wide and detailed knowledge of history and fiction and of many arts and trades, the evidences of which lie open on every page, is no greater and no more accurate than would be expected of a mind of the quality of his, of an observation so keen, of sympathies so catholic and so intense.

Of an importance only less than the intellectual temper of the time and the moment in the development of the drama was the state of the language and of versification. Along with the enthusiasm for the classics and the cultivation of pure Latinity which characterized the Renaissance there appeared a patriotic desire to refine and dignify the vernaculars of the various countries and, among them, of England. The pedantry of the group of men of letters known as the Areopagus, the Euphuism of Lyly, and the Arcadianism of Sidney were only exaggerated instances of the wide-spread interest in what could be done with the native speech; and, in spite of grotesque eccentricities, these fashions had served to expand the resources and supple the sinews of English. Traces of this interest in feats in the manipulation of words are apparent in Shakespeare in Love's Labour's Lost and elsewhere; but the more important consideration is that when he came to write his plays he had at hand a linguistic medium whose capacities both in vocabulary and structure had not yet become hardened under the dogmatism of the schools, and whose plasticity proved of inestimable value when wielded by a master. A century earlier the language was too poor in resources for such supreme literary achievement; a century later, the settling down of convention had made such daring as Shakespeare showed in subduing it to his use all but impossible. Equal good fortune appears in the matter of prosody. Before Shakespeare began to write, drama in England had thrown off the shackles of stanza and rime which had hampered it for centuries, and had found in blank verse its appointed metre. With unerring instinct Shakespeare seized on this and played on it a variety of melodies such as had not hitherto been dreamed of.

A complete enumeration of the favorable elements in the civilization of Elizabethan England is here impossible, but enough has probably been said to indicate the extraordinary nature of the opportunity.

IV

In attempting to see what are some of the more important qualities that made it possible for Shakespeare to rise to this opportunity, it will be well to note first some of the negative elements in the case. It was not for sheer invention that Shakespeare was unique or even preëminent in his profession. Every form of drama that he touched he carried to a lofty pitch of perfection, but none of them did he create. In two or three cases he seems to have constructed the plot of a play, but such plots are slight and not distinguished by any striking originality. Whenever possible, he borrowed his stories; and the transformation he worked on them is due to a kind of imagination quite other, if much rarer, than is implied in inventive contrivance. Further, in the mechanics of his plays, he repeated himself freely. When a device, a situation, a contrast of character, proved successful on the stage, he did not scruple to use it again and again, displaying in the variations he worked on it abundant cleverness, but at the same time a poverty, or, better, an economy, of invention, in striking contrast to his lavish prodigality in thought and imagery.

The element in his plays which, one is apt to think, must have struck the more thoughtful among his contemporaries as giving them marked distinction among the works of his predecessors and rivals, is his creation of character. In range, in individuality, above all in the illusion of life, there had been nothing in dramatic literature comparable to this endless procession of actual human beings. Here were no puppets labelled with a quality or a title, no mere walking gentlemen capable of being arranged in amusing situations. The persons of the Shakespearean drama, whenever drawn in detail and set in the foreground, are marked by idiosyncrasy that stops short of caricature, are humorous, pathetic, tender, cruel, profound, shallow, or any mixture of these, just as are the people one knows. In no respect does his genius more closely approach the supernatural than in this of the creation of men and women of a truly human complexity. Other qualities already referred to must also have appealed to the contemporary audience: the brilliance of phrase and sparkle of repartee; the consummate mastery of verse — now sweet and lyrical, now throbbing with passion, now echoing the tread of armies, now heavy with thought; — the ingenuity of the stage-craft; the variety of scene and atmosphere. But to the modern student there are deeper things to be found, which may or may not have been evident to his contemporaries, of some of which the poet himself may not have been explicitly conscious.

It has been frequently charged against Shakespeare that in contrast with poets like Dante and Goethe his work embodies no religion, no philosophy. Whatever of truth there may be in this, it is surely inaccurately phrased. Certain it is he was no fanatic, the propagandist of no sect; what philosophy he had is presented in no systematic scheme. If he had been or done these things, he could not have been the supreme dramatist. But the profoundest thought is not necessarily framed into a scheme; the most philosophical artist need not speak through allegory or abstractions. Philosophical ideas find abundant expression in both the dramas and the sonnets of Shakespeare; obiter dicta occur of immense suggestiveness and power; and it is hardly possible to read the plays as a whole without becoming conscious of a characteristic attitude toward human nature and the problems of human life. The expression of this attitude naturally varies with the period and the theme. In the Histories the dominant idea is that which one finds elsewhere in the early narratives of these sad stories of the death of kings. Among the strange paradoxes of the Middle Ages none is more remarkable than the persistence, among the Christian conceptions of the Catholic Church, of the pagan goddess of Fortune. So continually is she referred to as the determining force in the destinies of the great, so awed and reverential is the tone in which her caprices are alluded to, that one is forced to the conclusion that she was to the men of that age no mere figure of speech, but a deity who was always feared and often worshipped. The narratives on which Shakespeare based his Histories were pervaded by this conception, and it survives with impressive effect in the speeches of his characters. How far he personally shared it, it is hard to say; but he availed himself of it in a hundred instances of dramatic irony, and it underlies his melancholy insistence on the merely human limitations that assert themselves in the career of every king. With no lack of appreciation of the pomp of monarchy, he yet asserts in play after play that, whether coupled with the futile piety of Henry VI, the unscrupulous tenacity of Richard III, the policy of Henry IV, or the triumphant effectiveness of Henry V,

'T is not the balm, the sceptre, and the ball,
The sword, the mace, the crown imperial,
The intertissued robe of gold and pearl,
The farced title running 'fore the King,
The throne he sits on, nor the tide of pomp
That beats upon the high shore of this world, that can separate the king from the pathos of common humanity.

In the Comedies there is no such unity of idea; but generalized reflection is abundantly evident in the dwelling in successive plays on certain tendencies of human nature and their results in action and character; such tendencies as sentimentalism, cynicism, selfishness, and self-deception. The philosophical significance of these plays stops short, as a rule, of the fifth act. The marrying off, at the close, of all eligible youths and maidens is more a concession to the convention of the happy ending demanded by the particular type of drama than the logical outcome of the characters or their deeds. One is not convinced that Shakespeare believed that this was the way things happened in life; but a comedy must end so, and he provided accordingly a conventional dénouement, too often showing traces of the perfunctoriness of his interest in such an artificial adjustment.

Very different is his treatment of the conclusion of Tragedy. Here the crime or weakness which marks the tragic hero is shown bearing its inevitable fruit in suffering and disaster; and the great Tragedies form the crown of his achievement not only because they deal with the more serious problems of life, but because here are found all the elements of poetry, characterization, and construction, in each of which he had attained mastery in earlier plays, but which now are brought to their loftiest pitch and combined. Nowhere else are the two great dramatic elements of character and plot found in such perfect balance, in such complete interaction; nowhere else are they clothed in language so weighty with thought or so glorified by imagination. But it is in the determination of the catastrophes that the philosophical supremacy of the Tragedies most appears, as it is from these that critics who find evidence of pessimism in Shakespeare produce their proof. "Here," they say, pointing to the fifth act of King Lear, "here, at least, Shakespeare loses faith; here good and bad go down together in indiscriminate disaster." But so to observe is, surely, to lose sight of the most profound distinction running through these plays, the distinction between the spiritual and the physical. From Romeo and Juliet to Coriolanus it is clear that Shakespeare hands over to natural and social law the bodies and temporal fortunes of good and bad alike, and such law is permitted its unrelenting sway. But it is equally clear that he regards the spiritual life of his creations as by no means involved in this welter of suffering and death. Occasionally, as in Macbeth, the hero's spiritual career runs at the end parallel to his worldly fortune; more often, as in Othello or Lear, the moment of physical disaster witnesses a moral purgation, a spiritual triumph; always it is possible to discern two lines of interest, two kinds of value, two clearly distinguished spheres of existence.

For the lack of correspondence between these two lines of action, the absence in Tragedy of any control of worldly happiness in the interest of the good, he attempts no explanation. For he is not concerned to construct a philosophical system, to preach a gospel. Even the all-pervading distinction just set forth is not preached or argued. It is merely implied because no treatment of the greater issues of human life could be at once true and profound without this implication. Thus this limitation, as it has been regarded by those who would have the poet an explicit philosopher, is no limitation at all, but the mark of his allegiance to the true artistic ideal, the proof that he played his own game according to its own rules, and devoted himself with unparalleled disinterestedness, unparalleled range and profundity of insight, to the picturing of things as they are.

INTRODUCTORY MATERIAL FROM THE FIRST FOLIO EDITION OF 1623

TO THE READER

THIS Figure, that thou here seest put,
It was for gentle Shakespeare cut ;
Wherein the Grauer had a strife with Nature, to out-doo the life :
O, could he but haue drawne his wit
As well in brasse, as he hath hit
His face ; the Print would then surpasse
All, that was euer vvrit in brasse.
But, since he cannot, Reader, looke
Not on his Picture, but his Booke.

Both Knights of the most Noble Order of the Garter, and our singular good LORDS.

Right Honourable,

WHILST we studie to be thankful in our particular, for the many fauors we haue receiued from your L. L. we are false vpon the ill fortune, to mingle two the most diuerse things that can bee, feare, and rashnesse; rashnesse in the enterprize, and feare of the successe. For, when we valew the places your H. H. sustaine, we cannot but know their dignity greater, then to descend to the reading of these trifles: and, while we name them trifles, we haue depriu'd our selues of the defence of our Dedication. But since your L. L. haue beene pleas'd to thinke these trifles some-thing, heeretofore; and haue prosecuted both them, and their Authour liuing, with so much fauour: we hope, that (they out-liuing him, and he not hauing the fate, common with some, to be exequutor to his owne writings) you will vse the like indulgence toward them, you haue done vnto their parent. There is a great difference, whether any Booke choose his Patrones, or finde them: This hath done both. For, so much were your L. L. likings of the seuerall parts, when they were acted, as before they were published, the Volume ask'd to be yours. We haue but collected them, and done an office to the dead, to procure his Orphanes, Guardians; without ambition either of selfe-profit, or fame: onely to keepe the memory of so worthy a Friend, & Fellow aliue, as was our SHAKESPEARE, by humble offer of his playes, to your most noble patronage. Wherein, as we haue iustly obserued, no man to come neere your L. L. but with a kind of religious addresse; it hath bin the height of our care, who are the Presenters, to make the present worthy of your H. H. by the perfection. But, there we must also craue our abilities to be considerd, my Lords. We cannot go beyond our owne powers. Country hands reach forth milke, creame, fruites, or what they haue: and many Nations (we haue heard) that had not gummes & incense, obtained their requests with a leavened Cake. It was no fault to approch their Gods, by what meanes they could: And the most, though meanest, of things are made more precious, when they are dedicated to Temples. In that name therefore, we most humbly consecrate to your H. H. these remaines of your seruant SHAKESPEARE; that what delight is in them, may be euer your L. L. the reputation his, & the faults ours, if any be committed, by a payre so carefull to shew their gratitude both to the liuing, and the dead, as is

TO THE GREAT VARIETY OF READERS

FROM the most able, to him that can but spell: There you are number'd. We had rather you were weigh'd. Especially, when the fate of all Bookes depends vpon your capacities: and not of your heads alone, but of your purses. Well! it is now publike, & you wil stand for your priuiledges wee know: to read, and censure. Do so, but buy it first. That doth best commend a Booke, the Stationer saies. Then, how odde soeuer your braines be, or your wisdomes, make your licence the same, and spare not. Iudge your sixe-pen'orth, your shillings worth, your five shillings worth at a time, or higher, so you rise to the iust rates, and welcome. But, what euer you do, Buy. Censure will not driue a Trade, or make the lacke go. And though you be a Magistrate of wit, and sit on the Stage at Black-Friers, or the Cock-pit, to arraigne Playes dailie, know, these Playes haue had their triall alreadie, and stood out all Appeales; and do now come forth quitted rather by a Decree of Court, then any purchas'd Letters of commendation.

It had bene a thing, we confesse, worthie to haue bene wished, that the Author himselfe had liu'd to haue set forth, and ouerseen his owne writings; But since it hath bin ordain'd otherwise, and he by death departed from that right, we pray you do not envie his Friends, the office of their care, and paine, to haue collected & publish'd them; and so to haue publish'd them, as where (before) you were abus'd with diuerse stolne, and surreptitious copies, maimed, and deformed by the frauds and stealthes of iniurious impostors, that expos'd them: euen those, are now offer'd to your view cur'd, and perfect of their limbes; and all the rest, absolute in their numbers, as he conceiu'd thē. Who, as he was a happie imitator of Nature, was a most gentle expresser of it. His mind and hand went together: And what he thought, he vttered with that easinesse, that wee haue scarce receiued from him a blot in his papers. But it is not our prouince, who onely gather his works, and giue them you, to praise him. It is yours that reade him. And there we hope, to your diuers capacities, you will finde enough, both to draw, and hold you: for his wit can no more lie hid, then it could be lost. Reade him, therefore; and againe, and againe: And if then you doe not like him, surely you are in some manifest danger, not to vnderstand him. And so we leaue you to other of his Friends, whom if you need, can bee your guides: if you neede them not, you can leade your selues, and others. And such Readers we wish him.

TO THE MEMORY OF MY BELOUED,
THE AVTHOR

MR. WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE :

what he hath left vs.

To draw no enuy (Shakespeare) on thy name,
Am I thus ample to thy Booke, and Fame:
While I confesse thy writings to be such,
As neither Man, nor Muse, can praise too much.
'Tis true, and all mens suffrage. But these wayes
Were not the paths I meant vnto thy praise:
For seeliest Ignorance on these may light,
Which, when it sounds at best, but eccho's right;
Or blinde Affection, which doth ne're aduance
The truth, but gropes, and vrgeth all by chance;
Or crafty Malice, might pretend this praise,
And thinke to ruine, where it seem'd to raise.
These are, as some infamous Band, or Whore,
Should praise a Matron. What could hurt her more ?
But thou art prooffe against them, and indeed
Aboue th' ill fortune of them, or the need.
I, therefore will begin. Soule of the Age !
The applause ! delight ! the wonder of our Stage !
My Shakespeare, rise ; I will not lodge thee by Chaucer, or Spenser, or bid Beaumont lye
A little further, to make thee a roome:
Thou art a Moniment, without a tombe,
And art aliue still, while thy Booke doth liue,
And we haue wits to read, and praise to giue.
That I not mixe thee so, my braine excuses ;
I meane with great, but disproportion'd Muses :
For, if I thought my iudgement were of yeeeres,
I should commit thee surely with thy peeres,
And tell, how farre thou didstst our Lily out-shine,
Or sporting Kid, or Marlowes mighty line.
And though thou hadst small Latine, and lesse Greeke,
From thence to honour thee, I would not seeke
For names ; but call forth thund'ring Æschilus,
Euripides, and Sophocles to vs,
Paccuius, Accius, him of Cordoua dead,
To life againe, to heare thy Buskin tread,

And shake a Stage: Or, when thy Sockes were on,
 Leauē thee alone, for the comparison
 Of all, that insolent Greece, or haughtie Rome sent forth, or since did from their ashes come.
 Triumph, my Britaine, thou hast one to shoue,
 To whom all Scenes of Europe homage owe.
 He was not of an age, but for all time !
 And all the Muses still were in their prime,
 When like Apollo he came forth to warme
 Our eares, or like a Mercury to charme !
 Nature her selfe was proud of his designes,
 And ioy'd to weare the dressing of his lines !
 Which were so richly spun, and wouen so fit,
 As, since, she will vouchsafe no other Wit.
 The merry Greece, tart Aristophanes,
 Neat Terence, witty Plautus, now not please;
 But antiquated, and deserted lye
 As they were not of Natures family.
 Yet must I not giue Nature all: Thy Art,
 My gentle Shakespeare, must enioy a part.
 For though the Poets matter, Nature be,
 His Art doth giue the fashion. And, that he,
 Who casts to write a liuing line, must sweat,
 (such as thine are) and strike the second heat
 Vpon the Muses anuile: turne the same,
 (And himselfe with it) that he thinkes to frame;
 Or for the lawrell, he may gaine a scorne,
 For a good Poet's made, as well as borne.
 And such wert thou. Looke how the fathers face
 Liues in his issue, euen so, the race
 Of Shakespeares minde, and manners brightly shines
 In his well torned, and true-fild lines:
 In each of which, he seemes to shake a Lance,
 As brandish't at the eyes of Ignorance.
 Sweet Swan of Auon ! what a sight it were
 To see thee in our waters yet appeare,
 And make those flights vpon the bankes of Thames,
 That so did take Eliza, and our Iames !
 But stay, I see thee in the Hemisphere
 Aduanc'd, and made a Constellation there !
 Shine forth, thou Starre of Poets, and with rage,
 Or influence, chide, or cheere the drooping Stage;
 Which, since thy flight frō hence, hath mourn'd like night,
 And despaires day, but for thy Volumes light.

TO THE MEMORIE
of the deceased Authour Maister

W. SHAKESPEARE.

Shake-speare, at length thy pious fellowes giue
The world thy Workes: thy Workes, by which, out-liue
Thy Tombe, thy name must: when that stone is rent,
And Time dissolues thy Stratford Moniment,
Here we aliuie shall view thee still. This Booke,
When Brasse and Marble fade, shall make thee looke
Fresh to all Ages: when Posteritie
Shall loath what's new, thinke all is prodegie
That is not Shake-speares; eu'ry Line, each Verse
Here shall reuiue, redeeme thee from thy Herse.
Nor Fire, nor cankring Age, as Naso said,
Of his, thy wit-fraught Booke shall once inuade.
Nor shall I e're beleene, or thinke thee dead
(Though mist) vntill our bankrout Stage be sped (Impossible) with some new straine t'out-do Passions of Iuliet, and her Romeo;
Or till J heare a Scene more nobly take,
Then when thy half-Sword parlying Romans spake.
Till these, till any of thy Volumes rest
Shall with more fire, more feeling be exprest,
Be sure, our Shake-speare, thou canst neuer dye,
But crown'd with Lawrell, liue eternally.

L. DIGGES.

To the memorie of M. W. Shake-speare.

WEE wondred (Shake-speare) that thou went'st so soone
From the Worlds-Stage, to the Graues-Tyring-roome.
Wee thought thee dead, but this thy printed worth,
Tels thy Spectators, that thou went'st but forth
To enter with applause. An Actors Art,
Can dye, and liue, to acte a second part.
That's but an Exit of Mortalitie;
This, a Re-entrance to a Plaudite.

VPON THE LINES AND LIFE OF THE FAMOUS

Scenicke Poet, Master WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THOSE hands, which you so clapt, go now, and wring
You Britaines braue; for done are Shakespeares dayes:
His dayes are done, that made the dainty Playes,
Which made the Globe of heau'n and earth to ring.
Dry'de is that veine, dry'd is the Thespian Spring,
Turn'd all to teares, and Phœbus clouds his rayes:
That corp's, that coffin now besticke those bayes,
Which crown'd him Poet first, then Poets King.
If Tragedies might any Prologue haue,
All those he made, would scarce make one to this:
Where Fame, now that he gone is to the graue
(Deaths publique tyring-house) the Nuncius is.
For though his line of life went soone about,
The life yet of his lines shall neuer out.

LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST

THE problem of dating exactly Shakespeare's earliest plays is beset with peculiar difficulties. During the first few years of his dramatic activity, he made experiments in all the three main divisions of the drama of his time, comedy, tragedy, and history; and within these divisions his versatility showed itself still farther. Thus, in the field of comedy, he seems to have laid especial stress on diction in Love's Labour's Lost, on character in The Two Gentlemen of Verona, on situation and plot in The Comedy of Errors. This variety of aim makes it hard to arrange these plays in order of production on mere internal evidence, as might have been possible had they been successive attempts along precisely the same lines; and external evidence is very scanty and inconclusive. The order adopted here is as probable as any; but the three comedies placed first should be regarded as essentially contemporaneous.

The first extant edition of Love's Labour's Lost was published as a quarto in 1598. The title-page of this edition states that it is printed "as it was presented before her Highness this last Christmas. Newly corrected and augmented by W. Shakespere." If this volume was issued before March 25, 1598 (O. S.), "last Christmas" would mean Christmas of 1598; if after March 25, it would mean Christmas of 1597. References to the play in Meres's Palladis Tamia (1598), and in Tofte's Alba or Month's Mind of a Melancholy Lover (1598), do not help to determine this point. The indication of an earlier form of the play given in the words "corrected and augmented" is corroborated by certain peculiarities in the text. The speech of Biron in iv. iii. 289-365, and the conversation between him and Rosaline in v. ii. 827-832, 847-881, show undoubted traces of revision, the earlier form of some of the lines having been retained in the later text by the mistake of the printer. We have no means of defining closely the augmentations, but from the disproportion in the length of the acts, and from the style of the speeches, it is fairly clear that they must have been chiefly in the fourth and fifth acts, and in the speeches of Biron and Rosaline. The date of this earlier version is to be conjectured from internal evidence only. The very great frequency of riming lines, the occurrence of speeches rimed alternately and in sonnet form, the slightness of the characterization, the obvious symmetry in the arrangement of the persons, the nature of the topical allusions, — all these, combined with the impression of immaturity produced by the play, have led to a fairly general agreement that it is one of Shakespeare's first independent attempts, and is to be placed not later than 1591.

The Quarto of 1598 is the direct source of the next printed text, that of the First Folio. This edition of the play, though somewhat more carefully printed than the Quarto, has no independent authority, and adds nothing save the last line and the division into acts. The present text is, accordingly, based on that of the Quarto.

No source of the plot as a whole has yet been discovered, and it is quite possible that the story was invented by Shakespeare himself. Hints may have been derived from French history. Monstrelet relates that, in the first quarter of the fifteenth century, a king of Navarre renounced his claims to certain French lordships on condition of receiving the Duchy of Nemours and 200,000 crowns. Again, in 1586, Catherine de' Medici, accompanied by a bevy of ladies, visited the court of Henry of Navarre, and attempted to settle the disputes between that prince and her son, Henry III. The charms of the ladies in her retinue were expected to aid in the accomplishment of her diplomatic purposes. The names of Biron and Longaville are those of two well-known adherents of Henry of Navarre in the civil wars which were raging when the play was written; and the name of Dumain is an anglicized form of that of the Duc de Mayenne who figured on the other side in the same conflict. Further, in 1582, a Russian ambassador arrived in England to arrange a treaty, and to take home with him a wife for the Czar from among the kinswomen of Elizabeth. A lady was selected, and was presented to the ambassador in a pavilion in the gardens of York House with a ceremony which may have given a hint for the masque of the Muscovites in v. ii. 158 ff., especially as the episode was long remembered as a joke.

In the characters of Armado and Holofernes traces have been found of the stock types of the braggart soldier and the pedant of Latin and Italian comedy. In the stage directions of the early copies, Armado is often called "Braggart," and Holofernes "Pedant." Some of the former's characteristics may have been suggested by an eccentric Italian who haunted the court of Elizabeth, and was known as the "fantastical monarcho." Boyet calls Armado "a phantasime, a Monarcho" (iv. i. 101), and Holofernes refers to him as a "fanatical phantasime" (v. i. 19). The name of Holofernes may be due to its occurrence in Rabelais as that of the tutor of Gargantua. The rustic pedant had been recently exploited by Sir Philip Sidney in the character of Rombus in The Lady of the May. The scraps of Latin put into the mouth of Holofernes and of Nathaniel are taken from sixteenth-century school-books, a fact which may partly account for the attempts to find in the Pedant a portrait of Shakespeare's own schoolmaster. Endeavors to identify him with John Florio, and to point out in other characters in the play allusions to men concerned in current controversies, are not convincing.

The main point of Love's Labour's Lost for Shakespeare's contemporaries must have been in its pervading burlesque of current fads and affectations. The wit-combats of the lords and ladies, the affected diction of the sonneteering courtiers, the preposterous bombast of Armado, the latinized English and pedantic alliteration of Holofernes, and the quips of Moth, are all parodies of the absurdities into which the prevailing interest in linguistic feats had led almost all classes of Elizabethan society. Euphuism is to-day the most familiar of these fashions, but Euphuism itself, in the strict sense, is not specifically attacked. There are, however, other indications of the influence of Lyly, at this date by far the greatest master of English comedy. The farcical scenes with Moth, Armado, and the clowns, the repartee between the ladies and the courtiers, the scene in which the lovers betray their broken vows, and the general method of representing courtly intercourse, are all foreshadowed in the work of Lyly. Nor need it be supposed that all the verbal affectation and quaintnesses in the play are due to a burlesque intention. Shakespeare himself, as all his early work goes to show, was fascinated by the word-play in which his contemporaries indulged, and the eloquence of the finer speeches of Biron is probably the outcome of a genuine delight in the discovery of his own power to manipulate words as skilfully as his fellows.

The general drift of the play is evident alike in the plot and in the verbal parodies, namely, the exposure of the absurdity of departing from common sense, and the ability of Nature to assert herself to the discomfiture of those who foolishly attempt to organize society on artificial lines that run counter to the fundamental laws of our constitution.

"Biron," or "Berowne" as it appears in the early copies, is accented on the second syllable, and rimes with "moon;" "Boyet" rimes with "debt;" "Moth" was pronounced "mote;" and "Rosaline" rimes with "thine."

ACT I

[SCENE I. The king of Navarre's park.]

Enter FERDINAND, king of Navarre, BIRON, LONGAVILLE, and DUMAIN.

King. Let fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
Live regist'ed upon our brazen tombs
And then grace us in the disgrace of death ;
When, spite of cormorant, devouring Time,
The endeavour of this present breath may buy
That honour which shall bate his scythe's keen edge

And make us heirs of all eternity.
Therefore, brave conquerors, — for so you are,
That war against your own affections
And the huge army of the world's desires, —
Our late edict shall strongly stand in force.
Navarre shall be the wonder of the world.
Our court shall be a little Academe,
Still and contemplative in living art.
You three, Biron, Dumain, and Longaville, ¹⁵
Have sworn for three years' term to live with me
My fellow-scholars, and to keep those statutes
That are recorded in this schedule here.
Your oaths are pass'd ; and now subscribe your names,

That his own hand may strike his honour down
That violates the smallest branch herein. ²¹
If you are arm'd to do as sworn to do,
Subscribe to your deep oaths, and keep it too.

Long. I am resolv'd ; 't is but a three years' fast. ²⁴

The mind shall banquet, though the body pine.
Fat paunches have lean pates, and dainty bits
Make rich the ribs, but bankrupt quite the wits.

Dum. My loving lord, Dumain is mortified.
The grosser manner of these world's delights
He throws upon the gross world's baser slaves.
To love, to wealth, to pomp, I pine and die, ³¹
With all these living in philosophy.

Bir. I can but say their protestation over.
So much, dear liege, I have already sworn,
That is, to live and study here three years. ³⁵
But there are other strict observances ;
As, not to see a woman in that term,
Which I hope well is not enrolled there.
And one day in a week to touch no food,
And but one meal on every day beside, ⁴⁰
The which I hope is not enrolled there ;
And then, to sleep but three hours in the night,
And not be seen to wink of all the day, —
When I was wont to think no harm all night
And make a dark night too of half the day, —
Which I hope well is not enrolled there. ⁴⁵
O, these are barren tasks, too hard to keep,
Not to see ladies, study, fast, not sleep!

King. Your oath is pass'd to pass away from these.

Bir. Let me say no, my liege, an if you please.
I only swore to study with your grace ⁵¹
And stay here in your court for three years' space.

Long. You swore to that, Biron, and to the rest.

Bir. By yea and nay, sir, then I swore in jest.

What is the end of study ? Let me know. ⁵⁵

King. Why, that to know which else we should not know.

Bir. Things hid and barr'd, you mean, from common sense ?

King. Ay, that is study's god-like recompence.

Bir. Come on, then ; I will swear to study so, ⁶⁰

To know the thing I am forbid to know ;
As thus, — to study where I well may dine,

When I to feast expressly am forbid ;
Or study where to meet some mistress fine,

When mistresses from common sense are hid ;
Or, having sworn too hard a keeping oath, ⁶⁵

Study to break it and not break my troth.
If study's gain be thus and this be so,

Study knows that which yet it doth not know.
Swear me to this, and I will ne'er say no.

King. These be the stops that hinder study quite, 70

And train our intellects to vain delight.

Bir. Why, all delights are vain, but that most vain,

Which, with pain purchas'd, doth inherit pain;
As, painfully to pore upon a book

To seek the light of truth; while truth the while 75

Doth falsely blind the eyesight of his look.

Light seeking light doth light of light beguile;

So, ere you find where light in darkness lies,
Your light grows dark by losing of your eyes.

Study me how to please the eye indeed 80

By fixing it upon a fairer eye,

Who dazzling so, that eye shall be his heed

And give him light that it was blinded by.

Study is like the heaven's glorious sun

That will not be deep-search'd with saucy looks, 85

Small have continual plodders ever won,

Save base authority from others' books.

These earthly godfathers of heaven's lights,

That give a name to every fixed star,

Have no more profit of their shining nights 90

Than those that walk and wot not what they are,

Too much to know is to know nought but fame;

And every godfather can give a name.

King. How well he's read, to reason against reading!

Dum. Proceeded well, to stop all good proceeding! 95

Long. He weeds the corn and still lets grow the weeding.

Bir. The spring is near when green geese are a-breeding.

Dum. How follows that?

Bir. Fit in his place and time.

Dum. In reason nothing.

Bir. Something then in rhyme.

King. Biron is like an envious sneaping frost 100

That bites the first-born infants of the spring.

Bir. Well, say I am; why should proud summer boast

Before the birds have any cause to sing?

Why should I joy in any abortive birth?

At Christmas I no more desire a rose 105

Than wish a snow in May's new-fangled shows;

But like of each thing that in season grows.

So you (to study now it is too late,)

Climb o'er the house to unlock the little gate.

King. Well, sit you out. Go home, Biron, adieu. 110

Bir. No, my good lord, I have sworn to stay with you;

And though I have for barbarism spoke more Than for that angel, knowledge, you can say,

Yet, confident, I'll keep what I have sworn,

And bide the penance of each three years' day. 115

Give me the paper; let me read the same;
And to the strictest decrees I'll write my name.

King. How well this yielding rescues thee from shame!

Bir. [Reads.] "Item, That no woman shall come within a mile of my court" — Hath this been proclaimed? 120

Long. Four days ago.

Bir. Let's see the penalty. [Reads.] "On pain of losing her tongue." Who devis'd this penalty? 125

Long. Marry, that did I.

Bir. Sweet lord, and why?

Long. To fright them hence with that dread penalty.

[Bir.] A dangerous law against gentility!

[Reads.] "Item, If any man be seen to talk with a woman within the term of three years, he shall endure such public shame as the rest of the court can possibly devise." 130

This article, my liege, yourself must break;

For well you know here comes in embassy 135

The French king's daughter with yourself to speak —

A maid of grace and complete majesty —

About surrender up of Aquitaine

To her decrepit, sick, and bedrid father;

Therefore this article is made in vain, 140

Or vainly comes the admired princess hither.

King. What say you, lords? Why, this was quite forgot.

Bir. So study evermore is overshot.

While it doth study to have what it would, It doth forget to do the thing it should; 145

And when it hath the thing it hunteth most, 'T is won as towns with fire, so won, so lost,

King. We must of force dispense with this decree;

She must lie here on mere necessity.

Bir. Necessity will make us all forsworn 150

Three thousand times within this three years' space;

For every man with his affects is born,

Not by might mast'ed, but by special grace.

If I break faith, this word shall speak for me;

I am forsworn on "mere necessity." 155

So to the laws at large I write my name;

[Subscribes.]

And he that breaks them in the least degree Stands in attainder of eternal shame.

Suggestions are to other as to me;

But I believe, although I seem so loath, 160

I am the last that will last keep his oath.

But is there no quick recreation granted?

King. Ay, that there is. Our court, you know, is haunted

With a refined traveller of Spain;

A man in all the world's new fashion planted,

That hath a mint of phrases in his brain; 165

One who the music of his own vain tongue

Doth ravish like enchanting harmony;

A man of complements, whom right and wrong

Have chose as umpire of their mutiny. 170

This child of fancy, that Armado hight,

For interim to our studies shall relate,

In high-born words, the worth of many a knight

From tawny Spain, lost in the world's debate.

How you delight, my lords, I know not, I; 175
But, I protest, I love to hear him lie,
And I will use him for my minstrelsy.

Bir. Armado is a most illustrious wight,
A man of fire-new words, fashion's own knight.

Long. Costard the swain and he shall be our sport; 180

And, so to study, three years is but short.

Enter a Constable [DULL] with a letter, and Costard.

Dull. Which is the Duke's own person?

Bir. This, fellow. What wouldst?

Dull. I myself reprehend his own person, for I am his grace's tharborough; but I would see his own person in flesh and blood. 185

Bir. This is he.

Dull. Signior Arme—Arme—commends you. There's villany abroad. This letter will tell you more. 190

Cost. Sir, the contempts thereof are as touching me.

King. A letter from the magnificent Armado.

Bir. How low soever the matter, I hope in God for high words. 195

Long. A high hope for a low heaven. God grant us patience!

Bir. To hear? or forbear hearing?

Long. To hear meekly, sir, and to laugh moderately; or to forbear both. 200

Bir. Well, sir, be it as the style shall give us cause to climb in the merriness.

Cost. The matter is to me, sir, as concerning Jaquenetta. The manner of it is, I was taken with the manner. 205

Bir. In what manner?

Cost. In manner and form following, sir; all those three: I was seen with her in the manor-house, sitting with her upon the form, and taken following her into the park; which, put together, is in manner and form following. 210
Now, sir, for the manner,—it is the manner of a man to speak to a woman; for the form,—in some form.

Bir. For the following, sir?

Cost. As it shall follow in my correction; and God defend the right! 215

King. Will you hear this letter with attention?

Bir. As we would hear an oracle.

Cost. Such is the simplicity of man to hearken after the flesh. 220

King. [Reads.] "Great deputy, the welkin's vicegerent, and sole dominator of Navarre, my soul's earth's god, and body's fostering patron."

Cost. Not a word of Costard yet.

King. [Reads.] "So it is." 225

Cost. It may be so; but if he say it is so, he is, in telling true, but so.

King. Peace!

Cost. Be to me, and every man that dares not fight! 230

King. No words!

Cost. Of other men's secrets, I beseech you.

King. [Reads.] "So it is, besieged with sable-coloured melancholy, I did commend the black oppressing humour to the most wholesome physic of thy health-giving air; and, as I am [235] a gentleman, betook myself to walk. The time when? About the sixth hour; when beasts most graze, birds best peck, and men sit down to that nourishment which is called supper; so much for the time when. Now for [240] the ground which; which, I mean, I walk'd upon: it is cyeled thy park. Then for the place where; where, I mean, I did encounter that obscene and most preposterous event, that draweth from my snow-white pen the ebon- [245] coloured ink which here thou viewest, beholdest, surveyest, or seest; but to the place where: it standeth north-north-east and by east from the west corner of thy curious-knotted garden. There did I see that low-spirited swain, [250] that base minnow of thy mirth,"—

Cost. Me?

King. [Reads.] "That unlettered small-knowing soul,"—

Cost. Me?

King. [Reads.] "That shallow vassal,"— 255

Cost. Still me?

King. [Reads.] "Which, as I remember, hight Costard,"—

Cost. O, me! 260

King. [Reads.] "Sorted and consorted, contrary to thy established proclaimed edict and continent canon, which with—O, with—but with this I passion to say wherewith,"—

Cost. With a wench. 265

King. [Reads.] "With a child of our grandmother Eve, a female; or, for thy more sweet understanding, a woman. Him I, as my ever-esteemed duty pricks me on, have sent to thee, to receive the meed of punishment, by thy sweet Grace's officer, Anthony Dull; a man of [270] good repute, carriage, bearing, and estimation."

Dull. Me, an't shall please you; I am Anthony Dull.

King. [Reads.] "For Jaquenetta,—so is the weaker vessel called which I apprehend- [275] ed with the aforesaid swain,—I keep her as a vessel of thy law's fury; and shall, at the least of thy sweet notice, bring her to trial. Thine, in all compliments of devoted and heart-burning heat of duty, 280

DON ADRIANO DE ARMADO."

Biron. This is not so well as I looked for, but the best that ever I heard.

King. Ay, the best for the worst. But, sirrah, what say you to this?

Cost. Sir, I confess the wench. 285

King. Did you hear the proclamation?

Cost. I do confess much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.

King. It was proclaimed a year's imprisonment, to be taken with a wench. 290

Cost. I was taken with none, sir; I was taken with a damsel.

King. Well, it was proclaimed damsel.

Cost. This was no damsel neither, sir; she was a virgin. 295

King. It is so varied too; for it was proclaimed virgin.

Cost. If it were, I deny her virginity; I was taken with a maid.

King. This maid will not serve your turn, sir. 300

Cost. This maid will serve my turn, sir.

King. Sir, I will pronounce your sentence: you shall fast a week with bran and water.

Cost. I had rather pray a month with mutton and porridge. 305

King. And Don Armado shall be your keeper. My Lord Biron, see him deliver'd o'er;

And go we, lords, to put in practice that

Which each to other hath so strongly sworn.

[Exeunt King, Longaville, and Dumain.]

Bir. I'll lay my head to any good man's hat, 310

These oaths and laws will prove an idle scorn. Sirrah, come on.

Cost. I suffer for the truth, sir; for true it is, I was taken with Jaquenetta, and Jaquenetta is a true girl; and therefore welcome the sour cup of prosperity! Affliction may one day 315 smile again; and till then, sit thee down, sorrow! [Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. The same.]

Enter ARMADO and MOTH, his page.

Arm. Boy, what sign is it when a man of great spirit grows melancholy?

Moth. A great sign, sir, that he will look sad.

Arm. Why, sadness is one and the self-same thing, dear imp. 5

Moth. No, no; O Lord, sir, no.

Arm. How canst thou part sadness and melancholy, my tender juvenal?

Moth. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough senior. 10

Arm. Why tough senior? Why tough senior?

Moth. Why tender juvenal? Why tender juvenal?

Arm. I spoke it, tender juvenal, as a congruent epitheton appertaining to thy young days, which we may nominate tender. 15

Moth. And I, tough senior, as an appertinent title to your old time, which we may name tough.

Arm. Pretty and apt.

Moth. How mean you, sir? I pretty, and 20 my saying apt? or I apt, and my saying pretty?

Arm. Thou pretty, because little.

Moth. Little pretty, because little. Wherefore apt?

Arm. And therefore apt, because quick. 25

Moth. Speak you this in my praise, master?

Arm. In thy condign praise.

Moth. I will praise an eel with the same praise.

Arm. What, that an eel is ingenious?

Moth. That an eel is quick. 30

Arm. I do say thou art quick in answers; thou heatest my blood.

Moth. I am answer'd, sir.

Arm. I love not to be cross'd.

Moth. [Aside.] He speaks the mere contrary; crosses love not him. 35

Arm. I have promised to study three years with the Duke.

Moth. You may do it in an hour, sir.

Arm. Impossible. 40

Moth. How many is one thrice told?

Arm. I am ill at reckoning; it fitteth the spirit of a tapster.

Moth. You are a gentleman and a gamester, sir? 45

Arm. I confess both; they are both the varnish of a complete man.

Moth. Then, I am sure, you know how much the gross sum of deuce-ace amounts to.

Arm. It doth amount to one more than two. 50

Moth. Which the base vulgar do call three.

Arm. True.

Moth. Why, sir, is this such a piece of study? Now here is three studied, ere ye'll thrice wink; and how easy it is to put "years" to the word "three," and study three years in two 55 words, the dancing horse will tell you.

Arm. A most fine figure!

Moth. To prove you a cipher.

Arm. I will hereupon confess I am in love; 60 and as it is base for a soldier to love, so am I in love with a base wench. If drawing my sword against the humour of affection would deliver me from the reprobate thought of it, I would take Desire prisoner, and ransom him to any French courtier for a new-devis'd courtesy. I 65 think scorn to sigh; methinks I should outswear Cupid. Comfort me, boy: what great men have been in love?

Moth. Hercules, master.

Arm. Most sweet Hercules! More authority, dear boy, name more; and, sweet my 70 child, let them be men of good repute and carriage.

Moth. Samson, master. He was a man of good carriage, great carriage, for he carried the town gates on his back like a porter; and he was 75 in love.

Arm. O well-knit Samson! strong-jointed Samson! I do excel thee in my rapier as much as thou didst me in carrying gates. I am in love too. Who was Samson's love, my dear Moth? 80

Moth. A woman, master.

Arm. Of what complexion?

Moth. Of all the four, or the three, or the two, or one of the four.

Arm. Tell me precisely of what complexion. 85

Moth. Of the sea-water green, sir.

Arm. Is that one of the four complexions?

Moth. As I have read, sir; and the best of them too.

Arm. Green indeed is the colour of lovers; 90 but to have a love of that colour, methinks Samson had small reason for it. He surely affected her for her wit.

Moth. It was so, sir; for she had a green wit.

Arm. My love is most immaculate white and red. 95

Moth. Most maculate thoughts, master, are mask'd under such colours.

Arm. Define, define, well-educated infant.

Moth. My father's wit and my mother's 100 tongue, assist me!

Arm. Sweet invocation of a child; most pretty and pathetic!

Moth. If she be made of white and red,
Her faults will ne'er be known, ¹⁰⁶
For blushing cheeks by faults are bred
And fears by pale white shown.
Then if she fear, or be to blame,
By you she shall not know.
For still her cheeks possess the same ¹¹⁰
Which native she doth owe.

A dangerous rhyme, master, against the reason of white and red.

Arm. Is there not a ballad, boy, of the King and the Beggar? ¹¹⁵

Moth. The world was very guilty of such a ballad some three ages since, but I think now
'tis not to be found; or, if it were, it would neither serve for the writing nor the tune.

Arm. I will have that subject newly writ o'er, that I may example my digression by ¹²⁰ some mighty precedent. Boy, I do love that country girl that I took in the park with the rational hind Costard. She deserves well.

Moth. [Aside.] To be whipp'd; and yet a ¹²⁵ better love than my master.

Arm. Sing, boy; my spirit grows heavy in love.
Moth. And that's great marvel, loving a light wench.

Arm. I say, sing. ¹³⁰

Moth. Forbear till this company be past.

Enter Clown [COSTARD], Constable [DULL], and Wench [JAQUENETTA].

Dull. Sir, the Duke's pleasure is, that you keep Costard safe; and you must suffer him to take no delight nor no penance, but 'a must fast three days a week. For this damsel, I must ¹³⁵ keep her at the park; she is allow'd for the day-woman. Fare you well.

Arm. I do betray myself with blushing.
Maid!

Jaq. Man?

Arm. I will visit thee at the lodge. ¹⁴⁰

Jaq. That's hereby.

Arm. I know where it is situate.

Jaq. Lord, how wise you are!

Arm. I will tell thee wonders.

Jaq. With that face? ¹⁴⁵

Arm. I love thee.

Jaq. So I heard you say.

Arm. And so, farewell.

Jaq. Fair weather after you!

[Dull.] Come, Jaquenetta, away! ¹⁵⁰
[Exeunt (Dull and Jaquenetta).

Arm. Villain, thou shalt fast for thy offences ere thou be pardoned.

Cost. Well, sir, I hope when I do it I shall do it on a full stomach.

Arm. Thou shalt be heavily punished. ¹⁵⁵

Cost. I am more bound to you than your fellows, for they are but lightly rewarded.

Arm. Take away this villain; shut him up.

Moth. Come, you transgressing slave; away!

Cost. Let me not be pent up, sir! I will fast, being loose. ¹⁶⁰

Moth. No, sir; that were fast and loose.
Thou shalt to prison.

Cost. Well, if ever I do see the merry days of desolation that I have seen, some shall see. ¹⁶⁵

Moth. What shall some see?

Cost. Nay, nothing, Master Moth, but what they look upon. It is not for prisoners to be too silent in their words; and therefore I will say nothing. I thank God I have as little patience as another man, and therefore I can be quiet. ¹⁷¹

[Exeunt (Moth and Costard).

Arm. I do affect the very ground, which is base, where her shoe, which is baser, guided by her foot, which is basest, doth tread. I shall be forsworn, which is a great argument of falsehood, if I love. And how can that be true ¹⁷⁷ love which is falsely attempted? Love is a familiar; Love is a devil; there is no evil angel but Love. Yet was Samson so tempted, and he had an excellent strength; yet was Solomon so seduced, and he had a very good wit. ¹⁸⁰
Cupid's butt-shaft is too hard for Hercules' club; and therefore too much odds for a Span-iard's rapier. The first and second cause will not serve my turn; the passado he respects not,
the duello he regards not: his disgrace is to ¹⁸⁵ be called boy; but his glory is to subdue men.
Adieu, valour! rust, rapier! be still, drum! for your manager is in love; yea, he loveth. Assist me, some extemporal god of rhyme, for I am sure I shall turn sonnet. Devise, wit! write, ¹⁹⁰ pen! for I am for whole volumes in folio. [Exit].

ACT II

[SCENE I. The same.]

Enter the PRINCESS OF FRANCE, with three attending LADIES, and three LORDS.

Boyet. Now, madam, summon up your dearest spirits;

Consider who the King your father sends,
To whom he sends, and what's his embassy:
Yourself, held precious in the world's esteem,
To parley with the sole inheritor ⁵
Of all perfections that a man may owe,
Matchless Navarre; the plea of no less weight
Than Aquitaine, a dowry for a queen.
Be now as prodigal of all dear grace
As Nature was in making graces dear, ¹⁰
When she did starve the general world beside
And prodigally gave them all to you.

Prin. Good Lord Boyet, my beauty, though but mean,

Needs not the painted flourish of your praise.
Beauty is bought by judgement of the eye, ¹⁵
Not utt'red by base sale of chapmen's tongues.
I am less proud to hear you tell my worth
Than you much willing to be counted wise
In spending your wit in the praise of mine.
But now to task the tasker: good Boyet, ²⁰
You are not ignorant, all-telling fame
Doth noise abroad, Navarre hath made a vow,
Till painful study shall outwear three years,
No woman may approach his silent court;
Therefore to 's seemeth it a needful course, ²⁵
Before we enter his forbidden gates,
To know his pleasure; and in that behalf,
Bold of your worthiness, we single you
As our best-moving fair solicitor.
Tell him, the daughter of the King of France, ³⁰

On serious business craving quick dispatch,
Importunes personal conference with his Grace.
Haste, signify so much; while we attend,
Like humble-visag'd suitors, his high will.

Boyet. Proud of employment, willingly I go.

Prin. All pride is willing pride, and yours is so.

Who are the votaries, my loving lords,
That are vow-fellows with this virtuous Duke?

[1.] Lord. [Lord] Longaville is one.

Prin. Know you the man?

[Mar.] I know him, madam; at a marriage-feast,

Between Lord Perigort and the beauteous heir
Of Jaques Falconbridge, solemnized
In Normandy, saw I this Longaville.
A man of sovereign parts he is esteem'd,
Well fitted in arts, glorious in arms;

Nothing becomes him ill that he would well.
The only soil of his fair virtue's gloss,
If virtue's gloss will stain with any soil,
Is a sharp wit match'd with too blunt a will;
Whose edge hath power to cut, whose will still

It should none spare that come within his power.

Prin. Some merry mocking lord, belike; 'is't so?

[Mar.] They say so most that most his humours know.

Prin. Such short-liv'd wits do wither as they grow.

Who are the rest?

[Kath.] The young Dumain, a well-accomplish'd youth,

Of all that virtue love for virtue loved;
Most power to do most harm, least knowing ill;
For he hath wit to make an ill shape good,
And shape to win grace though he had no wit.
I saw him at the Duke Alençon's once;
And much too little of that good I saw
Is my report to his great worthiness.

[Ros.] Another of these students at that time
Was there with him, if I have heard a truth.
Biron they call him; but a merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never spent an hour's talk withal.
His eye begets occasion for his wit,
For every object that the one doth catch
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest,
Which his fair tongue, conceit's expositor,
Delivers in such apt and gracious words
That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished;
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.

Prin. God bless my ladies! Are they all in love,

That every one her own hath garnished
With such bedecking ornaments of praise?

[1.] Lord. Here comes Boyet.

Re-enter BOYET.

Prin. Now, what admittance, lord?

Boyet. Navarre had notice of your fair approach;

And he and his competitors in oath
Were all address'd to meet you, gentle lady,

Before I came. Marry, thus much I have learnt:
He rather means to lodge you in the field,
Like one that comes here to besiege his court,
Than seek a dispensation for his oath,
To let you enter his unpeopled house.

Enter KING, LONGAVILLE, DUMAIN, BIRON
[and Attendants].

Here comes Navarre. [The ladies mask.]

King. Fair Princess, welcome to the court of Navarre.

Prin. "Fair" I give you back again; and "welcome" I have not yet. The roof of this court is too high to be yours, and welcome to the wide fields too base to be mine.

King. You shall be welcome, madam, to my court.

Prin. I will be welcome, then. Conduct me thither.

King. Hear me, dear lady; I have sworn an oath.

Prin. Our Lady help my lord! He'll be forsworn.

King. Not for the world, fair madam, by my will.

Prin. Why, will shall break it; will, and nothing else.

King. Your ladyship is ignorant what it is.

Prin. Were my lord so, his ignorance were wise,

Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance.
I hear your grace hath sworn out house-keeping.

'Tis deadly sin to keep that oath, my lord,
And sin to break it.

But pardon me, I am too sudden-bold;
To teach a teacher ill besemeth me.
Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my coming,
And suddenly resolve me in my suit.

[Hands a paper.]
King. Madam, I will, if suddenly I may.

Prin. You will the sooner, that I were away;
For you'll prove perjurd if you make me stay.

Bir. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Kath. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Bir. I know you did.

Kath. How needless was it then to ask the question!

Bir. You must not be so quick.

Kath. 'Tis long of you that spur me with such questions.

Bir. Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast, 't will tire.

Kath. Not till it leave the rider in the mire.

Bir. What time o' day?

Kath. The hour that fools should ask.

Bir. Now fair befall your mask!

Kath. Fair fall the face it covers!

Bir. And send you many lovers!

Kath. Amen, so you be none.

Bir. Nay, then will I be gone.

King. Madam, your father here doth intimate

The payment of a hundred thousand crowns;
Being but the one half of an entire sum

Disbursed by my father in his wars.
 But say that he or we, as neither have,
 Receiv'd that sum, yet there remains unpaid
 A hundred thousand more; in surety of the
 which 135

One part of Aquitaine is bound to us,
 Although not valued to the money's worth.
 If then the King your father will restore
 But that one half which is unsatisfied,
 We will give up our right in Aquitaine, 140
 And hold fair friendship with his majesty.
 But that, it seems, he little purposeth,
 For here he doth demand to have repaid
 A hundred thousand crowns; and not demands,
 On payment of a hundred thousand crowns, 145
 To have his title live in Aquitaine;
 Which we much rather had depart withal
 And have the money by our father lent
 Than Aquitaine, so gelded as it is.
 Dear Princess, were not his request so far 150
 From reason's yielding, your fair self should make

A yielding 'gainst some reason in my breast
 And go well satisf'd to France again.

Prin. You do the King my father too much wrong.

And wrong the reputation of your name, 155
 In so unseemly to confess receipt
 Of that which hath so faithfully been paid.

King. I do protest I never heard of it;
 And, if you prove it, I'll repay it back
 Or yield up Aquitaine.

Prin. We arrest your word.
 Boyet, you can produce acquittances 161
 For such a sum from special officers
 Of Charles his father.

King. Satisfy me so.
Boyet. So please your grace, the packet is not come

Where that and other specialties are bound. 165
 To-morrow you shall have a sight of them.

King. It shall suffice me; at which interview
 All liberal reason I will yield unto.

Meantime receive such welcome at my hand
 As honour without breach of honour may 170
 Make tender of to thy true worthiness.

You may not come, fair Princess, in my gates;
 But here without you shall be so receiv'd
 As you shall deem yourself lodg'd in my heart,
 Though so deni'd fair harbour in my house. 175
 Your own good thoughts excuse me, and farewell.

To-morrow shall we visit you again.

Prin. Sweet health and fair desires consort your Grace!

King. Thy own wish wish I thee in every place! [Exit.]

Bir. Lady, I will commend you to mine own heart. 180

Ros. Pray you, do my commendations; I would be glad to see it.

Bir. I would you heard it groan.

Ros. Is the fool sick?

Bir. Sick at the heart. 185

Ros. Alack, let it blood.

Bir. Would that do it good?

Ros. My physic says "ay."

Bir. Will you prick 't with your eye?

Ros. No point, with my knife. 194

Bir. Now, God save thy life!

Ros. And yours from long living!

Bir. I cannot stay thanksgiving. [Exit.]

Dum. Sir, I pray you, a word. What lady is that same?

Boyet. The heir of Alençon, [Katherine] her
 name. 195

Dum. A gallant lady. Monsieur, fare you well. [Exit.]

Long. I beseech you a word. What is she in the white?

Boyet. A woman sometimes, an you saw her in the light.

Long. Perchance light in the light. I desire her name.

Boyet. She hath but one for herself; to desire that were a shame. 200

Long. Pray you, sir, whose daughter?

Boyet. Her mother's, I have heard.

Long. God's blessing on your beard!

Boyet. Good sir, be not offended.

She is an heir of Falconbridge. 205

Long. Nay, my choler is ended.

She is a most sweet lady.

Boyet. Not unlike, sir; that may be.

[Exit Long.]

Re-enter BIRON.

Bir. What's her name in the cap?

Boyet. [Rosaline,] by good hap. 210

Bir. Is she wedded or no?

Boyet. To her will, sir, or so.

Bir. You are welcome, sir; adieu.

Boyet. Farewell to me, sir, and welcome to
 you. [Exit Biron.]

Mar. That last is Biron, the merry mad-cap
 lord. 215

Not a word with him but a jest.

Boyet. And every jest but a word.

Prin. It was well done of you to take him at his word.

Boyet. I was as willing to grapple as he was to board.

Kath. Two hot sheeps, marry.

Boyet. And wherefore not ships?

No sheep, sweet lamb, unless we feed on your lips. 220

Kath. You sheep, and I pasture: shall that finish the jest?

Boyet. So you grant pasture for me.

[Offering to kiss her.]

Kath. Not so, gentle beast.

My lips are no common, though several they be.

Boyet. Belonging to whom?

Kath. To my fortunes and me.

Prin. Good wits will be jangling; but, gentles, agree. 225

This civil war of wits were much better used On Navarre and his book-men; for here 't is abused.

Boyet. If my observation, which very seldom lies,

By the heart's still rhetoric disclosed with
 eyes,

Deceive me not now, Navarre is infected. 230

Prin. With what?

Boyet. With that which we lovers entitle affected.

Prin. Your reason?

Boyet. Why, all his behaviours did make their retire

To the court of his eye, peeping thorough desire; ²³⁵

His heart, like an agate, with your print impressed,

Proud with his form, in his eye pride expressed; His tongue, all impatient to speak and not see,

Did stumble with haste in his eyesight to be; All senses to that sense did make their repair, ²⁴⁰

To feel only looking on fairest of fair; Methought all his senses were lock'd in his eye,

As jewels in crystal for some prince to buy, Who, tendering their own worth from where they were glass'd, ²⁴⁴ Did point you to buy them, along as you pass'd;

His face's own margent did quote such amazes That all eyes saw his eyes enchanted with gazes.

I'll give you Aquitaine and all that is his, An you give him for my sake but one loving kiss. Prin. Come to our pavilion. Boyet is dis-pos'd. ²⁶⁰

Boyet. But to speak that in words which his eye hath disclos'd.

I only have made a mouth of his eye, By adding a tongue which I know will not lie.

Ros. Thou art an old love-monger and speak-est skilfully.

Mar. He is Cupid's grandfather, and learns news of him. ²⁵⁵

Kath. Then was Venus like her mother, for her father is but grim.

Boyet. Do you hear, my mad wenches?

Ros. No. Boyet. What then, do you see?

Mar. Ay, our way to be gone. Boyet. You are too hard for me.

[Exeunt omnes.]

ACT III

[SCENE I. The same.]

Enter Braggart [ARMADO] and his Boy [MOTH].

Song.

Arm. Warble, child; make passionate my sense of hearing.

Moth. Concolinel.

Arm. Sweet air! Go, tenderness of years, take this key, give enlargement to the swain, bring him festinately hither. I must employ [^s him in a letter to my love.

Moth. Master, will you win your love with a French brawl?

Arm. How meanest thou? Brawling in French? ¹⁰

Moth. No, my complete master; but to jig off a tune at the tongue's end, canary to it with your feet, humour it with turning up your eyelids, sigh a note and sing a note, sometime through the throat, as if you swallowed love with singing love, sometime through the [¹⁵ nose, as if you snuff'd up love by smelling love; with your hat penthouse-like o'er the shop of your eyes; with your arms crossed on your thin-belly doublet like a rabbit on a spit; or your hands in your pocket like a man after the [²⁰ old painting; and keep not too long in one tune, but a snip and away. These are complements, these are humours; these betray nice wenches, that would be betrayed without these; and make them men of note—do you note?— [²⁵ men that most are affected to these.

Arm. How hast thou purchased this experience?

Moth. By my penny of observation.

Arm. But O, but O,—

Moth. "The hobby-horse is forgot." ³⁰

Arm. Callest thou my love "hobby-horse"?

Moth. No, master; the hobby-horse is but a colt, and your love perhaps a hackney. But have you forgot your love?

Arm. Almost I had. ³⁵

Moth. Negligent student! learn her by heart.

Arm. By heart and in heart, boy.

Moth. And out of heart, master; all those three I will prove.

Arm. What wilt thou prove? ⁴⁰

Moth. A man, if I live; and this, by, in, and without, upon the instant. By heart you love her, because your heart cannot come by her; in heart you love her, because your heart is in love with her; and out of heart you love her, being out of heart that you cannot enjoy her. ⁴⁵

Arm. I am all these three.

Moth. And three times as much more, and yet nothing at all.

Arm. Fetch hither the swain; he must carry me a letter. ⁵⁰

Moth. A message well sympathized; a horse to be ambassador for an ass.

Arm. Ha, ha! what sayest thou?

Moth. Marry, sir, you must send the ass upon the horse, for he is very slow-gaited. ⁵⁵

But I go.

Arm. The way is but short; away!

Moth. As swift as lead, sir.

Arm. The meaning, pretty ingenious?
Is not lead a metal heavy, dull, and slow? ⁶⁰

Moth. Minime, honest master; or rather, master, no.

Arm. I say lead is slow.

Moth. You are too swift, sir, to say so.
Is that lead slow which is fir'd from a gun?

Arm. Sweet smoke of rhetoric!
He reputes me a cannon; and the bullet, that's he; ⁶⁵

I shoot thee at the swain.

Moth. Thump then and I flee. [Exit.]

Arm. A most acute juvenal; voluble and free of grace!

By thy favour, sweet welkin, I must sigh in thy face.

Most rude melancholy, valour gives thee place.
My herald is return'd. ⁷⁰

Re-enter Page [MOTH] with Clown [COSTARD].

Moth. A wonder, master! Here's a costard broken in a shin.

Arm. Some enigma, some riddle; come, thy l'envoy; begin.

Cost. No egma, no riddle, no l'envoy; no salve in the mail, sir. O, sir, plantain, a plain plantain! No l'envoy, no l'envoy; no salve, sir, but a plantain!

Arm. By virtue, thou enforceest laughter; thy silly thought my spleen; the heaving of my lungs provokes me to ridiculous smiling. O, pardon me, my stars! Doth the inconsiderate take salve for l'envoy, and the word l'envoy for a salve?

Moth. Do the wise think them other? Is not l'envoy a salve?

Arm. No, page; it is an epilogue or discourse, to make plain
Some obscure precedence that hath tofore been said.

I will example it:

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.
There's the moral. Now the l'envoy.

Moth. I will add the l'envoy. Say the moral again.

Arm. The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.

Moth. Until the goose came out of door,
And stay'd the odds by adding four.

Now will I begin your moral, and do you follow with my l'envoy.

The fox, the ape, and the humble-bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.

Arm. Until the goose came out of door,
Staying the odds by adding four.

Moth. A good l'envoy, ending in the goose; would you desire more?

Cost. The boy hath sold him a bargain, a goose, that's flat.

Sir, your pennyworth is good, an your goose be fat.

To sell a bargain well is as cunning as fast and loose.

Let me see; a fat l'envoy; ay, that's a fat goose.

Arm. Come hither, come hither. How did this argument begin?

Moth. By saying that a costard was broken in a shin.

Then call'd you for the l'envoy.

Cost. True, and I for a plantain; thus came your argument in;

Then the boy's fat l'envoy, the goose that you bought;

And he ended the market.

Arm. But tell me, how was there a costard broken in a shin?

Moth. I will tell you sensibly.

Cost. Thou hast no feeling of it, Moth. I will speak that l'envoy:

I, Costard, running out, that was safely within,

Fell over the threshold, and broke my shin.

Arm. We will talk no more of this matter.

Cost. Till there be more matter in the shin.

Arm. Sirrah Costard, I will enfranchise thee.

Cost. O, marry me to one Frances! I smell some l'envoy, some goose, in this.

Arm. By my sweet soul, I mean setting thee at liberty, enfranchising thy person. Thou wert immured, restrained, captivated, bound.

Cost. True, true; and now you will be my purgation and let me loose.

Arm. I give thee thy liberty, set thee from durance; and, in lieu thereof, impose on thee nothing but this: bear this significant [giving a letter] to the country maid Jaquenetta. There is remuneration; for the best ward of mine honour is rewarding my dependents. Moth, follow.

Moth. Like the sequel, I. Signior Costard, adieu.

Cost. My sweet ounce of man's flesh! my incony Jew!

Now will I look to his remuneration. Remuneration! O, that's the Latin word for three farthings: three farthings—remuneration. —“What's the price of this inkle?” —“One penny.” —“No, I'll give you a remuneration:” why, it carries it. Remuneration! why, it is a fairer name than French crown. I will never buy and sell out of this word.

Enter BIRON.

Bir. O, my good knave Costard! exceedingly well met.

Cost. Pray you, sir, how much carnation ribbon may a man buy for a remuneration?

Bir. What is a remuneration?

Cost. Marry, sir, halfpenny farthing.

Bir. Why, then, three-farthing worth of silk.

Cost. I thank your worship; God be wi' you!

Bir. Stay, slave; I must employ thee.

As thou wilt win my favour, good my knave, Do one thing for me that I shall entreat.

Cost. When would you have it done, sir?

Bir. This afternoon.

Cost. Well, I will do it, sir; fare you well.

Bir. Thou knowest not what it is.

Cost. I shall know, sir, when I have done it.

Bir. Why, villain, thou must know first.

Cost. I will come to your worship to-morrow morning.

Bir. It must be done this afternoon. Hark, slave, it is but this:

The Princess comes to hunt here in the park, And in her train there is a gentle lady.

When tongues speak sweetly, then they name her name,

And Rosaline they call her. Ask for her, And to her white hand see thou do commend

This seal'd-up counsel. There's thy guerdon; go.

Cost. Gardon, O sweet gardon! better than remuneration, a 'leven-pence farthing better; most sweet gardon! I will do it, sir, in print. Gardon! Remuneration!

Bir. And I, forsooth, in love! I, that have been love's whip;

A very beadle to a humorous sigh;

A critic, nay, a night-watch constable;

A domineering pedant o'er the boy,

Than whom no mortal so magnificent! 180
 This wimpled, whining, purblind, wayward boy;
 This senior-junior, giant-dwarf, Dan Cupid;
 Regent of love-rhymes, lord of folded arms,
 The anointed sovereign of sighs and groans,
 Liege of all loiterers and malcontents, 185
 Dread prince of plackets, king of codpieces,
 Sole imperator and great general
 Of trotting 'paritors; — O my little heart! —
 And I to be a corporal of his field,
 And wear his colours like a tumbler's hoop! 190
 What! I love! I sue! I seek a wife!
 A woman, that is like a German clock,
 Still a-repairing, ever out of frame,
 And never going aright, being a watch,
 But being watch'd that it may still go right! 195
 Nay, to be perjurd, which is worst of all;
 And, among three, to love the worst of all,
 A whitely wanton with a velvet brow,
 With two pitch-balls stuck in her face for eyes;
 Ay, and, by heaven, one that will do the deed
 Though Argus were her nuncheon and her guard.
 And I to sigh for her! to watch for her! 202
 To pray for her! Go to; it is a plague
 That Cupid will impose for my neglect
 Of his almighty dreadful little might. 205
 Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue, groan:
 Some men must love my lady, and some Joan.
 [Exit.]

ACT IV

[SCENE I. The same.]

Enter the PRINCESS, a FORESTER, her LADIES, and her LORDS.

Prin. Was that the King, that spurr'd his horse so hard
 Against the steep uprising of the hill?

For. I know not, but I think it was not he.

Prin. Whoe'er 'a was, 'a show'd a mounting mind.

Well, lords, to-day we shall have our dispatch; 's
 On Saturday we will return to France.

Then, forester, my friend, where is the bush
 That we must stand and play the murderer in?

For. Hereby, upon the edge of yonder coppice;

A stand where you may make the fairest shoot. 10

Prin. I thank my beauty, I am fair that shoot,

And thereupon thou speak'st the fairest shoot.

For. Pardon me, madam, for I meant not so.

Prin. What, what? First praise me, and again say no?

O short-liv'd pride! Not fair? Alack for woe! 15

For. Yes, madam, fair.

Prin. Nay, never paint me now;
 Where fair is not, praise cannot mend the brow.
 Here, good my glass, take this for telling true.

[Gives money.]

Fair payment for foul words is more than due.

For. Nothing but fair is that which you inherit. 20

Prin. See, see, my beauty will be sav'd by merit!

O heresy in fair, fit for these days!
 A giving-hand, though foul, shall have fair praise.

But come, the bow; now mercy goes to kill,
 And shooting well is then accounted ill. 25
 Thus will I save my credit in the shoot:
 Not wounding, pity would not let me do 't;
 If wounding, then it was to show my skill,
 That more for praise than purpose meant to kill.

And, out of question, so it is sometimes, 30
 Glory grows guilty of detested crimes,
 When, for fame's sake, for praise, an outward part,

We bend to that the working of the heart;
 As I for praise alone now seek to spill
 The poor deer's blood, that my heart means no ill. 35

Boyet. Do not curst wives hold that self-sovereignty

Only for praise's sake, when they strive to be Lords o'er their lords?

Prin. Only for praise; and praise we may afford

To any lady that subdues a lord. 40

Enter Clown [COSTARD].

Boyet. Here comes a member of the commonwealth.

Cost. God dig-you-den all! Pray you, which is the head lady?

Prin. Thou shalt know her, fellow, by the rest that have no heads. 45

Cost. Which is the greatest lady, the highest?

Prin. The thickest and the tallest.

Cost. The thickest and the tallest! It is so;
 truth is true.

As your waist, mistress, were as slender as my
 wit,

One o' these maids' girdles for your waist should be fit. 50

Are not you the chief woman? You are the thickest here.

Prin. What's your will, sir? what's your will?

Cost. I have a letter from Monsieur Biron to one Lady Rosaline.

Prin. O, thy letter, thy letter! He's a good friend of mine.

Stand aside good bearer. Boyet, you can carve;

Break up this capon.

Boyet. I am bound to serve.

This letter is mistook; it importeth none here.
 It is writ to Jaquenetta.

Prin. We will read it, I swear.
 Break the neck of the wax, and every one give ear.

Boyet. [Reads.] "By heaven, that thou art fair, is most infallible; true, that thou art beauteous; truth itself, that thou art lovely.
 More fairer than fair, beautiful than beauteous, truer than truth itself, have commiseration on thy heroic vassal! The magnanimous and most illustrious king Cophetua set eye upon the pernicious and indubitate beggar Zenelophon; and he it was that might rightly say,

Veni, vidi, vici; which to annothanize in the vulgar, — O base and obscure vulgar! — videlicet, He came, saw, and overcame: he came, one; [70 saw, two; overcame, three. Who came? The king. Why did he come? To see. Why did he see? To overcome. To whom came he? To the beggar. What saw he? The beggar. Who overcame he? The beggar. The conclusion is victory; on whose side? The king's. [75 The captive is enriched; on whose side? The beggar's. The catastrophe is a nuptial; on whose side? The king's; no, on both in one, or one in both. I am the king, for so stands the comparison; thou the beggar, for so wilt [80 nesses thy lowliness. Shall I command thy love? I may. Shall I enforce thy love? I could. Shall I entreat thy love? I will. What shalt thou exchange for rags? robes; for tittles? titles; for thyself? me. Thus, expecting thy reply, I profane my lips on thy [85 foot, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart on thy every part. Thine, in the dearest design of industry,

DON ADRIANO DE ARMADO."

Thou dost thou hear the Nemean lion roar [90
'Gainst thee, thou lamb, that standest as his prey.

Submissive fall his princely feet before,
And he from forage will incline to play.
But if thou strive, poor soul, what art thou then?

Food for his rage, repasture for his den. [95
Prin. What plume of feathers is he that indited this letter?

What vane? What weathercock? Did you ever hear better?

Boyet. I am much deceived but I remember the style.

Prin. Else your memory is bad, going o'er it erewhile.

Boyet. This Armado is a Spaniard, that keeps here in court; [100

A phantasma, a Monarcho, and one that makes sport

To the Prince and his bookmates.

Prin. Thou fellow, a word.
Who gave thee this letter?

Cost. I told you; my lord.
Prin. To whom shouldst thou give it?

Cost. From my lord to my lady.
Prin. From which lord to which lady? [105

Cost. From my lord Biron, a good master of mine,

To a lady of France that he call'd Rosaline.

Prin. Thou hast mistaken his letter. Come, lords, away.

[To Ros.] Here, sweet, put up this; 't will be thine another day.

[Exeunt [Princess and train].]

Boyet. Who is the shooter? Who is the shooter?

Ros. Shall I teach you to know? [110

Boyet. Ay, my continent of beauty.

Ros. Why, she that bears the bow.

Finely put off!

Boyet. My lady goes to kill horns; but, if thou marry,

Hang me by the neck, if horns that year miscarry.

Finely put on! [115

Ros. Well, then, I am the shooter.

Boyet. And who is your deer?

Ros. If we choose by the horns, yourself; come not near.

Finely put on, indeed!

Mar. You still wrangle with her, Boyet, and she strikes at the brow.

Boyet. But she herself is hit lower. Have I hit her now? [120

Ros. Shall I come upon thee with an old saying, that was a man when King Pepin of France was a little boy, as touching the hit it?

Boyet. So I may answer thee with one as old, that was a woman when Queen Guinever of [125 Britain was a little wench, as touching the hit it.

Ros. Thou canst not hit it, hit it, hit it,
Thou canst not hit it, my good man. [Exit [Ros.]

Boyet. An I cannot, cannot, cannot,
An I cannot, another can. [130

Cost. By my troth, most pleasant. How both did fit it!

Mar. A mark marvellous well shot, for they both did hit it.

Boyet. A mark! O, mark but that mark!
A mark, says my lady!

Let the mark have a prick in 't, to mete at, if it may be.

Mar. Wide o' the bow hand! I' faith, your hand is out. [135

Cost. Indeed, 'a must shoot nearer, or he'll ne'er hit the clout.

Boyet. An if my hand be out, then belike your hand is in.

Cost. Then will she get the upshoot by cleaving the pin.

Mar. Come, come, you talk greasily; your lips grow foul.

Cost. She's too hard for you at pricks, sir; challenge her to bowl. [140

Boyet. I fear too much rubbing. Good night, my good owl.

[Exeunt Boyet and Maria.]

Cost. By my soul, a swain! a most simple clown!

Lord, Lord, how the ladies and I have put him down!

O' my troth, most sweet jests! most inedny vulgar wit!

When it comes so smoothly off, so obscenely, as it were, so fit. [145

Armado o' the one side, — O, a most dainty man!

To see him walk before a lady and to bear her fan!

To see him kiss his hand! and how most sweetly 'a will swear!

And his page o' t' other side, that handful of wit!

Ah, heavens, it is a most patheticall nit! [150
Sola, sola!

[Exit [Costard]. Shoot within.]

[SCENE II. The same.]

Enter DULL, HOLOFERNES the Pedant, and NATHANIEL.

Nath. Very reverend sport, truly, and done in the testimony of a good conscience.

Hol. The deer was, as you know, sanguis, in blood; ripe as the pomewater, who now hangeth like a jewel in the ear of caelo, the sky, the welkin, the heaven; and anon filleth like ¹⁵ a crab on the face of terra, the soil, the land, the earth.

Nath. Truly, Master Holofernes, the epithets are sweetly varied, like a scholar at the least; but, sir, I assure ye, it was a buck of the first head. ¹⁰

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, haud credo.

Dull. 'T was not a haud credo; 't was a pricket.

Hol. Most barbarous intimation! yet a kind of insinuation, as it were, in via, in way, of explication; facere, as it were, replication, or rather, ostentare, to show, as it were, his incli- ¹⁵ nation, after his undressed, unpolished, uneducated, unpruned, untrained, or rather, unlettered, or ratherest, unconfirmed fashion, to assert again my haud credo for a deer. ²⁰

Dull. I said the deer was not a haud credo; 't was a pricket.

Hol. Twice-sod simplicity, bis coctus!

O thou monster Ignorance, how deformed dost thou look!

Nath. Sir, he hath never fed of the dainties that are bred in a book; ²⁵

he hath not eat paper, as it were; he hath not drunk ink; his intellect is not replenished; he is only an animal, only sensible in the duller parts; And such barren plants are set before us, that we thankful should be, ²⁹

Which we of taste and feeling are, for those parts that do fructify in us more than he. For as it would ill become me to be vain, indis- creet, or a fool,

So were there a patch set on learning, to see him in a school:

But omne bene, say I; being of an old father's mind,

Many can brook the weather that love not the wind.

Dull. You two are book-men; can you tell me by your wit ³⁵

What was a month old at Cain's birth, that's not five weeks old as yet?

Hol. Dictynna, Goodman Dull; Dictynna, Goodman Dull.

Dull. What is Dictynna?

Nath. A title to Phœbe, to Luna, to the moon.

Hol. The moon was a month old when Adam was no more, ⁴⁰

And raught not to five weeks when he came to five-score.

The allusion holds in the exchange.

Dull. 'T is true indeed; the collusion holds in the exchange.

Hol. God comfort thy capacity! I say, the allusion holds in the exchange. ⁴⁵

Dull. And I say, the pollution holds in the exchange, for the moon is never but a month old; and I say beside that, 't was a pricket that the Princess killed. ⁵⁰

Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you hear an extemporal epitaph on the death of the deer? And, to humour the ignorant, call I the deer the Princess killed a pricket.

Nath. Perge, good Master Holofernes, perge; so it shall please you to abrogate ⁵⁵ scurrility.

Hol. I will something affect the letter, for it argues facility.

"The preylful princess pierc'd and prick'd a pretty pleasing pricket;

Some say a sore; but not a sore, till now made sore with shooting.

The dogs did yell: put L to sore, then sorel jumps from thicket; ⁶⁰

Or pricket sore, or else sorel; the people fall a-hooting.

If sore be sore, then L to sore make fifty sores one sorel.

Of one sore I an hundred make by adding but one more L."

Nath. A rare talent!

Dull. [Aside.] If a talent be a claw, look how he claws him with a talent. ⁶⁵

Hol. This is a gift that I have, simple, simple; a foolish extravagant spirit, full of forms, figures, shapes, objects, ideas, apprehensions, motions, revolutions. These are begot in the ventricle of memory, nourished in the womb ⁷⁰ of pia mater, and delivered upon the mellowing of occasion. But the gift is good in those in whom it is acute, and I am thankful for it.

Nath. Sir, I praise the Lord for you, and so may my parishioners; for their sons are ⁷⁵ well tutor'd by you, and their daughters profit very greatly under you. You are a good member of the commonwealth.

Hol. Mehercle, if their sons be ingenious, ⁸⁰ they shall want no instruction; if their daughters be capable, I will put it to them; but vir sapit qui pauca loquitur; a soul feminine saluteth us.

Enter JAQUENETTA and the Clown [COSTARD]. ³⁵

Jaqu. God give you good morrow, master Parson.

Hol. Master Parson, quasi pers-on. An if ⁸⁵ one should be pierc'd, which is the one?

Cost. Marry, master schoolmaster, he that is likeliest to a hogshead.

Hol. Of piercing a hogshead! a good lustre of conceit in a tuft of earth; fire enough for a flint, pearl enough for a swine; 't is pretty; ⁹⁰ it is well.

Jaqu. Good master Parson, be so good as read me this letter. It was given me by Costard, and sent me from Don Armado. I beseech you, read it.

Hol. Fauste, precor gelida quando pecus omne sub umbra ruminat. — and so forth. Ah, ⁹⁵ good old Mantuan! I may speak of thee as the traveller doth of Venice:

*Venetia, Venetia,
Chi non ti vede non ti pretia.* 100

Old Mantuan, old Mantuan! who understandeth thee not, loves thee not. Ut, re, sol, la, mi, fa. Under pardon, sir, what are the contents? or rather, as Horace says in his — What, my soul, verses? 105

Nath. Ay, sir, and very learned.

Hol. Let me hear a staff, a stanza, a verse; lege, domine.

Nath. [Reads.]

"If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?

Ah, never faith could hold, if not to beauty vowed! 110

Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll faithful prove;

Those thoughts to me were oaks, to thee like osiers bowed.

Study his bias leaves, and makes his book thine eyes,

Where all those pleasures live that art would comprehend.

If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice; 115

Well learned is that tongue that well can thee commend,

All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder;

Which is to me some praise that I thy parts admire.

Thy eye Jove's lightning bears, thy voice his dreadful thunder,

Which, not to anger bent, is music and sweet fire. 120

Celestial as thou art, O, pardon love this wrong, That sings heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue."

Hol. You find not the apostrophas, and so miss the accent: let me supervise the canzonet. Here are only numbers ratified; but, for the [125] elegance, facility, and golden cadence of poesy, caret. Ovidius Naso was the man; and why, indeed, Naso, but for smelling out the odoriferous flowers of fancy, the jerks of invention? Imitari is nothing: so doth the hound his master, the ape his keeper, the tired horse his [130] rider. But, damosella virgin, was this directed to you?

Jag. Ay, sir, from one Monsieur Biron, one of the strange queen's lords.

Hol. I will overglance the superscript: "To [135] the snow-white hand of the most beauteous Lady Rosaline." I will look again on the intellect of the letter, for the nomination of the party writing to the person written unto: "Your ladyship's in all desired employment, BIRON." Sir Nathaniel, this Biron is one of the vota- [140] ries with the King; and here he hath framed a letter to a sequent of the stranger queen's, which accidentally, or by the way of progression, hath miscarried. Trip and go, my sweet; deliver this paper into the royal hand of the [145] King; it may concern much. Stay not thy complement; I forgive thy duty. Adieu.

Jag. Good Costard, go with me. Sir, God save your life! 150

Cost. Have with thee, my girl.

[Exeunt [Cost. and Jag.]]

Nath. Sir, you have done this in the fear of God, very religiously; and, as a certain father saith, —

Hol. Sir, tell not me of the father; I do fear colourable colours. But to return to the [155] verses: did they please you, Sir Nathaniel?

Nath. Marvellous well for the pen.

Hol. I do dine to-day at the father's of a certain pupil of mine; where, if, before repast, it shall please you to gratify the table with a [160] grace, I will, on my privilege I have with the parents of the foresaid child or pupil, undertake your ben venuto; where I will prove those verses to be very unlearned, neither savouring of poetry, wit, nor invention. I beseech your so- [165] ciety.

Nath. And thank you too; for society, saith the text, is the happiness of life.

Hol. And, certes, the text most infallibly concludes it. [To Dull.] Sir, I do invite you [170] too; you shall not say me nay: pauca verba. Away! the gentles are at their game, and we will to our recreation. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. The same.]

Enter BIRON, with a paper in his hand, alone.

Bir. The King he is hunting the deer, I am coursing myself; they have pitched a toil, I am toiling in a pitch, — pitch that defiles; — defile! a foul word. Well, "set thee down, sorrow!" for so they say the fool said, and so say I, and I the fool: well proved, wit! By the [175] Lord, this love is as mad as Ajax. It kills sheep; it kills me, I a sheep: well proved again o' my side! I will not love; if I do, hang me; i' faith, I will not. O, but her eye, — by this light, but for her eye, I would not love her; yes, for [180] her two eyes. Well, I do nothing in the world but lie, and lie in my throat. By heaven, I do love; and it hath taught me to rhyme and to be melancholy; and here is part of my rhyme, and here my melancholy. Well, she hath one o' [185] my sonnets already; the clown bore it, the fool sent it, and the lady hath it: sweet clown, sweeter fool, sweetest lady! By the world, I would not care a pin, if the other three were in. Here comes one with a paper; God give him [190] grace to groan! [He stands aside.]

Enter the KING [with a paper].

King. Ay me!

Bir. [Aside.] Shot, by heaven! Proceed, sweet Cupid; thou hast thump'd him with thy bird-bolt under the left pap. In faith, secrets! [195]

King. [Reads.]

"So sweet a kiss the golden sun gives not To those fresh morning drops upon the rose, As thy eye-beams, when their fresh rays have smote

The dew of night that on my cheeks down flows;
Nor shines the silver moon one half so bright"

Through the transparent bosom of the deep,
As doth thy face through tears of mine give light.

Thou shin'st in every tear that I do weep,
No drop but as a coach doth carry thee;
So ridest thou triumphing in my woe. 35
Do but behold the tears that swell in me,

And they thy glory through my grief will show.

But do not love thyself; then thou wilt keep
My tears for glasses, and still make me weep.
O queen of queens! how far dost thou excel 40
No thought can think, nor tongue of mortal tell."

How shall she know my griefs? I'll drop the paper.

Sweet leaves, shade folly. Who is he comes here? [Steps aside.

Enter LONGAVILLE [with a paper].

What, Longaville! and reading! Listen, ear.

Bir. Now, in thy likeness, one more fool appear! 45

Long. Ay me, I am forsworn!

Bir. Why, he comes in like a perjurer, wearing papers.

King. In love, I hope; sweet fellowship in shame.

Bir. One drunkard loves another of the
name. 50

Long. Am I the first that have been perjured
so?

Bir. I could put thee in comfort. Not by two that I know.

Thou makest the triumvir, the corner-cap of society,

The shape of Love's Tyburn that hangs up simplicity.

Long. I fear those stubborn lines lack power to move. 55

O sweet Maria, empress of my love!

These numbers will I tear, and write in prose.

Bir. O, rhymes are guards on wanton Cupid's hose:

Disfigure not his slop.

Long. This same shall go. [He reads the sonnet.

"Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye, 60
'Gainst whom the world cannot hold argument,

Persuade my heart to this false perjury?

Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.

A woman I forswore; but I will prove,

Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee, 65

My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love;

Thy grace being gained cures all disgrace in
me.

Vows are but breath, and breath a vapour is;

Then thou, fair sun, which on my earth dost
shine,

Exhal'st this vapour-vow; in thee it is. 70

If broken then, it is no fault of mine;

If by me broke, what fool is not so wise

To lose an oath to win a paradise?"

Bir. This is the liver-vein, which makes flesh a deity 75

A green goose a-goddess; pure, pure idolatry.
God amend us, God amend! We are much out o' the way.

Enter DUMAIN [with a paper].

Long. By whom shall I send this? — Company! stay. [Steps aside.]

Bir. "All hid, all hid;" an old infant play.
Like a demigod here sit I in the sky, 75

And wretched fools' secrets heedfully o'er-eye.
More sacks to the mill! O heavens, I have my wish!

Dumain transform'd! four woodcocks in a dish!

Dum. O most divine Kate!

Bir. O most profane coxcomb!

Dum. By heaven, the wonder in a mortal eye!

Bir. By earth, she is not, corporal; there you lie. 80

Dum. Her amber hairs for foul hath amber quoted.

Bir. An amber-colour'd raven was well noted.

Dum. As upright as the cedar.

Bir. Stoop, I say;
Her shoulder is with child.

Dum. As fair as day, 90

Bir. Ay, as some days; but then no sun must shine.

Dum. O that I had my wish!

Long. And I had mine!

King. And I mine too, good Lord!

Bir. Amen, so I had mine. Is not that a good
word? 95

Dum. I would forget her; but, a fever, she Reigns in my blood and will rememb'ed be.

Bir. A fever in your blood! why, then incision

Would let her out in saucers; sweet misprision!

Dum. Once more I'll read the ode that I have writ.

Bir. Once more I'll mark how love can vary
wit. 100

Dum. [Reads.]

"On a day — alack the day! —

Love, whose month is ever May,

Spied a blossom passing fair

Playing in the wanton air.

Through the velvet leaves the wind, 105

All unseen, can passage find;

That the lover, sick to death,

Wish himself the heaven's breath.

Air, quoth he, thy cheeks may blow;

Air, would I might triumph so! 110

But, alack, my hand is sworn

Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn;

Vow, alack, for youth unmeet,

Youth so apt to pluck a sweet!

Do not call it sin in me, 115

That I am forsworn for thee;

Thou for whom Jove would swear

Juno but an Ethiope were;

And deny himself for Jove,

Turning mortal for thy love." 120

This will I send and something else more plain,

That shall express my true love's fasting pain.

O, would the King, Biron, and Longaville,

Were lovers too! Ill, to example ill,

Would from my forehead wipe a perjur'd note;
For none offend where all alike do dote. 126

Long. [Advancing.] Dumain, thy love is far from charity,

That in love's grief desir'st society.

You may look pale, but I should blush, I know,
To be o'erheard and taken napping so. 130

King. [Advancing.] Come, sir, you blush;
as his your case is such;

You chide at him, offending twice as much.

You do not love Maria; Longaville

Did never sonnet for her sake compile,

Nor never lay his wreathed arms athwart 135

His loving bosom to keep down his heart.

I have been closely shrouded in this bush

And mark'd you both; and for you both did blush.

I heard your guilty rhymes, observ'd your fashion,

Saw sighs reek from you, noted well your passion. 140

"Ay me!" says one; "O Jove!" the other cries;

One, her hairs were gold, crystal the other's eyes:
[To Long.] You would for paradise break faith and troth;

[To Dum.] And Jove, for your love, would infringe an oath.

What will Biron say when that he shall hear
Faith infringed, which such zeal did swear? 145

How will he scorn! how will he spend his wit!

How will he triumph, leap and laugh at it!

For all the wealth that ever I did see,

I would not have him know so much by me. 150

Bir. Now step I forth to whip hypocrisy.

[Advancing.]
Ah, good my liege, I pray thee, pardon me!

Good heart, what grace hast thou, thus to reprove

These worms for loving, that art most in love?

Your eyes do make no coaches; in your tears

There is no certain Princess that appears; 155

You'll not be perjur'd, 't is a hateful thing;

Tush, none but minstrels like of sonneting!

But you are not ashamed? Nay, are you not,

All three of you, to be thus much o'ershot? 160

You found his mote; the King your mote did see;

But I a beam do find in each of three.

O, what a scene of foolery have I seen,

Of sighs, of groans, of sorrow, and of teen!

O me, with what strict patience have I sat, 165

To see a king transformed to a gnat!

To see great Hercules whipping a gig,

And profound Solomon to tune a jig,

And Nestor play at push-pin with the boys,

And critic Timon laugh at idle toys! 170

Where lies thy grief, O, tell me, good Dumain?

And, gentle Longaville, where lies thy pain?

And where my liege's? All about the breast!

A caudle, ho!

King. Too bitter is thy jest.

Are we betray'd thus to thy over-view? 175

Bir. Not you to me, but I betray'd by you,

I, that am honest; I, that hold it sin

To break the vow I am engaged in;

I am betray'd by keeping company

With men like you, men of inconstancy. 180

When shall you see me write a thing in rhyme,

Or groan for love, or spend a minute's time

In pruning me? When shall you hear that I

Will praise a hand, a foot, a face, an eye,

A gait, a state, a brow, a breast, a waist, 185

A leg, a limb?

King. Soft! whither away so fast?

A true man or a thief that gallops so?

Bir. I post from love; good lover, let me go.

Enter JAQUENETTA and Clown [COSTARD].

Jaq. God bless the King!

King. What present hast thou there?

Cost. Some certain treason.

King. What makes treason here? 190

Cost. Nay, it makes nothing, sir.

King. If it mar nothing neither,

The treason and you go in peace away together.

Jaq. I beseech your Grace, let this letter be read.

Our parson misdoubts it; 't was treason, he said.

King. Biron, read it over. 195

[He reads the letter.]

Where hadst thou it?

Jaq. Of Costard.

King. Where hadst thou it?

Cost. Of Dun Adramadio, Dun Adramadio.

[Biron tears the letter.]

King. How now! what is in you? Why dost thou tear it? 200

Bir. A toy, my liege, a toy; your Grace needs not fear it.

Long. It did move him to passion, and therefore let's hear it.

Dum. It is Biron's writing, and here is his name. [Gathering up the pieces.]

Bir. [To Costard.] Ah, you whoreson loggerhead! you were born to do me shame.

Guilty, my lord, guilty! I confess, I confess.

King. What? 205

Bir. That you three fools lack'd me fool to make up the mess.

He, he, and you, — and you, my liege, and I,

Are pick-purses in love, and we deserve to die.

O, dismiss this audience, and I shall tell you

more. 210

Dum. Now the number is even.

Bir. True, true; we are four.

Will these turtles be gone?

King. Hence, sirs; away!

Cost. Walk aside the true folk, and let the traitors stay.

[Exeunt Costard and Jaquenetta.]

Bir. Sweet lords, sweet lovers, O, let us embrace!

As true we are as flesh and blood can be. 215

The sea will ebb and flow, heaven show his face,

Young blood doth not obey an old decree.

We cannot cross the cause why we were born;

Therefore of all hands must we be forsworn.

King. What, did these rent lines show some love of thine? 220

Bir. Did they, quoth you? Who sees the heavenly Rosaline,

That, like a rude and savage man of Inde,

At the first opening of the gorgeous east,

Bows not his vassal head and stricken blind
Kisses the base ground with obedient breast ?

What peremptory eagle-sighted eye 230

Dares look upon the heaven of her brow,
That is not blinded by her majesty ?

King. What zeal, what fury hath inspir'd thee now ?

My love, her mistress, is a gracious moon ; 230
She an attending star, scarce seen a light.

Bir. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Biron.

O, but for my love, day would turn to night !
Of all complexions the dull'd sovereignty

Do meet, as at a fair, in her fair cheek, 235
Where several worthies make one dignity.

Where nothing wants that want itself doth seek.

Lend me the flourish of all gentle tongues, —
Fie, painted rhetoric ! O, she needs it not.

To things of sale a seller's praise belongs, 240
She passes praise ; then praise too short doth blot.

A wither'd hermit, five-score winters worn,
Might shake off fifty, looking in her eye.

Beauty doth varnish age, as if new-born,
And gives the crutch the cradle's infancy. 245

O, 'tis the sun that maketh all things shine, —
King. By heaven, thy love is black as ebony.

Bir. Is ebony like her ? O wood divine !
A life of such wood were felicity.

O, who can give an oath ? Where is a book 250
That I may swear beauty doth beauty lack,

If that she learn not of her eye to look ?
No face is fair that is not full so black.

King. O paradox ! Black is the badge of hell,
The hue of dungeons and the scowl of night ;

And beauty's crest becomes the heavens well.
Bir. Devils soonest tempt, resembling spirits of light. 257

O, if in black my lady's brows be deck'd,

It mourns that painting and usurping hair
Should ravish doters with a false aspect ; 260

And therefore is she born to make black fair.
Her favour turns the fashion of the days,

For native blood is counted painting now ;
And therefore red, that would avoid dispraise,

Paints itself black, to imitate her brow. 265
Dum. To look like her are chimney-sweepers

black.
Long. And since her time are colliers counted bright.

King. And Ethiopians of their sweet complexion crack.

Dum. Dark needs no candles now, for dark is light.

Bir. Your mistresses dare never come in rain, 270

For fear their colours should be washed away.

King. 'T were good, yours did ; for sir, to tell you plain,

I'll find a fairer face not wash'd to-day.
Bir. I'll prove her fair, or talk till doomsday

here.
King. No devil will fright thee then so much as she. 275

Dum. I never knew man hold vile stuff so

dear.

Long. Look, here's thy love ; my foot and her face see.

Bir. O, if the streets were paved with thine
eyes,

Her feet were much too dainty for such tread !

Dum. O vile ! then, as she goes, what upward lies 280

The street should see as she walk'd over head.

King. But what of this ? Are we not all in love ?
Bir. Nothing so sure ; and thereby all for-sworn.

King. Then leave this chat ; and, good Biron, now prove

Our loving lawful, and our faith not torn. 285

Dum. Ay, marry there ; some flattery for this evil.

Long. O, some authority how to proceed ;

Some tricks, some quillets, how to cheat the devil.

Dum. Some salve for perjury.
Bir. 'T is more than need.

Have at you, then, affection's men at arms. 290
Consider what you first did swear unto,

To fast, to study, and to see no woman ;
Flat treason 'gainst the kingly state of youth.

Say, can you fast ? Your stomachs are too young ;

And abstinence engenders maladies. 295
And where that you have vow'd to study, lords,

In that each of you have forsworn his book,
Can you still dream and pore and thereon look ?

[For when would you, my lord, or you, or you,
Have found the ground of study's excellence

Without the beauty of a woman's face ? 301
From women's eyes this doctrine I derive ;

They are the ground, the books, the academes
From whence doth spring the true Promethean

fire.] 305
Why, universal plodding poisons up

The nimble spirits in the arteries,
As motion and long-during action tires

The sinewy vigour of the traveller.
Now, for not looking on a woman's face,

You have in that forsworn the use of eyes 310
And study too, the causer of your vow.

For where is any author in the world
Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye ?

Learning is but an adjunct to ourself,
And where we are our learning likewise is, 315

Then when ourselves we see in ladies' eyes,
Do we not likewise see our learning there ?

O, we have made a vow to study, lords,
And in that vow we have forsworn our books.

For when would you, my liege, or you, or you, 320
In leaden contemplation have found out

Such fiery numbers as the prompting eyes
Of beauty's tutors have enrich'd you with ?

Other slow arts entirely keep the brain ;
And therefore, finding barren practisers, 325

Scarce show a harvest of their heavy toil ;
But love, first learned in a lady's eyes,

Lives not alone immured in the brain ;
But, with the motion of all elements,

Courses as swift as thought in every power, 330

And gives to every power a double power,
Above their functions and their offices.
It adds a precious seeing to the eye;
A lover's eyes will gaze an eagle blind;
A lover's ear will hear the lowest sound, 335
When the suspicious head of theft is stopp'd;
Love's feeling is more soft and sensible
Than are the tender horns of cockled snails;
Love's tongue proves dainty Bacchus gross in taste.

For valour, is not Love a Hercules, 340
Still climbing trees in the Hesperides?
Subtle as Sphinx; as sweet and musical
As bright Apollo's lute, strung with his hair;
And when Love speaks, the voice of all the gods
Make heaven drowsy with the harmony. 345
Never durst poet touch a pen to write
Until his ink were temp'rd with Love's sighs;
O, then his lines would ravish savage ears
And plant in tyrants mild humility.
From women's eyes this doctrine I derive: 350
They sparkle still the right Promethean fire;
They are the books, the arts, the academes,
That show, contain, and nourish all the world,
Else none at all in aught proves excellent.
Then fools you were these women to for-
swear, 355

Or keeping what is sworn, you will prove fools.
For wisdom's sake, a word that all men love,
Or for love's sake, a word that loves all men,
Or for men's sake, the authors of these women,
Or women's sake, by whom we men are men, 360
Let us once lose our oaths to find ourselves,
Or else we lose ourselves to keep our oaths.
It is religion to be thus forsworn,
For charity itself fulfils the law,
And who can sever love from charity? 365

King. Saint Cupid, then! and, soldiers, to the field!

Bir. Advance your standards, and upon them, lords;

Pell-mell, down with them! but be first advis'd,
In conflict that you get the sun of them.

Long. Now to plain-dealing, lay these gloses
by. 370

Shall we resolve to woo these girls of France?
King. And win them too; therefore let us devise

Some entertainment for them in their tents.

Bir. First, from the park let us conduct them thither;

Then homeward every man attach the hand 375
Of his fair mistress. In the afternoon

We will with some strange pastime solace them,
Such as the shortness of the time can shape;

For revels, dances, masks, and merry hours Foreerun fair Love, strewing her way with flowers. 380

King. Away, away! no time shall be omitted
That will be time, and may by us be fitted.

Bir. Allons! allons! Sow'd cockle reap'd no
corn;

And justice always whirls in equal measure.
Light wenches may prove plagues to men for-
sworn; 385

If so, our copper buys no better treasure.

[Exeunt.]

ACT [V]

[SCENE I. The same.]

Enter the Pedant [HOLOFERNES], the Curate
[SIR NATHANIEL], and DULL.

Hol. Satis quod sufficit.

Nath. I praise God for you, sir. Your reasons at dinner have been sharp and sententious;
pleasant without scurrility, witty without affection, audacious without impudency, learned without opinion, and strange without heresy. [5
I did converse this quondam day with a companion of the King's, who is intituled, nominated, or called, Don Adriano de Armado.

Hol. Novi hominem tanquam te; his humor [10 is lofty, his discourse peremptory, his tongue filed, his eye ambitious, his gait majestical, and his general behaviour vain, ridiculous, and thrasonical. He is too picked, too spruce, too affected, too odd, as it were, too peregrinate, as I may call it. 15

Nath. A most singular and choice epithet.

[Draws out his table-book.

Hol. He draweth out the thread of his verbosity finer than the staple of his argument.
I abhor such fanatical phantasies, such insociable and point-devise companions; such [20 rackers of orthography, as to speak dout, fine, when he should say doubt; det, when he should pronounce debt, — d, e, b, t, not d, e, t: he clepeth a calf, cauf; half, hauf; neighbour vo-catur nebour; neigh abbreviated ne. This is [25 abominable, — which he would call abominable; it insinuateth me of insanity; ne intelligis, domine? to make frantic, lunatic.

Nath. Laus Deo, bone intelligo. 30

Hol. Bone? bone for bene, Prisceian a little scratched, 't will serve.

Enter Braggart [ARMADO], Boy [MOTH, and COSTARD].

Nath. Videsne quis venit?

Hol. Video, et gaudeo.

Arm. [To Moth.] Chirrah! 35

Hol. Quare chirrah, not sirrah?

Arm. Men of peace, well encountered.

Hol. Most military sir, salutation.

Moth. [Aside to Costard.] They have been at a great feast of languages, and stolen the scraps. [40

Cost. O, they have liv'd long on the alms-basket of words. I marvel thy master hath not eaten thee for a word, for thou art not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus. Thou art easier swallowed than a flap-dragon. 45

Moth. Peace! the peal begins.

Arm. [To Hol.] Monsieur, are you not lett'rd?

Moth. Yes, yes; he teaches boys the horn-book. What is a, b, spelt backward, with the horn on his head? 50

Hol. Ba, pueritia, with a horn added.

Moth. Ba, most silly sheep with a horn. You hear his learning.

Hol. Quis, quis, thou consonant? 55

Moth. The third of the five vowels, if you repeat them; or the fifth, if I.

Hol. I will repeat them, — a, e, i, —

Moth. The sheep. The other two concludes it, — o, u. 60

Arm. Now, by the salt wave of the Mediterranean, a sweet touch, a quick venue of wit! — snap, snap, quick and home! It rejoiceth my intellect. True wit!

Moth. Offered by a child to an old man; which is wit-old. 65

Hol. What is the figure? What is the figure?

Moth. Horns.

Hol. Thou disputes like an infant; go, whip thy gig. 70

Moth. Lend me your horn to make one, and I will whip about your infamy unum cūa, — a gig of a cuckold's horn.

Cost. An I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldst have it to buy gingerbread. Hold, there is the very remuneration I had [75 of thy master, thou halfpenny purse of wit, thou pigeon-egg of discretion. O, an the heavens were so pleased that thou wert but my bastard, what a joyful father wouldst thou make me! Go to; thou hast it ad dunghill, at the fingers' [80 ends, as they say.

Hol. O, I smell false Latin; dunghill for unquem.

Arm. Arts-man, preambulate, we will be [85 singled from the barbarous. Do you not educate youth at the charge-house on the top of the mountain?

Hol. Or mons, the hill.

Arm. At your sweet pleasure, for the mountain. 90

Hol. I do, sans question.

Arm. Sir, it is the King's most sweet pleasure and affection to congratulate the Princess at her pavilion in the posteriors of this day, which the rude multitude call the afternoon. 95

Hol. The posterior of the day, most generous sir, is liable, congruent, and measurable for the afternoon. The word is well culled, chose, sweet, and apt, I do assure you, sir, I do assure.

Arm. Sir, the King is a noble gentleman, and my familiar, I do assure ye, very good [100 friend; for what is inward between us, let it pass; — I do beseech thee, remember thy courtesy; I beseech thee, apparel thy head; — and among other important and most serious designs, and of great import indeed, too, — but let that [105 pass. For I must tell thee, it will please his Grace, by the world, sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder, and with his royal finger, thus, dally with my excrement, with my mustachio; but, sweet heart, let that pass. By the world, [110 I recount no fable: some certain special honours it pleaseth his greatness to impart to Armado, a soldier, a man of travel, that hath seen the world; but let that pass. The very all of all is, — but, sweet heart, I do implore secrecy, — [115 that the King would have me present the Princess, sweet chuck, with some delightful ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antic, or firework. Now, understanding that the curate and your sweet self are good at such eruptions, and [120 sudden breaking out of mirth, as it were, I have acquainted you withal, to the end to crave your assistance.

Hol. Sir, you shall present before her the Nine Worthies. Sir [Nathaniel], as concerning some entertainment of time, some show in the [125 posterior of this day, to be render'd by our assistants, at the King's command, and this most gallant, illustrate, and learned gentleman, before the Princess, I say none so fit as to present the Nine Worthies. 130

Nath. Where will you find men worthy enough to present them?

Hol. Joshua, yourself; myself or this gallant gentleman, Judas Maccabæus; this swain, because of his great limb or joint, shall pass [135 [as] Pompey the Great; the page, Hercules, —

Arm. Pardon, sir; error. He is not quantity enough for that Worthy's thumb; he is not so big as the end of his club.

Hol. Shall I have audience? He shall present Hercules in minority; his enter and exit [140 shall be strangling a snake; and I will have an apology for that purpose.

Moth. An excellent device! so, if any of the audience hiss, you may cry, "Well done, [145 Hercules! now thou crushest the snake!" That is the way to make an offence gracious, though few have the grace to do it.

Arm. For the rest of the Worthies? —

Hol. I will play three myself. 150

Moth. Thrice-worthy gentleman!

Arm. Shall I tell you a thing?

Hol. We attend.

Arm. We will have, if this fadge not, an antic. I beseech you, follow. 155

Hol. Via, Goodman Dull! thou hast spoken no word all this while.

Dull. Nor understood none neither, sir.

Hol. Allons! we will employ thee.

Dull. I'll make one in a dance, or so; or I will play 160

On the tabor to the Worthies, and let them dance the hay.

Hol. Most dull, honest Dull! To our sport, away! [Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. The same.]

Enter the [PRINCESS, and] LADIES.

Prin. Sweet hearts, we shall be rich ere we depart,

If fairings come thus plentifully in.

A lady wall'd about with diamonds!

Look you what I have from the loving King.

Ros. Madam, came nothing else along with that? 6

Prin. Nothing but this? Yes, as much love in rhyme

As would be cramm'd up in a sheet of paper, Writ o' both sides the leaf, margent and all, That he was fain to seal on Cupid's name.

Ros. That was the way to make his godhead wax, 10

For he hath been five thousand year a boy.

Kath. Ay, and a shrewd unhappy gallows too.

Ros. You'll ne'er be friends with him; 'a kill'd your sister.

Kath. He made her melancholy, sad, and heavy,
And so she died. Had she been light, like you, 15

Of such a merry, nimble, stirring spirit,
She might ha' been a grandam ere she died.
And so may you; for a light heart lives long.

Ros. What's your dark meaning, mouse, of this light word?

Kath. A light condition in a beauty dark. 20

Ros. We need more light to find your meaning out.

Kath. You'll mar the light by taking it in snuff;
Therefore I'll darkly end the argument.

Ros. Look, what you do, you do it still i' the dark.

Kath. So do not you, for you are a light wench. 25

Ros. Indeed I weigh not you, and therefore light.

Kath. You weigh me not? O, that's you care not for me.

Ros. Great reason; for "past cure is still past care."

Prin. Well bandied both; a set of wit well played.

But, Rosaline, you have a favour too. 30
Who sent it? and what is it?

Ros. I would you knew.
An if my face were but as fair as yours,
My favour were as great; be witness this.

Nay, I have verses too, I thank Biron;
The numbers true, and, were the numbering too, 35

I were the fairest goddess on the ground.

I am compar'd to twenty thousand fairs.

O, he hath drawn my picture in his letter!

Prin. Any thing like?

Ros. Much in the letters; nothing in the praise. 40

Prin. Beauteous as ink; a good conclusion.

Kath. Fair as a text B in a copy-book.

Ros. Ware pencils, ho! let me not die your debtor,

My red dominical, my golden letter;

O that your face were not so full of O's! 45

Prin. A pox of that jest! and I beshrew all shrews.

But, Katharine, what was sent to you from fair Dumain?

Kath. Madam, this glove.

Prin. Did he not send you twain?

Kath. Yes, madam, and moreover
Some thousand verses of a faithful lover, 50

A huge translation of hypocrisy,

Vilely compil'd, profound simplicity.

Mar. This and these pearls to me sent Longaville.

The letter is too long by half a mile.

Prin. I think no less. Dost thou not wish in heart 55

The chain were longer and the letter short?

Mar. Ay, or I would these hands might never part.

Prin. We are wise girls to mock our lovers so.

Ros. They are worse fools to purchase mocking so.

That same Biron I'll torture ere I go. 60

O that I knew he were but in by the week!

How I would make him fawn and beg and seek,

And wait the season and observe the times,

And spend his prodigal wits in bootless rhymes,

And shape his service wholly to my hests, 65

And make him proud to make me proud that jests!

So pedant-like would I o'ersway his state

That he should be my fool and I his fate.

Prin. None are so surely caught, when they are catch'd, 66

As wit turn'd fool; folly, in wisdom hatch'd,

Hath wisdom's warrant and the help of school

And wit's own grace to grace a learned fool.

Ros. The blood of youth burns not with such excess

As gravity's revolt to wantonness.

Mar. Folly in fools bears not so strong a note 75

As foolery in the wise, when wit doth dote;

Since all the power thereof it doth apply

To prove, by wit, worth in simplicity.

Enter BOYET.

Prin. Here comes Boyet, and mirth is in his face.

Boyet. O, I am stabb'd with laughter!
Where's her Grace? 80

Prin. Thy news, Boyet?

Boyet. Prepare, madam, prepare!

Arm, wench, arm! Encounters mounted are Against your peace. Love doth approach disguised,

Armed in arguments; you'll be surpris'd.

Muster your wits; stand in your own defence; 85

Or hide your heads like cowards, and fly hence.

Prin. Saint Denis to Saint Cupid! What are they

That charge their breath against us? Say, scout, say.

Boyet. Under the cool shade of a sycamore
I thought to close mine eyes some half an hour:

When, lo! to interrupt my purpos'd rest, 92

Toward that shade I might behold address'd

The King and his companions. Warily

I stole into a neighbour thicket by,

And overheard what you shall overhear, 95

That, by and by, disguis'd they will be here.

Their herald is a pretty knavish page,

That well by heart hath conn'd his embassy.

Action and accent did they teach him there;

"Thus must thou speak," and "thus thy body

bear;" 100

And ever and anon they made a doubt

Presence majestical would put him out;

"For," quoth the King, "an angel shalt thou

see;

Yet fear not thou, but speak audaciously."

The boy replied, "An angel is not evil; 105

I should have fear'd her had she been a devil."

With that, all laugh'd and clapp'd him on the shoulder

Making the bold wag by their praises bolder.

One rubb'd his elbow thus, and fleer'd and swore

A better speech was never spoke before; 110

Another, with his finger and his thumb, Cried, "Via! we will do't, come what will come;"

The third he caper'd, and cried, "All goes
well;"

The fourth turn'd on the toe, and down he fell.

With that, they all did tumble on the ground, 115

With such a zealous laughter, so profound,

That in this spleen ridiculous appears,

To check their folly, passion's solemn tears.

Prin. But what, but what, come they to visit us?

Boyet. They do, they do; and are apparell'd
thus 120

Like Muscovites or Russians, as I guess.

Their purpose is to parle, to court, and dance;

And every one his love-feat will advance

Unto his several mistress, which they'll know

By favours several which they did bestow. 125

Prin. And will they so? The gallants shall be task'd,

For, ladies, we will every one be mask'd;

And not a man of them shall have the grace,

Despite of suit, to see a lady's face.

Hold, Rosaline, this favour thou shalt wear, 130

And then the King will court thee for his dear.

Hold, take thou this, my sweet, and give me
thine,

So shall Biron take me for Rosaline.

And change you favours too; so shall your loves

Woo contrary, deceiv'd by these removes. 135

Ros. Come on, then; wear the favours most in sight.

Kath. But in this changing what is your intent?

Prin. The effect of my intent is to cross theirs.

They do it but in mocking merriment,

And mock for mock is only my intent. 140

Their several counsels they unbosom shall

To loves mistook, and so be mock'd withal

Upon the next occasion that we meet,

With visages display'd, to talk and greet.

Ros. But shall we dance, if they desire us
to't? 145

Prin. No, to the death, we will not move a foot;

Nor to their penn'd speech render we no grace,

But while 't is spoke each turn away her face.

Boyet. Why, that contempt will kill the speaker's heart,

And quite divorce his memory from his part. 150

Prin. Therefore I do it; and I make no doubt

The rest will ne'er come in, if he be out.

There's no such sport as sport by sport o'er-thrown,

To make theirs ours and ours none but our own;

So shall we stay, mocking intended game, 155

And they, well mock'd, depart away with shame. [Trumpet sounds within].

Boyet. The trumpet sounds: be mask'd; the maskers come. [The Ladies mask.]

Enter Blackamoors with music, the Boy [MOTH'] with a speech, and the rest of the LORDS disguised.

Moth. "All hail, the richest beauties on the earth!"—

Boyet. Beauties no richer than rich taffeta.

Moth. "A holy parcel of the fairest dames 160
[The Ladies turn their backs to him.]

That ever turn'd their—backs—to mortal views!"

Bir. [Aside to Moth.] Their eyes, villain, their
eyes.

Moth. "That ever turn'd their eyes to mortal views!—

Out!"—

Boyet. True; out indeed. 165

Moth. "Out of your favours, heavenly spirits vouchsafe

Not to behold!"—

Bir. [Aside to Moth.] Once to behold, rogue.

Moth. "Once to behold with your sun-beamed
eyes,

— with your sun-beamed eyes!"— 169

Boyet. They will not answer to that epithet;

You were best call it "daughter-beamed eyes."

Moth. They do not mark me, and that brings me out.

Bir. Is this your perfectness? Be gone, you rogue! [Exit Moth.]

Ros. What would these strangers? Know their minds, Boyet.

If they do speak our language, 't is our will 175

That some plain man recount their purposes.

Know what they would.

Boyet. What would you with the Princess?

Bir. Nothing but peace and gentle visitation.

Ros. What would they, say they? 180

Boyet. Nothing but peace and gentle visitation.

Ros. Why, that they have; and bid them so be gone.

Boyet. She says, you have it, and you may be gone.

King. Say to her, we have measur'd many miles

To tread a measure with her on this grass. 185

Boyet. They say, that they have measur'd many a mile

To tread a measure with you on this grass.

Ros. It is not so. Ask them how many inches
Is in one mile: if they have measur'd many,

The measure then of one is easily told. 190

Boyet. If to come hither you have measur'd
miles,

And many miles, the Princess bids you tell

How many inches doth fill up one mile.

Bir. Tell her, we measure them by weary steps.

Boyet. She hears herself,

Ros. How many weary steps

Of many weary miles you have o'ergone, 195

Are numb'ed in the travel of one mile?

Bir. We number nothing that we spend for
you;

Our duty is so rich, so infinite,

That we may do it still without accompt. 200

Vouchsafe to show the sunshine of your face,
That we, like savages, may worship it.

Ros. My face is but a moon, and clouded too.

King. Blessed are clouds, to do as such clouds do!

Vouchsafe, bright moon, and these thy stars, to shine, 205

Those clouds remov'd, upon our watery eyne.
Ros. O vain petitioner! beg a greater matter;

Thou now requests but moonshine in the water.

King. Then, in our measure do but vouchsafe one change. 209

Thou bid'st me beg; this begging is not strange.
Ros. Play, music, then! Nay, you must do it soon. [Music plays.]

Not yet! no dance! Thus change I like the moon.

King. Will you not dance? How come you thus estranged?

Ros. You took the moon at full, but now she's changed. 214

King. Yet still she is the moon, and I the man. The music plays; vouchsafe some motion to it.

Ros. Our ears vouchsafe it.

King. But your legs should do it.

Ros. Since you are strangers and come here by chance,

We'll not be nice; take hands. We will not dance. 219

King. Why take we hands, then?

Ros. Only to part friends.

Curtsey, sweet hearts; and so the measure ends.

King. More measure of this measure; be not nice.

Ros. We can afford no more at such a price.

King. Price you yourselves; what buys your company?

Ros. Your absence only.

King. That can never be.

Ros. Then cannot we be bought; and so, adieu; 226

Twice to your visor, and half once to you.

King. If you deny to dance, let's hold more chat.

Ros. In private, then.

King. I am best pleased with that. [They converse apart.]

Bir. White-handed mistress, one sweet word with thee. 230

Prin. Honey, and milk, and sugar; there is three.

Bir. Nay then, two treys, an if you grow so nice,

Metheglin, wort, and malmsey; well run, dice! There's half-a-dozen sweets.

Prin. Seventh sweet, adieu. 234

Since you can cog, I'll play no more with you.

Bir. One word in secret.

Prin. Let it not be sweet.

Bir. Thou grievest my gall.

Prin. Gall! bitter.

Bir. Therefore meet. [They converse apart.]

Dum. Will you vouchsafe with me to change a word?

Mar. Name it.

Dum. Fair lady—

Mar. Say you so? Fair lord,—
Take that for your fair lady.

Dum. Please it you,
As much in private, and I'll bid adieu. 241

[They converse apart.]
Kath. What, was your vizard made without a tongue?

Long. I know the reason, lady, why you ask.

Kath. O for your reason! quickly, sir; I long.

Long. You have a double tongue within your mask, 245

And would afford my speechless vizard half.

Kath. "Veal," quoth the Dutchman. Is not veal a calf?

Long. A calf, fair lady!

Kath. No, a fair lord calf.

Long. Let's part the word.

Kath. No, I'll not be your half. Take all, and wean it; it may prove an ox. 250

Long. Look, how you butt yourself in these sharp mocks!

Will you give horns, chaste lady? Do not so.

Kath. Then die a calf, before your horns do grow.

Long. One word in private with you, ere I die.

Kath. Bleat softly then; the butcher hears you cry. [They converse apart.]

Boyet. The tongues of mocking wenches are as keen 256

As is the razor's edge invisible,
Cutting a smaller hair than may be seen,

Above the sense of sense; so sensible
Seemeth their conference; their conceits have wings 260

Fleeter than arrows, bullets, wind, thought, swifter things.

Ros. Not one word more, my maids; break off, break off.

Bir. By heaven, all dry-beaten with pure scoff!

King. Farewell, mad wenches; you have simple wits.

[Exeunt [King, Lords, and Blackamoors].

Prin. Twenty adieus, my frozen Muscovits.
Are these the breed of wits so wond'ered at? 266

Boyet. Tapers they are, with your sweet breaths puff'd out.

Ros. Well-liking wits they have; gross, gross; fat, fat.

Prin. O poverty in wit, kingly-poor flout!
Will they not, think you, hang themselves to-night? 270

Or ever, but in vizards, show their faces?
This pert Biron was out of countenance quite.

Ros. O, they were all in lamentable cases!
The King was weeping-ripe for a good word.

Prin. Biron did swear himself out of all suit. 275

Mar. Dumain was at my service, and his sword.

"No point," quoth I; my servant straight was mute.

Kath. Lord Longaville said I came o'er his heart;

And trow you what he call'd me?

Prin. Qualm, perhaps.

Kath. Yes, in good faith.

Prin. Go, sickness as thou art!

Ros. Well, better wits, have worn plain statute-caps. 281

But will you hear? The King is my love
sworn.

Prin. And quick Biron hath plighted faith
to me.

Kath. And Longaville was for my service born.

Mar. Dumain is mine, as sure as bark on tree. 285

Boyet. Madam, and pretty mistresses, give ear:

Immediately they will again be here

In their own shapes; for it can never be

They will digest this harsh indignity.

Prin. Will they return?

Boyet. They will, they will, God knows,
And leap for joy, though they are lame with blows: 291

Therefore change favours; and, when they repair,

Blow like sweet roses in this summer air.

Prin. How blow? how blow? speak to be understood.

Boyet. Fair ladies mask'd are roses in their bud; 295

Dismask'd, their damask sweet commixture shown,

Are angels vailing clouds, or roses blown.

Prin. Avaunt, perplexity! What shall we do,

If they return in their own shapes to woo?

Ros. Good madam, if by me you'll be advis'd, 300

Let's mock them still, as well known as dis-guis'd.

Let us complain to them what fools were here,
Disguis'd like Muscovites, in shapeless gear;

And wonder what they were, and to what end
Their shallow shows and prologue vilely penn'd

And their rough carriage so ridiculous, 305
Should be presented at our tent to us.

Boyet. Ladies, withdraw; the gallants are at hand.

Prin. Whip to our tents, as roes run over land.

[Exeunt [Princess and Ladies].]

Re-enter the KING, and the rest [in their proper habits].

King. Fair sir, God save you! Where's the Princess? 310

Boyet. Gone to her tent. Please it your majesty

Command me any service to her thither?

King. That she vouchsafe me audience for one word.

Boyet. I will; and so will she, I know, my lord. [Exit.]

Bir. This fellow peeks up wit as pigeons
pease, 315

And utters it again when God doth please.

He is wit's pedler, and retails his wares

At wakes and wassails, meetings, markets, fairs

And we that sell by gross, the Lord doth know,
Have not the grace to grace it with such show.

This gallant pins the wenches on his sleeve; 321
Had he been Adam, he had tempted Eve.

'A can carve too, and lisp; why, this is he
That kiss'd his hand away in courtesy;

This is the ape of form, monsieur the nice, 325
That, when he plays at tables, chides the dice

In honourable terms; nay, he can sing
A mean most meanly; and in ushering

Mend him who can. The ladies call him sweet;
The stairs, as he treads on them, kiss his feet.

This is the flower that smiles on every one, 331
To show his teeth as white as whale's bone;

And consciences, that will not die in debt,
Pay him the due of honey-tongu'd Boyet.

King. A blister on his sweet tongue, with my heart, 335

That put Armado's page out of his part!

Re-enter the [PRINCESS, attended by BOYET and her] LADIES.

Bir. See where it comes! Behaviour, what wert thou

Till this man show'd thee? And what art thou
now?

King. All hail, sweet madam, and fair time of day!

Prin. "Fair" in "all hail" is foul, as I conceive. 340

King. Construe my speeches better, if you may.

Prin. Then wish me better; I will give you leave.

King. We came to visit you, and purpose now
To lead you to our court; vouchsafe it then.

Prin. This field shall hold me; and so hold your vow: 345

Nor God, nor I, delights in perjur'd men.

King. Rebuke me not for that which you provoke.

The virtue of your eye must break my oath.

Prin. You nickname virtue; vice you should have spoke,

For virtue's office never breaks men's troth.
Now by my maiden honour, yet as pure 351

As the unsullied lily, I protest,
A world of torments though I should endure,

I would not yield to be your house's guest;
So much I hate a breaking cause to be 355

Of heavenly oaths, vow'd with integrity.

King. O, you have liv'd in desolation here,
Unseen, unvisited, much to our shame.

Prin. Not so, my lord; it is not so, I swear;
We have had pastimes here and pleasant game. 360

A mess of Russians left us but of late.

King. How, madam! Russians!

Prin. Ay, in truth, my lord;
Trim gallants, full of courtship and of state.

Ros. Madam, speak true. It is not so, my
lord.

My lady, to the manner of the days, 365
In courtesy gives undeserving praise.

We four indeed confronted were with four
In Russian habit; here they stay'd an hour,

And talk'd apace; and in that hour, my lord,
They did not bless us with one happy word. 370

I dare not call them fools; but this I think,
When they are thirsty, fools would fain have drink.

Bir. This jest is dry to me. [Fair] gentle sweet,
Your wit makes wise things foolish. When we greet,

With eyes best seeing, heaven's fiery eye, 375
By light we lose light; your capacity
Is of that nature that to your huge store
Wise things seem foolish and rich things but poor.

Ros. This proves you wise and rich, for in my eye—

Bir. I am a fool, and full of poverty. 380

Ros. But that you take what doth to you belong,

It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.

Bir. O, I am yours, and all that I possess!

Ros. All the fool mine?

Bir. I cannot give you less.

Ros. Which of the vizards was it that you were? 385

Bir. Where? When? What vizard? Why demand you this?

Ros. There, then, that vizard; that superfluous case

That hid the worse and show'd the better face.

King. [Aside.] We were descried; they'll mock us now downright.

Dum. Let us confess and turn it to a jest. 390

Prin. Amaz'd, my lord? Why looks your highness sad?

Ros. Help, hold his brows! he'll swoon!
Why look you pale?

Sea-sick, I think, coming from Muscovy.

Bir. Thus pour the stars down plagues for perjury.

Can any face of brass hold longer out? 395

Here stand I; lady, dart thy skill at me, Bruise me with scorn, confound me with a flout;

Thrust thy sharp wit quite through my ignorance;

Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit;
And I will wish thee never more to dance, 400

Nor never more in Russian habit wait.

O, never will I trust to speeches penn'd,
Nor to the motion of a schoolboy's tongue,

Nor never come in vizard to my friend,
Nor woo in rhyme, like a blind harper's
song! 405

Taffeta phrases, silken terms precise,
Three-piled hyperboles, spruce affectation,

Figures pedantical; these summer-flies
Have blown me full of maggot ostentation.

I do forswear them, and I here protest, 410

By this white glove,—how white the hand,
God knows!—

Henceforth my wooing mind shall be express'd
In russet yeas and honest kersey noes;

And, to begin, wench,—so God help me,
la!—

My love to thee is sound, sans crack or flaw. 415

Ros. Sans sans, I pray you.

Bir. Yet I have a trick
Of the old rage. Bear with me, I am sick;

I'll leave it by degrees. Soft, let us see:— Write "Lord have mercy on us" on those three.

They are infected; in their hearts it lies; 420
They have the plague, and caught it of your
eyes.

These lords are visited; you are not free,
For the Lord's tokens on you do I see.

Prin. No, they are free that gave these tokens to us.

Bir. Our states are forfeit; seek not to undo
us. 425

Ros. It is not so; for how can this be true,
That you stand forfeit, being those that sue?

Bir. Peace! for I will not have to do with
you.

Ros. Nor shall not, if I do as I intend.

Bir. Speak for yourselves; my wit is at an end. 430

King. Teach us, sweet madam, for our rude transgression

Some fair excuse.

Prin. The fairest is confession.

Were not you here but even now disguis'd?

King. Madam, I was.

Prin. And were you well advis'd?

King. I was, fair madam.

Prin. When you then were here,

What did you whisper in your lady's ear? 435

King. That more than all the world I did respect her.

Prin. When she shall challenge this, you will reject her.

King. Upon mine honour, no.

Prin. Peace, peace! forbear.
Your oath once broke, you force not to for-
swear. 440

King. Despise me, when I break this oath of mine.

Prin. I will; and therefore keep it. Rosa-line,

What did the Russian whisper in your ear?

Ros. Madam, he swore that he did hold me
dear

As precious eyesight, and did value me 445

Above this world; adding thereto, moreover,
That he would wed me, or else die my lover.

Prin. God give thee joy of him! The noble
lord

Most honourably doth uphold his word.
King. What mean you, madam? By my life, my troth, 450

I never swore this lady such an oath.

Ros. By heaven, you did; and to confirm it plain,

You gave me this; but take it, sir, again.
King. My faith and this the Princess I did give. 455

I knew her by this jewel on her sleeve.
Prin. Pardon me, sir, this jewel did she wear;

And Lord Biron, I thank him, is my dear.
What, will you have me, or your pearl again?

Bir. Neither of either; I remit both twain.
I see the trick on't; here was a consent, 460

Knowing aforehand of our merriment,
To dash it like a Christmas comedy,

Some carry-tale, some please-man, some slight zany,
Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight,
some Dick.

That smiles his cheek in years and knows the trick 405

To make my lady laugh when she's dispos'd,
Told our intents before; which once disclos'd,
The ladies did change favours; and then we,
Following the signs, woo'd but the sign of she.
Now, to our perjury to add more terror, 470
We are again forsworn, in will and error.
Much upon this it is; and might not you

[To Boyet.]

Forestall our sport, to make us thus untrue?
Do not you know my lady's foot by the squire,
And laugh upon the apple of her eye? 475
And stand between her back, sir, and the fire,
Holding a trencher, jesting merrily?
You put our page out. Go, you are allow'd; Die when you will, a smock shall be your shroud.

You leer upon me, do you? There's an eye 480
Wounds like a leaden sword.

Boyet. Full merrily

Hath this brave manage, this career, been run.
Bir. Lo, he is tilting straight! Peace!—I have done.

Enter Clown [COSTARD].

Welcome, pure wit! thou partest a fair fray.

Cost. O Lord, sir, they would know 485
Whether the three Worthies shall come in or no.

Bir. What, are there but three?

Cost. No, sir; but it is vara fine,
For every one pursents three.

Bir. And three times thrice is nine.

Cost. Not so, sir; under correction, sir; I hope it is not so.

You cannot beg us, sir, I can assure you, sir;
we know what we know. 490

I hope, sir, three times thrice, sir, —

Bir. Is not nine.

Cost. Under correction, sir, we know where-until it doth amount.

Bir. By Jove, I always took three threes 495 for nine.

Cost. O Lord, sir, it were pity you should get your living by reckoning, sir.

Bir. How much is it?

Cost. O Lord, sir, the parties themselves, the actors, sir, will show whereuntil it doth 500 amount. For mine own part, I am, as they say, but to perfect one man in one poor man, Pom-pion the Great, sir.

Bir. Art thou one of the Worthies? 505

Cost. It pleased them to think me worthy of Pompey the Great; for mine own part, I know not the degree of the Worthy, but I am to stand for him.

Bir. Go, bid them prepare. 510

Cost. We will turn it finely off, sir; we will take some care. [Exit.]

King. Biron, they will shame us; let them not approach.

Bir. We are shame-proof, my lord; and 't is some policy

To have one show worse than the King's and his company.

King. I say they shall not come. 515

Prin. Nay, my good lord, let me o'errule you
now;

That sport best pleases that doth least know
how;

Where zeal strives to content, and the contents

Dies in the zeal of that which it presents.

Their form confounded makes most form in mirth, 520

When great things labouring perish in their birth.

Bir. A right description of our sport, my
lord.

Enter Braggart [ARMADO].

Arm. Anointed, I implore so much expense of thy royal sweet breath as will utter a brace of words. 525

[Converses apart with the King, and delivers him a paper.]

Prin. Doth this man serve God?

Bir. Why ask you?

Prin. 'A speaks not like a man of God's making.

Arm. That is all one, my fair, sweet, honey 530 monarch; for, I protest, the schoolmaster is exceeding fantastical; too too vain, too too vain;
but we will put it, as they say, to fortuna de la guerra. I wish you the peace of mind, most royal complement! [Exit.] 535

King. Here is like to be a good presence of Worthies. He presents Hector of Troy; the swain, Pompey the Great; the parish curate, Alexander; Armado's page, Hercules; the pedant, Judas Maccabæus; 540

And if these four Worthies in their first show thrive,

These four will change habits, and present the other five.

Bir. There is five in the first show.

King. You are deceived; 't is not so.

Bir. The pedant, the braggart, the hedge- 545 priest, the fool, and the boy;

Abate throw at Novum, and the whole world
again

Cannot pick out five such, take each one in his vein.

King. The ship is under sail, and here she comes amain. 550

Enter [COSTARD, for] Pompey.

Cost. "I Pompey am," —

Bir. You lie, you are not he.

Cost. "I Pompey am," —

Boyet. With libbard's head on knee.

Bir. Well said, old mocker. I must needs be friends with thee.

Cost. "I Pompey am, Pompey surnamed the Big," —

Dum. The Great.

Cost. It is "Great," sir: —
"Pompey surnamed the Great;

That oft in field, with targe and shield, did make my foe to sweat; 555

And travelling along this coast, I here am come by chance,
And lay my arms before the legs of this sweet lass of France."

If your ladyship would say, "Thanks, Pompey," I had done.

Prin. Great thanks, great Pompey. 560

Cost. 'Tis not so much worth; but I hope I was perfect. I made a little fault in "Great."

Bir. My hat to a halfpenny, Pompey proves the best Whorly.

Enter Curate [SIR NATHANIEL], for Alexander.

Nath. "When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander;" 565

By east, west, north, and south, I spread my conquering might.

My scutcheon plain declares that I am Alisander."

Boyet. Your nose says, no, you are not; for it stands too right.

Bir. Your nose smells "no" in this, most tender-smelling knight.

Prin. The conqueror is dismay'd. Proceed, good Alexander. 570

Nath. "When in the world I liv'd, I was the world's commander," —

Boyet. Most true, 'tis right; you were so, Alisander.

Bir. Pompey the Great, —

Cost. Your servant, and Costard.

Bir. Take away the conqueror, take away 575
Alisander.

Cost. [To Sir Nath.] O, sir, you have overthrown Alisander the conqueror! You will be scrap'd out of the painted cloth for this. Your lion, that holds his poll-axe sitting on a close- 580 stool, will be given to Ajax; he will be the ninth

Worthy. A conqueror, and afraid to speak! Run away for shame, Alisander. [Nath. retires.]

There, an't shall please you, a foolish mild man, an honest man, look you, and soon dash'd.

He is a marvellous good neighbour, faith, 585 and a very good bowler; but, for Alisander, —

alas, you see how 't is, — a little o'erparted. But there are Worthies a-coming will speak their mind in some other sort. [Exit Curate. 590

Prin. Stand aside, good Pompey.

Enter Pedant [HOLOFERNES], for Judas, and the Boy [MOTH], for Hercules.

Hol. "Great Hercules is presented by this imp,

Whose club kill'd Cerberus, that three-headed canus;

And when he was a babe, a child, a shrimp,

Thus did he strangle serpents in his manus. 595
Quoniam he seemeth in minority,

Ergo I come with this apology."

[Aside.] Keep some state in thy exit, and vanish. [Moth retires.]

"Judas I am," —

Dum. A Judas! 600

Hol. Not Iscariot, sir.

"Judas I am, yelped Maccabæus."

Dum. Judas Maccabæus clipt is plain Judas.

Bir. A kissing traitor. How art thou prov'd Judas?

Hol. "Judas I am," — 605

Dum. The more shame for you, Judas.

Hol. What mean you, sir?

Boyet. To make Judas hang himself.

Hol. Begin, sir; you are my elder.

Bir. Well follow'd: Judas was hang'd on an elder. 610

Hol. I will not be put out of countenance.

Bir. Because thou hast no face.

Hol. What is this?

Boyet. A cittern-head.

Dum. The head of a bodkin. 615

Bir. A Death's face in a ring.

Long. The face of an old Roman coin, scarce seen.

Boyet. The pommel of Cæsar's falchion.

Dum. The carv'd-bone face on a flask.

Bir. Saint George's half-cheek in a brooch. 620

Dum. Ay, and in a brooch of lead.

Bir. Ay, and worn in the cap of a tooth-drawer.

And now forward; for we have put thee in countenance.

Hol. You have put me out of countenance.

Bir. False; we have given thee faces. 625

Hol. But you have out-fac'd them all.

Bir. An thou wert a lion, we would do so.

Boyet. Therefore, as he is an ass, let him go. And so adieu, sweet Jude! Nay, why dost thou stay?

Dum. For the latter end of his name. 630

Bir. For the ass to the Jude; give it him. Jud-as, away!

Hol. This is not generous, not gentle, not humble.

Boyet. A light for Monsieur Judas! It grows dark, he may stumble. [Hol. retires.]

Prin. Alas, poor Maccabæus, how hath he been baited!

Enter Braggart [ARMADO, for Hector].

Bir. Hide thy head, Achilles; here comes 635
Hector in arms.

Dum. Though my mocks come home by me, I will now be merry.

King. Hector was but a Trojan in respect of this. 640

Boyet. But is this Hector?

King. I think Hector was not so clean-timber'd.

Long. His leg is too big for Hector's.

Dum. More calf, certain. 645

Boyet. No; he is best indued in the small.

Bir. This cannot be Hector.

Dum. He's a god or a painter; for he makes faces.

Arm. "The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty," 650

Gave Hector a gift," —

Dum. A gilt nutmeg.

Bir. A lemon.

Long. Stuck with cloves.

Dum. No, cloven. 655

Arm. Peace! —

"The armipotent Mars, of lances the almighty

Gave Hector a gift, the heir of Ilion;
A man so breathed, that certain he would fight,
yea,

From morn till night, out of his pavilion. 660
I am that flower," —

Dum. That mint.

Long. That columbine.

Arm. Sweet Lord Longaville, rein thy tongue.

Long. I must rather give it the rein, for it runs against Hector.

Dum. Ay, and Hector's a greyhound. 665

Arm. The sweet war-man is dead and rotten; sweet chucks, beat not the bones of the buried. When he breathed, he was a man. But I will forward with my device. [To the Princess.] Sweet royalty, bestow on me the sense of hearing. 670

Prin. Speak, brave Hector; we are much delighted.

Arm. I do adore thy sweet grace's slipper.

Boyet. Loves her by the foot.

Dum. He may not by the yard. 675

Arm. "This Hector far surmounted Hannibal," —

Cost. The party is gone, fellow Hector, she is gone; she is two months on her way.

Arm. What meanest thou? 680

Cost. Faith, unless you play the honest Trojan, the poor wench is cast away. She's quick; the child brags in her belly already. 'Tis yours.

Arm. Dost thou infamozize me among potentates? Thou shalt die. 685

Cost. Then shall Hector be whipp'd for Jaquenetta that is quick by him and hang'd for Pompey that is dead by him.

Dum. Most rare Pompey!

Boyet. Renowned Pompey! 690

Bir. Greater than great, great, great, great Pompey! Pompey the Huge!

Dum. Hector trembles.

Bir. Pompey is moved. More Ates, more Ates! stir them on! stir them on! 695

Dum. Hector will challenge him.

Bir. Ay, if 'a have no more man's blood in his belly than will sup a flea.

Arm. By the north pole, I do challenge thee.

Cost. I will not fight with a pole like a northern man; I'll slash; I'll do it by the sword. I bepray you, let me borrow my arms again.

Dum. Room for the incensed Worthies!

Cost. I'll do it in my shirt.

Dum. Most resolute Pompey! 705

Moth. Master, let me take you a button-hole lower. Do you not see Pompey is uncasing for the combat? What mean you? You will lose your reputation.

Arm. Gentlemen and soldiers, pardon me; I will not combat in my shirt. 711

Dum. You may not deny it; Pompey hath made the challenge.

Arm. Sweet bloods, I both may and will.

Bir. What reason have you for't? 715

Arm. The naked truth of it is, I have no shirt; I go woolward for penance.

Boyet. True, and it was enjoined him in Rome for want of linen; since when, I'll be sworn, he wore none but a dishelout of Jaquenetta's, and that 'a wears next his heart [720 for a favour.

Enter a Messenger, Monsieur MERCADE.

Mer. God save you, madam!

Prin. Welcome, Mercade;

But that thou interruptest our merriment. 725

Mer. I am sorry, madam; for the news I bring is heavy in my tongue. The King, your father —

Prin. Dead, for my life!

Mer. Even so; my tale is told.

Bir. Worthies, away! The scene begins to cloud. 730

Arm. For mine own part, I breathe free breath. I have seen the day of wrong through the little hole of discretion, and I will right myself like a soldier. [Exeunt Worthies. 735

King. How fares your majesty?

Prin. Boyet, prepare; I will away to-night.

King. Madam, not so; I do beseech you, stay.

Prin. Prepare, I say. I thank you, gracious lords,

For all your fair endeavours; and entreat, 740

Out of a new-sad soul, that you vouchsafe

In your rich wisdom to excuse or hide

The liberal opposition of our spirits,

If over-boldly we have borne ourselves

In the converse of breath. Your gentleness 745

Was guilty of it. Farewell, worthy lord!

A heavy heart bears not a humble tongue.

Excuse me so, coming too short of thanks

For my great suit so easily obtain'd.

King. The extreme parts of time extremely forms 750

All causes to the purpose of his speed,

And often, at his very loose, decides

That which long process could not arbitrate.

And though the mourning brow of progeny

Forbid the smiling courtesy of love 755

The holy suit which fain it would convince,

Yet, since love's argument was first on foot,

Let not the cloud of sorrow justle it

From what it purpos'd; since, to wail friends

lost 760

Is not by much so wholesome-profitable

As to rejoice at friends but newly found.

Prin. I understand you not; my griefs are double.

Bir. Honest plain words best pierce the ear of grief;

And by these badges understand the King.

For your fair sakes have we neglected time, 765

Play'd foul play with our oaths. Your beauty, ladies,

Hath much deformed us, fashioning our humours

Even to the opposed end of our intents;

And what in us hath seem'd ridiculous, —

As love is full of unbefitting strains, 770

All wanton as a child, skipping, and vain,

Form'd by the eye and therefore, like the

eye,

Full of strange shapes, of habits, and of forms,

Varying in subjects as the eye doth roll
To every varied object in his glance; 776
Which parti-coated presence of loose love
Put on by us, if, in your heavenly eyes,
Have misbecom'd our oaths and gravities,
Those heavenly eyes that look into these faults,
Suggested us to make. Therefore, ladies, 780
Our love being yours, the error that love makes
Is likewise yours. We to ourselves prove false,
By being once false for ever to be true
To those that make us both, — fair ladies, you;
And even that falsehood, in itself a sin, 786
Thus purifies itself and turns to grace.

Prin. We have receiv'd your letters full of love;

Your favours, the ambassadors of love,
And, in our maiden council, rated them
At courtship, pleasant jest, and courtesy, 790
As bombast and as lining to the time;
But more devout than this in our respects
Have we not been; and therefore met your loves
In their own fashion, like a merriment.

Dum. Our letters, madam, show'd much more than jest. 796

Long. So did our looks.

Ros. We did not quote them so.

King. Now, at the latest minute of the hour,
Grant us your loves.

Prin. A time, methinks, too short
To make a world-without-end bargain in.
No, no, my lord, your Grace is perjured much,
Full of dear guiltiness; and therefore this: 801

If for my love, as there is no such cause,
You will do aught, this shall you do for me:
Your oath I will not trust; but go with speed
To some forlorn and naked hermitage, 805

Remote from all the pleasures of the world;
There stay until the twelve celestial signs
Have brought about the annual reckoning.
If this austere insociable life

Change not your offer made in heat of blood; 810
If frosts and fasts, hard lodging and thin weeds
Nip not the gaudy blossoms of your love,
But that it bear this trial, and last love;

Then, at the expiration of the year,
Come challenge me, challenge me by these deserts, 816

And, by this virgin palm now kissing thine,
I will be thine; and till that instant shute
My woeful self up in a mourning house,
Raining the tears of lamentation
For the remembrance of my father's death. 820
If this thou do deny, let our hands part,
Neither intitled in the other's heart.

King. If this, or more than this, I would deny,
To flatter up these powers of mine with rest,
The sudden hand of death close up mine eye! 825

Hence ever then my heart is in thy breast.
[Bir. And what to me, my love? and what
to me?

Ros. You must be purged too, your sins are racked,

You are attaint with faults and perjury:
Therefore if you my favour mean to get, 830
A twelvemonth shall you spend, and never rest,

But seek the weary beds of people sick.]

Dum. But what to me, my love? but what to me?

A wife?

Kath. A beard, fair health, and honesty;
With three-fold love I wish you all these three.

Dum. O, shall I say, I thank you, gentle wife? 836

Kath. Not so, my lord; a twelvemonth and a day

I'll mark no words that smooth-fac'd wooers say.

Come when the King doth to my lady come;
Then, if I have much love, I'll give you some.

Dum. I'll serve thee true and faithfully till then. 841

Kath. Yet swear not, lest ye be forsworn
again.

Long. What says Maria?

Mar. At the twelvemonth's end
I'll change my black gown for a faithful friend.

Long. I'll stay with patience; but the time is long. 845

Mar. The liker you; few taller are so young.

Bir. Studies my lady? Mistress, look on me;
Behold the window of my heart, mine eye,
What humble suit attends thy answer there.

Impose some service on me for thy love. 850

Ros. Oft have I heard of you, my Lord
Biron,

Before I saw you; and the world's large tongue
Proclaims you for a man replete with mocks,
Full of comparisons and wounding flouts,
Which you on all estates will execute 855

That lie within the mercy of your wit.
To weed this wormwood from your fruitful
brain,

And therewithal to win me, if you please,
Without the which I am not to be won,
You shall this twelvemonth term from day to day 860

Visit the speechless sick and still converse
With groaning wretches; and your task shall be,
With all the fierce endeavour of your wit
To enforce the pained impotent to smile.

Bir. To move wild laughter in the throat of death? 865

It cannot be; it is impossible;
Mirth cannot move a soul in agony.

Ros. Why, that's the way to choke a gibing spirit,

Whose influence is begot of that loose grace
Which shallow laughing hearers give to fools.

A jest's prosperity lies in the ear 871
Of him that hears it, never in the tongue

Of him that makes it; then, if sickly ears,
Deaf'd with the clamours of their own dear groans,

Will hear your idle scorns, continue then, 875
And I will have you and that fault withal;

But if they will not, throw away that spirit,
And I shall find you empty of that fault,

Right joyful of your reformation.

Bir. A twelvemonth! Well, befall what will befall, 880

I'll jest a twelvemonth in a hospital.
Prin. [To the King.] Ay, sweet my lord;
and so I take my leave.

King. No, madam; we will bring you on your way.

Bir. Our wooing doth not end like an old play;

Jack hath not Jill. These ladies' courtesy 885
Might well have made our sport a comedy.

King. Come, sir, it wants a twelvemonth and a day,

And then 't will end

Bir. That 's too long for a play.

Re-enter Braggart [ARMADO].

Arm. Sweet majesty, vouchsafe me, —

Prin. Was not that Hector?

Dum. The worthy knight of Troy. 890

Arm. I will kiss thy royal finger, and take leave. I am a votary; I have vow'd to Jaquenetta to hold the plough for her sweet love three year. But, most esteemed greatness, will you hear the dialogue that the two learned men have compiled in praise of the owl and the 895 cuckoo? It should have followed in the end of our show.

King. Call them forth quickly; we will do so.

Arm. Holla! approach. 900

Enter all.

This side is Hiems, Winter; this Ver, the Spring; the one maintained by the owl, the other by the cuckoo. Ver, begin.

THE SONG.

Spring. When daisies pied and violets blue
And lady-smocks all silver-white 905
And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue
Do paint the meadows with delight,
The cuckoo then on every tree

Mocks married men; for thus sings he,

"Cuckoo; 910
Cuckoo, cuckoo," — O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!

When shepherds pipe on oaten straws

And merry larks are ploughmen's clocks,
When turtles tread, and rooks, and daws, 915

And maidens bleach their summer smocks,

The cuckoo then on every tree
Mocks married men; for thus sings he,

"Cuckoo; 920
Cuckoo, cuckoo," — O word of fear,
Unpleasing to a married ear!

Winter. When icicles hang by the wall

And Dick the shepherd blows his nail
And Tom bears logs into the hall

And milk comes frozen home in pail, 925

When blood is nipp'd and ways be foul,

Then nightly sings the staring owl,
"Tu-whit, tu-who!" —

A merry note,
While greasy Joan doth keel the pot. 930

When all aloud the wind doth blow

And coughing drowns the parson's saw

And birds sit brooding in the snow

And Marian's nose looks red and raw,

When roasted crabs hiss in the bowl, 935

Then nightly sings the staring owl,

"Tu-whit, tu-who!" —
A merry note,

While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

Arm. The words of Mercury are harsh after the songs of Apollo. You that way: 940
we this way. [Exeunt.]

THE COMEDY OF ERRORS

THERE has been very general agreement in regarding The Comedy of Errors as one of the earliest of Shakespeare's productions. A play called A Comedy of Errors ("like to Plautus his Menaechmus") was acted by players at Gray's Inn on December 28, 1594, and there seems no reason to doubt that this was the present play. Of internal evidences, the most pointed is the reference in III. ii. 125-127 to France as "making war against her heir," which is taken as an allusion to the contest between Henry of Navarre and the League (1589-94). But Henry of Navarre was heir to the French throne before the death of Henry III in 1589, and had been at war with France as early as 1585. Thus there is nothing in the passage to prevent this comedy from having come at the very beginning of Shakespeare's career. The large amount of verbal quibbling in the style of the play; the versification, which is marked by much rime both in couplets and alternates, by a considerable amount of doggerel, and by the absence of weak and light endings; and the comparative rarity of prose, all point to an early date. The year 1591 has been most frequently conjectured, and the play may well enough have been written still earlier. It was first published in the First Folio of 1623, and on this the present text is based.

The main plot is derived from the Menechmi of Plautus, which Shakespeare may have read either in the original or in the translation by W. W. (? William Warner). Though this translation was not published till 1595, it is stated in the printer's note to the readers that the work had been done by the translator "for the use and delight of his private friends," so that Shakespeare may have had opportunity of access to it some time previously.

The characters common to Plautus and Shakespeare are the two Antipholuses (Menechmi), Dromio of Syracuse (Messenio), Adriana (Mulier), the Courtezan (Erotium), and Pinch (Medicus). Shakespeare preserves in the Dromio of Syracuse, whom he borrows, and bestows upon the Dromio of Ephesus, whom he invents, the stock characteristics of the witty slave of Plautus. In Pinch's attempt to diagnose the madness of Antipholus, there is a strong reminiscence of the Medicus of Plautus. Mulier in the Menechmi is more of the conventional shrew than Adriana. The Parasite who plays a large part in the Latin comedy, the cook and maid-servant of the Courtezan, and Senex, the father of Mulier, are all discarded by Shakespeare. On the other hand, the enveloping plot of the parents of the twins, with the characters of Ægeon, Æmilia, Solinus, Luciana, the Merchants, and Luce, are all due to Shakespeare's invention. Little of the detail is drawn from Plautus, the most notable borrowings being the humorous treatment of the conjurer, the frequent thrashings of Dromio, and the reproof administered by the Abbess to Adriana, which resembles the remarks addressed to Mulier by Senex.

From the Amphitruo of Plautus are derived the scene (III. i.) in which Antipholus of Ephesus and his Dromio are shut out of their own home, and the notion of "doubling" the slaves as well as the masters. This play had formed the basis of an early farce, Jack Juggler (1562-63), but no trace is discernible of Shakespeare's having used this intermediary. The riming fourteen-syllabled lines in which the Dromios often speak belong to the tradition of the early drama, and have also suggested an English intermediary; a supposition which receives a slight support from the unexplained presence of the names Sereptus and Erotis added to Antipholus of Ephesus and Antipholus of Syracuse respectively in the stage directions of the Folio. Some have thought that Shakespeare may have founded his play on a "Historie of Error shown at Hampton Court on Newyeres daie at night enacted by the Children of Powles" (1574); but, though possible, this is far from certain. The word "Error" was at that time the common term for mistaken identity, and this was so common a device in the drama that no argument can be based on its mere occurrence in a title not otherwise identical.

Though The Comedy of Errors is notable among Shakespeare's plays for the slightness of the characterization, yet a comparison with Plautus shows, especially in the case of Adriana, a substantial superiority in elaboration and vitality on the part of Shakespeare's creations.

ACT I

SCENE I. [A hall in the Duke's palace.]

Enter DUKE, ÆGEON, GAOLER, [Officers,] and other Attendants.

Æge. Proceed, Solinus, to procure my fall,
 And by the doom of death end woes and all.

Duke. Merchant of Syracuse, plead no more;
 I am not partial to infringe our laws.
 The enmity and discord which of late Sprung from the rancorous outrage of your duke

To merchants, our well-dealing countrymen,
 Who, wanting guilders to redeem their lives,
 Have seal'd his rigorous statutes with their bloods,

Excludes all pity from our threatening looks. 10
 For, since the mortal and intestine jars
 'Twixt thy seditious countrymen and us,
 It hath in solemn synods been decreed,
 Both by the Syracusians and ourselves,
 To admit no traffic to our adverse towns. 15
 Nay, more:

If any born at Ephesus be seen
 At any Syracusian marts and fairs;
 Again, if any Syracusian born
 Come to the bay of Ephesus, he dies, 20
 His goods confiscate to the Duke's dispose,
 Unless a thousand marks be levied,
 To quit the penalty and to ransom him.
 Thy substance, valu'd at the highest rate,
 Cannot amount unto a hundred marks; 25
 Therefore by law thou art condemn'd to die.

Æge. Yet this my comfort: when your words are done,

My woes end likewise with the evening sun.

Duke. Well, Syracusian, say in brief the cause
 Why thou departed'st from thy native home, 30
 And for what cause thou cam'st to Ephesus.

Æge. A heavier task could not have been impos'd

Than I to speak my griefs unspeakable;

Yet, that the world may witness that my end
 Was wrought by nature, not by vile offence, 35
 I'll utter what my sorrow gives me leave.

In Syracuse was I born, and wed
 Unto a woman, happy but for me,
 And by me, had not our hap been bad.
 With her I liv'd in joy; our wealth increas'd 40
 By prosperous voyages I often made
 To Epidamnnum, till my factor's death
 And the great care of goods at random left Drew me from kind embracements of my spouse;

From whom my absence was not six months old 45

Before herself, almost at fainting under
 The pleasing punishment that women bear,
 Had made provision for her following me,
 And soon and safe arrived where I was.
 There had she not been long but she became
 A joyful mother of two goodly sons; 51
 And, which was strange, the one so like the other

As could not be distinguish'd but by names.
 That very hour, and in the self-same inn,
 A meaner woman was delivered 55
 Of such a burden, male twins, both alike.
 Those, for their parents were exceeding poor,
 I bought and brought up to attend my sons.
 My wife, not meanly proud of two such
 boys,

Made daily motions for our home return. 60
 Unwilling I agreed. Alas! too soon
 We came aboard.

A league from Epidamnnum had we sail'd
 Before the always wind-obeying deep
 Gave any tragic instance of our harm; 65
 But longer did we not retain much hope;
 For what obscured light the heavens did grant
 Did but convey unto our fearful minds
 A doubtful warrant of immediate death;
 Which though myself would gladly have em-brac'd, 70

Yet the incessant weepings of my wife,

Weeping before for what she saw must come,
 And piteous plainings of the pretty babes,
 That mourn'd for fashion, ignorant what to fear,
 For'd me to seek delays for them and me. 78
 And this it was, for other means was none:
 The sailors sought for safety by our boat,
 And left the ship, then sinking-ripe, to us.
 My wife, more careful for the latter born,
 Had fast'n'd him unto a small spare mast, 80
 Such as seafaring men provide for storms.
 To him one of the other twins was bound,
 Whilst I had been like heedful of the other.
 The children thus dispos'd, my wife and I,
 Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fix'd, 85
 Fast'n'd ourselves at either end the mast;
 And floating straight, obedient to the stream,
 Was carried towards Corinth, as we thought.
 At length the sun, gazing upon the earth,
 Dispers'd those vapours that offended us; 90
 And, by the benefit of his wished light,
 The seas wax'd calm, and we discovered
 Two ships from far making amain to us,
 Of Corinth that, of Epidaurus this.
 But ere they came, — O, let me say no more!
 Gather the sequel by that went before. 95

Duke. Nay, forward, old man; do not break off so;

For we may pity, though not pardon thee.
Æge. O, had the gods done so, I had not now
 Worthily term'd them merciless to us! 100
 For, ere the ships could meet by twice five leagues,

We were encount'ed by a mighty rock;
 Which being violently borne upon,
 Our helpful ship was splitted in the midst;
 So that, in this unjust divorce of us, 105
 Fortune had left to both of us alike
 What to delight in, what to sorrow for.
 Her part, poor soul! seeming as burdened
 With lesser weight but not with lesser woe,
 Was carried with more speed before the wind;
 And in our sight they three were taken up 110
 By fishermen of Corinth, as we thought.
 At length, another ship had seiz'd on us;
 And, knowing whom it was their hap to save,
 Gave healthful welcome to their shipwreck'd guests; 115

And would have reft the fishers of their prey,
 Had not their bark been very slow of sail;
 And therefore homeward did they bend their course.

Thus have you heard me sever'd from my bliss,
 That by misfortunes was my life prolong'd 120
 To tell sad stories of my own mishaps.

Duke. And, for the sake of them thou sorrow-est for,

Do me the favour to dilate at full
 What hath befallen of them and thee till now.

Æge. My youngest boy, and yet my eldest care, 125

At eighteen years became inquisitive
 After his brother; and importun'd me
 That his attendant — so his case was like,
 Reft of his brother, but retain'd his name —
 Might bear him company in the quest of him;
 Whom whilst I labour'd of a love to see, 131
 I hazarded the loss of whom I lov'd.

Five summers have I spent in farthest Greece,
 Roaming clean through the bounds of Asia,
 And, coasting homeward, came to Ephesus; 135
 Hopeless to find, yet loath to leave unsought
 Or that or any place that harbours men.
 But here must end the story of my life;
 And happy were I in my timely death,
 Could all my travels warrant me they live. 140

Duke. Hapless Ægeon, whom the fates have mark'd

To bear the extremity of dire mishap!
 Now, trust me, were it not against our laws,
 Against my crown, my oath, my dignity,
 Which princes, would they, may not disannul,
 My soul should sue as advocate for thee. 145
 But, though thou art adjudged to the death,
 And passed sentence may not be recall'd
 But to our honour's great disparagement,
 Yet I will favour thee in what I can. 150
 Therefore, merchant, I'll limit thee this day
 To seek thy life by beneficial help.

Try all the friends thou hast in Ephesus;
 Beg thou, or borrow, to make up the sum,
 And live; if no, then thou art doom'd to die.
 Gaoler, take him to thy custody. 155

Gaol. I will, my lord.

Æge. Hopeless and helpless doth Ægeon
 wend,

But to procrastinate his lifeless end. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. The mart.]

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse, DROMIO of Syracuse, and FIRST MERCHANT.

1. Mer. Therefore give out you are of Epidamnum,

Lest that your goods too soon be confiscate.
 This very day a Syracusan merchant
 Is apprehended for arrival here;
 And, not being able to buy out his life 5
 According to the statute of the town,
 Dies ere the weary sun set in the west.
 There is your money that I had to keep.

Ant. S. Go bear it to the Centaur, where we host,

And stay there, Dromio, till I come to thee. 10
 Within this hour it will be dinner-time;
 Till that, I'll view the manners of the town,
 Peruse the traders, gaze upon the buildings,
 And then return and sleep within mine inn,
 For with long travel I am stiff and weary. 15
 Get thee away.

Dro. S. Many a man would take you at your
 word,

And go, indeed, having so good a mean. [Exit.]

Ant. S. A trusty villain, sir, that very oft,
 When I am dull with care and melancholy, 20
 Lightens my humour with his merry jests.
 What, will you walk with me about the town,
 And then go to my inn and dine with me?

1. Mer. I am invited, sir, to certain merchants,

Of whom I hope to make much benefit; 25
 I crave your pardon. Soon, at five o'clock,
 Please you, I'll meet with you upon the mart
 And afterward consort you till bed-time.
 My present business calls me from you now.

Ant. S. Farewell till then. I will go lose myself,
And wander up and down to view the city.

I. Mer. Sir, I commend you to your own content. [Exit.]

Ant. S. He that commends me to mine own content

Commends me to the thing I cannot get.
I to the world am like a drop of water
That in the ocean seeks another drop,
Who, falling there to find his fellow forth,
Unseen, inquisitive, confounds himself.
So I, to find a mother and a brother,
In quest of them, unhappy, lose myself.

Enter DROMIO of Ephesus.

Here comes the almanac of my true date.
What now? How chance thou art return'd so soon?

Dro. E. Return'd so soon I rather approach'd too late.

The capon burns, the pig falls from the spit,
The clock hath stricken twelve upon the bell;

My mistress made it one upon my cheek,
She is so hot because the meat is cold;
The meat is cold because you come not home;
You come not home because you have no stomach;

You have no stomach having broke your fast;
But we that know what 'tis to fast and pray
Are penitent for your default to-day.

Ant. S. Stop in your wind, sir; tell me this,
I pray:

Where have you left the money that I gave you?

Dro. E. O, — sixpence, that I had o' Wednesday last

To pay the saddler for my mistress' crupper?
The saddler had it, sir; I kept it not.

Ant. S. I am not in a sportive humour now.

Tell me, and dally not, where is the money?
We being strangers here, how dar'st thou trust
So great a charge from thine own custody?

Dro. E. I pray you, jest, sir, as you sit at dinner.

I from my mistress come to you in post;
If I return, I shall be post indeed,
For she will score your fault upon my pate.
Methinks your maw, like mine, should be your clock

And strike you home without a messenger.

Ant. S. Come, Dromio, come, these jests are out of season;

Reserve them till a merrier hour than this.
Where is the gold I gave in charge to thee?

Dro. E. To me, sir? Why, you gave no gold to me.

Ant. S. Come on, sir knave, have done your foolishness

And tell me how thou hast dispos'd thy charge.
Dro. E. My charge was but to fetch you from the mart

Home to your house, the Phoenix, sir, to dinner.

My mistress and her sister stays for you.

Ant. S. Now, as I am a Christian, answer me
In what safe place you have bestow'd my money,

Or I shall break that merry scone of yours
That stands on tricks when I am undispos'd.
Where is the thousand marks thou hadst of me?

Dro. E. I have some marks of yours upon my pate,

Some of my mistress' marks upon my shoulders,

But not a thousand marks between you both.
If I should pay your worship those again,

Perchance you will not bear them patiently.

Ant. S. Thy mistress' marks? What mistress, slave, hast thou?

Dro. E. Your worship's wife, my mistress at the Phoenix;

She that doth fast till you come home to dinner,
And prays that you will hie you home to dinner.

Ant. S. What, wilt thou flout me thus unto my face,

Being forbid? There, take you that, sir knave.

Dro. E. What mean you, sir? For God's sake, hold your hands!

Nay, an you will not, sir, I'll take my heels.

Ant. S. Upon my life, by some device or other

The villain is o'erranght of all my money.
They say this town is full of cozenage,

As, nimble jugglers that deceive the eye,
Dark-working sorcerers that change the mind,

Soul-killing witches that deform the body,
Disguised cheaters, prating mountebanks,

And many such-like liberties of sin.
If it prove so, I will be gone the sooner.

I'll to the Centaur to go seek this slave;
I greatly fear my money is not safe. [Exit.]

ACT II

[SCENE I. The house of Antipholus of Ephesus.]

Enter ADRIANA and LUCIANA.

Adr. Neither my husband nor the slave return'd,

That in such haste I sent to seek his master!
Sure, Luciana, it is two o'clock.

Luc. Perhaps some merchant hath invited him

And from the mart he's somewhere gone to dinner.

Good sister, let us dine and never fret.
A man is master of his liberty.

Time is their master, and when they see time
They'll go or come; if so, be patient, sister.

Adr. Why should their liberty than ours be more?

Luc. Because their business still lies out o' door.

Adr. Look, when I serve him so, he takes it ill.

Luc. O, know he is the bridle of your will.

Adr. There's none but asses will be bridled so.

Luc. Why, headstrong liberty is lash'd with woe. —35

There's nothing situate under heaven's eye
But hath his bound ; in earth, in sea, in sky,
The beasts, the fishes, and the winged fowls
Are their males' subjects and at their controls ;
Man, more divine, the master of all these, 20
Lord of the wide world and wild watery seas,
Indu'd with intellectual sense and souls,
Of more preëminence than fish and fowls,
Are masters to their females, and their lords :
Then let your will attend on their accords. 25

Adr. This servitude makes you to keep un-

Luc. Not this, but troubles of the marriage-

Adr. But, were you wedded, you would bear some sway.

Luc. Ere I learn love, I'll practise to obey.

Adr. How if your husband start some other where ? 30

Luc. Till he came home again, I would forbear.

Adr. Patience unmov'd ! no marvel though she pause.

They can be meek that have no other cause.

A wretched soul, bruish'd with adversity,
We bid be quiet, when we hear it cry ; 35

But were we burd'ned with like weight of pain,
As much or more we should ourselves complain ;
So thou, that hast no unkind mate to grieve thee,

With urging helpless patience would relieve me ;

But, if thou live to see like right bereft, 40
This fool-begg'd patience in thee will be left.

Luc. Well, I will marry one day, but to try.
Here comes your man ; now is your husband nigh.

Enter DROMIO of Ephesus.

Adr. Say, is your tardy master now at hand ?

Dro. E. Nay, he's at two hands with me, and that my two ears can witness. 45

Adr. Say, didst thou speak with him ?
Know'st thou his mind ?

Dro. E. Ay, ay, he told his mind upon mine ear.

Beshrew his hand, I scarce could understand it.
Luc. Spake he so doubtfully, thou couldst not feel his meaning ? 50

Dro. E. Nay, he struck so plainly, I could too well feel his blows ; and withal so doubtfully that I could scarce understand them.

Adr. But say, I prithee, is he coming home ? 55
It seems he hath great care to please his wife.

Dro. E. Why, mistress, sure my master is horn-mad.

Adr. Horn-mad, thou villain !

Dro. E. I mean not cuckold-mad ;
But, sure, he is stark mad.

When I desir'd him to come home to dinner, 60
He ask'd me for a thousand marks in gold.

" 'Tis dinner-time," quoth I ; " My gold,"

quoth he.
" Your meat doth burn," quoth I ; " My gold ! "

quoth he.

" Will you come home ? " quoth I ; " My gold ! " quoth he,

" Where is the thousand marks I gave thee, villain ? " 65

" The pig," quoth I, " is burn'd ; " " My gold ! " quoth he.

" My mistress, sir," quoth I ; " Hang up thy mistress ! "

I know not thy mistress. Out on thy mistress ! "

Luc. Quoth who ?

Dro. E. Quoth my master. 70
" I know," quoth he, " no house, no wife, no mistress."

So that my errand, due unto my tongue,
I thank him, I bare home upon my shoulders ;
For, in conclusion, he did beat me there.

Adr. Go back again, thou slave, and fetch him home. 75

Dro. E. Go back again, and be new beaten home ?

For God's sake, send some other messenger.

Adr. Back, slave, or I will break thy pate across.

Dro. E. And he will bless that cross with other beating.

Between you I shall have a holy head. 80

Adr. Hence, prating peasant ! Fetch thy master home.

Dro. E. Am I so round with you as you with me,

That like a football you do spurn me thus ?
You spurn me hence, and he will spurn me hither.

If I last in this service, you must case me in leather. [Exit.] 85

Luc. Fie, how impatience loureth in your face !

Adr. His company must do his minions grace,

Whilst I at home starve for a merry look.
Hath homely age the alluring beauty took

From my poor cheek ? Then he hath wasted it. 90

Are my discourses dull ? Barren my wit ?
If voluble and sharp discourse be marr'd,

Unkindness blunts it more than marble hard.
Do their gay vestments his affections bait ?

That's not my fault ; he's master of my state.
What ruins are in me that can be found 95

By him not ruin'd ? Then is he the ground
Of my defeatures. My decayed fair

A sunny look of his would soon repair.
But, too unruly deer, he breaks the pale 100

And feeds from home ; poor I am but his stale.

Luc. Self-harming jealousy ! fie, beat it hence !

Adr. Unfeeling fools can with such wrongs dispense.

I know his eye doth homage elsewhere,
Or else what lets it but he would be here ? 105

Sister, you know he promis'd me a chain ;
Would that alone, alone he would detain ;

So he would keep fair quarter with his bed !
I see the jewel best enamell'd

Will lose his beauty ; and tho' gold bides still
That others touch, yet often touching will 110

Wear gold ; and no man that hath a name,

By falsehood and corruption doth it shame.
 Since that my beauty cannot please his eye,
 I'll weep what's left away, and weeping die.
Luc. How many fond fools serve mad jealousy?
 [Exeunt. 116]

[SCENE II. A public place.]

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse.

Ant. S. The gold I gave to Dromio is laid up
 Safe at the Centaur; and the heedful slave
 Is wand'ring forth, in care to seek me out.
 By computation and mine host's report,
 I could not speak with Dromio since at first
 I sent him from the mart. See, here he comes.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse.

How now, sir! is your merry humour alter'd?
 As you love strokes, so jest with me again.
 You know no Centaur? You receiv'd no gold?
 Your mistress sent to have me home to dinner?
 10

My house was at the Phoenix? Wast thou mad,

That thus so madly thou didst answer me?

Dro. S. What answer, sir? When spake I such a word?

Ant. S. Even now, even here, not half an hour since.

Dro. S. I did not see you since you sent me hence, 15

Home to the Centaur, with the gold you gave me.

Ant. S. Villain, thou didst deny the gold's receipt

And told'st me of a mistress and a dinner;
 For which, I hope, thou felt'st I was displeas'd.

Dro. S. I am glad to see you in this merry vein.
 20

What means this jest? I pray you, master, tell me.

Ant. S. Yea, dost thou jeer and flout me in the teeth?

Think'st thou I jest? Hold, take thou that, and that.
 [Beats Dro. 25]

Dro. S. Hold, sir, for God's sake! Now your jest is earnest.

Upon what bargain do you give it me?
 25

Ant. S. Because that I familiarly sometimes do use you for my fool and chat with you,

Your sauciness will jest upon my love
 And make a common of my serious hours.

When the sun shines let foolish gnats make sport, 30

But creep in crannies when he hides his beams.
 If you will jest with me, know my aspect

And fashion your demeanour to my looks,
 Or I will beat this method in your scone.

Dro. S. Sconce-call you it? So you would leave battering, I had rather have it a head.
 35

An you use these blows long, I must get a scone for my head and insence it too, or else

I shall seek my wit in my shoulders. But, I pray, sir, why am I beaten?
 40

Ant. S. Dost thou not know?

Dro. S. Nothing, sir, but that I am beaten.

Ant. S. Shall I tell you why?

Dro. S. Ay, sir, and wherefore; for they say every why hath a wherefore.
 45

Ant. S. Why, first,—for flouting me; and then, wherefore,—

For urging it the second time to me.

Dro. S. Was there ever any man thus beaten out of season,

When in the why and the wherefore is neither rhyme nor reason?

Well, sir, I thank you.
 50

Ant. S. Thank me, sir! For what?

Dro. S. Marry, sir, for this something that you gave me for nothing.

Ant. S. I'll make you amends next, to give you nothing for something. But say, sir, is it dinner-time?
 55

Dro. S. No, sir. I think the meat wants that I have.

Ant. S. In good time, sir; what's that?

Dro. S. Basting.

Ant. S. Well, sir, then 't will be dry.
 60

Dro. S. If it be, sir, I pray you, eat none of it.

Ant. S. Your reason?

Dro. S. Lest it make you choleric and purchase me another dry basting.

Ant. S. Well, sir, learn to jest in good time. There's a time for all things.
 65

Dro. S. I durst have denied that, before you were so choleric.

Ant. S. By what rule, sir?

Dro. S. Marry, sir, by a rule as plain as the plain bald pate of father Time himself.
 70

Ant. S. Let's hear it.

Dro. S. There's no time for a man to recover his hair that grows bald by nature.

Ant. S. May he not do it by fine and recovery?
 75

Dro. S. Yes, to pay a fine for a periwig and recover the lost hair of another man.

Ant. S. Why is Time such a niggard of hair, being, as it is, so plentiful an excrement?

Dro. S. Because it is a blessing that he bestows on beasts; and what he hath scanted men in hair he hath given them in wit.
 80

Ant. S. Why, but there's many a man hath more hair than wit.

Dro. S. Not a man of those but he hath the wit to lose his hair.
 85

Ant. S. Why, thou didst conclude hairy men plain dealers without wit.

Dro. S. The plainer dealer, the sooner lost; yet he loseth it in a kind of jollity.
 90

Ant. S. For what reason?

Dro. S. For two; and sound ones too.

Ant. S. Nay, not sound, I pray you.

Dro. S. Sure ones, then.

Ant. S. Nay, not sure, in a thing falsing.
 95

Dro. S. Certain ones, then.

Ant. S. Name them.

Dro. S. The one, to save the money that he spends in tiring; the other, that at dinner, they should not drop in his porridge.
 100

Ant. S. You would all this time have prov'd there is no time for all things.

Dro. S. Marry, and did, sir; namely, no time to recover hair lost by nature.

Ant. S. But your reason was not substantial,
why there is no time to recover. 106

Dro. S. Thus I mend it: Time himself is bald and therefore to the world's end will have bald followers.

Ant. S. I knew 't would be a bald conclusion. — But, soft! who wafts us yonder? 111

Enter ADRIANA and LUCIANA.

Adr. Ay, ay, Antipholus, look strange and frown,

Some other mistress hath thy sweet aspects;
I am not Adriana, nor thy wife.

The time was once when thou unurg'd wouldst vow 115

That never words were music to thine ear,
That never object pleasing in thine eye,
That never touch well welcome to thy hand,
That never meat sweet-savour'd in thy taste,
Unless I spake, or look'd, or touch'd, or carv'd to thee. 120

How comes it now, my husband, O, how comes
it,

That thou art then estranged from thyself?
Thyself I call it, being strange to me,

That, undividable, incorporate,
Am better than thy dear self's better part. 125

Ah, do not tear away thyself from me!
For know, my love, as easy mayst thou fall

A drop of water in the breaking gulf
And take unmingled thence that drop again,

Without addition or diminishing, 130

As take from me thyself and not me too.
How dearly would it touch thee to the quick

Shouldst thou but hear I were licentious,
And that this body, consecrate to thee,

By ruffian lust should be contaminate! 135

Wouldst thou not spit at me, and spurn at me,
And hurl the name of husband in my face,

And tear the stain'd skin off my harlot-brow,
And from my false hand cut my wedding-ring

And break it with a deep-divorcing vow? 140

I know thou canst; and therefore see thou do it.
I am possess'd with an adulterate blot;

My blood is mingled with the crime of lust;
For if we two be one and thou play false,

I do digest the poison of thy flesh, 145

Being strumpeted by thy contagion.
Keep then fair league and truce with thy true

bed;
I live disdain'd, thou undishonoured.

Ant. S. Plead you to me, fair dame? I know you not.

In Ephesus I am but two hours old, 150

As strange unto your town as to your talk;
Who, every word by all my wit being scann'd,

Wants wit in all one word to understand.

Luc. Fie, brother! how the world is chang'd with you!

When were you wont to use my sister thus? 155

She sent for you by Dromio home to dinner.

Ant. S. By Dromio?

Dro. S. By me?

Adr. By thee; and this thou didst return from him,

That he did buffet thee, and in his blows 160

Denied my house for his, me for his wife.

Ant. S. Did you converse, sir, with this gen-tlewoman?

What is the course and drift of your compact?

Dro. S. I, sir? I never saw her till this time.

Ant. S. Villain, thou liest; for even her very words 155

Didst thou deliver to me on the mart.

Dro. S. I never spake with her in all my life.

Ant. S. How can she thus then call us by our names,

Unless it be by inspiration?

Adr. How ill agrees it with your gravity 170

To counterfeit thus grossly with your slave,
Abetting him to thwart me in my mood!

Be it my wrong you are from me exempt,
But wrong not that wrong with a more contempt.

Come, I will fasten on this sleeve of thine. 175

Thou art an elm, my husband, I a vine,
Whose weakness married to thy stronger state

Makes me with thy strength to communicate.

If aught possess thee from me, it is dross,
Usurping ivy, brier, or idle moss; 180

Who, all for want of pruning, with intrusion
Infect thy sap and live on thy confusion.

Ant. S. To me she speaks; she moves me for her theme.

What, was I married to her in my dream?
Or sleep I now and think I hear all this? 185

What error drives our eyes and ears amiss?
Until I know this sure uncertainty,

I'll entertain the offer'd fallacy.

Luc. Dromio, go bid the servants spread for dinner.

Dro. S. O, for my beads! I cross me for a sinner. 190

This is the fairy land. O spite of spites!
We talk with goblins, owls, and sprites.

If we obey them not, this will ensue, They'll suck our breath or pinch us black and blue.

Luc. Why prat'st thou to thyself and an-swer'st not? 195

Dromio, thou Dromio, thou snail, thou slug, thou sot!

Dro. S. I am transformed, master, am not I?

Ant. S. I think thou art in mind, and so am I.

Dro. S. Nay, master, both in mind and in my shape.

Ant. S. Thou hast thine own form.

Dro. S. No, I am an ape.

Luc. If thou art chang'd to aught, 'tis to an
ass. 201

Dro. S. 'Tis true; she rides me and I long for grass.

'Tis so, I am an ass; else it could never be
But I should know her as well as she knows me.

Adr. Come, come; no longer will I be a fool,
To put the finger in the eye and weep, 205

Whilst man and master laughs my woes to scorn.

Come, sir, to dinner. Dromio, keep the gate.

Husband, I'll dine above with you to-day

And shrieve you of a thousand idle pranks. 210

Sirrah, if any ask you for your master,

Say he dines forth and let no creature enter.

Come, sister. Dromio, play the porter well.

Ant. S. Am I in earth, in heaven, or in hell?
Sleeping or waking? Mad or well-advis'd? ²¹⁵
Known unto these, and to myself disguis'd!
I'll say as they say and persevere so,
And in this mist at all adventures go.

Dro. S. Master, shall I be porter at the gate?

Adr. Ay; and let none enter, lest I break your pate. ²²⁰

Luc. Come, come, Antipholus, we dine too late. [Exeunt.]

ACT III

SCENE I. [Before the house of Antipholus of Ephesus.]

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Ephesus, DROMIO of Ephesus, ANGELO, the goldsmith, and BAL-THAZAR, the merchant.

Ant. E. Good Signior Angelo, you must excuse us all;

My wife is shrewish when I keep not hours.
Say that I linger'd with you at your shop
To see the making of her carcanet,
And that to-morrow you will bring it home. ⁵
But here's a villain that would face me down
He met me on the mart, and that I beat him
And charg'd him with a thousand marks in gold,

And that I did deny my wife and house.
Thou drunkard, thou, what didst thou mean by this? ¹⁰

Dro. E. Say what you will, sir, but I know what I know.

That you beat me at the mart, I have your hand to show.

If the skin were parchment and the blows you gave were ink,

Your own handwriting would tell you what I think.

Ant. E. I think thou art an ass.

Dro. E. Marry, so it doth appear
By the wrongs I suffer and the blows I bear. ¹⁵
I should kick, being kick'd; and, being at that pass,

You would keep from my heels and beware of
an ass.

Ant. E. You're sad, Signior Balthazar; pray
God our cheer

May answer my good will and your good welcome here. ²⁰

Bal. I hold your dainties cheap, sir, and your welcome dear.

Ant. E. O, Signior Balthazar, either at flesh or fish,

A table-full of welcome makes scarce one dainty dish.

Bal. Good meat, sir, is common; that every churl affords.

Ant. E. And welcome more common; for that's nothing but words. ²⁵

Bal. Small cheer and great welcome makes a merry feast.

Ant. E. Ay, to a niggardly host and more sparing guest;

But though my cates be mean, take them in good
part;

Better cheer may you have, but not with better
heart.

But, soft! my door is lock'd. Go bid them let us in. ³⁰

Dro. E. Maud, Bridget, Marian, Cicely, Gillian, Giun!

Dro. S. [Within.] Mome, malt-horse, capon, coxcomb, idiot, patch!

Either get thee from the door or sit down at the hatch.

Dost thou conjure for wenches, that thou call'st for such store

When one is one too many? Go get thee from the door. ³⁵

Dro. E. What patch is made our porter? My master stays in the street.

Dro. S. [Within.] Let him walk from whence he came, lest he catch cold on 's feet.

Ant. E. Who talks within there? Ho, open the door!

Dro. S. [Within.] Right, sir; I'll tell you when, an you'll tell me wherefore.

Ant. E. Wherefore? For my dinner. I have not din'd to-day. ⁴⁰

Dro. S. [Within.] Nor to-day here you must not, come again when you may.

Ant. E. What art thou that keep'st me out from the house I owe?

Dro. S. [Within.] The porter for this time, sir, and my name is Dromio.

Dro. E. O villain! thou hast stolen both mine office and my name.

The one ne'er got me credit, the other mickle blame. ⁴⁵

If thou hadst been Dromio to-day in my place,

Thou wouldst have chang'd thy face for a name,
or thy name for an ass.

Enter LUCE [within].

Luce. [Within.] What a coil is there, Dromio?
Who are those at the gate?

Dro. E. Let my master in, Luce.

Luce. [Within.] Faith, no; he comes too late;
And so tell your master.

Dro. E. O Lord, I must laugh!
Have at you with a proverb — Shall I set in my staff? ⁵¹

Luce. [Within.] Have at you with another;
that's — When? Can you tell?

Dro. S. [Within.] If thy name be called Luce, — Luce, thou hast answer'd him
well.

Ant. E. Do you hear, you minion? You'll let us in, I hope?

Luce. [Within.] I thought to have ask'd you.

Dro. S. [Within.] And you said no.

Dro. E. So, come, help: well struck! there was blow for blow. ⁵⁵

Ant. E. Thou baggage, let me in.

Luce. [Within.] Can you tell for whose sake?

Dro. E. Master, knock the door hard.

Luce. [Within.] Let him knock till it ache.

Ant. E. You'll cry for this, minion, if I beat the door down.

Luce. [Within.] What needs all that, and a pair of stocks in the town? ⁶⁰

Enter ADRIANA [within].

Adr. [Within.] Who is that at the door that keeps all this noise?

Dro. S. [Within.] By my troth, your town is troubled with unruly boys.

Ant. E. Are you there, wife? You might have come before.

Adr. [Within.] Your wife, sir knave! Go, get you from the door.

Dro. E. If you went in pain, master, this knave would go sore. 65

Ang. Here is neither cheer, sir, nor welcome; we would fain have either.

Bal. In debating which was best, we shall part with neither.

Dro. E. They stand at the door, master; bid them welcome hither.

Ant. E. There is something in the wind, that we cannot get in.

Dro. E. You would say so, master, if your garments were thin. 70

Your cake here is warm within; you stand here in the cold.

It would make a man mad as a buck, to be so bought and sold.

Ant. E. Go fetch me something; I'll break ope the gate.

Dro. S. [Within.] Break any breaking here, and I'll break your knave's pate.

Dro. E. A man may break a word with you, sir, and words are but wind, 75

Ay, and break it in your face, so he break it not behind.

Dro. S. [Within.] It seems thou want'st breaking. Out upon thee, hind!

Dro. E. Here's too much "out upon thee!" I pray thee, let me in.

Dro. S. [Within.] Ay, when fowls have no feathers, and fish have no fin.

Ant. E. Well, I'll break in; go borrow me a crow. 80

Dro. E. A crow without feather? Master, mean you so?

For a fish without a fin, there's a fowl without a feather.

If a crow help us in, sirrah, we'll pluck a crow together.

Ant. E. Go, get thee gone; fetch me an iron crow.

Bal. Have patience, sir; O, let it not be so! Herein you war against your reputation 85

And draw within the compass of suspect The unviolated honour of your wife.

Once this, — your long experience of her wisdom,

Her sober virtue, years, and modesty, 90

Plead on her part some cause to you unknown; And doubt not, sir, but she will well excuse

Why at this time the doors are made against you. Be rul'd by me; depart in patience, 95

And let us to the Tiger all to dinner; And about evening come yourself alone

To know the reason of this strange restraint. If by strong hand you offer to break in

Now in the stirring passage of the day, A vulgar comment will be made of it, 100

And that supposed by the common rout Against your yet ungalled estimation That may with foul intrusion enter in And dwell upon your grave when you are dead; For slander lives upon succession, 105

For ever hous'd where 't gets possession. Ant. E. You have prevail'd. I will depart in quiet,

And, in despite of mirth, mean to be merry. I know a vench of excellent discourse,

Pretty and witty, wild, and yet, too, gentle. 110 There will we dine. This woman that I mean,

My wife — but, I protest, without desert — Hath oftentimes upbraided me withal.

To her will we to dinner. [To Ang.] Get you home

And fetch the chain; by this I know 't is made. 115

Bring it, I pray you, to the Porpentine; For there's the house. That chain will I bestow —

Be it for nothing but to spite my wife — Upon mine hostess there. — Good sir, make haste. Since mine own doors refuse to entertain me, 120

I'll knock elsewhere, to see if they'll disdain me.

Ang. I'll meet you at that place some hour hence.

Ant. E. Do so. This jest shall cost me some expense. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. The same.]

Enter LUCIANA and ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse.

Luc. And may it be that you have quite forgot A husband's office? Shall, Antipholus,

Even in the spring of love, thy love-springs rot? Shall love, in building, grow so ruinous?

If you did wed my sister for her wealth, 5 Then for her wealth's sake use her with more kindness;

Or if you like elsewhere, do it by stealth; Muffle your false love with some show of blindness;

Let not my sister read it in your eye; Be not thy tongue thy own shame's orator;

Look sweet, speak fair, become disloyalty; 11 Apparell vice like virtue's harbinger;

Bear a fair presence, though your heart be tainted;

Teach sin the carriage of a holy saint; 14 Be secret-false. What need she be acquainted?

What simple thief brags of his own attainment? 'T is double wrong, to truant with your bed

And let her read it in thy looks at board. Shame hath a bastard fame, well managed;

Ill deeds is doubled with an evil word. 20 Alas, poor women! make us but believe,

Being compact of credit, that you love us; Though others have the arm, show us the sleeve;

We in your motion turn and you may move us. Then, gentle brother, get you in again; 25

Comfort my sister, cheer her, call her wife. 'T is holy sport to be a little vain,

When the sweet breath of flattery conquers strife.

Ant. S. Sweet mistress, — what your name is else, I know not,

Nor by what wonder you do hit of mine, —
Less in your knowledge and your grace you show not 81

Than our earth's wonder, more than earth divine.

Teach me, dear creature, how to think and
speak ;

Lay open to my earthy, gross conceit,
Smother'd in errors, feeble, shallow, weak, 85

The folded meaning of your words' deceit.

Against my soul's pure truth why labour you

To make it wander in an unknown field ?

Are you a god ? Would you create me new ?

Transform me then, and to your power I'll yield. 80

But if that I am I, then well I know

Your weeping sister is no wife of mine,

Nor to her bed no homage do I owe.

Far more, far more to you do I decline.

O, train me not, sweet mermaid, with thy note,

To drown me in thy sister's flood of tears. 85

Sing, siren, for thyself, and I will dote ;

Spread o'er the silver waves thy golden hairs,

And as a bed I'll take them and there lie,

And in that glorious supposition think 80

He gains by death that hath such means to die.

Let Love, being light, be drowned if she sink !

Luc. What, are you mad, that you do reason

so ?

Ant. S. Not mad, but mated ; how, I do not know.

Luc. It is a fault that springeth from your

eye. 85

Ant. S. For gazing on your beams, fair sun, being by.

Luc. Gaze when you should, and that will clear your sight.

Ant. S. As good to wink, sweet love, as look on night.

Luc. Why call you me love ? Call my sister

so.

Ant. S. Thy sister's sister.

Luc. That's my sister. No ;

It is thyself, mine own self's better part, 81

Mine eye's clear eye, my dear heart's dearer

heart,

My food, my fortune, and my sweet hope's aim,

My sole earth's heaven, and my heaven's claim.

Luc. All this my sister is, or else should be.

Ant. S. Call thyself sister, sweet, for I am

thee. 80

Thee will I love and with thee lead my life ;

Thou hast no husband yet nor I no wife.

Give me thy hand.

Luc. O, soft, sir ! hold you still. 80

I'll fetch my sister, to get her good will. [Exit.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse.

Ant. S. Why, how now, Dromio ! Where runn'st thou so fast ?

Dro. S. Do you know me, sir ? Am I Dromio ?

Am I your man ? Am I myself ?

Ant. S. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, 76

thou art thyself.

Dro. S. I am an ass, I am a woman's man, and besides myself.

Ant. S. What woman's man, and how besides thyself ? 80

Dro. S. Marry, sir, besides myself, I am due to a woman ; one that claims me, one that haunts me, one that will have me.

Ant. S. What claim lays she to thee ?

Dro. S. Marry, sir, such claim as you would lay to your horse ; and she would have me as 85 a beast : not that, I being a beast, she would have me ; but that she, being a very beastly creature, lays claim to me.

Ant. S. What is she ? 90

Dro. S. A very reverend body ; ay, such a one as a man may not speak of without he say

"Sir-reverence." I have but lean luck in the match, and yet is she a wondrous fat marriage.

Ant. S. How dost thou mean a fat marriage ?

Dro. S. Marry, sir, she's the kitchen wench and all grease ; and I know not what use to 87 put her to but to make a lamp of her and run from her by her own light. I warrant, her rags and the tallow in them will burn a Poland winter.

If she lives till doomsday, she'll burn a week longer than the whole world. 102

Ant. S. What complexion is she of ?

Dro. S. Swart, like my shoe, but her face nothing like so clean kept : for why, she sweats ; a man may go over shoes in the 105 grime of it.

Ant. S. That's a fault that water will mend.

Dro. S. No, sir, 't is in grain ; Noah's flood could not do it.

Ant. S. What's her name ? 110

Dro. S. Nell, sir ; but her name and three quarters, that's an ell and three quarters, will not measure her from hip to hip.

Ant. S. Then she bears some breadth ?

Dro. S. No longer from head to foot than 115 from hip to hip. She is spherical, like a globe ; I could find out countries in her.

Ant. S. In what part of her body stands Ireland ?

Dro. S. Marry, sir, in her buttocks ; I found it out by the bogs. 121

Ant. S. Where Scotland ?

Dro. S. I found it by the barrenness ; hard in the palm of the hand.

Ant. S. Where France ? 125

Dro. S. In her forehead ; armed and reverted, making war against her heir.

Ant. S. Where England ?

Dro. S. I looked for the chalky cliffs, but I could find no whiteness in them ; but I guess it stood in her chin, by the salt rheum that 131 ran between France and it.

Ant. S. Where Spain ?

Dro. S. Faith, I saw it not ; but I felt it hot in her breath. 135

Ant. S. Where America, the Indies ?

Dro. S. Oh, sir, upon her nose, all o'er embellished with rubies, carbuncles, sapphires, declining their rich aspect to the hot breath of Spain ; who sent whole armadoes of caracks to be ballast at her nose. 141

Ant. S. Where stood Belgia, the Netherlands?

Dro. S. Oh, sir, I did not look so low. To conclude, this drudge, or diviner, laid claim to me; called me Dromio; swore I was assur'd to her; told me what privy marks I had ¹⁴⁸ about me, as, the mark of my shoulder, the mole in my neck, the great wart on my left arm, that I, amaz'd, ran from her as a witch. And, I think, if my breast had not been made of faith and my heart of steel, ¹⁵⁰ She had transform'd me to a curtal dog and made me turn i' the wheel.

Ant. S. Go, hie thee presently post to the road;

An if the wind blow any way from shore, I will not harbour in this town to-night. If any bark put forth, come to the mart, ¹⁵⁵ Where I will walk till thou return to me. If every one knows us and we know none, 'Tis time, I think, to trudge, pack, and be gone.

Dro. S. As from a bear a man would run for life, ¹⁵⁹

So fly I from her that would be my wife. [Exit.]

Ant. S. There's none but witches do inhabit here;

And therefore 't is high time that I were hence. She that doth call me husband, even my soul Doth for a wife abhor. But her fair sister, Possess'd with such a gentle sovereign grace, ¹⁶⁵ Of such enchanting presence and discourse, Hath almost made me traitor to myself. But, lest myself be guilty to self-wrong, I'll stop mine ears against the mermaid's song.

Enter ANGELO with the chain.

Ang. Master Antipholus,—

Ant. S. Ay, that's my name.

Ang. I know it well, sir; lo, here is the chain. ¹⁷¹

I thought to have ta'en you at the Porpentine; The chain unfinished made me stay thus long.

Ant. S. What is your will that I shall do with this?

Ang. What please yourself, sir; I have made it for you. ¹⁷⁵

Ant. S. Made it for me, sir! I bespoke it not.

Ang. Not once, nor twice, but twenty times you have.

Go home with it and please your wife withal; And soon at supper-time I'll visit you And then receive my money for the chain. ¹⁸⁰

Ant. S. I pray you, sir, receive the money now,

For fear you ne'er see chain nor money more.

Ang. You are a merry man, sir; fare you well. [Exit.]

Ant. S. What I should think of this, I cannot tell;

But this I think, there's no man is so vain ¹⁸⁵ That would refuse so fair an offer'd chain.

I see a man here needs not live by shifts, When in the streets he meets such golden gifts.

I'll to the mart and there for Dromio stay. ¹⁹⁰ If any ship put out, then straight away. [Exit.]

ACT IV

SCENE I. [A public place.]

Enter SECOND MERCHANT, ANGELO, and an OFFICER.

2. Mer. You know since Pentecost the sum is due,

And since I have not much importun'd you; Nor now I had not, but that I am bound To Persia and want guilders for my voyage. Therefore make present satisfaction, ⁵ Or I'll attach you by this officer.

Ang. Even just the sum that I do owe to you Is growing to me by Antipholus, And in the instant that I met with you He had of me a chain. At five o'clock ¹⁰ I shall receive the money for the same. Pleaseth you walk with me down to his house, I will discharge my bond and thank you too.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Ephesus and DROMIO of Ephesus from the courtesan's.

Off. That labour may you save; see where he comes.

Ant. E. While I go to the goldsmith's house, go thou ¹⁵

And buy a rope's end; that will I bestow Among my wife and her confederates, For locking me out of my doors by day. But, soft! I see the goldsmith. Get thee gone, Buy thou a rope and bring it home to me. ²⁰

Dro. E. I buy a thousand pound a year! I buy a rope! [Exit.]

Ant. E. A man is well help up that trusts to you.

I promised your presence and the chain, But neither chain nor goldsmith came to me. Belike you thought our love would last too long, ²⁵

If it were chain'd together, and therefore came not.

Ang. Saving your merry humour, here's the note

How much your chain weighs to the utmost carat,

The fineness of the gold, and chargeful fashion, Which doth amount to three odd ducats more Than I stand debted to this gentleman. ³¹

I pray you, see him presently discharg'd, For he is bound to sea and stays but for it.

Ant. E. I am not furnish'd with the present money;

Besides, I have some business in the town. ³⁵ Good signior, take the stranger to my house; And with you take the chain, and bid my wife Disburse the sum on the receipt thereof. Perchance I will be there as soon as you.

Ang. Then you will bring the chain to her yourself? ⁴⁰

Ant. E. No; bear it with you, lest I come not time enough.

Ang. Well, sir, I will. Have you the chain about you?

Ant. E. An if I have not, sir, I hope you have,

Or else you may return without your money.

Ang. Nay, come, I pray you, sir, give me the chain. ⁴⁵

Both wind and tide stays for this gentleman,
And I, to blame, have held him here too long.

Ant. E. Good Lord! you use this dalliance to excuse

Your breach of promise to the Porpentine.
I should have chid you for not bringing it, ⁵⁰

But, like a shrew, you first begin to brawl.

2. Mer. The hour steals on; I pray you, sir, dispatch.

Ang. You hear how he importunes me; — the chain!

Ant. E. Why, give it to my wife, and fetch your money.

Ang. Come, come, you know I gave it you even now. ⁵⁵

Either send the chain or send by me some token.

Ant. E. Fie, now you run this humour out of breath.

Come, where 's the chain? I pray you, let me see it.

2. Mer. My business cannot brook this dalliance.

Good sir, say whether you 'll answer me or no; If not, I 'll leave him to the officer. ⁶¹

Ant. E. I answer you! What should I answer you?

Ang. The money that you owe me for the chain.

Ant. E. I owe you none till I receive the chain.

Ang. You know I gave it you half an hour since. ⁶⁵

Ant. E. You gave me none; you wrong me much to say so.

Ang. You wrong me more, sir, in denying it. Consider how it stands upon my credit.

2. Mer. Well, officer, arrest him at my suit.

Off. I do; and charge you in the Duke's name to obey me. ⁷⁰

Ang. This touches me in reputation.

Either consent to pay this sum for me

Or I attach you by this officer.

Ant. E. Consent to pay thee that I never had!

Arrest me, foolish fellow, if thou dar'st. ⁷⁵

Ang. Here is thy fee; arrest him, officer.

I would not spare my brother in this case,
If he should scorn me so apparently.

Off. I do arrest you, sir: you hear the suit.

Ant. E. I do obey thee till I give thee bail. ⁸⁰

But, sirrah, you shall buy this sport as dear

As all the metal in your shop will answer.

Ang. Sir, sir, I shall have law in Ephesus,

To your notorious shame; I doubt it not.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse, from the bay.

Dro. S. Master, there is a bark of Epidamnium ⁸⁵

That stays but till her owner comes aboard,

And then, sir, she bears away. Our fraughtage, sir,

I have convey'd aboard, and I have bought

The oil, the balsamum, and aqua-vitæ.

The ship is in her trim; the merry wind ⁹⁰

Blows fair from land; they stay for nought at all

But for their owner, master, and yourself.

Ant. E. How now! a madman! Why, thou peevish sheep,

What ship of Epidamnium stays for me?

Dro. S. A ship you sent me to, to hire waftage. ⁹⁵

Ant. E. Thou drunken slave, I sent thee for a rope,

And told thee to what purpose and what end.

Dro. S. You sent me for a rope's end as soon. You sent me to the bay, sir, for a bark.

Ant. E. I will debate this matter at more leisure, ¹⁰⁰

And teach your ears to list me with more heed.

To Adriana, villain, hie thee straight;

Give her this key, and tell her, in the desk

That 's cover'd o'er with Turkish tapestry

There is a purse of ducats; let her send it. ¹⁰⁵

Tell her I am arrested in the street

And that shall bail me. Hie thee, slave, be gone!

On, officer, to prison till it come.

[Exeunt [2. Merchant, Angelo, Officer, and Ant. E.].]

Dro. S. To Adriana! That is where we din'd,

Where Dowsabel did claim me for her husband.

She is too big, I hope, for me to compass. ¹¹¹

Thither I must, although against my will,

For servants must their masters' minds fulfil. [Exit.]

[SCENE II. The house of Antipholus of Ephesus.]

Enter ADRIANA and LUCIANA.

Adr. Ah, Luciana, did he tempt thee so?

Mightst thou perceive austerely in his eye

That he did plead in earnest? Yea or no?

Look'd he or red or pale, or sad or merrily?

What observation mad'st thou in this case? ⁵

Of his heart's meteors tilting in his face?

Luc. First he deni'd you had in him no right.

Adr. He meant he did me none; the more my spite.

Luc. Then swore he that he was a stranger here.

Adr. And true he swore, though yet forsworn he were. ¹⁰

Luc. Then pleaded I for you.

Adr. And what said he?

Luc. That love I begg'd for you he begg'd of me.

Adr. With what persuasion did he tempt thy love?

Luc. With words that in an honest suit might move. ¹⁴

First he did praise my beauty, then my speech.

Adr. Didst speak him fair?

Luc. Have patience, I beseech.

Adr. I cannot, nor I will not, hold me still;

My tongue, though not my heart, shall have his will.

He is deformed, crooked, old, and sere,

Ill-fac'd, worse bodied, shapeless everywhere;

Vicious, ungentle, foolish, blunt, unkind, 21
Stigmatical in making, worse in mind.

Luc. Who would be jealous then of such a one?

No evil lost is wail'd when it is gone.

Adr. Ah, but I think him better than I say, 25

And yet would herein others' eyes were worse.

Far from her nest the lapwing cries away.

My heart prays for him, though my tongue do curse.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Here! go; the desk, the purse! Sweet, now, make haste.

Luc. How hast thou lost thy breath?

Dro. S. By running fast.

Adr. Where is thy master, Dromio? Is he well? 31

Dro. S. No, he's in Tartar limbo, worse than hell.

A devil in an everlasting garment hath him;
One whose hard heart is button'd up with steel;
A fiend, a fairy, pitiless and rough; 35
A wolf, nay, worse, a fellow all in buff;
A back-friend, a shoulder-clapper, one that countermands

The passages of alleys, creeks, and narrow lands,

A hound that runs counter and yet draws dry-foot well;

One that before the judgement carries poor souls to hell. 40

Adr. Why, man, what is the matter?

Dro. S. I do not know the matter; he is 'rested on the case.

Adr. What, is he arrested? Tell me at whose suit.

Dro. S. I know not at whose suit he is arrested well;

But he's in a suit of buff which 'rested him; that can I tell. 45

Will you send him, mistress, redemption, the money in his desk?

Adr. Go fetch it, sister. This I wonder at, [Exit Luciana.]

That he, unknown to me, should be in debt.

Tell me, was he arrested on a band?

Dro. S. Not on a band but on a stronger thing, 50

A chain, a chain! Do you not hear it ring?

Adr. What, the chain?

Dro. S. No, no, the bell; 't is time that I were gone.

It was two ere I left him, and now the clock strikes one.

Adr. The hours come back! That did I never hear. 55

Dro. S. O, yes; if any hour meet a sergeant, 'a turns back for very fear.

Adr. As if Time were in debt! How fondly dost thou reason!

Dro. S. Time is a very bankrupt and owes more than he's worth to season.

Nay, he's a thief too; have you not heard men say,

That Time comes stealing on by night and day? 60

If 'a be in debt and theft, and a sergeant in the way,

Hath he not reason to turn back an hour in a day?

Re-enter LUCIANA.

Adr. Go, Dromio; there's the money, bear it straight,

And bring thy master home immediately.

Come, sister; I am press'd down with conceit — Conceit, my comfort and my injury. 65

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. A public place.]

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse.

Ant. S. There's not a man I meet but doth salute me

As if I were their well-acquainted friend;
And every one doth call me by my name.
Some tender money to me; some invite me;
Some other give me thanks for kindnesses; 5
Some offer me commodities to buy.
Even now a tailor call'd me in his shop
And show'd me silks that he had bought for me

And therewithal took measure of my body.
Sure, these are but imaginary wiles, 10
And Lapland sorcerers inhabit here.

Enter DROMIO of Syracuse.

Dro. S. Master, here's the gold you sent me for. What, have you got the picture of old Adam new-apparell'd?

Ant. S. What gold is this? What Adam dost thou mean? 15

Dro. S. Not that Adam that kept the Paradise, but that Adam that keeps the prison; he that goes in the calf's skin that was kill'd for the Prodigal; he that came behind you, sir, like an evil angel, and bid you forsake your liberty. 20

Ant. S. I understand thee not.

Dro. S. No? Why, 't is a plain case: he that went, like a bass-viol, in a case of leather; the man, sir, that, when gentlemen are tired, gives them a bob and 'rests them; he, sir, that takes pity on decayed men and gives them 25 suits of durance; he that sets up his rest to do more exploits with his mace than a morris-pike.

Ant. S. What, thou mean'st an officer?

Dro. S. Ay, sir, the sergeant of the band; he that brings any man to answer it that breaks 31 his band; one that thinks a man always going to bed and says, God give you good rest!

Ant. S. Well, sir, there rest in your foolery. Is there any ship puts forth to-night? May we be gone? 35

Dro. S. Why, sir, I brought you word an hour since that the bark Expedition put forth to-night; and then were you hind'ed by the sergeant, to tarry for the hoy Delay. Here 40 are the angels that you sent for to deliver you.

Ant. S. The fellow is distract, and so am I; And here we wander in illusions. Some blessed power deliver us from hence!

Enter a COURTEZAN.

Cour. Well met, well met, Master Antipholus.
I see, sir, you have found the goldsmith now. 40
Is that the chain you promis'd me to-day?

Ant. S. Satan, avoid! I charge thee, tempt me not.

Dro. S. Master, is this Mistress Satan?

Ant. S. It is the devil. 50

Dro. S. Nay, she is worse, she is the devil's dam, and here she comes in the habit of a light wench; and thereof comes that the wenches say, "God damn me;" that's as much to say, God make me a light wench. It is written, they appear to men like angels of light; light 55 is an effect of fire, and fire will burn; ergo, light wenches will burn. Come not near her.

Cour. Your man and you are marvellous merry, sir.

Will you go with me? We'll mend our dinner here? 60

Dro. S. Master, if you do, expect spoon-meat; or bespeak a long spoon.

Ant. S. Why, Dromio?

Dro. S. Marry, he must have a long spoon that must eat with the devil. 65

Ant. S. Avoid then, fiend! What tell'st thou me of supping?

Thou art, as you are all, a sorceress.

I conjure thee to leave me and be gone.

Cour. Give me the ring of mine you had at dinner.

Or, for my diamond, the chain you promis'd, 70
And I'll be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Dro. S. Some devils ask but the parings of one's nail.

A rush, a hair, a drop of blood, a pin,

A nut, a cherry-stone;

But she, more covetous, would have a chain. 75

Master, be wise; an if you give it her,

The devil will shake her chain and fright us with it.

Cour. I pray you, sir, my ring, or else the chain.

I hope you do not mean to cheat me so?

Ant. S. Avaunt, thou witch! Come, Dromio, let us go. 80

Dro. S. Fly pride, says the peacock: mistress, that you know.

[Exeunt [Ant. S. and Dro. S.].]

Cour. Now, out of doubt Antipholus is mad, Else would he never so demean himself.

A ring he hath of mine worth forty ducats,

And for the same he promis'd me a chain. 85

Both one and other he denies me now.

The reason that I gather he is mad,

Besides this present instance of his rage,

Is a mad tale he told to-day at dinner,

Of his own doors being shut against his entrance. 90

Belike his wife, acquainted with his fits,

On purpose shut the doors against his way.

My way is now to hie home to his house,

And tell his wife that, being lunatic,

He rush'd into my house and took perforce 95

My ring away. This course I fittest choose;

For forty ducats is too much to lose. [Exit.]

[SCENE IV. A street.]

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Ephesus and the OFFICER.

Ant. E. Fear me not, man; I will not break away.

I'll give thee, ere I leave thee, so much money,
To warrant thee, as I am 'rested for.

My wife is in a wayward mood to-day,
And will not lightly trust the messenger. 5

That I should be attach'd in Ephesus,
I tell you, 't will sound harshly in her ears.

Enter DROMIO of Ephesus with a rope's-end.

Here comes my man; I think he brings the money.

How now, sir! have you that I sent you for?

Dro. E. Here 's that, I warrant you, will pay them all. 10

Ant. E. But where 's the money?

Dro. E. Why, sir, I gave the money for the rope.

Ant. E. Five hundred ducats, villain, for a rope?

Dro. E. I'll serve you, sir, five hundred at the rate.

Ant. E. To what end did I bid thee hie thee home? 15

Dro. E. To a rope's end, sir; and to that end am I return'd.

Ant. E. And to that end, sir, I will welcome you. [Beating him.]

Off. Good sir, be patient.

Dro. E. Nay, 'tis for me to be patient; I am in adversity. 21

Off. Good, now, hold thy tongue.

Dro. E. Nay, rather persuade him to hold his hands.

Ant. E. Thou whoreson, senseless villain! 25

Dro. E. I would I were senseless, sir, that I might not feel your blows.

Ant. E. Thou art sensible in nothing but blows, and so is an ass.

Dro. E. I am an ass, indeed; you may prove it by my long 'ears. I have served him 30 from the hour of my nativity to this instant, and have nothing at his hands for my service but blows. When I am cold, he heats me with beating; when I am warm, he cools me with beating; I am wak'd with it when I sleep; 35 rais'd with it when I sit; driven out of doors with it when I go from home; welcom'd home with it when I return: nay, I bear it on my shoulders, as a beggar wont her brat; and, I think, when he hath lam'd me, I shall beg 40 with it from door to door.

Enter ADRIANA, LUCIANA, the COURTEZAN, and a Schoolmaster call'd PINCH.

Ant. E. Come, go along; my wife is coming yonder.

Dro. E. Mistress, respice finem, respect your end; or rather, to prophesy like the parrot, 45 "beware the rope's-end."

Ant. E. Wilt thou still talk? [Beating him.]

Cour. How say you now? Is not your husband mad?

Adr. His incivility confirms no less.

Good Doctor Pinch, you are a conjurer ; 50
Establish him in his true sense again,
And I will please you what you will demand.

Luc. Alas, how fiery and how sharp he looks !

Cour. Mark how he trembles in his ecstasy !

Pinch. Give me your hand and let me feel your pulse. 55

Ant. E. There is my hand, and let it feel your ear. [Striking him.]

Pinch. I charge thee, Satan, hous'd within this man,

To yield possession to my holy prayers

And to thy state of darkness hie thee straight.

I conjure thee by all the saints in heaven ! 60

Ant. E. Peace, doting wizard, peace ! I am not mad.

Adr. O, that thou wert not, poor distressed soul !

Ant. E. You minion, you, are these your customers ?

Did this companion with the saffron face

Revel and feast it at my house to-day, 65

Whilst upon me the guilty doors were shut

And I denied to enter in my house ?

Adr. O husband, God doth know you din'd at home ;

Where would you had remain'd until this time,
Free from these slanders and this open shame !

Ant. E. Din'd at home ! Thou villain, what sayest thou ? 71

Dro. E. Sir, sooth to say, you did not dine at home.

Ant. E. Were not my doors lock'd up and I shut out ?

Dro. E. Perdie, your doors were lock'd and you shut out.

Ant. E. And did not she herself revile me there ? 75

Dro. E. Sans fable, she herself revil'd you there.

Ant. E. Did not her kitchen-maid rail, taunt, and scorn me ?

Dro. E. Certes, she did ; the kitchen-vestal scorn'd you.

Ant. E. And did not I in rage depart from thence ?

Dro. E. In verity you did ; my bones bear witness, 80

That since have felt the vigour of his rage.

Adr. Is't good to soothe him in these contraries ?

Pinch. It is no shame. The fellow finds his vein.

And, yielding to him, humours well his frenzy.

Ant. E. Thou hast suborn'd the goldsmith to arrest me. 85

Adr. Alas, I sent you money to redeem you,

By Dromio here, who came in haste for it.

Dro. E. Money by me ! Heart and good-will you might,

But surely, master, not a rag of money.

Ant. E. Went'st not thou to her for a purse of ducats ? 90

Adr. He came to me and I deliver'd it.

Luc. And I am witness with her that she did.

Dro. E. God and the rope-maker bear me witness

That I was sent for nothing but a rope !

Pinch. Mistress, both man and master is possessor'd ; 95

I know it by their pale and deadly looks.

They must be bound and laid in some dark room.

Ant. E. Say, wherefore didst thou lock me forth to-day ?

And why dost thou deny the bag of gold ?

Adr. I did not, gentle husband, lock thee forth. 100

Dro. E. And, gentle master, I receiv'd no gold ;

But I confess, sir, that we were lock'd out.

Adr. Dissembling villain, thou speak'st false in both.

Ant. E. Dissembling harlot, thou art false in all

And art confederate with a damned pack 105

To make a loathsome abject scorn of me ;

But with these nails I'll pluck out these false eyes

That would behold in me this shameful sport.

Enter three or four, and offer to bind him. He strives.

Adr. O, bind him, bind him ! Let him not come near me.

Pinch. More company ! The fiend is strong within him. 110

Luc. Ay me, poor man, how pale and wan he looks !

Ant. E. What, will you murder me ? Thou gaoler, thou,

I am thy prisoner. Wilt thou suffer them

To make a rescue ?

Off. Masters, let him go. 114

He is my prisoner, and you shall not have him.

Pinch. Go bind this man, for he is frantic too. [They offer to bind Dro. E.]

Adr. What wilt thou do, thou peevish officer ?

Hast thou delight to see a wretched man

Do outrage and displeasure to himself ?

Off. He is my prisoner ; if I let him go, 120

The debt he owes will be requir'd of me.

Adr. I will discharge thee e'er I go from thee.

Bear me forthwith unto his creditor

And, knowing how the debt grows, I will pay it.

Good master doctor, see him safe convey'd 125

Home to my house. O most unhappy day !

Ant. E. O most unhappy strumpet !

Dro. E. Master, I am here ent'red in bond for you.

Ant. E. Out on thee, villain ! wherefore dost thou mad me ?

Dro. E. Will you be bound for nothing ? Be mad, good master ; cry "The devil !" 131

Luc. God help, poor souls, how idly do they talk !

Adr. Go bear him hence. Sister, go you with me.

Say now, whose suit is he arrested at ?

[Exeunt all but Adriana, Luciana, Officer, and Courtezan.]

Off. One Angelo, a goldsmith. Do you know him? 135

Adr. I know the man. What is the sum he owes?

Off. Two hundred ducats.

Adr. Say, how grows it due?

Off. Due for a chain your husband had of him.

Adr. He did bespeak a chain for me, but had it not.

Cour. When as your husband all in rage to-day 140

Came to my house and took away my ring —

The ring I saw upon his finger now —

Straight after did I meet him with a chain.

Adr. It may be so, but I did never see it.

Come, gaoler, bring me where the goldsmith is. I long to know the truth hereof at large. 145

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse with his rapier drawn, and DROMIO of Syracuse.

Luc. God, for thy mercy! they are loose again.

Adr. And come with naked swords.

Let's call more help to have them bound again.

Off. Away! they'll kill us.

[Exeunt all [but Ant. S. and Dro. S.] as fast as may be, frightened.]

Ant. S. I see these witches are afraid of swords. 151

Dro. S. She that would be your wife now ran from you.

Ant. S. Come to the Centaur; fetch our stuff from thence;

I long that we were safe and sound aboard.

Dro. S. Faith, stay here this night; they will surely do us no harm. You saw they speak us fair, give us gold; methinks they are such a gentle nation that, but for the mountain of mad flesh that claims marriage of me, I could find in my heart to stay here still and turn witch. 160

Ant. S. I will not stay to-night for all the town;

Therefore away, to get our stuff aboard.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V

SCENE I. [A street before a Priory.]

Enter SECOND MERCHANT and ANGELO.

Ang. I am sorry, sir, that I have hind'ed you;

But, I protest, he had the chain of me,

Though most dishonestly he doth deny it.

2. Mer. How is the man esteem'd here in the city?

Ang. Of very reverend reputation, sir, 5

Of credit infinite, highly belov'd,

Second to none that lives here in the city.

His word might bear my wealth at any time.

2. Mer. Speak softly; yonder, as I think, he walks.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse and DROMIO of Syracuse.

Ang. 'Tis so; and that self chain about his neck 10

Which he forswore most monstrously to have.

Good sir, draw near to me, I'll speak to him.

Signior Antipholus, I wonder much

That you would put me to this shame and trouble;

And, not without some scandal to yourself, 15

With circumstance and oaths so to deny

This chain which now you wear so openly.

Beside the charge, the shame, imprisonment,

You have done wrong to this my honest friend,

Who, but for staying on our controversy, 20

Had hoisted sail and put to sea to-day.

This chain you had of me; can you deny it?

Ant. S. I think I had; I never did deny it.

2. Mer. Yes, that you did, sir, and forswore it too.

Ant. S. Who heard me to deny it or forswear it? 25

2. Mer. These ears of mine, thou know'st, did hear thee.

Fie on thee, wretch! 'Tis pity that thou liv'st

To walk where any honest men resort.

Ant. S. Thou art a villain to impeach me thus.

I'll prove mine honour and mine honesty 30

Against thee presently, if thou dar'st stand.

2. Mer. I dare, and do defy thee for a villain.

[They draw.]

Enter ADRIANA, LUCIANA, the COURTEZAN and others.

Adr. Hold, hurt him not, for God's sake! He is mad.

Some get within him; take his sword away.

Bind Dromio too, and bear them to my house.

Dro. S. Run, master, run; for God's sake, take a house! 35

This is some priory. In, or we are spoil'd!

[Exeunt Ant. S. and Dro. S. to the Priory.]

Enter the LADY ABBESS.

Abb. Be quiet, people. Wherefore throng you hither?

Adr. To fetch my poor distracted husband hence.

Let us come in, that we may bind him fast 40

And bear him home for his recovery.

Ang. I knew he was not in his perfect wits.

2. Mer. I am sorry now that I did draw on him.

Abb. How long hath this possession held the man?

Adr. This week he hath been heavy, sour, sad, 45

And much different from the man he was;

But till this afternoon his passion

Ne'er brake into extremity of rage.

Abb. Hath he not lost much wealth by wreck of sea?

Buried some dear friend? Hath not else his eye 50

Stray'd his affection in unlawful love?

A sin prevailing much in youthful men,

Who give their eyes the liberty of gazing.

Which of these sorrows is he subject to?

Adr. To none of these, except it be the last;

Namely, some love that drew him oft from home. 50

Abb. You should for that have reprehended him.

Adr. Why, so I did.

Abb. Ay, but not rough enough.

Adr. As roughly as my modesty would let me.

Abb. Haply, in private.

Adr. And in assemblies too.

Abb. Ay, but not enough. 61

Adr. It was the copy of our conference.

In bed he slept not for my urging it ;

At board he fed not for my urging it ;

Alone, it was the subject of my theme ; 65

In company I often glanced it ;

Still did I tell him it was vile and bad.

Abb. And thereof came it that the man was mad.

The venom clamours of a jealous woman

Poisons more deadly than a mad dog's tooth. 70

It seems his sleeps were hind'ed by thy railing,

And thereof comes it that his head is light.

Thou say'st his meat was sauc'd with thy upbraidings ;

Unquiet meals make ill digestions,

Thereof the raging fire of fever bred ; 75

And what's a fever but a fit of madness ?

Thou say'st his sports were hind'ed by thy brawls :

Sweet recreation barr'd, what doth ensue

But moody and dull melancholy,

Kinsman to grim and comfortless despair, 80

And at her heels a huge infectious troop

Of pale distemperatures and foes to life ?

In food, in sport, and life-preserving rest

To be disturb'd, would mad or man or beast.

The consequence is, then, thy jealous fits 85

Hath scar'd thy husband from the use of wits.

Luc. She never reprehended him but mildly,

When he demean'd himself rough, rude, and wildly.

Why bear you these rebukes and answer not ?

Adr. She did betray me to my own reproof. 90

Good people, enter and lay hold on him.

Abb. No, not a creature enters in my house.

Adr. Then let your servants bring my husband forth.

Abb. Neither. He took this place for sanctuary,

And it shall privilege him from your hands 95

Till I have brought him to his wits again,

Or lose my labour in assaying it.

Adr. I will attend my husband, be his nurse,

Diet his sickness for it is my office,

And will have no attorney but myself ; 100

And therefore let me have him home with me.

Abb. Be patient ; for I will not let him stir

Till I have us'd the approved means I have,

With wholesome syrups, drugs, and holy prayers,

To make of him a formal man again. 105

It is a branch and parcel of mine oath,

A charitable duty of my order.

Therefore depart and leave him here with me.

Adr. I will not hence and leave my husband here ;

And ill it doth beseem your holiness 110

To separate the husband and the wife.

Abb. Be quiet and depart ; thou shalt not have him. [Exit.]

Luc. Complain unto the Duke of this indignity.

Adr. Come, go. I will fall prostrate at his feet

And never rise until my tears and prayers 115

Have won his grace to come in person hither

And take perforce my husband from the abbess.

2. Mer. By this, I think, the dial points at five.

Anon, I'm sure, the Duke himself in person

Comes this way to the melancholy vale, 120

The place of death and sorry execution,

Behind the ditches of the abbey here.

Ang. Upon what cause ?

2. Mer. To see a reverend Syracusan merchant,

Who put unluckily into this bay 125

Against the laws and statutes of this town,

Beheaded publicly for his offence.

Ang. See where they come ; we will behold his death.

Luc. Kneel to the Duke before he pass the abbey.

Enter DUKE [attended], and ÆGEON bare-headed, with the Headsman and other Officers.

Duke. Yet once again proclaim it publicly, 130

If any friend will pay the sum for him,

He shall not die ; so much we tender him.

Adr. Justice, most sacred Duke, against the abbess !

Duke. She is a virtuous and a reverend lady ;

It cannot be that she hath done these wrongs. 135

Adr. May it please your grace, Antipholus, my husband,

Who I made lord of me and all I had,

At your important letters, — this ill day

A most outrageous fit of madness took him ;

That desperately he hurried through the street, — 140

With him his bondman, all as mad as he, —

Doing displeasure to the citizens

By rushing in their houses, bearing thence

Rings, jewels, any thing his rage did like.

Once did I get him bound and sent him home,

Whilst to take order for the wrongs I went 145

That hence and there his fury had committed.

Anon, I wot not by what strong escape,

He broke from those that had the guard of him ;

And with his mad attendant and himself, 150

Each one with ireful passion, with drawn swords,

Met us again and, madly bent on us,

Chas'd us away, till, raising of more aid,

We came again to bind them. Then they fled

Into this abbey, whither we pursu'd them ; 155

And here the abbess shuts the gates on us,

And will not suffer us to fetch him out,

Nor send him forth that we may bear him hence.

Therefore, most gracious Duke, with thy command

Let him be brought forth and borne hence for help. 160

Duke. Long since thy husband serv'd me in my wars,

And I to thee engag'd a prince's word,
 When thou didst make him master of thy bed,
 To do him all the grace and good I could.
 Go, some of you, knock at the abbey-gate 165
 And bid the lady abess come to me.
 I will determine this before I stir.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. O mistress, mistress, shift and save yourself!

My master and his man are both broke loose,
 Beaten the maids a-row and bound the doctor,
 Whose beard they have sing'd off with brands of fire; 171

And ever, as it blaz'd, they threw on him
 Great pails of puddled mire to quench the hair.
 My master preaches patience to him and the while

His man with scissors nicks him like a fool, 175
 And sure, unless you send some present help,
 Between them they will kill the conjurer.

Adr. Peace, fool! thy master and his man are here,

And that is false thou dost report to us.

Mess. Mistress, upon my life, I tell you true;
 I have not breath'd almost since I did see it. 181
 He cries for you, and vows, if he can take you,
 To scorch your face and to disfigure you.

[Cry within.

Hark, hark! I hear him, mistress. Fly, be gone!

Duke. Come, stand by me; fear nothing.
 Guard with halberds! 185

Adr. Ay me, it is my husband! Witness you,
 That he is borne about invisible.
 Even now we hous'd him in the abbey here;
 And now he's there, past thought of human reason.

Enter ANTIPHOLUS of Ephesus and DROMIO of Ephesus.

Ant. E. Justice, most gracious Duke, O, grant me justice! 190

Even for the service that long since I did thee,
 When I bestrid thee in the wars, and took Deep scars to save thy life; even for the blood
 That then I lost for thee, now grant me justice.

Æge. Unless the fear of death doth make me
 dote, 195

I see my son Antipholus and Dromio.

Ant. E. Justice, sweet prince, against that woman there!

She whom thou gav'st to me to be my wife,
 That hath abused and dishonoured me
 Even in the strength and height of injury! 200
 Beyond imagination is the wrong
 That she this day hath shameless thrown on
 me.

Duke. Discover how, and thou shalt find me just.

Ant. E. This day, great Duke, she shut the doors upon me,

While she with harlots feasted in my house. 205

Duke. A grievous fault! Say, woman, didst thou so?

Adr. No, my good lord. Myself, he, and my sister

To-day did dine together. So befall my soul
 As this is false he burdens me withal!

Luc. Ne'er may I look on day, nor sleep on night, 210

But she tells to your highness simple truth!

Ang. O perjur'd woman! They are both for-sworn.

In this the madman justly chargeth them.

Ant. E. My liege, I am advised what I say,
 Neither disturbed with the effect of wine, 215

Nor heady-rash, provok'd with raging ire,
 Albeit my wrongs might make one wiser mad.

This woman lock'd me out this day from dinner.
 That goldsmith there, were he not pack'd with
 her,

Could witness it, for he was with me then; 220

Who parted with me to go fetch a chain,
 Promising to bring it to the Porpentine,

Where Balthazar and I did dine together.
 Our dinner done, and he not coming thither,

I went to seek him. In the street I met him 225

And in his company that gentleman,
 There did this perjur'd goldsmith swear me
 down

That I this day of him receiv'd the chain,
 Which, God he knows, I saw not; for the which

He did arrest me with an officer. 230

I did obey, and sent my peasant home
 For certain ducats; he with none return'd.

Then fairly I bespoke the officer
 To go in person with me to my house.

By the way we met 235

My wife, her sister, and a rabble more
 Of vile confederates. Along with them

They brought one Pinch, a hungry lean-fac'd
 villain,

A mere anatomy, a mountebank,
 A threadbare juggler and a fortune-teller,

A needy, hollow-ey'd, sharp-looking wretch, 240

A living dead man. This pernicious slave,
 Forsooth, took on him as a conjurer,

And, gazing in mine eyes, feeling my pulse,
 And with no face, as 't were, outfacing me,

Cries out, I was possess'd. Then all together 245

They fell upon me, bound me, bore me thence,
 And in a dark and dankish vault at home

There left me and my man, both bound together;

Till, gnawing with my teeth my bonds in sunder,
 I gain'd my freedom, and immediately 250

Ran hither to your grace; whom I beseech
 To give me ample satisfaction

For these deep shames and great indignities.
Ang. My lord, in truth, thus far I witness with him, 254

That he did n't at home, but was lock'd out.
Duke. But had he such a chain of thee or no?

Ang. He had, my lord; and when he ran in
 here,

These people saw the chain about his neck.
 2. Mer. Besides, I will be sworn these ears of mine

Heard you confess you had the chain of him 255

After you first forswore it on the mart;
 And thereupon I drew my sword on you;

And then you fled into this abbey here,
 From whence, I think, you are come by miracle.

Ant. E. I never came within these abbey-walls, 205
Nor ever didst thou draw thy sword on me.
I never saw the chain, so help me heaven!
And this is false you burden me withal.

Duke. Why, what an intricate impeach is this!

I think you all have drunk of Circe's cup. 270
If here you hous'd him, here he would have been.

If he were mad, he would not plead so coldly.
You say he din'd at home; the goldsmith here
Denies that saying. Sirrah, what say you?

Dro. E. Sir, he din'd with her there, at the Porpentine. 275

Cour. He did, and from my finger snatch'd that ring.

Ant. E. 'Tis true, my liege, this ring I had of her.

Duke. Saw'st thou him enter at the abbey here?

Cour. As sure, my liege, as I do see your grace.

Duke. Why, this is strange. Go call the abbess hither. 280

I think you are all mated or stark mad.

[Exit one to the Abbess.
Æge. Most mighty Duke, vouchsafe me speak a word.

Haply I see a friend will save my life
And pay the sum that may deliver me.

Duke. Speak freely, Syracusian, what thou wilt. 285

Æge. Is not your name, sir, call'd Antipholus?

And is not that your bondman, Dromio?

Dro. E. Within this hour I was his bondman, sir,

But he, I thank him, gnaw'd in two my cords.
Now am I Dromio and his man unbound. 290

Æge. I am sure you both of you remember me.

Dro. E. Ourselves we do remember, sir, by you;

For lately we were bound, as you are now.

You are not Pinch's patient, are you, sir?

Æge. Why look you strange on me? You know me well. 295

Ant. E. I never saw you in my life till now.

Æge. O, grief hath chang'd me since you saw me last,

And careful hours with time's deformed hand
Have written strange defeatures in my face. 299

But tell me yet, dost thou not know my voice?

Ant. E. Neither.

Æge. Dromio, nor thou?

Dro. E. No, trust me, sir, nor I.

Æge. I am sure thou dost.

Dro. E. Ay, sir, but I am sure I do not; and whatsoever a man denies, you are now bound to believe him. 306

Æge. Not know my voice! O time's extremity,

Hast thou so crack'd and splitted my poor tongue

In seven short years, that here my only son
Knows not my feeble key of untun'd cares? 310

Though now this grained face of mine be hid

In sap-consuming winter's drizzled snow,
And all the conduits of my blood froze up,
Yet hath my night of life some memory,
My wasting lamps some fading glimmer left, 315
My dull deaf ears a little use to hear.
All these old witnesses—I cannot err—
Tell me thou art my son Antipholus.

Ant. E. I never saw my father in my life. 319

Æge. But seven years since, in Syracuse, boy,
Thou know'st we parted; but perhaps, my son,
Thou sham'st to acknowledge me in misery.

Ant. E. The Duke and all that know me in the city

Can witness with me that it is not so.

I ne'er saw Syracuse in my life. 325

Duke. I tell thee, Syracusian, twenty years
Have I been patron to Antipholus,
During which time he ne'er saw Syracuse.
I see thy age and dangers make thee dote.

Re-enter ABBESS, with ANTIPHOLUS of Syracuse and DROMIO of Syracuse.

Abb. Most mighty Duke, behold a man much wrong'd. [All gather to see them. 330

Adr. I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceive me.

Duke. One of these men is Genius to the other;

And so of these. Which is the natural man,
And which the spirit? Who deciphers them?

Dro. S. I, sir, am Dromio; command him away. 335

Dro. E. I, sir, am Dromio; pray, let me stay.

Ant. S. Ægeon art thou not? or else his ghost?

Dro. S. O, my old master! Who hath bound him here?

Abb. Whoever bound him, I will loose his bonds

And gain a husband by his liberty. 340

Speak, old Ægeon, if thou be'st the man

That hadst a wife once call'd Æmilia

That bore thee at a burden two fair sons.

O, if thou be'st the same Ægeon, speak,

And speak unto the same Æmilia! 345

Æge. If I dream not, thou art Æmilia.

If thou art she, tell me, where is that son

That floated with thee on the fatal raft?

Abb. By men of Epidamnus he and I

And the twin Dromio all were taken up; 350

But by and by rude fishermen of Corinth

By force took Dromio and my son from them,

And me they left with those of Epidamnus.

What then became of them I cannot tell;

I to this fortune that you see me in. 355

Duke. Why, here begins his morning story right.

These two Antipholuses, these two so like,

And these two Dromios, one in semblance,—

Besides her urging of her wreck at sea,—

These are the parents to these children, 360

Which accidentally are met together.

Antipholus, thou cam'st from Corinth first?

Ant. S. No, sir, not I; I came from Syracuse.

Duke. Stay, stand apart; I know not which is which.

Ant. E. I came from Corinth, my most gracious lord, — 805

Dro. E. And I with him.

Ant. E. Brought to this town by that most famous warrior,

Duke Menaphon, your most renowned uncle.

Adr. Which of you two did dine with me to-day?

Ant. S. I, gentle mistress.

Adr. And are not you my husband?

Ant. E. No; I say nay to that. 371

Ant. S. And so do I, yet did she call me so;

And this fair gentlewoman, her sister here, Did call me brother. [To Luc.] What I told you then,

I hope I shall have leisure to make good; 375

If this be not a dream I see and hear.

Ang. That is the chain, sir, which you had of me.

Ant. S. I think it be, sir; I deny it not.

Ant. E. And you, sir, for this chain arrested me.

Ang. I think I did, sir; I deny it not. 380

Adr. I sent you money, sir, to be your bail,

By Dromio; but I think he brought it not.

Dro. E. No, none by me.

Ant. S. This purse of ducats I receiv'd from you

And Dromio my man did bring them me. 385

I see we still did meet each other's man,

And I was ta'en for him, and he for me,

And thereupon these errors are arose.

Ant. E. These ducats pawn I for my father here.

Duke. It shall not need; thy father hath his life. 390

Cour. Sir, I must have that diamond from you.

Ant. E. There, take it; and much thanks for my good cheer.

Abb. Renowned Duke, vouchsafe to take the pains

To go with us into the abbey here

And hear at large discoursed all our fortunes;

And all that are assembled in this place, 396

That by this sympathized one day's error

Have suffer'd wrong, go, keep us company,

And we shall make full satisfaction.

Thirty-three years have I but gone in travail

Of you, my sons; and till this present hour 401

My heavy burden ne'er delivered.

The Duke, my husband, and my children both,

And you the calendars of their nativity,

Go to a gossips' feast, and go with me; 405

After so long grief, such nativity!

Duke. With all my heart, I'll gossip at this feast.

[Exeunt all but Ant. S., Ant. E.,

Dro. S., and Dro. E.]

Dro. S. Master, shall I go fetch your stuff from shipboard?

Ant. E. Dromio, what stuff of mine hast thou embark'd?

Dro. S. Your goods that lay at host, sir, in the Centaur. 410

Ant. S. He speaks to me. I am your master, Dromio.

Come, go with us; we'll look to that anon.

Embrace thy brother there; rejoice with him.

[Exeunt (Ant. S. and Ant. E.).]

Dro. S. There is a fat friend at your master's house,

That kitchen'd me for you to-day at dinner; 415

She now shall be my sister, not my wife.

Dro. E. Methinks you are my glass, and not my brother.

I see by you I am a sweet-fac'd youth.

Will you walk in to see their gossiping?

Dro. S. Not I, sir; you are my elder. 420

Dro. E. That's a question: how shall we try it?

Dro. S. We'll draw cuts for the senior; till then lead thou first.

Dro. E. Nay, then, thus:

We came into the world like brother and brother;

And now let's go hand in hand, not one before another. 425

[Exeunt.]

THE TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA

No text of this play exists earlier than that in the First Folio, and on it the present edition is based. The title is mentioned by Meres in his Palladis Tamia (1598), and the internal evidence points to a still earlier date. Estimates have varied from 1591 to 1595. The metrical evidence is ambiguous. Rimes are not so frequent as in Love's Labour's Lost and some other early plays; while, on the other hand, the occurrence of doggerel lines, of verses rimed alternately, and of sonnets, points to the earliest group. To these should be added the unskilfulness of the dénouement, and the presence of what appear to be first sketches of characters and devices which are elaborated in later plays. Such are the contrast of the two heroines; the clowns; and the scene in which Julia discusses her suitors with her maid. None of the supposed references to current events or publications is of weight as evidence; and the theory that the play was written at two different times has received little support.

The most important source so far found for the plot is in the story of the shepherdess Felismena in Diana, the famous collection of romances in Spanish by Jorge de Montemayor, published in 1560. No printed English version of Diana appeared before that of Bartholomew Yonge in 1598, but this had existed in manuscript since about 1582. Other manuscript versions were in existence, so there is no great difficulty in supposing that Shakespeare knew the story from this source. Further, it is possible, but by no means certain, that the lost play called Felix and Philomena, which was acted at Greenwich in 1584, may have dealt with the same theme.

Felismena in Montemayor's romance corresponds to Shakespeare's Julia, and Felix to Proteus; and it is Julia's part of the plot that is found in the Spanish tale. The courtship of Felismena by Felix is much more minutely described in the novel, but its general character is retained by the dramatist. The scene in which Lucetta offers Proteus's letter to Julia follows closely the action of the corresponding scene in the original. The sending of Proteus to court, Julia's following him in disguise as a man, the scene in which she overhears the serenade to her rival, her taking service with Proteus as a page and being sent to Silvia as a messenger, her expressions of sympathy with her own case in her conversation with Proteus, her discussion of the awkwardness of her position when she is sent to plead with Silvia against her own interest, her report of her own beauty to her rival, and Silvia's distrust of Proteus because of his unfaithfulness to his first love, are the main features in which the play follows the romance. On the other hand, the character of Valentine is completely absent in Montemayor, so that Proteus's treachery in friendship is no part of his character in the novel. Moreover, Celia, who corresponds to Shakespeare's Silvia, falls in love with the disguised Felismena (as Olivia does with Viola in Twelfth Night), and finding her love unreciprocated, voluntarily ends her life. The events by which Felix and Felismena are finally brought together bear no resemblance to the closing scenes of The Two Gentlemen.

A volume of Englische Comedien und Tragedien published in Germany in 1620 contains a play with a strong resemblance to the Silvia plot of the present comedy. It is a crude German reproduction of an English tragedy now lost, which had been performed by English actors in Germany. In it Julius corresponds to Proteus, Romulus to Valentine, and Hippolyta to Silvia. The play ends with the killing of Julius by Romulus, and the suicides of Romulus and Hippolyta. It is quite possible that the original was the Phillipo and Hewpolyto mentioned in Henslowe's diary, and that it formed the source of that part of Shakespeare's plot which deals with the relations of Proteus and Silvia to Valentine.

The alleged reminiscences of Sidney's Arcadia and Brookes's Romeus and Juliet are unimportant.

ACT I

SCENE I. [Verona. An open place.]

Enter VALENTINE and PROTEUS.

Val. Cease to persuade, my loving Proteus.
 Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits.
 Were 't not affection chains thy tender days
 To the sweet glances of thy honour'd love,
 I rather would entreat thy company
 To see the wonders of the world abroad
 Than, living dully sluggardiz'd at home,
 Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness.
 But since thou lov'st, love still and thrive
 therein,

Even as I would when I to love begin. 10

Pro. Wilt thou be gone? Sweet Valentine, adieu!

Think on thy Proteus, when thou haply seest
 Some rare note-worthy object in thy travel.
 Wish me partaker in thy happiness
 When thou dost meet good hap; and in thy danger, 15

If ever danger do environ thee,
 Commend thy grievance to my holy prayers,
 For I will be thy beadsman, Valentine.

Val. And on a love-book pray for my success?

Pro. Upon some book I love I'll pray for
 thee. 20

Val. That's on some shallow story of deep
 love,

How young Leander cross'd the Hellespont.

Pro. That's a deep story of a deeper love,
 For he was more than over shoes in love.

Val. 'Tis true; for you are over boots in
 love, 25

And yet you never swam the Hellespont.

Pro. Over the boots? Nay, give me not the boots.

Val. No, I will not, for it boots thee not.

Pro. What?

Val. To be in love, where scorn is bought with groans;

Coy looks with heart-sore sighs; one fading moment's mirth 30

With twenty watchful, weary, tedious nights:

If haply won, perhaps a hapless gain;

If lost, why then a grievous labour won;

However, but a folly bought with wit,

Or else a wit by folly vanquished. 35

Pro. So, by your circumstance, you call me fool.

Val. So, by your circumstance, I fear you'll prove.

Pro. 'Tis love you cavil at; I am not Love.

Val. Love is your master, for he masters you;
 And he that is so yoked by a fool, 40

Methinks, should not be chronicled for wise.

Pro. Yet writers say, as in the sweetest bud

The eating canker dwells, so eating love

Inhabits in the finest wits of all.

Val. And writers say, as the most forward
 bud 45

Is eaten by the canker ere it blow,

Even so by love the young and tender wit

Is turn'd to folly, blasting in the bud,

Losing his verdure even in the prime

And all the fair effects of future hopes. 50

But wherefore waste I time to counsel thee

That art a votary to fond desire?

Once more adieu! My father at the road

Expects my coming, there to see me shipp'd.

Pro. And thither will I bring thee, Valentine. 55

Val. Sweet Proteus, no; now let us take our
 leave.

To Milan let me hear from thee by letters

Of thy success in love, and what news else

Betideth here in absence of thy friend;

And I likewise will visit thee with mine. 60

Pro. All happiness bechance to thee in Milan!

Val. As much to you at home! and so farewell. [Exit.

Pro. He after honour hunts, I after love.

He leaves his friends to dignify them more;

I leave myself, my friends, and all, for love. 65

Thou, Julia, thou hast metamorphos'd me,
Made me neglect my studies, lose my time,
War with good counsel, set the world at nought;
Made wit with musing weak, heart sick with thought.

[Enter SPEED.]

Speed. Sir Proteus, save you! Saw you my master?

Pro. But now he parted hence, to embark for Milan.

Speed. Twenty to one, then, he is shipp'd already,

And I have play'd the sheep in losing him.

Pro. Indeed, a sheep doth very often stray,
An if the shepherd be a while away.

Speed. You conclude that my master is a shepherd, then, and I a sheep?

Pro. I do.

Speed. Why then, my horns are his horns, whether I wake or sleep.

Pro. A silly answer, and fitting well a sheep.

Speed. This proves me still a sheep.

Pro. True; and thy master a shepherd.

Speed. Nay, that I can deny by a circumstance.

Pro. It shall go hard but I'll prove it by another.

Speed. The shepherd seeks the sheep, and not the sheep the shepherd; but I seek my master, and my master seeks not me: therefore
I am no sheep.

Pro. The sheep for fodder follow the shepherd; the shepherd for food follows not the sheep: thou for wages followest thy master;
thy master for wages follows not thee: therefore thou art a sheep.

Speed. Such another proof will make me cry
"baa."

Pro. But, dost thou hear? gav'st thou my letter to Julia?

Speed. Ay, sir; I, a lost mutton, gave your letter to her, a lac'd mutton, and she, a lac'd mutton, gave me, a lost mutton, nothing for my labour.

Pro. Here's too small a pasture for such store of muttons.

Speed. If the ground be overcharg'd, you were best stick her.

Pro. Nay, in that you are astray; 't were best pound you.

Speed. Nay, sir, less than a pound shall serve me for carrying your letter.

Pro. You mistake; I mean the pound, — a pinfold.

Speed. From a pound to a pin? Fold it over and over,

'T is threefold too little for carrying a letter to your lover.

Pro. But what said she?

Speed. [Nodding.] Ay.

Pro. Nod-ay; — why, that's noddy.

Speed. You mistook, sir. I say, she did nod;
and you ask me if she did nod, and I say, [221]

"Ay."

Pro. And that set together is noddy.

Speed. Now you have taken the pains to set it together, take it for your pains.

Pro. No, no; you shall have it for bearing the letter.

Speed. Well, I perceive I must be fain to bear with you.

Pro. Why, sir, how do you bear with me?

Speed. Marry, sir, the letter, very orderly; having nothing but the word "noddy" for my pains.

Pro. Beshrew me, but you have a quick
wit.

Speed. And yet it cannot overtake your slow purse.

Pro. Come, come, open the matter in brief.
What said she?

Speed. Open your purse, that the money and the matter may be both at once delivered.

Pro. Well, sir, here is for your pains. What said she?

Speed. Truly, sir, I think you'll hardly win
her.

Pro. Why, couldst thou perceive so much from her?

Speed. Sir, I could perceive nothing at all from her, no, not so much as a ducat for [145] delivering your letter; and being so hard to me that brought your mind, I fear she'll prove as hard to you in telling your mind. Give her no token but stones, for she's as hard as steel.

Pro. What said she? Nothing?

Speed. No, not so much as "Take this for thy pains." To testify your bounty, I thank you, you have testern'd me; in requital whereof, henceforth carry your letters yourself: and so, sir, I'll commend you to my master.

Pro. Go, go, be gone, to save your ship from wreck,

Which cannot perish having thee aboard,
Being destin'd to a drier death on shore.

[Exit Speed.]

I must go send some better messenger.

I fear my Julia would not deign my lines,
Receiving them from such a worthless post.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. [The same. Garden of Julia's house.]

Enter JULIA and LUCETTA.

Jul. But say, Lucetta, now we are alone,
Wouldst thou then counsel me to fall in love?

Luc. Ay, madam, so you stumble not unheedfully.

Jul. Of all the fair resort of gentlemen
That every day with parle encounter me,
In thy opinion which is worthiest love?

Luc. Please you repeat their names, I'll show my mind

According to my shallow simple skill.

Jul. What think'st thou of the fair Sir Egle-mour?

Luc. As of a knight well-spoken, neat, and fine;

But, were I you, he never should be mine.

Jul. What think'st thou of the rich Mercatio?

Luc. Well of his wealth; but of himself, so
so.

Jul. What think'st thou of the gentle Proteus?

Luc. Lord, Lord! to see what folly reigns in us!

Jul. How now! what means this passion at his name?

Luc. Pardon, dear madam; 'tis a passing shame

That I, unworthy body as I am, Should censure thus on lovely gentlemen.

Jul. Why not on Proteus, as of all the rest?

Luc. Then thus: of many good I think him best.

Jul. Your reason?

Luc. I have no other but a woman's reason: I think him so because I think him so.

Jul. And wouldst thou have me cast my love on him?

Luc. Ay, if you thought your love not cast away.

Jul. Why he, of all the rest, hath never mov'd me.

Luc. Yet he, of all the rest, I think, best loves ye.

Jul. His little speaking shows his love but small.

Luc. Fire that's closest kept burns most of all.

Jul. They do not love that do not show their love.

Luc. O, they love least that let men know their love.

Jul. I would I knew his mind.

Luc. Peruse this paper, madam.

Jul. "To Julia." Say, from whom?

Luc. That the contents will show.

Jul. Say, say, who gave it thee?

Luc. Sir Valentine's page, and sent, I think, from Proteus.

He would have given it you; but I, being in the way,

Did in your name receive it. Pardon the fault, I pray.

Jul. Now, by my modesty, a goodly broker!

Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines?

To whisper and conspire against my youth?

Now, trust me, 'tis an office of great worth

And you an officer fit for the place.

There, take the paper; see it be return'd,

Or else return no more into my sight.

Luc. To plead for love deserves more fee than hate.

Jul. Will ye be gone?

Luc. That you may ruminate.

[Exit.]

Jul. And yet I would I had o'erlook'd the letter:

It were a shame to call her back again

And pray her to a fault for which I chid her.

What 'fool is she, that knows I am a maid,

And would not force the letter to my view!

Since maids, in modesty, say "no" to that

Which they would have the profferer construe "ay."

Fie, fie, how wayward is this foolish love,

That, like a testy babe, will scratch the nurse

And presently, all humbled, kiss the rod!

How churlishly I chid Lucetta hence,
When willingly I would have had her here!
How angrily I taught my brow to frown,
When inward joy enforc'd my heart to smile!
My penance is to call Lucetta back
And ask remission for my folly past.
What ho! Lucetta!

[Re-enter LUCETTA.]

Luc. What would your ladyship?

Jul. Is't near dinner-time?

Luc. I would it were,
That you might kill your stomach on your meat,
And not upon your maid.

Jul. What is't that you took up so gingerly?

Luc. Nothing.

Jul. Why didst thou stoop, then?

Luc. To take a paper up that I let fall.

Jul. And is that paper nothing?

Luc. Nothing concerning me.

Jul. Then let it lie for those that it concerns.

Luc. Madam, it will not lie where it concerns

Unless it have a false interpreter.

Jul. Some love of yours hath writ to you in rhyme.

Luc. That I might sing it, madam, to a tune.
Give me a note; your ladyship can set.

Jul. As little by such toys as may be possible.

Best sing it to the tune of "Light o' love."

Luc. It is too heavy for so light a tune.

Jul. Heavy! belike it hath some burden then?

Luc. Ay, and melodious were it, would you sing it.

Jul. And why not you?

Luc. I cannot reach so high.

Jul. Let's see your song. How now, minion!

Luc. Keep tune there still, so you will sing it out.

And yet methinks I do not like this tune.

Jul. You do not?

Luc. No, madam; it is too sharp.

Jul. You, minion, are too saucy.

Luc. Nay, now you are too flat,

And mar the concord with too harsh a descant.
There wanteth but a mean to fill your song.

Jul. The mean is drown'd with your unruly bass.

Luc. Indeed, I bid the base for Proteus.

Jul. This babble shall not henceforth trouble me.

Here is a coil with protestation!

[Tears the letter.]

Go get you gone, and let the papers lie.

You would be fingering them, to anger me.

Luc. She makes it strange; but she would be best pleas'd

To be so ang'red with another letter. [Exit.]

Jul. Nay, would I were so ang'red with the same!

O hateful hands, to tear such loving words!

Injurious wasps, to feed on such sweet honey

And kill the bees that yield it with your stings!

I'll kiss each several paper for amends.

Look, here is writ "kind Julia." Unkind Julia!

As in revenge of thy ingratitude, 110
I throw thy name against the bruising stones,
Trampling contemptuously on thy disdain.
And here is writ "love-wounded Proteus."
Poor wounded name! my bosom as a bed
Shall lodge thee till thy wound be thoroughly heal'd; 115

And thus I search it with a sovereign kiss.
But twice or thrice was "Proteus" written
down.

Be calm, good wind, blow not a word away
Till I have found each letter in the letter, Except mine own name; that some whirlwind
bear 120

Unto a ragged, fearful, hanging rock
And throw it thence into the raging sea!
Lo, here in one line is his name twice writ,
"Poor forlorn Proteus, passionate Proteus,
To the sweet Julia." That I'll tear away; 125
And yet I will not, sith so prettily
He couples it to his complaining names.
Thus will I fold them one upon another.
Now kiss, embrace, contend, do what you will.

[Re-enter LUCETTA.]

Luc. Madam, 130
Dinner is ready, and your father stays.

Jul. Well, let us go.

Luc. What, shall these papers lie like tell-tales here?

Jul. If you respect them, best to take them up.

Luc. Nay, I was taken up for laying them
down; 135

Yet here they shall not lie, for catching cold.

Jul. I see you have a month's mind to them.

Luc. Ay, madam, you may say what sights you see;

I see things too, although you judge I wink.

Jul. Come, come; will 't please you go? 140
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [The same. Antonio's house.]

Enter ANTONIO and PANTHINO.

Ant. Tell me, Panthino, what sad talk was
that

Wherewith my brother held you in the cloister?

Pan. 'Twas of his nephew Proteus, your son.

Ant. Why, what of him?

Pan. He wond'ring that your lordship
Would suffer him to spend his youth at home, &
While other men, of slender reputation,
Put forth their sons to seek preferment out,
Some to the wars, to try their fortune there;
Some to discover islands far away;

Some to the studious universities. 10

For any or for all these exercises
He said that Proteus your son was meet,
And did request me to importune you
To let him spend his time no more at home,
Which would be great impeachment to his age, 15

In having known no travel in his youth.

Ant. Nor need'st thou much importune me to
that

Whereon this month I have been hammering.
I have consider'd well his loss of time
And how he cannot be a perfect man, 20
Not being tried and tutor'd in the world.
Experience is by industry achiev'd,
And perfected by the swift course of time.

Then tell me, whither were I best to send him?

Pan. I think your lordship is not ignorant 25
How his companion, youthful Valentine,
Attends the Emperor in his royal court.

Ant. I know it well.

Pan. 'T were good, I think, your lordship sent him thither.

There shall he practise tilts and tournaments, 30
Hear sweet discourse, converse with noblemen,
And be in eye of every exercise
Worthy his youth and nobleness of birth.

Ant. I like thy counsel; well hast thou advise'd;

And that thou mayst perceive how well I like
it 35

The execution of it shall make known.

Even with the speediest expedition

I will dispatch him to the Emperor's court.

Pan. To-morrow, may it please you, Don Alphonso

With other gentlemen of good esteem 40
Are journeying to salute the Emperor,
And to commend their service to his will.

Ant. Good company; with them shall Proteus go,

And—In good time! Now will we break with him.

[Enter PROTEUS.]

Pro. Sweet love! sweet lines! sweet life! 45
Here is her hand, the agent of her heart;
Here is her oath for love, her honour's pawn.
O, that our fathers would applaud our loves,
To seal our happiness with their consents!
O heavenly Julia! 50

Ant. How now! what letter are you reading
there?

Pro. May 't please your lordship, 't is a word or two

Of commendations sent from Valentine,
Deliver'd by a friend that came from him.

Ant. Lend me the letter. Let me see what news. 55

Pro. There is no news, my lord, but that he writes

How happily he lives, how well belov'd
And daily graced by the Emperor;
Wishing me with him, partner of his fortune.

Ant. And how stand you affected to his wish?

Pro. As one relying on your lordship's will
And not depending on his friendly wish. 60

Ant. My will is something sorted with his wish.

Muse not that I thus suddenly proceed,
For what I will, I will, and there an end. 65

I am resolv'd that thou shalt spend some time
With Valentine in the Emperor's court.

What maintenance he from his friends receives,
Like exhibition thou shalt have from me.

To-morrow be in readiness to go. 70
Excuse it not, for I am peremptory.

Pro. My lord, I cannot be so soon provided.
Please you, deliberate a day or two.

Ant. Look, what thou want'st shall be sent after thee.

No more of stay! To-morrow thou must go. 75
Come on, Panthino; you shall be employ'd
To hasten on his expedition.

[Exeunt Ant. and Pan.]

Pro. Thus have I shunn'd the fire for fear of burning,
And drench'd me in the sea, where I am drown'd.

I fear'd to show my father Julia's letter, 80
Lest he should take exceptions to my love;
And with the vantage of mine own excuse
Hath he excepted most against my love.

O, how this spring of love resembleth 85
The uncertain glory of an April day,
Which now shows all the beauty of the sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away!

[Re-enter PANTHINO.]

Pan. Sir Proteus, your father calls for you.
He is in haste; therefore, I pray you, go.

Pro. Why, this it is; my heart accords thereto, 90

And yet a thousand times it answers "no."
[Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I. [Milan. The Duke's palace.]

Enter VALENTINE and SPEED.

Speed. Sir, your glove.

Val. Not mine; my gloves are on.

Speed. Why, then, this may be yours, for this is but one.

Val. Ha! let me see; ay, give it me, it's mine.

Sweet ornament that decks a thing divine!

Ah, Silvia, Silvia! 6

Speed. Madam Silvia! Madam Silvia!

Val. How now, sirrah?

Speed. She is not within hearing, sir.

Val. Why, sir, who bade you call her?

Speed. Your worship, sir; or else I mistook.

Val. Well, you'll still be too forward. 11

Speed. And yet I was last chidden for being too slow.

Val. Go to, sir. Tell me, do you know Madam
Silvia? 15

Speed. She that your worship loves?

Val. Why, how know you that I am in love?

Speed. Marry, by these special marks: first, you have learn'd, like Sir Proteus, to wreathe your arms like a malcontent; to relish a love- 20 song, like a robin-redbreast; to walk alone, like one that had the pestilence; to sigh, like a school-boy that had lost his A B C; to weep, like a young wench that had buried her grandam; to fast, like one that takes diet; to watch, like one that fears robbing; to speak puling, 25
like a beggar at Hallowmas. You were wont, when you laugh'd, to crow like a cock; when you walk'd, to walk like one of the lions,

when you fasted, it was presently after dinner;
when you look'd sadly, it was for want of 30 money; and now you are metamorphos'd with a mistress, that, when I look on you, I can hardly think you my master.

Val. Are all these things perceiv'd in me?

Speed. They are all perceiv'd without ye. 35

Val. Without me? They cannot.

Speed. Without you? Nay, that's certain, for, without you were so simple, none else would;
but you are so without these follies, that these follies are within you and shine through you like the water in an urinal, that not an eye 40 that sees you but is a physician to comment on your malady.

Val. But tell me, dost thou know my lady
Silvia? 45

Speed. She that you gaze on so as she sits at supper?

Val. Hast thou observ'd that? Even she, I mean.

Speed. Why, sir, I know her not. 50

Val. Dost thou know her by my gazing on her, and yet know'st her not?

Speed. Is she not hard-favour'd, sir?

Val. Not so fair, boy, as well-favour'd.

Speed. Sir, I know that well enough. 55

Val. What dost thou know?

Speed. That she is not so fair as, of you, well favour'd.

Val. I mean that her beauty is exquisite, but her favour infinite. 60

Speed. That's because the one is painted and the other out of all count.

Val. How painted? and how out of count?

Speed. Marry, sir, so painted to make her fair, that no man counts of her beauty. 65

Val. How esteem'st thou me? I account of her beauty.

Speed. You never saw her since she was de-form'd.

Val. How long hath she been deform'd? 70

Speed. Ever since you lov'd her.

Val. I have lov'd her ever since I saw her,
and still I see her beautiful.

Speed. If you love her, you cannot see her.

Val. Why? 75

Speed. Because Love is blind. O, that you had mine eyes, or your own eyes had the lights they were wont to have when you chid at Sir
Proteus for going ungarter'd!

Val. What should I see then? 80

Speed. Your own present folly and her passing deformity; for he, being in love, could not see to garter his hose, and you, being in love, cannot see to put on your hose.

Val. Belike, boy, then, you are in love; for 85 last morning you could not see to wipe my shoes.

Speed. True, sir; I was in love with my bed.
I thank you, you swing'd me for my love, which makes me the bolder to chide you for yours.

Val. In conclusion, I stand affected to her. 90

Speed. I would you were set, so your affection would cease.

Val. Last night she enjoin'd me to write some lines to one she loves.

Speed. And have you? 95

Val. I have.

Speed. Are they not lamely writ?

Val. No, boy, but as well as I can do them. Peace! here she comes.

Speed. [Aside.] O excellent motion! O [100] exceeding puppet! Now will he interpret to her.

[Enter SILVIA.]

Val. Madam and mistress, a thousand good-morrows.

Speed. [Aside.] O, 'give ye good even! here 's a million of manners. 105

Sil. Sir Valentine and servant, to you two thousand.

Speed. [Aside.] He should give her interest, and she gives it him.

Val. As you enjoin'd me, I have writ your letter 110

Unto the secret nameless friend of yours;

Which I was much unwilling to proceed in

But for my duty to your ladyship.

Sil. I thank you, gentle servant. 'T is very clerkly done.

Val. Now trust me, madam, it came hardly off; 115

For being ignorant to whom it goes

I writ at random, very doubtfully.

Sil. Perchance you think too much of so much pains?

Val. No, madam; so it stead you, I will write, Please you command, a thousand times as much; 120

And yet—

Sil. A pretty period! Well, I guess the sequel;

And yet I will not name it; and yet I care not;

And yet take this again; and yet I thank you, Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more. 125

Speed. [Aside.] And yet you will; and yet another "yet."

Val. What means your ladyship? Do you not like it?

Sil. Yes, yes, the lines are very quaintly writ;

But since unwillingly, take them again.

Nay, take them. 130

Val. Madam, they are for you.

Sil. Ay, ay; you writ them, sir, at my request;

But I will none of them; they are for you.

I would have had them writ more movingly.

Val. Please you, I'll write your ladyship another. 135

Sil. And when it 's writ, for my sake read it over,

And if it please you, so; if not, why, so.

Val. If it please me, madam, what then?

Sil. Why, if it please you, take it for your labour;

And so, good morrow, servant. [Exit. 140

Speed. O jest unseen, inscrutable, invisible, As a nose on a man's face or a weathercock on a steeple!

My master sues to her, and she hath taught her suitor,

He being her pupil, to become her tutor.

O excellent device! was there ever heard a better, 145

That my master, being scribe, to himself should write the letter?

Val. How now, sir? What are you reasoning with yourself?

Speed. Nay, I was rhyming; 't is you that have the reason. 150

Val. To do what?

Speed. To be a spokesman for Madam Silvia.

Val. To whom?

Speed. To yourself. Why, she woos you by a figure. 155

Val. What figure?

Speed. By a letter, I should say.

Val. Why, she hath not writ to me.

Speed. What need she, when she hath made you write to yourself? Why, do you not perceive the jest? 160

Val. No, believe me.

Speed. No believing you, indeed, sir. But did you perceive her earnest?

Val. She gave me none, except an angry word.

Speed. Why, she hath given you a letter. 165

Val. That 's the letter I writ to her friend.

Speed. And that letter hath she deliver'd, and there an end.

Val. I would it were no worse.

Speed. I'll warrant you, 't is as well: 170

"For often have you writ to her; and she, in modesty,

Or else for want of idle time, could not again reply;

Or fearing else some messenger that might her mind discover,

Herself hath taught her love himself to write unto her lover."

All this I speak in print, for in print I found it. Why muse you, sir? 'T is dinner time. 175

Val. I have din'd.

Speed. Ay, but hearken, sir; though the chameleon Love can feed on the air, I am one that am nourish'd by my victuals and would fain have meat. O, be not like your mistress; be [180] moved, be moved. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [Verona. Julia's house.]

Enter PROTEUS and JULIA.

Pro. Have patience, gentle Julia.

Jul. I must, where is no remedy.

Pro. When possibly I can, I will return.

Jul. If you turn not, you will return the sooner.

Keep this remembrance for thy Julia's sake. 5

[Giving a ring.]

Pro. Why, then, we'll make exchange.

Here, take you this.

Jul. And seal the bargain with a holy kiss.

Pro. Here is my hand for my true constancy;

And when that hour o'erslips me in the day

Wherein I sigh not, Julia, for thy sake, 10

The next ensuing hour some foul mischance

Torment me for my love's forgetfulness !
 My father stays my coming ; answer not ;
 The tide is now : — nay, not thy tide of tears ;
 That tide will stay me longer than I should. ¹⁵
 Julia, farewell ! [Exit Julia.]

What, gone without a word ?
 Ay, so true love should do ; it cannot speak ;
 For truth hath better deeds than words to grace it.

[Enter PANTHINO.]

Pan. Sir Proteus, you are stay'd for.

Pro. Go ; I come, I come. ²⁰
 Alas ! this parting strikes poor lovers dumb.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [The same. A street.]

Enter LAUNCE [leading a dog].

Launce. Nay, 't will be this hour ere I have done weeping ; all the kind of the Launces have this very fault. I have receiv'd my proportion, like the prodigious son, and am going with Sir Proteus to the Imperial's court. I think Crab ⁵ my dog be the sourest-natured dog that lives.
 My mother weeping, my father wailing, my sister crying, our maid howling, our cat wringing her hands, and all our house in a great perplexity, yet did not this cruel-hearted cur shed one tear. He is a stone, a very pebble ¹⁰ stone, and has no more pity in him than a dog.
 A Jew would have wept to have seen our parting ; why, my grandam, having no eyes, look you, wept herself blind at my parting. Nay, I'll show you the manner of it. This shoe is ¹⁵ my father ; no, this left shoe is my father ; no, no, this left shoe is my mother ; nay, that cannot be so neither ; yes, it is so, it is so, it hath the worse sole. This shoe, with the hole in it, is my mother, and this my father ; a ven- ²⁰ geance on't ! there 'tis. Now, sir, this staff is my sister, for, look you, she is as white as a lily and as small as a wand. This hat is Nan, our maid. I am the dog ; — no, the dog is himself, and I am the dog, — O ! the dog is me, and I am myself ; ay, so, so. Now come I to my ²⁵ father : " Father, your blessing." Now should not the shoe speak a word for weeping. Now should I kiss my father ; well, he weeps on.
 Now come I to my mother. Oh, that she could speak now like a wood woman ! Well, I kiss ³⁰ her ; why, there 'tis ; here's my mother's breath up and down. Now come I to my sister ; mark the moan she makes. Now the dog all this while sheds not a tear nor speaks a word ;
 but see how I lay the dust with my tears. ³⁵

[Enter PANTHINO.]

Pan. Launce, away, away, aboard ! Thy master is shipp'd and thou art to post after with oars. What's the matter ? Why weep'st thou, man ? Away, ass ! you 'll lose the tide, if you tarry any longer. ⁴⁰

Launce. It is no matter if the tied were lost ;
 for it is the unkindest tied that ever any man tied.

Pan. What's the unkindest tide ?

Launce. Why, he that's tied here, Crab, my dog. ⁴⁵

Pan. Tut, man, I mean thou 'lt lose the flood, and, in losing the flood, lose thy voyage, and, in losing thy voyage, lose thy master, and, in losing thy master, lose thy service, and, in losing thy service, — Why dost thou stop my mouth ? ⁵⁰

Launce. For fear thou shouldst lose thy tongue.

Pan. Where should I lose my tongue ?

Launce. In thy tale.

Pan. In thy tail ! ⁵⁵

Launce. Lose the tide, and the voyage, and the master, and the service, and the tied ! Why, man, if the river were dry, I am able to fill it with my tears ; if the wind were down, I could drive the boat with my sighs. ⁶⁰

Pan. Come, come away, man ; I was sent to call thee.

Launce. Sir, call me what thou dar'st.

Pan. Wilt thou go ?

Launce. Well, I will go. [Exeunt. 65]

SCENE IV. [Milan. The Duke's palace.]

Enter SILVIA, VALENTINE, THURIO, and SPEED.

Sil. Servant !

Val. Mistress ?

Speed. Master, Sir Thurio frowns on you.

Val. Ay, boy, it's for love.

Speed. Not of you. ⁵

Val. Of my mistress, then.

Speed. 'T were good you knock'd him. [Exit.]

Sil. Servant, you are sad.

Val. Indeed, madam, I seem so.

Thu. Seem you that you are not ? ¹⁰

Val. Haply I do.

Thu. So do counterfeits.

Val. So do you.

Thu. What seem I that I am not ?

Val. Wise. ¹⁵

Thu. What instance of the contrary ?

Val. Your folly.

Thu. And how quote you my folly ?

Val. I quote it in your jerkin.

Thu. My jerkin is a doublet. ²⁰

Val. Well, then, I'll double your folly.

Thu. How ?

Sil. What, angry, Sir Thurio ! Do you change colour ?

Val. Give him leave, madam ; he is a kind of chameleon. ²⁵

Thu. That hath more mind to feed on your blood than live in your air.

Val. You have said, sir.

Thu. Ay, sir, and done too, for this time. ³⁰
 Val. I know it well, sir ; you always end ere you begin.

Sil. A fine volley of words, gentlemen, and quickly shot off.

Val. 'Tis indeed, madam ; we thank the giver. ³⁵

Sil. Who is that, servant ?

Val. Yourself, sweet lady ; for you gave the fire. Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your ladyship's looks, and spends what he borrows kindly in your company. 40

Thu. Sir, if you spend word for word with me,
I shall make your wit bankrupt.

Val. I know it well, sir; you have an exchequer of words, and, I think, no other treasure to give your followers, for it appears, by their bare liveries, that they live by your bare 45
words.

Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more; here comes my father.

[Enter DUKE.]

Duke. Now, daughter Silvia, you are hard beset.

Sir Valentine, your father's in good health. 50
What say you to a letter from your friends
Of much good news?

Val. My lord, I will be thankful
To any happy messenger from thence.

Duke. Know ye Don Antonio, your country-
man?

Val. Ay, my good lord, I know the gentle-
man 55

To be of worth and worthy estimation,
And not without desert so well reputed.

Duke. Hath he not a son?

Val. Ay, my good lord; a son that well deserves

The honour and regard of such a father. 60

Duke. You know him well?

Val. I knew him as myself, for from our infancy

We have convers'd and spent our hours together;

And though myself have been an idle truant,
Omitting the sweet benefit of time 65

To clothe mine age with angel-like perfection,

Yet hath Sir Proteus, for that's his name,
Made use and fair advantage of his days;

His years but young, but his experience old;
His head unmellowed, but his judgement ripe; 71

And, in a word, for far behind his worth
Comes all the praises that I now bestow,

He is complete in feature and in mind
With all good grace to grace a gentleman.

Duke. Beshrew me, sir, but if he make this good, 75

He is as worthy for an empress's love
As meet to be an emperor's counsellor.

Well, sir, this gentleman is come to me
With commendation from great potentates;

And here he means to spend his time awhile. 80
I think 'tis no unwelcome news to you.

Val. Should I have wish'd a thing, it had been he.

Duke. Welcome him then according to his worth.

Silvia, I speak to you, and you, Sir Thurio;
For Valentine, I need not cite him to it. 85

I will send him hither to you presently. [Exit.]
Val. This is the gentleman I told your lady-ship

Had come along with me, but that his mistress

Did hold his eyes lock'd in her crystal looks.

Sil. Belike that now she hath enfranchis'd
them 90

Upon some other pawn for fealty.

Val. Nay, sure, I think she holds them prisoners still.

Sil. Nay, then he should be blind; and, being blind,

How could he see his way to seek out you?

Val. Why, lady, Love hath twenty pair of
eyes. 95

Thu. They say that Love hath not an eye at all.

Val. To see such lovers, Thurio, as yourself.
Upon a homely object Love can wink.

Sil. Have done, have done; here comes the gentleman. [Exit Thurio.]

[Enter PROTEUS.]

Val. Welcome, dear Proteus! Mistress, I beseech you, 100

Confirm his welcome with some special favour.
Sil. His worth is warrant for his welcome

hither,

If this be he you oft have wish'd to hear from.

Val. Mistress, it is. Sweet lady, entertain
him

To be my fellow-servant to your ladyship. 105

Sil. Too low a mistress for so high a servant.

Pro. Not so, sweet lady; but too mean a servant

To have a look of such a worthy mistress.

Val. Leave off discourse of disability.

Sweet lady, entertain him for your servant. 110

Pro. My duty will I boast of, nothing else.

Sil. And duty never yet did want his meed.

Servant, you are welcome to a worthless mistress.

Pro. I'll die on him that says so but yourself.

Sil. That you are welcome?

Pro. That you are worthless.

[Re-enter THURIO.]

Thu. Madam, my lord your father would speak with you. 115

Sil. I wait upon his pleasure. Come, Sir
Thurio,

Go with me. Once more, new servant, welcome.

I'll leave you to confer of home affairs;

When you have done, we look to hear from
you. 120

Pro. We'll both attend upon your ladyship.
[Exit Silvia and Thurio.]

Val. Now, tell me, how do all from whence you came?

Pro. Your friends are well and have them much commended.

Val. And how do yours?

Pro. I left them all in health.

Val. How does your lady, and how thrives your love? 125

Pro. My tales of love were wont to weary
you;

I know you joy not in a love-discourse.

Val. Ay, Proteus, but that life is alter'd now.
I have done penance for contemning Love,

Whose high imperious thoughts have punish'd
me 130

With bitter fasts, with penitential groans,
With nightly tears, and daily heart-sore sighs;
For in revenge of my contempt of love,
Love hath chas'd sleep from my enthralled
eyes

And made them watchers of mine own heart's sorrow. 136

O gentle Proteus, Love's a mighty lord
And hath so humbled me as I confess
There is no woe to his correction,
Nor to his service no such joy on earth.
Now no discourse, except it be of love; 140
Now can I break my fast, dine, sup, and sleep,
Upon the very naked name of love.

Pro. Enough; I read your fortune in your eye.

Was this the idol that you worship so?

Val. Even she; and is she not a heavenly saint? 145

Pro. No; but she is an earthly paragon.

Val. Call her divine.

Pro. I will not flatter her.

Val. O, flatter me; for love delights in praises.

Pro. When I was sick, you gave me bitter pills,

And I must minister the like to you. 150

Val. Then speak the truth by her; if not divine,

Yet let her be a principality,
Sovereign to all the creatures on the earth.

Pro. Except my mistress.

Val. Sweet, except not any;
Except thou wilt except against my love. 155

Pro. Have I not reason to prefer mine own?

Val. And I will help thee to prefer her too.
She shall be dignified with this high honour—
To bear my lady's train, lest the base earth
Should from her vesture chance to steal a kiss,
And, of so great a favour growing proud, 161
Disdain to root the summer-swelling flower
And make rough winter everlastingly.

Pro. Why, Valentine, what braggardism is this?

Val. Pardon me, Proteus; all I can is nothing 165

To her, whose worth makes other worthies
nothing.

She is alone.

Pro. Then let her alone.

Val. Not for the world. Why, man, she is mine own,

And I as rich in having such a jewel
As twenty seas, if all their sand were pearl, 170
The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold.
Forgive me that I do not dream on thee,
Because thou see'st me dote upon my love.
My foolish rival, that her father likes
Only for his possessions are so huge, 175
Is gone with her along, and I must after,
For love, thou know'st, is full of jealousy.

Pro. But she loves you?

Val. Ay, and we are betroth'd: nay, more,
our marriage-hour,

With all the cunning manner of our flight, 180
Determin'd of; how I must climb her window,

The ladder made of cords, and all the means
Plotted and 'greed on for my happiness.

Good Proteus, go with me to my chamber,
In these affairs to aid me with thy counsel. 185

Pro. Go on before; I shall inquire you forth.
I must unto the road, to disembark

Some necessities that I needs must use,
And then I'll presently attend you.

Val. Will you make haste? [Exit. 190

Pro. I will.

Even as one heat another heat expels,
Or as one nail by strength drives out another,
So the remembrance of my former love
Is by a newer object quite forgotten. 195

Is it mine [eye], or Valentinus' praise,
Her true perfection, or my false transgression,
That makes me, reasonless, to reason thus?

She is fair; and so is Julia that I love—
That I did love, for now my love is thaw'd; 200

Which, like a waxen image 'gainst a fire,
Bears no impression of the thing it was.

Methinks my zeal to Valentine is cold,
And that I love him not as I was wont.

O, but I love his lady too too much! 205

And that's the reason I love him so little.

How shall I dote on her with more advice,
That thus without advice begin to love her!

'Tis but her picture I have yet beheld,
And that hath dazzled my reason's light; 210

But when I look on her perfections,
There is no reason but I shall be blind.

If I can check my erring love, I will;
If not, to compass her I'll use my skill. [Exit

SCENE V. [The same. A street.]

Enter SPEED and LAUNCE [severally].

Speed. Launce! By mine honesty, welcome to Milan!

Launce. Forswear not thyself, sweet youth, for I am not welcome. I reckon this always, that a man is never undone till he be hang'd, [s] nor never welcome to a place till some certain shot be paid and the hostess say, "Welcome!"

Speed. Come on, you madcap, I'll to the ale-house with you presently; where, for one shot of five pence, thou shalt have five thousand [s] welcomes. But, sirrah, how did thy master part with Madam Julia?

Launce. Marry, after they clos'd in earnest, they parted very fairly in jest.

Speed. But shall she marry him? 15

Launce. No.

Speed. How then? Shall he marry her?

Launce. No, neither.

Speed. What, are they broken?

Launce. No, they are both as whole as a fish. 20

Speed. Why, then, how stands the matter with them?

Launce. Marry, thus: when it stands well with him, it stands well with her.

Speed. What an ass art thou! I understand 25 thee not.

Launce. What a block art thou, that thou canst not! My staff understands me.

Speed. What thou say'st?

Launce. Ay, and what I do too. Look thee, [30]
I'll but lean, and my staff understands me.

Speed. It stands under thee, indeed.

Launce. Why, stand-under and under-stand is all one.

Speed. But tell me true, will 't be a match? 35

Launce. Ask my dog. If he say ay, it will;
if he say, no, it will; if he shake his tail and say nothing, it will.

Speed. The conclusion is then that it will.

Launce. Thou shalt never get such a secret [40] from me but by a parable.

Speed. 'Tis well that I get it so. But, Launce, how say'st thou, that my master is become a notable lover?

Launce. I never knew him otherwise. 45

Speed. Than how?

Launce. A notable lubber, as thou reportest him to be.

Speed. Why, thou whoreson ass, thou mis-tak'st me. 50

Launce. Why, fool, I meant not thee; I meant thy master.

Speed. I tell thee, my master is become a hot lover.

Launce. Why, I tell thee, I care not though [55]
he burn himself in love. If thou wilt, go with me to the alehouse; if not, thou art an Hebrew, a Jew, and not worth the name of a Christian.

Speed. Why?

Launce. Because thou hast not so much [60] charity in thee as to go to the ale with a Christian. Wilt thou go?

Speed. At thy service. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. [The same. The Duke's palace.]

Enter PROTEUS.

Pro. To leave my Julia, shall I be forsworn;
To love fair Silvia, shall I be forsworn;
To wrong my friend, I shall be much forsworn;
And even that power which gave me first my oath

Provokes me to this threefold perjury. 5
Love bade me swear and Love bids me for-
swear.

O sweet-suggesting Love, if thou hast sinn'd,
Teach me, thy tempted subject, to excuse it!
At first I did adore a twinkling star,
But now I worship a celestial sun. 10

Unheedful vows may heedfully be broken;
And he wants wit that wants resolved will
To learn his wit to exchange the bad for better.
Fie, fie, unreverend tongue! to call her bad,
Whose sovereignty so oft thou hast preferr'd 15
With twenty thousand soul-confirming oaths.

I cannot leave to love, and yet I do;
But there I leave to love where I should love.
Julia I lose, and Valentine I lose.

If I keep them, I needs must lose myself. 20
If I lose them, thus find I by their loss
For Valentine, myself, for Julia, Silvia.

I to myself am dearer than a friend,
For love is still most precious in itself;
And Silvia—witness Heaven, that made her fair!— 25

Shows Julia but a swarthy Ethiope.

I will forget that Julia is alive,
Remembering that my love to her is dead;
And Valentine I'll hold an enemy,
Aiming at Silvia as a sweeter friend. 30

I cannot now prove constant to myself,
Without some treachery us'd to Valentine.
This night he meaneth with a corded ladder
To climb celestial Silvia's chamber-window,
Myself in counsel, his competitor. 35

Now presently I'll give her father notice
Of their disguising and pretended flight,
Who, all enrag'd, will banish Valentine.
For Thurio, he intends, shall wed his daughter;
But, Valentine being gone, I'll quickly cross 40
By some sly trick blunt Thurio's dull proceeding-
ing.

Love, lend me wings to make my purpose swift,
As thou hast lent me wit to plot this drift!
[Exit.]

SCENE VII. [Verona. Julia's house.]

Enter JULIA and LUCETTA.

Jul. Counsel, Lucetta; gentle girl, assist me;
And even in kind love I do conjure thee,
Who art the table wherein all my thoughts
Are visibly character'd and engrav'd,
To lesson me and tell me some good mean 5
How, with my honour, I may undertake
A journey to my loving Proteus.

Luc. Alas, the way is wearisome and long!

Jul. A true-devoted pilgrim is not weary
To measure kingdoms with his feeble steps; 10
Much less shall she that hath Love's wings to fly,
And when the flight is made to one so dear,
Of such divine perfection, as Sir Proteus.

Luc. Better forbear till Proteus make return.

Jul. O, know'st thou not his looks are my soul's food? 15

Pity the dearth that I have pined in,
By longing for that food so long a time.
Didst thou but know the only touch of love,
Thou wouldst as soon go kindle fire with snow
As seek to quench the fire of love with words. 20

Luc. I do not seek to quench your love's hot
fire,

But qualify the fire's extreme rage,
Lest it should burn above the bounds of reason.

Jul. The more thou damm'st it up, the more it burns.

The current that with gentle murmur glides, 25
Thou know'st, being stopp'd, impatiently doth rage;

But when his fair course is not hindered,
He makes sweet music with the enamell'd
stones,

Giving a gentle kiss to every sedge
He overtaketh in his pilgrimage; 30

And so by many winding nooks he strays
With willing sport to the wild ocean.
Then let me go, and hinder not my course.

I'll be as patient as a gentle stream,
And make a pastime of each weary step, 35

Till the last step have brought me to my love;
And there I'll rest, as after much turmoil
A blessed soul doth in Elysium.

Luc. But in what habit will you go along ?

Jul. Not like a woman ; for I would prevent

The loose encounters of lascivious men.

Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weeds

As may beseech some well-reputed page.

Luc. Why, then, your ladyship must cut your hair.

Jul. No, girl ; I'll knit it up in silken strings

With twenty odd-conceited true-love knots.

To be fantastic may become a youth

Of greater time than I shall show to be.

Luc. What fashion, madam, shall I make your breeches ?

Jul. That fits as well as, " Tell me, good my lord,

What compass will you wear your farthingale ? "

Why even what fashion thou best likes, Lucetta.

Luc. You must needs have them with a cod-piece, madam.

Jul. Out, out, Lucetta ! that will be ill-favour'd.

Luc. A round hose, madam, now 's not worth a pin,

Unless you have a codpiece to stick pins on.

Jul. Lucetta, as thou lov'st me, let me have

What thou think'st meet and is most mannerly.

But tell me, wench, how will the world repute me

For undertaking so unstaid a journey ?

I fear me, it will make me scandaliz'd.

Luc. If you think so, then stay at home and go not.

Jul. Nay, that I will not.

Luc. Then never dream on infamy, but go.

If Proteus like your journey when you come,

No matter who 's displeas'd when you are gone :

I fear me, he will scarce be pleas'd withal.

Jul. That is the least, Lucetta, of my fear.

A thousand oaths, an ocean of his tears,

And instances of infinite of love

Warrant me welcome to my Proteus.

Luc. All these are servants to deceitful men.

Jul. Base men, that use them to so base effect !

But truer stars did govern Proteus' birth ;

His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles,

His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate,

His tears pure messengers sent from his heart,

His heart as far from fraud as heaven from earth.

Luc. Pray heaven he prove so, when you come to him !

Jul. Now, as thou lov'st me, do him not that wrong

To bear a hard opinion of his truth :

Only deserve my love by loving him ;

And presently go with me to my chamber,

To take a note of what I stand in need of,

To furnish me upon my longing journey.

All that is mine I leave at thy dispose,

My goods, my lands, my reputation ;

Only, in lieu thereof, dispatch me hence.

Come, answer not, but to it presently !

I am impatient of my tarriance. [Exeunt. 90

ACT III

SCENE I. [Milan. The Duke's palace.]

Enter DUKE, THURIO, and PROTEUS.

Duke. Sir Thurio, give us leave, I pray, awhile ;

We have some secrets to confer about.

[Exit Thu.]

Now, tell me, Proteus, what 's your will with me ?

Pro. My gracious lord, that which I would discover

The law of friendship bids me to conceal ;

But when I call to mind your gracious favours

Done to me, undeserving as I am,

My duty pricks me on to utter that

Which else no worldly good should draw from me.

Know, worthy prince, Sir Valentine, my friend,

This night intends to steal away your daughter.

Myself am one made privy to the plot.

I know you have determin'd to bestow her

On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates ;

And should she thus be stolen away from you,

It would be much vexation to your age.

Thus, for my duty's sake, I rather chose

To cross my friend in his intended drift

Than, by concealing it, heap on your head

A pack of sorrows which would press you down,

Being unprevented, to your timeless grave.

Duke. Proteus, I thank thee for thine honest care ;

Which to requite, command me while I live.

This love of theirs myself have often seen,

Haply when they have judg'd me fast asleep,

And oftentimes have purpos'd to forbid

Sir Valentine her company and my court ;

But, fearing lest my jealous aim might err,

And so unworthily disgrace the man, —

A rashness that I ever yet have shunn'd, —

I gave him gentle looks, thereby to find

That which thyself hast now disclos'd to me.

And, that thou mayst perceive my fear of this,

Knowing that tender youth is soon suggested,

I nightly lodge her in an upper tower,

The key whereof myself have ever kept ;

And thence she cannot be convey'd away.

Pro. Know, noble lord, they have devis'd a mean

How he her chamber-window will ascend

And with a corded ladder fetch her down ;

For which the youthful lover now is gone,

And this way comes he with it presently ;

Where, if it please you, you may intercept him.

But, good my lord, do it so cunningly

That my discovery be not aimed at ;

For love of you, not hate unto my friend,

Hath made me publisher of this pretence.

Duke. Upon mine honour, he shall never know

That I had any light from thee of this.

Pro. Adieu, my lord ; Sir Valentine is coming. [Exit.] 90

[Enter VALENTINE.]

Duke. Sir Valentine, whither away so fast ?

Val. Please it your grace, there is a messenger

That stays to bear my letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliver them.

Duke. Be they of much import? 55

Val. The tenour of them doth but signify
My health and happy being at your court.

Duke. Nay then, no matter; stay with me awhile;

I am to break with thee of some affairs
That touch me near, wherein thou must be secret. 60

'Tis not unknown to thee that I have sought
To match my friend Sir Thurio to my daughter.

Val. I know it well, my lord; and, sure, the match

Were rich and honourable; besides, the gentleman

Is full of virtue, bounty, worth, and qualities 65
Beseeeming such a wife as your fair daughter.

Cannot your Grace win her to fancy him?

Duke. No, trust me; she is peevish, sullen, froward,

Proud, disobedient, stubborn, lacking duty,
Neither regarding that she is my child 70

Nor fearing me as if I were her father;
And, may I say to thee, this pride of hers,

Upon advice, hath drawn my love from her;
And, where I thought the remnant of mine age

Should have been cherish'd by her child-like duty, 75

I now am full resolv'd to take a wife
And turn her out to who will take her in.

Then let her beauty be her wedding-dower,
For me and my possessions she esteems not.

Val. What would your Grace have me to do in this? 80

Duke. There is a lady of Verona here
Whom I affect; but she is nice and coy
And nought esteems my aged eloquence.
Now, therefore, would I have thee to my tutor—

For long ago I have forgot to court; 85
Besides, the fashion of the time is chang'd—

How and which way I may bestow myself
To be regarded in her sun-bright eye.

Val. Win her with gifts, if she respect not words.

Dumb jewels often in their silent kind 90
More than quick words do move a woman's mind.

Duke. But she did scorn a present that I sent her.

Val. A woman sometimes scorns what best contents her.

Send her another; never give her o'er;
For scorn at first makes after-love the more. 95

If she do frown, 't is not in hate of you,
But rather to beget more love in you.

If she do chide, 't is not to have you gone;
For why, the fools are mad, if left alone.

Take no repulse, whatever she doth say; 100
For "get you gone," she doth not mean
away!

Flatter and praise, commend, extol their graces;
Though ne'er so black, say they have angels'

faces.

That man that hath a tongue, I say, is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman. 105

Duke. But she I mean is promis'd by her friends

Unto a youthful gentleman of worth,
And kept severely from resort of men,

That no man hath access by day to her.

Val. Why, then, I would resort to her by
night. 110

Duke. Ay, but the doors be lock'd and keys kept safe,

That no man hath recourse to her by night.

Val. What lets but one may enter at her window?

Duke. Her chamber is aloft, far from the ground,

And built so shelving that one cannot climb
it 115

Without apparent hazard of his life.

Val. Why then, a ladder, quaintly made of cords,

To cast up, with a pair of anchoring hooks,
Would serve to scale another Hero's tower,

So bold Leander would adventure it. 120

Duke. Now, as thou art a gentleman of blood,
Advise me where I may have such a ladder.

Val. When would you use it? Pray, sir, tell me that.

Duke. This very night; for Love is like a child,

That longs for every thing that he can come by.

Val. By seven o'clock I'll get you such a ladder. 125

Duke. But, hark thee; I will go to her alone.
How shall I best convey the ladder thither?

Val. It will be light, my lord, that you may bear it

Under a cloak that is of any length. 130

Duke. A cloak as long as thine will serve the turn?

Val. Ay, my good lord.

Duke. Then let me see thy cloak.
I'll get me one of such another length.

Val. Why, any cloak will serve the turn, my
lord.

Duke. How shall I fashion me to wear a cloak? 135

I pray thee, let me feel thy cloak upon me.

What letter is this same? What's here? "To Silvia!"

And here an engine fit for my proceeding.
I'll be so bold to break the seal for once.

[Reads.]

"My thoughts do harbour with my Silvia nightly, 140

And slaves they are to me that send them flying;

O, could their master come and go as lightly, Himself would lodge where senseless they are lying!

My herald thoughts in thy pure bosom rest
them,

While I, their king, that hither them impor-
tune, 145
Do curse the grace that with such grace hath blest'd them,
Because myself do want my servants' fortune.

I curse myself, for they are sent by me,
That they should harbour where their lord would be."

What's here? 150

"Silvia, this night I will enfranchise thee."

'Tis so; and here's the ladder for the purpose.

Why, Phaethon, — for thou art Merops' son, —

Wilt thou aspire to guide the heavenly car

And with thy daring folly burn the world? 155

Wilt thou reach stars, because they shine on
thee?

Go, base intruder! overweening slave!

Bestow thy fawning smiles on equal mates,

And think my patience, more than thy desert,

Is privilege for thy departure hence. 160

Thank me for this more than for all the favours

Which all too much I have bestowed on thee.

But if thou linger in my territories

Longer than swiftest expedition

Will give thee time to leave our royal court, 165

By heaven! my wrath shall far exceed the
love

I ever bore my daughter or thyself.

Be gone! I will not hear thy vain excuse;

But, as thou lov'st thy life, make speed from hence. [Exit.]

Val. And why not death rather than living torment? 170

To die is to be banish'd from myself,

And Silvia is myself. Banish'd from her

Is self from self, a deadly banishment!

What light is light, if Silvia be not seen?

What joy is joy, if Silvia be not by? 175

Unless it be to think that she is by,

And feed upon the shadow of perfection.

Except I be by Silvia in the night,

There is no music in the nightingale;

Unless I look on Silvia in the day, 180

There is no day for me to look upon.

She is my essence, and I leave to be,

If I be not by her fair influence

Foster'd, illumin'd, cherish'd, kept alive.

I fly not death, to fly his deadly doom. 185

Tarry I here, I but attend on death;

But, fly I hence, I fly away from life.

[Enter PROTEUS and LAUNCE.]

Pro. Run, boy, run, run, and seek him out.

Launce. Soho, soho!

Pro. What seest thou? 190

Launce. Him we go to find. There's not a hair on's head but 'tis a Valentine.

Pro. Valentine?

Val. No.

Pro. Who then? His spirit? 195

Val. Neither.

Pro. What then?

Val. Nothing.

Launce. Can nothing speak? Master, shall I strike? 200

Pro. Who wouldst thou strike?

Launce. Nothing.

Pro. Villain, forbear.

Launce. Why, sir, I'll strike nothing. I pray
you, —

Pro. Sirrah, I say, forbear. Friend Valentine, a word.

Val. My ears are stopp'd and cannot hear good news, 205

So much of bad already hath possess'd them.

Pro. Then in dumb silence will I bury mine,

For they are harsh, untuneable, and bad.

Val. Is Silvia dead?

Pro. No, Valentine. 210

Val. No Valentine, indeed, for sacred Silvia.

Hath she forsworn me?

Pro. No, Valentine.

Val. No Valentine, if Silvia have forsworn
me.

What is your news? 215

Launce. Sir, there is a proclamation that you are vanished.

Pro. That thou art banished — O, that's the news! —

From hence, from Silvia, and from me thy friend.

Val. O, I have fed upon this woe already,

And now excess of it will make me surfeit. 220

Doth Silvia know that I am banished?

Pro. Ay, ay; and she hath offered to the doom —

Which, unrev'rend, stands in effectual force —
A sea of melting pearl, which some call tears.

Those at her father's churlish feet she tender'd;
With them, upon her knees, her humble self, 225

Wringing her hands, whose whiteness so became
them

As if but now they waxed pale for woe.

But neither bended knees, pure hands held
up,

Sad sighs, deep groans, nor silver-shedding
tears, 230

Could penetrate her uncompassionate sire;

But Valentine, if he be ta'en, must die.

Besides, her intercession chaf'd him so,

When she for thy repeal was suppliant,

That to close prison he commanded her, 235

With many bitter threats of biding there.

Val. No more; unless the next word that thou speak'st

Have some malignant power upon my life;

If so, I pray thee, breathe it in mine ear,

As ending anthem of my endless dolour. 240

Pro. Cease to lament for that thou canst not help,

And study help for that which thou lament'st.

Time is the nurse and breeder of all good.

Here if thou stay, thou canst not see thy love;

Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life. 245

Hope is a lover's staff; walk hence with that

And manage it against despairing thoughts.

Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence;

Which, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd

Even in the milk-white bosom of thy love. 250

The time now serves not to expostulate.

Come, I'll convey thee through the city-gate;

And, ere I part with thee, confer at large

Of all that may concern thy love-affairs.

As thou lov'st Silvia, though not for thyself 255

Regard thy danger, and along with me!

Val. I pray thee, Launce, an if thou seest
my boy,

Bid him make haste and meet me at the North-
gate.

Pro. Go, sirrah, find him out. Come, Valentine.

Val. O my dear Silvia! Hapless Valentine! [Exeunt Val. and Pro.] 300

Launce. I am but a fool, look you, and yet I have the wit to think my master is a kind of a knave; but that's all one, if he be but one knave. He lives not now that knows me to be in love; yet I am in love; but a team of horse shall not pluck that from me; nor who 't is [265] I love; and yet 't is a woman; but what woman I will not tell myself; and yet 't is a milkmaid; yet 't is not a maid, for she hath had gossips; yet 't is a maid, for she is her master's maid, and serves for wages. She hath more qualities [270] than a water-spaniel, — which is much in a bare Christian. [Pulling out a paper.] Here is the cate-log of her condition. "Imprimis: She can fetch and carry." Why, a horse can do no more; nay, a horse cannot fetch, but only carry; [275] therefore is she better than a jade. "Item: She can milk;" look you, a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands.

[Enter SPEED.]

Speed. How now, Signior Launce! what news with your mastership? 280

Launce. With my master's ship? Why, it is at sea.

Speed. Well, your old vice still; mistake the word. What news, then, in your paper?

Launce. The blackest news that ever thou heard'st. 285

Speed. Why, man, how black?

Launce. Why, as black as ink.

Speed. Let me read them.

Launce. Fie on thee, jolt-head! Thou canst not read. 291

Speed. Thou liest; I can.

Launce. I will try thee. Tell me this: who begot thee?

Speed. Marry, the son of my grandfather. [295]

Launce. O illiterate loiterer! it was the son of thy grandmother. This proves that thou canst not read.

Speed. Come, fool, come; try me in thy paper.

Launce. There; and Saint Nicholas be thy speed! 300

Speed. [Reads.] "Imprimis: She can milk."

Launce. Ay, that she can.

Speed. "Item: She brews good ale."

Launce. And thereof comes the proverb: [305] "Blessing of your heart, you brew good ale."

Speed. "Item: She can sew."

Launce. That's as much as to say, "Can she so?"

Speed. "Item: She can knit." 310

Launce. What need a man care for a stock with a wench, when she can knit him a stock?

Speed. "Item: She can wash and scour."

Launce. A special virtue; for then she need not be wash'd and scour'd. 315

Speed. "Item: She can spin."

Launce. Then may I set the world on wheels, when she can spin for her living.

Speed. "Item: She hath many nameless virtues." 320

Launce. That's as much as to say, bastard virtues, that, indeed, know not their fathers and therefore have no names.

Speed. Here follow her vices.

Launce. Close at the heels of her virtues. 325

Speed. "Item: She is not to be [kiss'd] fasting, in respect of her breath."

Launce. Well, that fault may be mended with a breakfast. Read on.

Speed. "Item: She hath a sweet mouth." [330]

Launce. That makes amends for her sour breath.

Speed. "Item: She doth talk in her sleep."

Launce. It's no matter for that, so she sleep not in her talk. 335

Speed. "Item: She is slow in words."

Launce. O villain, that set this down among her vices! To be slow in words is a woman's only virtue. I pray thee, out with 't, and place it for her chief virtue. 340

Speed. "Item: She is proud."

Launce. Out with that too; it was Eve's legacy, and cannot be ta'en from her.

Speed. "Item: She hath no teeth."

Launce. I care not for that neither, because I love crusts. 345

Speed. "Item: She is curst."

Launce. Well, the best is, she hath no teeth to bite.

Speed. "Item: She will often praise her [350] liquor."

Launce. If her liquor be good, she shall; if she will not, I will; for good things should be praised.

Speed. "Item: She is too liberal." 355

Launce. Of her tongue she cannot, for that's writ down she is slow of; of her purse she shall not, for that I'll keep shut. Now, of another thing she may, and that cannot I help. Well, proceed. 360

Speed. "Item: She hath more hair than wit, and more faults than hairs, and more wealth than faults."

Launce. Stop there; I'll have her. She was mine and not mine twice or thrice in that last article. Rehearse that once more. 365

Speed. "Item: She hath more hair than wit," —

Launce. More hair than wit? It may be; I'll prove it. The cover of the salt hides the salt, and therefore it is more than the salt; the [370] hair that covers the wit is more than the wit, for the greater hides the less. What's next?

Speed. "And more faults than hairs," —

Launce. That's monstrous. O, that that were out! 375

Speed. "And more wealth than faults."

Launce. Why, that word makes the faults gracious. Well, I'll have her; and if it be a match, as nothing is impossible, —

Speed. What then? 380

Launce. Why, then will I tell thee — that thy master stays for thee at the North-gate.

Speed. For me?

Launce. For thee! Ay, who art thou? He hath stay'd for a better man than thee. 385

Speed. And must I go to him?

Launce. Thou must run to him, for thou hast stay'd so long that going will scarce serve the turn.

Speed. Why didst not tell me sooner? Pox of your love-letters! [Exit.] 391

Launce. Now will he be swing'd for reading my letter;—an unmannerly slave, that will thrust himself into secrets! I'll after, to rejoice in the boy's correction. [Exit.] 395

SCENE II. [The same. The Duke's palace.]

Enter DUKE and THURIO.

Duke. Sir Thurio, fear not but that she will love you,

Now Valentine is banish'd from her sight.

Thu. Since his exile she hath despis'd me most, Forsworn my company, and rail'd at me, That I am desperate of obtaining her. 5

Duke. This weak impress of love is as a figure Trenched in ice, which with an hour's heat Dissolves to water and doth lose his form. A little time will melt her frozen thoughts And worthless Valentine shall be forgot. 10

[Enter PROTEUS.]

How now, Sir Proteus! Is your countryman According to your proclamation?

Pro. Gone, my good lord.

Duke. My daughter takes his going grievously.

Pro. A little time, my lord, will kill that grief. 15

Duke. So I believe; but Thurio thinks not so. Proteus, the good conceit I hold of thee—

For thou hast shown some sign of good desert— Makes me the better to confer with thee.

Pro. Longer than I prove loyal to your Grace Let me not live to look upon your Grace. 21

Duke. Thou know'st how willingly I would effect

The match between Sir Thurio and my daughter.

Pro. I do, my lord.

Duke. And also, I think, thou art not ignorant 25

How she opposes her against my will.

Pro. She did, my lord, when Valentine was here.

Duke. Ay, and perversely she perseveres so.

What might we do to make the girl forget The love of Valentine, and love Sir Thurio? 30

Pro. The best way is to slander Valentine With falsehood, cowardice, and poor descent, Three things that women highly hold in hate.

Duke. Ay, but she'll think that it is spoke in hate.

Pro. Ay, if his enemy deliver it; 35 Therefore it must with circumstance be spoken By one whom she esteemeth as his friend.

Duke. Then you must undertake to slander him.

Pro. And that, my lord, I shall be loath to do. 'T is an ill office for a gentleman, 40

Especially against his very friend.

Duke. Where your good word cannot advantage him,

Your slander never can endamage him;

Therefore the office is indifferent,

Being entreated to it by your friend. 45

Pro. You have prevail'd, my lord. If I can do it

By aught that I can speak in his dispraise,

She shall not long continue love to him.

But say this weed her love from Valentine, It follows not that she will love Sir Thurio. 50

Thu. Therefore, as you unwind her love from him,

Lest it should ravel and be good to none,

You must provide to bottom it on me;

Which must be done by praising me as much As you in worth dispraise Sir Valentine. 55

Duke. And, Proteus, we dare trust you in this kind,

Because we know, on Valentine's report,

You are already Love's firm votary

And cannot soon revolt and change your mind.

Upon this warrant shall you have access 60

Where you with Silvia may confer at large,—

For she is lumpish, heavy, melancholy,

And, for your friend's sake, will be glad of you,—

Where you may temper her by your persuasion

To hate young Valentine and love my friend. 65

Pro. As much as I can do, I will effect.

But you, Sir Thurio, are not sharp enough.

You must lay lime to tangle her desires

By wailful sonnets, whose composed rhymes Should be full-fraught with serviceable vows. 70

Duke. Ay,

Much is the force of heaven-bred poesy.

Pro. Say that upon the altar of her beauty You sacrifice your tears, your sighs, your heart;

Write till your ink be dry, and with your tears 75

Moist it again, and frame some feeling line

That may discover such integrity:

For Orpheus' lute was strung with poets' sinews, Whose golden touch could soften steel and

stones, 80

Make tigers tame, and huge leviathans Forsake unsounded deeps to dance on sands.

After your dire-lamenting elegies,

Visit by night your lady's chamber-window

With some sweet consort; to their instruments

Tune a deploring dump. The night's dead silence 85

Will well become such sweet-complaining grievance.

This, or else nothing, will inherit her.

Duke. This discipline shows thou hast been in love.

Thu. And thy advice this night I'll put in practice.

Therefore, sweet Proteus, my direction-giver, 90

Let us into the city presently

To sort some gentlemen well skill'd in music,

I have a sonnet that will serve the turn

To give the onset to thy good advice.

Duke. About it, gentlemen! 95

Pro. We'll wait upon your Grace till after supper,
And afterward determine our proceedings.
Duke. Even now about it! I will pardon you. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV

SCENE I. [A forest on the frontiers of Mantua.]Enter certain OUTLAWS.

1. Out. Fellows, stand fast; I see a passenger.

2. Out. If there be ten, shrink not, but down with 'em.

[Enter VALENTINE and SPEED.]

3. Out. Stand, sir, and throw us that you have about ye.

If not, we'll make you sit and rifle you.

Speed. Sir, we are undone; these are the villains

That all the travellers do fear so much.

Val. My friends,—

1. Out. That's not so, sir; we are your enemies.

2. Out. Peace! we'll hear him.

3. Out. Ay, by my beard, will we, for he's a proper man.

Val. Then know that I have little wealth to lose.

A man I am cross'd with adversity;
My riches are these poor habiliments,
Of which if you should here disturnish me,
You take the sum and substance that I have.

2. Out. Whither travel you?

Val. To Verona.

1. Out. Whence came you?

Val. From Milan.

3. Out. Have you long sojourn'd there?

Val. Some sixteen months, and longer might have stay'd.

If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.

1. Out. What, were you banish'd thence?

Val. I was.

2. Out. For what offence?

Val. For that which now torments me to rehearse.

I kill'd a man, whose death I much repent;
But yet I slew him manfully in fight,
Without false vantage or base treachery.

1. Out. Why, ne'er repent it, if it were done so.

But were you banish'd for so small a fault?

Val. I was, and held me glad of such a doom.

2. Out. Have you the tongues?

Val. My youthful travel therein made me happy.

Or else I often had been miserable.

3. Out. By the bare scalp of Robin Hood's fat friar,

This fellow were a king for our wild faction!

1. Out. We'll have him. Sirs, a word.

Speed. Master, be one of them; it's an honourable kind of thievery.

Val. Peace, villain!

2. Out. Tell us this: have you anything to take to?

Val. Nothing but my fortune.

3. Out. Know, then, that some of us are gentlemen,

Such as the fury of ungovern'd youth
Thrust from the company of awful men.

Myself was from Verona banish'd

For practising to steal away a lady,

An heir, and near allied unto the Duke.

2. Out. And I from Mantua, for a gentleman,

Who, in my mood, I stabb'd unto the heart.

1. Out. And I for such like petty crimes as these.

But to the purpose,—for we cite our faults,
That they may hold excus'd our lawless lives;
And partly, seeing you are beautified
With goodly shape, and by your own report
A linguist and a man of such perfection
As we do in our quality much want,—

2. Out. Indeed, because you are a banish'd man,

Therefore, above the rest, we parley to you.
Are you content to be our general?

To make a virtue of necessity

And live, as we do, in this wilderness?

3. Out. What say'st thou? Wilt thou be of our consort?

Say ay, and be the captain of us all.

We'll do thee homage and be rul'd by thee,

Love thee as our commander and our king.

1. Out. But if thou scorn our courtesy, thou diest.

2. Out. Thou shalt not live to brag what we have offer'd.

Val. I take your offer and will live with you,

Provided that you do no outrages

On silly women or poor passengers.

3. Out. No, we detest such vile base practices.

Come, go with us, we'll bring thee to our crews,

And show thee all the treasure we have got;
Which, with ourselves, all rest at thy dispose.

*[Exeunt.]*SCENE II. [Milan. Outside the Duke's palace, under Silvia's window.]Enter PROTEUS.

Pro. Already have I been false to Valentine
And now I must be as unjust to Thurio.

Under the colour of commending him,

I have access my own love to prefer.

But Silvia is too fair, too true, too holy,

To be corrupted with my worthless gifts.

When I protest true loyalty to her,

She twits me with my falsehood to my friend;

When to her beauty I commend my vows,

She bids me think how I have been forsworn

In breaking faith with Julia whom I loved;

And, notwithstanding all her sudden quips,

The least whereof would quell a lover's hope,

Yet, spaniel-like, the more she spurns my love,

The more it grows, and fawneth on her still.

But here comes Thurio. Now must we to her window,
And give some evening music to her ear.

[Enter THURIO and Musicians.]

Thu. How now, Sir Proteus, are you crept before us?

Pro. Ay, gentle Thurio; for you know that love

Will creep in service where it cannot go. 20

Thu. Ay, but I hope, sir, that you love not here.

Pro. Sir, but I do; or else I would be hence.
Thu. Who? Silvia?

Pro. Ay, Silvia; for your sake.

Thu. I thank you for your own. Now, gentlemen,

Let's tune, and to it lustily awhile. 25

[Enter, at a distance, HOST, and JULIA in boy's clothes.]

Host. Now, my young guest, methinks you're allycholly. I pray you, why is it?

Jul. Marry, mine host, because I cannot be merry. 29

Host. Come, we'll have you merry. I'll bring you where you shall hear music and see the gentleman that you ask'd for.

Jul. But shall I hear him speak?

Host. Ay, that you shall.

Jul. That will be music. [Music plays.] 35

Host. Hark, hark!

Jul. Is he among these?

Host. Ay; but, peace! let's hear 'em.

SONG.

Who is Silvia? What is she,

That all our swains commend her? 40

Holy, fair, and wise is she;

The heaven such grace did lend her,
That she might admired be.

Is she kind as she is fair?

For beauty lives with kindness. 45

Love doth to her eyes repair

To help him of his blindness,

And, being help'd, inhabits there.

Then to Silvia let us sing

That Silvia is excelling; 50

She excels each mortal thing

Upon the dull earth dwelling.

To her let us garlands bring.

Host. How now! are you sadder than you were before? How do you, man? The music likes you not. 55

Jul. You mistake; the musician likes me not.

Host. Why, my pretty youth?

Jul. He plays false, father.

Host. How? Out of tune on the strings? 60

Jul. Not so; but yet so false that he grieves my very heart-strings.

Host. You have a quick ear.

Jul. Ay, I would I were deaf; it makes me have a slow heart, 65

Host. I perceive you delight not in music.

Jul. Not a whit, when it jars so.

Host. Hark, what fine change is in the music!

Jul. Ay, that change is the spite.

Host. You would have them always play but one thing? 71

Jul. I would always have one play but one thing.

But, host, doth this Sir Proteus that we talk on Often resort unto this gentlewoman?

Host. I tell you what Launce, his man, told me: he lov'd her out of all nick. 75

Jul. Where is Launce?

Host. Gone to seek his dog; which to-morrow, by his master's command, he must carry for a present to his lady. 80

Jul. Peace! stand aside; the company parts.

Pro. Sir Thurio, fear not you. I will so plead That you shall say my cunning drift excels.

Thu. Where meet we?

Pro. At Saint Gregory's well.

Thu. Farewell.

[Exeunt Thu. and Musicians.]

[Enter SILVIA above.]

Pro. Madam, good even to your ladyship. 85

Sil. I thank you for your music, gentlemen. Who is that that spake?

Pro. One, lady, if you knew his pure heart's truth,

You would quickly learn to know him by his voice.

Sil. Sir Proteus, as I take it. 90

Pro. Sir Proteus, gentle lady, and your servant.

Sil. What's your will?

Pro. That I may compass yours.

Sil. You have your wish. My will is even this,

That presently you hie you home to bed.

Thou subtle, perjur'd, false, disloyal man! 95

Think'st thou I am so shallow, so conceitless,

To be seduced by thy flattery,

That hast deceiv'd so many with thy vows?

Return, return, and make thy love amends.

For me, by this pale queen of night I swear, 100

I am so far from granting thy request

That I despise thee for thy wrongful suit;

And by and by intend to chide myself

Even for this time I spend in talking to thee.

Pro. I grant, sweet love, that I did love a lady; 105

But she is dead.

Jul. [Aside.] 'T were false, if I should speak it;

For I am sure she is not buried.

Sil. Say that she be; yet Valentine thy friend

Survives, to whom, thyself art witness, 110

I am betroth'd; and art thou not asham'd

To wrong him with thy importunacy?

Pro. I likewise hear that Valentine is dead.

Sil. And so suppose am I; for in his grave Assume thyself my love is buried. 115

Pro. Sweet lady, let me rake it from the earth.

Sil. Go to thy lady's grave and call hers thence;

Or, at the least, in hers sepulchre thine.

Jul. [Aside.] He heard not that.

Pro. Madam, if your heart be so obdurate,

Vouchsafe me yet your picture for my love,
The picture that is hanging in your chamber.

To that I'll speak, to that I'll sigh and weep;

For since the substance of your perfect self

Is else devoted, I am but a shadow;

And to your shadow will I make true love.

Jul. [Aside.] If 't were a substance, you would, sure, deceive it,

And make it but a shadow, as I am.

Sil. I am very loath to be your idol, sir;

But since your falsehood shall become you
well

To worship shadows and adore false shapes,

Send to me in the morning and I'll send it;

And so, good rest.

Pro. As wretches have o'ernight

That wait for execution in the morn.

[Exeunt Pro. and Sil. severally.]

Jul. Host, will you go?

Host. By my halidom, I was fast asleep.

Jul. Pray you, where lies Sir Proteus?

Host. Marry, at my house. Trust me, I think 't is almost day.

Jul. Not so; but it hath been the longest
night

That e'er I watch'd and the most heaviest.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [The same.]

Enter EGLAMOUR.

Egl. This is the hour that Madam Silvia

Entreated me to call and know her mind.

There's some great matter she'd employ me in.

Madam, madam!

[Enter SILVIA above.]

Sil. Who calls?

Egl. Your servant and your friend;

One that attends your ladyship's command.

Sil. Sir Eglamour, a thousand times good morrow.

Egl. As many, worthy lady, to yourself.

According to your ladyship's impose,

I am thus early come to know what service

It is your pleasure to command me in.

Sil. O Eglamour, thou art a gentleman,—

Think not I flatter, for I swear I do not,—

Valiant, wise, remorseful, well accomplish'd.

Thou art not ignorant what dear good will

I bear unto the banish'd Valentine,

Nor how my father would enforce me marry

Vain Thurio, whom my very soul abhors.

Thyself hast lov'd; and I have heard thee say

No grief did ever come so near thy heart

As when thy lady and thy true love died,

Upon whose grave thou vow'dst pure chastity.

Sir Eglamour, I would to Valentine,

To Mantua, where I hear he makes abode;

And, for the ways are dangerous to pass,

I do desire thy worthy company,

Upon whose faith and honour I repose.

Urge not my father's anger, Eglamour,

But think upon my grief, a lady's grief,

And on the justice of my flying hence,

To keep me from a most unholy match,

Which heaven and fortune still rewards with plagues.

I do desire thee, even from a heart

As full of sorrows as the sea of sands,

To bear me company and go with me;

If not, to hide what I have said to thee,

That I may venture to depart alone.

Egl. Madam, I pity much your grievances;

Which since I know they virtuously are plac'd,

I give consent to go along with you,

Recking as little what betideth me

As much I wish all good befortune you.

When will you go?

Sil. This evening coming.

Egl. Where shall I meet you?

Sil. At Friar Patrick's cell,

Where I intend holy confession.

Egl. I will not fail your ladyship. Good [45] morrow, gentle lady.

Sil. Good morrow, kind Sir Eglamour.

[Exeunt [severally].]

SCENE IV. [The same.]

Enter LAUNCE [with his Dog].

Launce. When a man's servant shall play the cur with him, look you, it goes hard: one that I brought up of a puppy; one that I sav'd from drowning, when three or four of his blind brothers and sisters went to it. I have taught him, even as one would say precisely, "Thus I [5] would teach a dog." I was sent to deliver him as a present to Mistress Silvia from my master; and I came no sooner into the dining-chamber but he steps me to her trencher and steals her capon's leg. O, 't is a foul thing [10] when a cur cannot keep himself in all companies! I would have, as one should say, one that takes upon him to be a dog indeed, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit than he, to take a fault upon me that he did, I think verily he had been [15]
hang'd for 't; sure as I live, he had suffer'd for 't. You shall judge. He thrusts me himself into the company of three or four gentleman-like dogs, under the Duke's table. He had not been there—bless the mark!—a piss- [20]
ing while, but all the chamber smelt him.
"Out with the dog!" says one. "What cur is that?" says another. "Whip him out!" says
the third. "Hang him up!" says the Duke.
I, having been acquainted with the smell before, knew it was Crab, and goes me to the [25] fellow that whips the dogs. "Friend," quoth
I, "you mean to whip the dog?" "Ay, marry, do I," quoth he. "You do him the more wrong," quoth I; "'t was I did the thing you wot of." He makes me no more ado, but [30] whips me out of the chamber. How many masters would do this for his servant? Nay, I'll be sworn, I have sat in the stocks for puddings

he hath stolen, otherwise he had been executed; I have stood on the pillory for geese he hath ³⁵ kill'd, otherwise he had suffer'd for 't. Thou think'st not of this now. Nay, I remember the trick you serv'd me when I took my leave of Madam Silvia. Did not I bid thee still mark me and do as I do? When didst thou see me heave up my leg and make water against a ⁴⁰ gentlewoman's farthingale? Didst thou ever see me do such a trick?

[Enter PROTEUS and JULIA.]

Pro. Sebastian is thy name? I like thee well
And will employ thee in some service presently. ⁴⁵

Jul. In what you please. I'll do what I can.

Pro. I hope thou wilt. [To Launce.] How now, you whoreson peasant!

Where have you been these two days loitering?

Launce. Marry, sir, I carried Mistress Silvia the dog you bade me. ⁵⁰

Pro. And what says she to my little jewel?

Launce. Marry, she says your dog was a cur, and tells you currish thanks is good enough for such a present.

Pro. But she receiv'd my dog? ⁵⁵

Launce. No, indeed, did she not; here have I brought him back again.

Pro. What, didst thou offer her this from me?

Launce. Ay, sir; the other squirrel was stolen from me by the hangman's boys in the ⁶⁰ market-place; and then I offer'd her mine own, who is a dog as big as ten of yours, and therefore the gift the greater.

Pro. Go get thee hence, and find my dog again,

Or ne'er return again into my sight. ⁶⁵

Away, I say! stay'st thou to vex me here?

[Exit Launce.]

A slave, that still an end turns me to shame!

Sebastian, I have entertained thee,

Partly that I have need of such a youth

That can with some discretion do my business, ⁷⁰

For 'tis no trusting to yond foolish lout,

But chiefly for thy face and thy behaviour,

Which, if my augury deceive me not,

Witness good bringing up, fortune, and truth:

Therefore know thou, for this I entertain thee. ⁷⁵

Go presently, and take this ring with thee,

Deliver it to Madam Silvia.

She lov'd me well deliver'd it to me.

Jul. It seems you lov'd not her, to leave her token.

She is dead, belike?

Pro. Not so; I think she lives. ⁸¹

Jul. Alas!

Pro. Why dost thou cry "alas"?

Jul. I cannot choose

But pity her.

Pro. Wherefore shouldst thou pity her?

Jul. Because methinks that she lov'd you as well ⁸⁵

As you do love your lady Silvia.

She dreams on him that has forgot her love;

You dote on her that cares not for your love.

'Tis pity love should be so contrary;
And thinking on it makes me cry "alas!"

Pro. Well, give her that ring and therewithal ⁹⁰

This letter. That's her chamber. Tell my lady
I claim the promise for her heavenly picture.

Your message done, hie home unto my chamber,
Where thou shalt find me, sad and solitary.

[Exit.]

Jul. How many women would do such a message? ⁹⁵

Alas, poor Proteus! thou hast entertain'd

A fox to be the shepherd of thy lambs.

Alas, poor fool! why do I pity him

That with his very heart despiseth me?

Because he loves her, he despiseth me; ¹⁰⁰

Because I love him, I must pity him.

This ring I gave him when he parted from

me,

To bind him to remember my good will;

And now am I, unhappy messenger,

To plead for that which I would not obtain, ¹⁰⁵

To carry that which I would have refus'd,

To praise his faith which I would have disprais'd.

I am my master's true-confirmed love;

But cannot be true servant to my master,

Unless I prove false traitor to myself. ¹¹⁰

Yet will I woo for him, but yet so coldly

As, heaven it knows, I would not have him

speed.

[Enter SILVIA, attended.]

Gentlewoman, good day! I pray you, be my mean

To bring me where to speak with Madam Silvia.

Sil. What would you with her, if that I be she? ¹¹⁵

Jul. If you be she, I do entreat your patience

To hear me speak the message I am sent on.

Sil. From whom?

Jul. From my master, Sir Proteus, madam.

Sil. O, he sends you for a picture. ¹²⁰

Jul. Ay, madam.

Sil. Ursula, bring my picture there.

Go give your master this. Tell him from me,

One Julia, that his changing thoughts forget, ¹²⁴

Would better fit his chamber than this shadow.

Jul. Madam, please you peruse this letter.—

Pardon me, madam; I have unadvis'd

Deliver'd you a paper that I should not.

This is the letter to your ladyship.

Sil. I pray thee, let me look on that again. ¹³⁰

Jul. It may not be; good madam, pardon me.

Sil. There, hold!

I will not look upon your master's lines.

I know they are stuff'd with protestations

And full of new-found oaths, which he will break ¹³⁵

As easily as I do tear his paper.

Jul. Madam, he sends your ladyship this ring.

Sil. The more shame for him that he sends it me;

For I have heard him say a thousand times

His Julia gave it him at his departure. ¹⁴⁰

Though his false finger have profan'd the ring,

Mine shall not do his Julia so much wrong.

Jul. She thanks you.

Sil. What say'st thou?

Jul. I thank you, madam, that you tender her. 145

Poor gentlewoman! my master wrongs her much.

Sil. Dost thou know her?

Jul. Almost as well as I do know myself.

To think upon her woes I do protest

That I have wept a hundred several times. 150

Sil. Belike she thinks that Proteus hath forsook her?

Jul. I think she doth; and that's her cause of sorrow.

Sil. Is she not passing fair?

Jul. She hath been fairer, madam, than she is.

When she did think my master lov'd her well. 155

She, in my judgement, was as fair as you
But since she did neglect her looking-glass
And threw her sun-expelling mask away,
The air hath starv'd the roses in her cheeks
And pinch'd the lily-tincture of her face, 160
That now she is become as black as I.

Sil. How tall was she?

Jul. About my stature; for at Pentecost,
When all our pageants of delight were play'd,
Our youth got me to play the woman's part, 165
And I was trimm'd in Madam Julia's gown,
Which served me as fit, by all men's judgements,

As if the garment had been made for me;
Therefore I know she is about my height.
And at that time I made her weep agoon, 170
For I did play a lamentable part.
Madam, 't was Ariadne passioning
For Theseus' perjury and unjust flight;
Which I so lively acted with my tears
That my poor mistress, moved therewithal, 175
Wept bitterly; and would I might be dead
If I in thought felt not her very sorrow!

Sil. She is beholding to thee, gentle youth.
Alas, poor lady, desolate and left!
I weep myself to think upon thy words. 180
Here, youth, there is my purse; I give thee this
For thy sweet mistress' sake, because thou lov'st her.

Farewell. [Exit Silvia, with attendants.]

Jul. And she shall thank you for 't, if e'er you know her.

A virtuous gentlewoman, mild and beautiful! 185

I hope my master's suit will be but cold,
Since she respects my mistress' love so much.
Alas, how love can trifle with itself!
Here is her picture; let me see. I think, 190
If I had such a tire, this face of mine
Were full as lovely as is this of hers;
And yet the painter flatter'd her a little,
Unless I flatter with myself too much.
Her hair is auburn, mine is perfect yellow:
If that be all the difference in his love, 195
I'll get me such a colour'd periwig.
Her eyes are grey as glass, and so are mine.
Ay, but her forehead's low, and mine's as high.

What should it be that he respects in her
But I can make respective in myself, 200
If this fond Love were not a blinded god?
Come, shadow, come, and take this shadow up,
For 't is thy rival. O thou senseless form, Thou shalt be worshipp'd, kiss'd, lov'd, and ador'd!

And, were there sense in his idolatry, 205
My substance should be statue in thy stead.
I'll use thee kindly for thy mistress' sake,
That us'd me so; or else, by Jove I vow,
I should have scratch'd out your unseeing eyes,
To make my master out of love with thee! 210
[Exit.]

ACT V

SCENE I. [Milan. An abbey.]

Enter EGLAMOUR.

Egl. The sun begins to gild the western sky,
And now it is about the very hour
That Silvia, at Friar Patrick's cell, should meet
me.

She will not fail, for lovers break not hours,
Unless it be to come before their time; 5
So much they spur their expedition.
See where she comes.

[Enter SILVIA.]

Lady, a happy evening!

Sil. Amen, amen! Go on, good Eglamour,
Out at the postern by the abbey-wall.
I fear I am attended by some spies. 10

Egl. Fear not; the forest is not three leagues off.

If we recover that, we are sure enough. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [The same. The Duke's palace.]

Enter THURIO, PROTEUS, and JULIA.

Thu. Sir Proteus, what says Silvia to my suit?

Pro. O, sir, I find her milder than she was;
And yet she takes exceptions at your person.

Thu. What, that my leg is too long?

Pro. No; that it is too little. 5

Thu. I'll wear a boot, to make it somewhat rounder.

[Jul. Aside.] But love will not be spurr'd to what it loathes.

Thu. What says she to my face?

Pro. She says it is a fair one.

Thu. Nay, then the wanton lies; my face is black. 10

Pro. But pearls are fair; and the old saying is,
Black men are pearls in beauteous ladies' eyes.

[Jul. Aside.] 'Tis true; such pearls as put out ladies' eyes;

For I had rather wink than look on them.

Thu. How likes she my discourse? 15

Pro. Ill, when you talk of war.

Thu. But well, when I discourse of love and peace?

Jul. [Aside.] But better, indeed, when you hold your peace.

Thu. What says she to my valour?

Pro. O, sir, she makes no doubt of that. 20

Jul. [Aside.] She needs not, when she knows it cowardice.

Thu. What says she to my birth?

Pro. That you are well deriv'd.

Jul. [Aside.] True; from a gentleman to a fool.

Thu. Considers she my possessions? 25

Pro. O, ay; and pities them.

Thu. Wherefore?

Jul. [Aside.] That such an ass should owe them.

Pro. That they are out by lease.

Jul. Here comes the Duke. 30

[Enter DUKE.]

Duke. How now, Sir Proteus! How now, Thurio!

Which of you saw Sir Eglamour of late?

Thu. Not I.

Pro. Nor I.

Duke. Saw you my daughter? 35

Pro. Neither.

Duke. Why then, She's fled unto that peasant Valentine, 38 And Eglamour is in her company.

'Tis true; for Friar Laurence met them both, As he in penance wander'd through the forest. Him he knew well, and guess'd that it was she,

But, being mask'd, he was not sure of it. 40 Besides, she did intend confession At Patrick's cell this even; and there she was not.

These likelihoods confirm her flight from hence. Therefore, I pray you, stand not to discourse, But mount you presently and meet with me 45 Upon the rising of the mountain-foot That leads toward Mantua, whither they are fled.

Dispatch, sweet gentlemen, and follow me. [Exit.]

Thu. Why, this it is to be a peevish girl, That flies her fortune when it follows her. 50 I'll after, more to be reveng'd on Eglamour Than for the love of reckless Silvia. [Exit.]

Pro. And I will follow, more for Silvia's love Than hate of Eglamour that goes with her. [Exit.]

Jul. And I will follow, more to cross that love 55 Than hate for Silvia that is gone for love.

[Exit.]

SCENE III. [The frontiers of Mantua. The forest.]

Enter OUTLAWS with SILVIA.

1. Out. Come, come, Be patient; we must bring you to our captain.

Sil. A thousand more mischances than this one Have learn'd me how to brook this patiently.

2. Out. Come, bring her away. 5

1. Out. Where is the gentleman that was with her?

3. Out. Being nimble-footed, he hath outrun us,

But Moyses and Valerius follow him.

Go thou with her to the west end of the wood; There is our captain. We'll follow him that's fled. 10

The thicket is beset; he cannot scape.

1. Out. Come, I must bring you to our captain's cave.

Fear not; he bears an honourable mind,

And will not use a woman lawlessly.

Sil. O Valentine, this I endure for thee! 15 [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [Another part of the forest.]

Enter VALENTINE.

Val. How use doth breed a habit in a man!

This shadowy desert, unfrequented woods, I better brook than flourishing peopled towns.

Here can I sit alone, unseen of any, And to the nightingale's complaining notes 5

Tune my distresses and record my woes. O thou that dost inhabit in my breast,

Leave not the mansion so long tenantless, Lest, growing ruinous, the building fall

And leave no memory of what it was! 10 Repair me with thy presence, Silvia!

Thou gentle nymph, cherish thy forlorn swain!

What hallooing and what stir is this to-day?

These are my mates, that make their wills their law,

Have some unhappy passenger in chase. 15 They love me well; yet I have much to do To keep them from uncivil outrages.

Withdraw thee, Valentine: who's this comes here? [Steps aside.]

[Enter PROTEUS, SILVIA, and JULIA.]

Pro. Madam, this service I have done for you,

Though you respect not aught your servant doth. 20

To hazard life and rescue you from him That would have forc'd your honour and your love.

Vouchsafe me, for my meed, but one fair look; A smaller boon than this I cannot beg

And less than this, I am sure, you cannot give. 25

Val. [Aside.] How like a dream is this! I see and hear.

Love, lend me patience to forbear awhile.

Sil. O miserable, unhappy that I am!

Pro. Unhappy were you, madam, ere I came; But by my coming I have made you happy. 30

Sil. By thy approach thou mak'st me most unhappy.

Jul. [Aside.] And me, when he approacheth to your presence.

Sil. Had I been seized by a hungry lion, I would have been a breakfast to the beast,

Rather than have false Proteus rescue me. 35

O, Heaven be judge how I love Valentine, Whose life's as tender to me as my soul!

And full as much, for more there cannot be, I do detest false perjur'd Proteus.

Therefore be gone; solicit me no more. 40

Pro. What dangerous action, stood it next to death,

Would I not undergo for one calm look !
O, 'tis the curse in love, and still approv'd,
When women cannot love where they're be-lov'd !

Sil. When Proteus cannot love where he's belov'd. 45

Read over Julia's heart, thy first, best love,
For whose dear sake thou didst then rend thy faith

Into a thousand oaths ; and all those oaths
Descended into perjury, to love me.

Thou hast no faith left now, unless thou 'dst
two, 50

And that's far worse than none. Better have none

Than plural faith, which is too much by one.
Thou counterfeit to thy true friend !

Pro. In love
Who respects friend ?

Sil. All men but Proteus.

Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of moving
words 55

Can no way change you to a milder form,
I'll woo you like a soldier, at arms' end,
And love you 'gainst the nature of love, — force ye.

Sil. O heaven !

Pro. I'll force thee yield to my desire.

Val. Ruffian, let go that rude uncivil touch, 60
Thou friend of an ill fashion !

Pro. Valentine !

Val. Thou common friend, that's without faith or love,

For such is a friend now ! Treacherous man, Thou hast beguill'd my hopes ! Nought but mine
eye

Could have persuaded me. Now I dare not say
I have one friend alive ; thou wouldst disprove
me. 65

Who should be trusted [now], when one's right
hand

Is perjured to the bosom ? Proteus,
I am sorry I must never trust thee more,

But count the world a stranger for thy sake. 70
The private wound is deepest. O time most accurst,

'Mongst all foes that a friend should be the worst !

Pro. My shame and guilt confounds me.

Forgive me, Valentine ; if hearty sorrow
Be a sufficient ransom for offence, 75

I tender 't here ; I do as truly suffer
As e'er I did commit.

Val. Then I am paid ;

And once again I do receive thee honest.

Who by repentance is not satisfied
Is nor of heaven nor earth, for these are pleas'd. 80

By penitence the Eternal's wrath's appeas'd ;
And, that my love may appear plain and free,
All that was mine in Silvia I give thee.

Jul. O me unhappy ! [Swoons.]

Pro. Look to the boy. 85

Val. Why, boy ! why, wag ! how now !
what's the matter ? Look up ; speak.

Jul. O good sir, my master charg'd me to deliver a ring to Madam Silvia, which, out of my neglect, was never done. 90

Pro. Where is that ring, boy ?

Jul. Here 't is ; this is it.

Pro. How ? let me see !

Why, this is the ring I gave to Julia.

Jul. O, cry you mercy, sir, I have mistook ;
This is the ring you sent to Silvia. 95

Pro. But how cam'st thou by this ring ? At my depart

I gave this unto Julia.

Jul. And Julia herself did give it me ;

And Julia herself hath brought it hither.

Pro. How ! Julia ! 100

Jul. Behold her that gave aim to all thy oaths,

And entertain'd 'em deeply in her heart.

How oft hast thou with perjury cleft the root !

O Proteus let this habit make thee blush !

Be thou asham'd that I have took upon me 105

Such an immodest raiment, if shame live

In a disguise of love.

It is the lesser blot, modesty finds,

Women to change their shapes than men their minds.

Pro. Than men their minds ! 'tis true. O heaven ! were man 110

But constant, he were perfect. That one error Fills him with faults ; makes him run through all the sins.

Inconstancy falls off ere it begins.

What is in Silvia's face, but I may spy

More fresh in Julia's with a constant eye ? 115

Val. Come, come, a hand from either.

Let me be blest to make this happy close ;

'T were pity two such friends should be long foes.

Pro. Bear witness, Heaven, I have my wish for ever.

Jul. And I mine. 120

[Enter OUTLAWS, with DUKE and THURIO.]

Outlaws. A prize, a prize, a prize !

Val. Forbear, forbear, I say ! It is my lord
the Duke.

Your Grace is welcome to a man disgrac'd, Banished Valentine.

Duke. Sir Valentine !

Thu. Yonder is Silvia ; and Silvia's my mine. 125

Val. Thurio, give back, or else embrace thy
death ;

Come not within the measure of my wrath.

Do not name Silvia thine ; if once again,
Verona shall not hold thee. Here she stands :

Take but possession of her with a touch, — 130
I dare thee but to breathe upon my love.

Thu. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I.

I hold him but a fool that will endanger
His body for a girl that loves him not.

I claim her not, and therefore she is thine. 135

Duke. The more degenerate and base art
thou,

To make such means for her as thou hast done
And leave her on such slight conditions.

Now, by the honour of my ancestry,

I do applaud thy spirit, Valentine, 140

And think thee worthy of an empress' love.
 Know then, I here forget all former griefs,
 Cancel all grudge, repeal thee home again,
 Plead a new state in thy unrival'd merit,
 To which I thus subscribe: Sir Valentine, ¹⁴⁵
 Thou art a gentleman and well deriv'd;
 Take thou thy Silvia, for thou hast deserv'd
 her.

Val. I thank your Grace; the gift hath made me happy.
 I now beseech you, for your daughter's sake,
 To grant one boon that I shall ask of you. ¹⁵⁰

Duke. I grant it, for thine own, whate'er it be.

Val. These banish'd men that I have kept withal

Are men endu'd with worthy qualities.
 Forgive them what they have committed here
 And let them be recall'd from their exile. ¹⁵⁵
 They are reformed, civil, full of good,
 And fit for great employment, worthy lord.

Duke. Thou hast prevail'd; I pardon them and thee;

Dispose of them as thou know'st their deserts.
 Come, let us go; we will include all jars ¹⁶⁰
 With triumphs, mirth, and rare solemnity.

Val. And, as we walk along, I dare be bold
 With our discourse to make your Grace to smile.
 What think you of this page, my lord?

Duke. I think the boy hath grace in him; he blushes. ¹⁶⁵

Val. I warrant you, my lord, more grace than boy.

Duke. What mean you by that saying?

Val. Please you, I'll tell you as we pass along

That you will wonder what hath fortun'd.
 Come, Proteus; 'tis your penance but to hear
 The story of your loves discovered; ¹⁷⁰
 That done, our day of marriage shall be yours;
 One feast, one house, one mutual happiness.

[Exeunt.]

A MIDSUMMER-NIGHT'S DREAM

IN 1600 two quarto editions of A Midsummer-Night's Dream appeared. The earlier, printed for Thomas Fisher, seems to have been taken from an authentic manuscript, and on it the present text is based. The later, printed by James Roberts, follows the earlier with few changes beyond the addition of some stage directions. The text of the play in the First Folio appears to have been printed from a prompter's copy of Roberts's Quarto. The chief differences are in the division into acts, not hitherto marked, and in the presence of yet more detailed stage directions.

The only piece of external evidence of the existence of the play before 1600 is the mention of it by Meres in 1598. Attempts to date it more exactly are based chiefly on very slight probabilities. The supposed borrowing of II. i. 2, 3 from the sixth book of The Faerie Queene, and the possible allusion in V. i. 52 to Spenser's Tears of the Muses are of no real assistance. Slightly more plausible is the theory that Titania's description of the inverted seasons in II. i. 88-114 derived point from the violent storms which afflicted England in 1594, and was perhaps suggested by them. It is hard to believe that the fear of the clowns lest the lion should frighten the ladies needed the hint of an actual incident occurring at a spectacle at the Scottish court in 1594, when a Moor was substituted for a lion lest the spectators should be disturbed. So far as these very slight indications go, they point to 1594-95. The impression one receives of the stage of maturity implied in the style, characterization, and construction of the play, and the evidence from the meter fit this date; and most modern scholars incline to accept it.

Certain marked peculiarities of A Midsummer-Night's Dream indicate that it was not written primarily for the public stage. The prominence of the marriage of Theseus in the setting, the general masque-like character of the whole, with its abundance of lyric, dance, and spectacle, and the virtual epithalamium with which it closes, all suggest that it was originally devised for some nobleman's wedding. The open flattery of Elizabeth in II. i. 157-164, and the praise of chastity in I. i. 74, 75, point further to the actual presence of the Queen. The most suitable occasion so far suggested is the marriage of the Earl of Derby to Elizabeth Vere, which took place at the Court at Greenwich in 1594.

No original for the main plot has been found. The most obvious sources whence Shakespeare may have derived information about Theseus are Chaucer's Knight's Tale and North's translation of Plutarch's Life of Theseus. From the former he might have got the idea of the marriage festivities of Theseus, the May-Day observances, the hunting scene, the name of Philostrate, and some minor details. From the latter he might have taken a few proper names, and allusions to the previous adventures of Theseus in love and war.

The story of Pyramus and Thisbe was accessible to him in Ovid's Metamorphoses, in Golding's translation of the same, in Chaucer's Legend of Good Women, and in various later forms. A love-potion with an effect somewhat similar to, but by no means identical with, that of the love-juice of Oberon plays a part in the Diana of Montemayor, from which the dramatist had taken part of the plot of The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

The fairy-lore is based mainly on popular tradition. Titania is one of Ovid's names for Diana. Oberon had appeared in medieval romances such as Huon of Bordeaux, in Greene's James IV, in The Faerie Queene, and elsewhere. Robin Goodfellow was a familiar figure in folk-lore, and had already made his way into books. But Shakespeare worked on these figures, and on the fairy-world in general, a transformation into something all his own; and in so doing permanently modified this whole field of popular fancy. There is perhaps no one achievement of his genius which has had so pervasive an effect as his treatment of fairies in the present play and in Mercutio's speech on Queen Mab, in Romeo and Juliet.

ACT I

[SCENE I. Athens. The palace of Theseus.]

Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, [PHILOSTRATE,] with others.

The. Now, fair Hippolyta, our nuptial hour Draws on apace. Four happy days bring in Another moon; but, O, methinks, how slow
This old moon wanes! She lingers my desires,
Like to a step-dame or a dowager
Long withering out a young man's revenue.

Hip. Four days will quickly steep themselves in night;

Four nights will quickly dream away the time;
And then the moon, like to a silver bow
New-bent in heaven, shall behold the night
Of our solemnities.

The. Go, Philostrate,
Stir up the Athenian youth to merriments;
Awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth;
Turn melancholy forth to funerals;
The pale companion is not for our pomp.

[Exit Philostrate.]

Hippolyta, I woo'd thee with my sword,
And won thy love, doing thee injuries;
But I will wed thee in another key,
With pomp, with triumph, and with revelling.

Enter EGEUS, HERMIA, LYSANDER, and DEMETRIUS.

Ege. Happy be Theseus, our renowned Duke!

The. Thanks, good Egeus; what's the news with thee?

Ege. Full of vexation come I, with complaint Against my child, my daughter Hermia.

Stand forth, Demetrius. My noble lord,
This man hath my consent to marry her.

Stand forth, Lysander: and, my gracious Duke,
This man hath bewitch'd the bosom of my child.

Thou, thou, Lysander, thou hast given her rhymes,

And interchang'd love-tokens with my child.
Thou hast by moonlight at her window sung
With fainting voice verses of faining love,
And stolen the impression of her fantasy
With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gawds, con-coits,

Knacks, trifles, nosegays, sweetmeats, — messengers

Of strong prevailment in unhard'ned youth.
With cunning hast thou filch'd my daughter's
heart,

Turn'd her obedience, which is due to me,
To stubborn harshness; and, my gracious
Duke,

Be it so she will not here before your Grace
Consent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient privilege of Athens,
As she is mine, I may dispose of her;
Which shall be either to this gentleman
Or to her death, according to our law
Immediately provided in that case.

The. What say you, Hermia? Be advis'd, fair maid.

To you your father should be as a god,
One that compos'd your beauties, yea, and one
To whom you are but as a form in wax;
By him imprinted, and within his power
To leave the figure or disfigure it.
Demetrius is a worthy gentleman.

Her. So is Lysander.

The. In himself he is;
But in this kind, wanting your father's voice,
The other must be held the worthier.

Her. I would my father look'd but with my eyes.

The. Rather your eyes must with his judgement look.

Her. I do entreat your Grace to pardon me. I know not by what power I am made bold, Nor how it may concern my modesty, 60 In such a presence here to plead my thoughts; But I beseech your Grace that I may know The worst that may befall me in this case, If I refuse to wed Demetrius.

The. Either to die the death or to abjure 65 For ever the society of men.

Therefore, fair Hermia, question your desires, Know of your youth, examine well your blood, Whether, if you yield not to your father's choice,

You can endure the livery of a nun, 70 For aye to be in shady cloister mew'd, To live a barren sister all your life, Chanting faint hymns to the cold fruitless moon. Thrice-blessed they that master so their blood To undergo such maiden pilgrimage; 75 But earthlier happy is the rose distill'd, Than that which withering on the virgin thorn Grows, lives, and dies in single blessedness.

Her. So will I grow, so live, so die, my lord, Ere I will yield my virgin patent up 80 Unto his lordship, whose unwish'd yoke My soul consents not to give sovereignty.

The. Take time to pause; and, by the next new moon—

The sealing-day betwixt my love and me, For everlasting bond of fellowship— 85 Upon that day either prepare to die For disobedience to your father's will, Or else to wed Demetrius, as he would, Or on Diana's altar to protest For aye austerity and single life. 90

Dem. Relent, sweet Hermia; and, Lysander, yield

Thy crazed title to my certain right.

Lys. You have her father's love, Demetrius, Let me have Hermia's; do you marry him.

Ege. Scornful Lysander! true, he hath my love, 95

And what is mine my love shall render him.

And she is mine, and all my right of her

I do estate unto Demetrius.

Lys. I am, my lord, as well deriv'd as he, As well possess'd; my love is more than his; 100 My fortunes every way as fairly rank'd,

If not with vantage, as Demetrius';

And, which is more than all these boasts can be, I am below'd of beauteous Hermia.

Why should not I then prosecute my right? 105 Demetrius, I'll avouch it to his head,

Made love to Nedar's daughter, Helena,

And won her soul; and she, sweet lady, dotes, Devoutly dotes, dotes in idolatry,

Upon this spotted and inconstant man. 110

The. I must confess that I have heard so much,

And with Demetrius thought to have spoke thereof;

But, being over-full of self-affairs,

My mind did lose it. But, Demetrius, come;

And come, Egeus; you shall go with me, 115 I have some private schooling for you both.

For you, fair Hermia, look you arm yourself To fit your fancies to your father's will;

Or else the law of Athens yields you up— Which by no means we may extenuate— 120

To death, or to a vow of single life.

Come, my Hippolyta; what cheer, my love?

Demetrius and Egeus, go along,

I must employ you in some business

Against our nuptial, and confer with you 125

Of something nearly that concerns yourselves.

Ege. With duty and desire we follow you.

[Exeunt all but Lysander and Hermia.]

Lys. How now, my love! why is your cheek so pale?

How chance the roses there do fade so fast?

Her. Belike for want of rain, which I could well 130

Beteem them from the tempest of my eyes.

Lys. Ay me! for aught that I could ever read,

Could ever hear by tale or history, The course of true love never did run smooth;

But, either it was different in blood,— 135

Her. O cross! too high to be enthral'd to low.

Lys. Or else misgraffed in respect of years,—

Her. O spite! too old to be engag'd to young.

Lys. Or else it stood upon the choice of friends,—

Her. O hell! to choose love by another's eyes. 140

Lys. Or, if there were a sympathy in choice, War, death, or sickness did lay siege to it,

Making it momentary as a sound,

Swift as a shadow, short as any dream,

Brief as the lightning in the collied night, 145

That, in a spleen, unfolds both heaven and earth,

And ere a man hath power to say "Behold!"

The jaws of darkness do devour it up; So quick bright things come to confusion.

Her. If then true lovers have been ever cross'd, 150

It stands as an edict in destiny.

Then let us teach our trial patience,

Because it is a customary cross,

As due to love as thoughts and dreams and sighs,

Wishes and tears, poor fancy's followers. 155

Lys. A good persuasion; therefore, hear me, Hermia.

I have a widow aunt, a dowager

Of great revenue, and she hath no child.

From Athens is her house remote seven leagues;

And she respects me as her only son. 160

There, gentle Hermia, may I marry thee;

And to that place the sharp Athenian law

Cannot pursue us. If thou lov'st me then,

Steal forth thy father's house to-morrow night;

And in the wood, a league without the town, 165

Where I did meet thee once with Helena

To do observance to a morn of May,

There will I stay for thee.

Her. My good Lysander!

I swear to thee, by Cupid's strongest bow,

By his best arrow with the golden head, 170
By the simplicity of Venus' doves,
By that which knitteth souls and prospers loves,
And by that fire which burn'd the Carthage
queen,

When the false Trojan under sail was seen,
By all the vows that ever men have broke, 175
In number more than ever women spoke,
In that same place thou hast appointed me
To-morrow truly will I meet with thee.

Lys. Keep promise, love. Look, here comes Helena.

Enter HELENA.

Her. God speed fair Helena! Whither
away? 180

Hel. Call you me fair? That fair again
unsay.

Demetrius loves your fair, O happy fair!
Your eyes are lode-stars, and your tongue's sweet air

More tuneable than lark to shepherd's ear
When wheat is green, when hawthorn buds
appear. 185

Sickness is catching; O, were favour so,
Yours would I catch, fair Hermia, ere I go;
My ear should catch your voice, my eye your
eye,

My tongue should catch your tongue's sweet melody.

Were the world mine, Demetrius being bated, 190

The rest I'll give to be to you translated.

O, teach me how you look, and with what art
You sway the motion of Demetrius' heart.

Her. I frown upon him, yet he loves me still.

Hel. O that your frowns would teach my smiles such skill! 195

Her. I give him curses, yet he gives me love.

Hel. O that my prayers could such affection move!

Her. The more I hate, the more he follows
me.

Hel. The more I love, the more he hateth me.

Her. His folly, Helena, is no fault of mine.

Hel. None, but your beauty. Would that fault were mine! 201

Her. Take comfort; he no more shall see my face;

Lysander and myself will fly this place.

Before the time I did Lysander see, 205

Seem'd Athens as a paradise to me;
O, then, what graces in my love do dwell,
That he hath turn'd a heaven unto a hell!

Lys. Helen, to you our minds we will unfold.
To-morrow night, when Phoebe doth behold

Her silver visage in the watery glass, 210

Decking with liquid pearl the bladed grass,
A time that lovers' flights doth still conceal,
Through Athens' gates have we devis'd to steal.

Her. And in the wood, where often you and I
Upon faint primrose-beds were wont to lie, 215

Emptying our bosoms of their counsel sweet,
There my Lysander and myself shall meet;

And thence from Athens turn away our eyes,
To seek new friends and stranger companies.

Farewell, sweet playfellow! Pray thou for us;

And good luck grant thee thy Demetrius! 221
Keep word, Lysander; we must starve our sight
From lovers' food till morrow deep midnight.

Lys. I will, my Hermia. [Exit Herm.

Helena, adieu: 225

As you on him, Demetrius dote on you! [Exit.

Hel. How happy some o'er other some can be!
Through Athens I am thought as fair as she.
But what of that? Demetrius thinks not so;
He will not know what all but he do know;
And as he errs, doting on Hermia's eyes, 230
So I, admiring of his qualities.

Things base and vile, holding no quantity,
Love can transpoze to form and dignity.

Love looks not with the eyes but with the mind,
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind. 235

Nor hath Love's mind of any judgement taste;
Wings and no eyes figure unheedy haste;

And therefore is Love said to be a child,
Because in choice he is so oft beguil'd.

As waggish boys in game themselves for-
swear, 240

So the boy Love is perjur'd every where:
For ere Demetrius look'd on Hermia's eyne,

He hail'd down oaths that he was only mine;
And when this hail some heat from Hermia felt,

So he dissolv'd, and showers of oaths did melt. 245

I will go tell him of fair Hermia's flight;
Then to the wood will he to-morrow night

Pursue her; and for this intelligence
If I have thanks, it is a dear expense.

But herein mean I to enrich my pain, 250
To have his sight thither and back again.

[Exit.

[SCENE II. Athens. Quince's house.]

Enter QUINCE, SNUG, BOTTOM, FLUTE, SNOUT, and STARVELING.

Quin. Is all our company here?

Bot. You were best to call them generally, man by man, according to the scrip.

Quin. Here is the scroll of every man's name, which is thought fit, through all Athens, to play in our interlude before the Duke and [5
the Duchess, on his wedding-day at night.

Bot. First, good Peter Quince, say what the play treats on, then read the names of the actors, and so grow to a point. 10

Quin. Marry, our play is, The most lamentable comedy, and most cruel death of Pyramus and Thisby.

Bot. A very good piece of work, I assure you, and a merry. Now, good Peter Quince, call forth your actors by the scroll. Masters, [15 spread yourselves.

Quin. Answer as I call you. Nick Bottom, the weaver.

Bot. Ready. Name what part I am for, and proceed. 21

Quin. You, Nick Bottom, are set down for Pyramus.

Bot. What is Pyramus? A lover, or a tyrant?

Quin. A lover, that kills himself most gallant for love. 25

Bot. That will ask some tears in the true performing of it. If I do it, let the audience look to their eyes. I will move storms, I will condole in some measure. To the rest. Yet my chief humour is for a tyrant. I could play [50] Ercles rarely, or a part to tear a cat in, to make all split.

"The raging rocks
And shivering shocks
Shall break the locks 35
Of prison gates;
And Phibbus' car
Shall shine from far
And make and mar
The foolish Fates." 40

This was lofty! Now name the rest of the players. This is Ercles' vein, a tyrant's vein; a lover is more condoling.

Quin. Francis Flute, the bellows-mender.

Flu. Here, Peter Quince. 45

Quin. Flute, you must take Thisby on you.

Flu. What is Thisby? A wandering knight?

Quin. It is the lady that Pyramus must love.

Flu. Nay, faith, let not me play a woman; I have a beard coming. 50

Quin. That's all one; you shall play it in a mask, and you may speak as small as you will.

Bot. An I may hide my face, let me play Thisby too. I'll speak in a monstrous little voice, "Thisne! Thisne! Ah Pyramus, my lover dear! thy Thisby dear, and lady [55] dear!"

Quin. No, no; you must play Pyramus; and, Flute, you Thisby.

Bot. Well, proceed.

Quin. Robin Starveling, the tailor. 60

Star. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. Robin Starveling, you must play Thisby's mother. Tom Snout, the tinker.

Snout. Here, Peter Quince.

Quin. You, Pyramus' father; myself, Thisby's father. Snug, the joiner, you, the lion's [65] part; and, I hope, here is a play fitted.

Snug. Have you the lion's part written? Pray you, if it be, give it me, for I am slow of study.

Quin. You may do it extempore, for it is [70] nothing but roaring.

Bot. Let me play the lion too. I will roar, that I will do any man's heart good to hear me. I will roar, that I will make the Duke say, "Let him roar again, let him roar again." 75

Quin. An you should do it too terribly, you would fright the Duchess and the ladies, that they would shriek; and that were enough to hang us all.

All. That would hang us, every mother's son. 80

Bot. I grant you, friends, if you should fright the ladies out of their wits, they would have no more discretion but to hang us; but I will aggravate my voice so that I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove; I will roar you [85] as 'twere any nightingale.

Quin. You can play no part but Pyramus; for Pyramus is a sweet-fac'd man; a proper man, as one shall see in a summer's day; a most lovely gentleman-like man: therefore you must needs play Pyramus. 91

Bot. Well, I will undertake it. What beard were I best to play it in?

Quin. Why, what you will.

Bot. I will discharge it in either your [95] straw-colour beard, your orange-tawny beard, your purple-in-grain beard, or your French-crown-colour beard, your perfect yellow.

Quin. Some of your French crowns have no hair at all, and then you will play barefac'd. [100] But, masters, here are your parts; and I am to entreat you, request you, and desire you, to con them by to-morrow night; and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the town, by moonlight. There will we rehearse, for if we meet in the city, we shall be dogg'd with company, [105] and our devices known. In the meantime I will draw a bill of properties, such as our play wants. I pray you, fail me not.

Bot. We will meet; and there we may rehearse most obscenely and courageously. Take pains; be perfect; adieu. [110]

Quin. At the Duke's oak we meet.

Bot. Enough; hold or cut bow-strings.

[Exeun.]

ACT II

[SCENE I. A wood near Athens.]

Enter a FAIRY at one door and ROBIN GOOD-FELLOW at another.

Robin. How now, spirit! whither wander you?

Fai. Over hill, over dale,
Thorough bush, thorough brier,
Over park, over pale,
Thorough flood, thorough fire, 5
I do wander every where,
Swifter than the moon's sphere;
And I serve the fairy Queen,
To dew her orbs upon the green.
The cowslips tall her pensioners be; 10
In their gold coats spots you see;
Those be rubies, fairy favours,
In those freckles live their savours.

I must go seek some dewdrops here
And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear. 15
Farewell, thou lob of spirits; I'll be gone.
Our Queen and all her elves come here anon.

Robin. The King doth keep his revels here to-night;
Take heed the Queen come not within his sight;

For Oberon is passing fell and wrath, 20
Because that she as her attendant hath
A lovely boy stolen from an Indian king.
She never had so sweet a changeling;
And jealous Oberon would have the child
Knight of his train, to trace the forests wild; 25
But she perforce withholds the loved boy, Crowns him with flowers, and makes him all her joy;
And now they never meet in grove or green,
By fountain clear, or spangled starlight sheen,

But they do square, that all their elves for fear 80

Creep into acorn-cups and hide them there.

Fai. Either I mistake your shape and making quite,

Or else you are that shrewd and knavish sprite Call'd Robin Goodfellow. Are not you he
That frights the maidens of the villagery, 35
Skim milk, and sometimes labour in the quern,
And bootless make the breathless housewife
churn,

And sometime make the drink to bear no barm, Misdread night-wanderers, laughing at their harm?

Those that Hobgoblin call you, and sweet
Puck, 40

You do their work, and they shall have good luck.

Are not you he?

Robin. Thou speakest aright;
I am that merry wanderer of the night.
I jest to Oberon and make him smile
When I a fat and bean-fed horse beguile, 45
Neighing in likeness of a filly foal;
And sometime lurk I in a gossip's bowl,
In very likeness of a roasted crab,
And when she drinks, against her lips I bob
And on her withered dewlap pour the ale. 50
The wisest aunt, telling the saddest tale,
Sometime for three-foot stool mistaketh me.
Then slip I from her bum, down topples she,
And "tailor" cries, and falls into a cough;
And then the whole quire hold their hips and laugh. 55

And waxen in their mirth, and neeze, and swear
A merrier hour was never wasted there.

But, room, fairy! here comes Oberon.

Fai. And here my mistress. Would that he were gone!

Enter the King of Fairies [OBERON] at one door with his train; and the Queen [TITA-NIA] at another with hers.

Obe. Ill met by moonlight, proud Titania. 60

Tita. What, jealous Oberon! Fairies, skip
hence:

I have forsworn his bed and company.

Obe. Tarry, rash wanton! Am not I thy
lord?

Tita. Then I must be thy lady; but I know
When thou hast stolen away from fairy land, 65
And in the shape of Corin sat all day,
Playing on pipes of corn and versing love
To amorous Phillida. Why art thou here,
Come from the farthest steep of India?
But that, forsooth, the bouncing Amazon, 70
Your buskin'd mistress and your warrior love,
To Theseus must be wedded, and you come
To give their bed joy and prosperity.

Obe. How canst thou thus for shame, Titania,
Glance at my credit with Hippolyta, 75
Knowing I know thy love to Theseus?
Didst thou not lead him through the glimmering
night

From Perigonia, whom he ravished?

And make him with fair Egle break his faith,
With Ariadne, and Antiopa? 80

Tita. These are the forgeries of jealousy;
And never, since the middle summer's spring,
Met we on hill, in dale, forest or mead,
By paved fountain or by rusky brook,
Or in the beached margin of the sea, 85
To dance our ringlets to the whistling wind,
But with thy brawls thou hast disturb'd our sport.

Therefore the winds, piping to us in vain,
As in revenge, have suck'd up from the sea
Contagious fogs; which, falling in the land, 90
Hath every petty river made so proud
That they have overcome their continents.
The ox hath therefore stretch'd his yoke in vain.

The ploughman lost his sweat, and the green
corn

Hath rotted ere his youth attain'd a beard. 95

The fold stands empty in the drowned field,
And crows are fatted with the murrain flock,
The nine men's morris is fill'd up with mud,
And the quaint mazes in the wanton green

For lack of tread are undistinguishable. 100

The human mortals want their winter cheer;
No night is now with hymn or carol blest;

Therefore the moon, the governess of floods,
Pale in her anger, washes all the air,

That rheumatic diseases do abound. 105

And thorough this distemperature we see
The seasons alter: hoary-headed frosts

Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson rose,
And on old Hiems' thin and icy crown

An odorous chaplet of sweet summer buds 110

Is, as in mockery, set; the spring, the summer,
The childing autumn, angry winter, change

Their wonted liveries; and the mazed world,
By their increase, now knows not which is

which. 115

And this same progeny of evils comes
From our debate, from our dissension;

We are their parents and original. 120

Obe. Do you amend it then; it lies in you.
Why should Titania cross her Oberon?

I do but beg a little changeling boy
To be my henchman. 125

Tita. Set your heart at rest;
The fairy land buys not the child of me.

His mother was a votaress of my order,
And, in the spiced Indian air, by night,

Full often hath she gossip'd by my side, 130

And sat with me on Neptune's yellow sands,
Marking the embarked traders on the flood,

When we have laugh'd to see the sails conceive
And grow big-bellied with the wanton wind;

Which she with pretty and with swimming gait
Following, her womb then rich with my young squire, 135

Would imitate, and sail upon the land
To fetch me trifles, and return again,

As from a voyage, rich with merchandise.
But she, being mortal, of that boy did die; 140

And for her sake do I rear up her boy,
And for her sake I will not part with him.

Obe. How long within this wood intend you stay?

Tita. Perchance till after Theseus' wedding-
day.

If you will patiently dance in our round 140
And see our moonlight revels, go with us;
If not, shun me, and I will spare your haunts.
Obe. Give me that boy, and I will go with thee.

Tita. Not for thy fairy kingdom. Fairies, away!

We shall chide downright, if I longer stay. 145
[Exit (Titania with her train).]

Obe. Well, go thy way; thou shalt not from this grove

Till I torment thee for this injury.
My gentle Puck, come hither. Thou remember'st

Since once I sat upon a promontory,
And heard a mermaid on a dolphin's back 150
Uttering such dulcet and harmonious breath
That the rude sea grew civil at her song,
And certain stars shot madly from their spheres,

To hear the sea-maid's music?

Robin. I remember.

Obe. That very time I saw, but thou couldst not, 155

Flying between the cold moon and the earth,
Cupid all arm'd. A certain aim he took
At a fair vestal throned by the west,
And loos'd his love-shaft smartly from his bow,
As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts;
But I might see young Cupid's fiery shaft 161
Quench'd in the chaste beams of the watery moon,

And the imperial votaress passed on,
In maiden meditation, fancy-free.
Yet mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell. 165
It fell upon a little western flower,
Before milk-white, now purple with love's wound,

And maidens call it love-in-idleness.
Fetch me that flower, the herb I shew'd thee once.

The juice of it on sleeping eye-lids laid 170
Will make or man or woman madly dote
Upon the next live creature that it sees.
Fetch me this herb; and be thou here again
Ere the leviathan can swim a league.

Robin. I'll put a girdle round about the earth 175

In forty minutes. [Exit.]

Obe. Having once this juice,
I'll watch Titania when she is asleep,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes.
The next thing then she waking looks upon,
Be it on lion, bear, or wolf, or bull, 180
On meddling monkey, or on busy ape,
She shall pursue it with the soul of love;
And ere I take this charm from off her sight,
As I can take it with another herb,
I'll make her render up her page to me. 185
But who comes here? I am invisible;
And I will overhear their conference.

Enter DEMETRIUS, HELENA following him.

Dem. I love thee not, therefore pursue me not.

Where is Lysander and fair Hermia?
The one I'll stay, the other stayeth me. 190

Thou told'st me they were stolen unto this wood;

And here am I, and wood within this wood,
Because I cannot meet my Hermia.
Hence, get thee gone, and follow me no more.

Hel. You draw me, you hard-hearted adamant;

But yet you draw not iron, for my heart
Is true as steel. Leave you your power to draw,
And I shall have no power to follow you.

Dem. Do I entice you? Do I speak you fair?
Or, rather, do I not in plainest truth 195
Tell you, I do not, nor I cannot love you?

Hel. And even for that do I love you the more.

I am your spaniel, and, Demetrius,
The more you beat me, I will fawn on you.
Use me but as your spaniel, spurn me, strike me,

Neglect me, lose me; only give me leave,
Unworthy as I am, to follow you.

What worse place can I beg in your love,—
And yet a place of high respect with me,—
Than to be used as you use your dog? 210

Dem. Tempt not too much the hatred of my spirit,

For I am sick when I do look on thee.

Hel. And I am sick when I look not on you.

Dem. You do impeach your modesty too much,

To leave the city and commit yourself 215
Into the hands of one that loves you not;
To trust the opportunity of night

And the ill counsel of a desert place
With the rich worth of your virginity.
Hel. Your virtue is my privilege. For that 220

It is not night when I do see your face,
Therefore I think I am not in the night;
Nor doth this wood lack worlds of company,
For you in my respect are all the world.

Then how can it be said I am alone, 225
When all the world is here to look on me?

Dem. I'll run from thee and hide me in the brakes,

And leave thee to the mercy of wild beasts.

Hel. The wildest hath not such a heart as you.
Run when you will, the story shall be chang'd:
Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chase; 231
The dove pursues the griffin; the mild hind
Makes speed to catch the tiger; bootless speed,
When cowardice pursues and valour flies.

Dem. I will not stay thy questions; let me go; 235

Or, if thou follow me, do not believe
But I shall do thee mischief in the wood.

Hel. Ay, in the temple, in the town, the field,
You do me mischief. Fie, Demetrius!

Your wrongs do set a scandal on my sex. 240
We cannot fight for love, as men may do.

We should be woo'd and were not made to woo.
[Exit Dem.]

I'll follow thee and make a heaven of hell,
To die upon the hand I love so well. [Exit.]

Obe. Fare thee well, nymph. Ere he do leave this grove, 245

Thou shalt fly him and he shall seek thy love.

Re-enter [ROBIN GOODFELLOW].

Hast thou the flower there? Welcome, wanderer.

Robin. Ay, there it is.

Obe.

I pray thee, give it me.

I know a bank where the wild thyme blows,
Where oxlips and the nodding violet grows, ²⁵⁰
Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine,
With sweet musk-roses and with eglantine.
There sleeps Titania sometime of the night,
Lull'd in these flowers with dances and delight;
And there the snake throws her enamell'd skin, ²⁵⁵

Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in;
And with the juice of this I'll streak her eyes,
And make her full of hateful fantasies.

Take thou some of it, and seek through this grove.

A sweet Athenian lady is in love ²⁶⁰
With a disdainful youth. Anoint his eyes,
But do it when the next thing he espies
May be the lady. Thou shalt know the man
By the Athenian garments he hath on.
Effect it with some care, that he may prove ²⁶⁵
More fond on her than she upon her love;
And look thou meet me ere the first cock crow.

Robin. Fear not, my lord, your servant shall do so. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. Another part of the wood.]

Enter TITANIA, with her train.

Tita. Come, now a roundel and a fairy song;
Then, for the third part of a minute, hence;
Some to kill cankers in the musk-rose buds,
Some war with rere-mice for their leathern wings

To make my small elves coats, and some keep back ⁵

The clamorous owl that nightly hoots and wonders

At our quaint spirits. Sing me now asleep;
Then to your offices and let me rest.

THE FAIRIES sing.

[1. Fairy.] "You spotted snakes with double tongue,

Thorny hedgehogs, be not seen; ¹⁰
Newts and blind-worms, do no wrong,
Come not near our fairy queen."

[Cho.] "Philomel, with melody
Sing in our sweet lullaby;
Lulla, lulla, lullaby; lulla, lulla, lullaby. ¹⁵
Never harm,
Nor spell nor charm,
Come our lovely lady nigh.
So, good night, with lullaby."

1. Fairy. "Weaving spiders, come not here;
Hence, you long-legg'd spinners, hence! ²¹
Beetles black, approach not near;
Worm nor snail, do no offence."

[Cho.] "Philomel, with melody," etc.

2. Fairy. Hence, away! now all is well. ²⁴
One aloof stand sentinel.
[Exeunt Fairies.] Titania sleeps.

Enter OBERON [and squeezes the flower on Titania's eyelids].

Obe. What thou seest when thou dost wake,
Do it for thy true-love take,
Love and languish for his sake.
Be it ounce, or cat, or bear, ³⁰
Pard, or boar with bristled hair,
In thy eye that shall appear
When thou wak'st, it is thy dear.
Wake when some vile thing is near.

[Exit.]

Enter LYSANDER and HERMIA.

Lys. Fair love, you faint with wandering in the wood; ³⁵

And to speak troth, I have forgot our way.

We'll rest us, Hermia, if you think it good,

And tarry for the comfort of the day.

Her. Be it so, Lysander. Find you out a bed;

For I upon this bank will rest my head. ⁴⁰

Lys. One turf shall serve as pillow for us both;

One heart, one bed, two bosoms and one troth.

Her. Nay, good Lysander; for my sake, my dear,

Lie further off yet; do not lie so near.

Lys. O, take the sense, sweet, of my innocence! ⁴⁵

Love takes the meaning in love's conference.

I mean, that my heart unto yours is knit

So that but one heart we can make of it;

Two bosoms interchained with an oath;

So then two bosoms and a single troth. ⁵⁰

Then by your side no bed-room me deny;

For lying so, Hermia, I do not lie.

Her. Lysander riddles very prettily.

Now much beshrew my manners and my pride,

If Hermia meant to say Lysander lied. ⁵⁵

But, gentle friend, for love and courtesy

Lie further off; in human modesty,

Such separation as may well be said

Becomes a virtuous bachelor and a maid,

So far be distant; and, good night, sweet friend. ⁶⁰

Thy love ne'er alter till thy sweet life end!

Lys. Amen, amen, to that fair prayer, say I;

And then end life when I end loyalty!

Here is my bed; sleep give thee all his rest!

Her. With half that wish the wisher's eyes be press'd! [They sleep.] ⁶⁵

Enter [ROBIN GOODFELLOW].

Robin. Through the forest have I gone,
But Athenian found I none,
On whose eyes I might approve
This flower's force in stirring love.
Night and silence — Who is here? ⁷⁰
Weeds of Athens he doth wear!
This is he, my master said,
Despised the Athenian maid;
And here the maiden, sleeping sound,
On the dank and dirty ground. ⁷⁵

Pretty soul! she durst not lie
Near this lack-love kill-courtesy.
Churl, upon thy eyes I throw
All the power this charm doth owe.
When thou wak'st, let love forbid 80
Sleep his seat on thy eyelid;
So awake when I am gone,
For I must now to Oberon. [Exit.]

Enter DEMETRIUS and HELENA, running.

Hel. Stay though thou kill me, sweet Demetrius.

Dem. I charge thee, hence, and do not haunt me thus. 85

Hel. O, wilt thou darkling leave me? Do not so.

Dem. Stay, on thy peril; I alone will go. [Exit.]

Hel. O, I am out of breath in this fond chase!
The more my prayer, the lesser is my grace.
Happy is Hermia, wheresoe'er she lies, 90
For she hath blessed and attractive eyes.
How came her eyes so bright? Not with salt tears;

If so, my eyes are oftener wash'd than hers.
No, no, I am as ugly as a bear,
For beasts that meet me run away for fear; 95
Therefore no marvel though Demetrius
Do, as a monster, fly my presence thus.
What wicked and dissembling glass of mine
Made me compare with Hermia's spherish eyne?
But who is here? Lysander! on the ground! 100
Dead? or asleep? I see no blood, no wound.
Lysander, if you live, good sir, awake.

Lys. [Awaking.] And run through fire I will for thy sweet sake.

Transparent Helena! Nature shows art,
That through thy bosom makes me see thy heart. 105

Where is Demetrius? O, how fit a word
Is that vile name to perish on my sword!

Hel. Do not say so, Lysander; say not so.
What though he love your Hermia? Lord, what though?

Yet Hermia still loves you; then be content. 110

Lys. Content with Hermia! No; I do repent
The tedious minutes I with her have spent.
Not Hermia but Helena I love.

Who will not change a raven for a dove?
The will of man is by his reason sway'd; 115
And reason says you are the worthier maid.

Things growing are not ripe until their season,
So I, being young, till now ripe not to reason;
And touching now the point of human skill,
Reason becomes the marshal to my will 120
And leads me to your eyes, where I o'erlook
Love's stories written in love's richest book.

Hel. Wherefore was I to this keen mockery born?

When at your hands did I deserve this scorn?
Is't not enough, is't not enough, young man, 125

That I did never, no, nor never can,
Deserve a sweet look from Demetrius' eye,
But you must flout my insufficiency?

Good troth, you do me wrong, good sooth you do,
In such disdainful manner me to woo. 130

But fare you well; perforce I must confess
I thought you lord of more true gentleness.
O, that a lady, of one man refus'd,
Should of another therefore be abus'd! [Exit.]
Lys. She sees not Hermia. Hermia, sleep 135
thou there;

And never mayst thou come Lysander near!
For as a surfeit of the sweetest things
The deepest loathing to the stomach brings,
Or as the heresies that men do leave
Are hated most of those they did deceive, 140
So thou, my surfeit and my heresy,
Of all be hated, but the most of me!
And, all my powers, address your love and might

To honour Helen and to be her knight. [Exit.]
Her. [Awaking.] Help me, Lysander, help me! do thy best 145

To pluck this crawling serpent from my breast!
Ay me, for pity! what a dream was here!
Lysander, look how I do quake with fear.
Methought a serpent eat my heart away,
And you sat smiling at his cruel prey. 150
Lysander! what, remov'd? Lysander! lord!
What, out of hearing? Gone? No sound, no word?

Alack, where are you? Speak, an if you hear;
Speak, of all loves! I swoon almost with fear.
No? then I well perceive you are not nigh. 155
Either death or you I'll find immediately.

[Exit.]

ACT III

[SCENE I. The wood. Titania lying asleep.]

Enter the Clowns [QUINCE, SNUG, BOTTOM, FLUTE, SNOUT, and STARVELING].

Bot. Are we all met?

Quin. Pat, pat; and here's a marvellous convenient place for our rehearsal. This green plot shall be our stage, this hawthorn-brake our tiring-house; and we will do it in action as we will do it before the Duke. 6

Bot. Peter Quince!

Quin. What say'st thou, bully Bottom?

Bot. There are things in this comedy of Pyramus and Thisby that will never please. 10
First, Pyramus must draw a sword to kill himself, which the ladies cannot abide. How answer you that?

Snout. By'r lakin, a parlous fear.

Star. I believe we must leave the killing out, when all is done. 15

Bot. Not a whit! I have a device to make all well. Write me a prologue; and let the prologue seem to say, we will do no harm with our swords and that Pyramus is not kill'd indeed; and, for the more better assurance, tell them 20 that I Pyramus am not Pyramus, but Bottom the weaver. This will put them out of fear.

Quin. Well, we will have such a prologue; and it shall be written in eight and six. 25

Bot. No, make it two more; let it be written in eight and eight.

Snout. Will not the ladies be afeard of the lion?

Star. I fear it, I promise you.

Bot. Masters, you ought to consider with ^[30] yourselves. To bring in — God shield us! — a lion among ladies, is a most dreadful thing; for there is not a more fearful wild-fowl than your lion living; and we ought to look to 't.

Snout. Therefore another prologue must tell he is not a lion. ^[36]

Bot. Nay, you must name his name, and half his face must be seen through the lion's neck; and he himself must speak through, saying thus, or to the same defect, "Ladies," or "Fair ladies, I would wish you," or "I ^[40] would request you," or "I would entreat you, not to fear, not to tremble: my life for yours. If you think I come hither as a lion, it were pity of my life. No, I am no such thing; I am a man as other men are;" and there indeed let him ^[45] name his name, and tell them plainly he is Snug the joiner.

Quin. Well, it shall be so. But there is two hard things; that is, to bring the moonlight into a chamber; for, you know, Pyramus and Thisby meet by moonlight. ^[51]

Snout. Doth the moon shine that night we play our play?

Bot. A calendar, a calendar! Look in the almanac! Find out moonshine, find out moonshine. ^[55]

Quin. Yes, it doth shine that night.

Bot. Why, then may you leave a casement of the great chamber window, where we play, open, and the moon may shine in at the casement.

Quin. Ay; or else one must come in with a ^[60] bush of thorns and a lantern, and say he comes to disfigure, or to present, the person of Moonshine. Then, there is another thing: we must have a wall in the great chamber; for Pyramus and Thisby, says the story, did talk through the chink of a wall. ^[65]

Snout. You can never bring in a wall. What say you, Bottom?

Bot. Some man or other must present Wall; and let him have some plaster, or some loam, or some rough-cast about him, to signify wall; ^[71] or let him hold his fingers thus, and through that cranny shall Pyramus and Thisby whisper.

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, sit down, every mother's son, and rehearse your parts. Pyramus, you begin. When you ^[75] have spoken your speech, enter into that brake. And so every one according to his cue.

Enter ROBIN GOODFELLOW [behind].

Robin. What hempen home-spuns have we swaggering here,

So near the cradle of the fairy queen? ^[80]

What, a play toward! I'll be an auditor;

An actor too perhaps, if I see cause.

Quin. Speak, Pyramus. Thisby, stand forth.

Bot. "Thisby, the flowers of odious savours sweet," —

Quin. Odorous, odorous. ^[85]

Bot. — "Odours savours sweet;

So hath thy breath, my dearest Thisby dear.

But hark, a voice! Stay thou but here awhile, And by and by I will to thee appear." [Exit.]

Robin. A stranger Pyramus than e'er play'd here. [Exit.] ^[90]

Flu. Must I speak now?

Quin. Ay, marry, must you; for you must understand he goes but to see a noise that he heard, and is to come again.

Flu. "Most radiant Pyramus, most lily-white of hue, ^[95]

Of colour like the red rose on triumphant brier,

Most briskly juvenal and eke most lovely Jew,

As true as truest horse that yet would never tire,

I'll meet thee, Pyramus, at Ninny's tomb."

Quin. "Ninus' tomb," man. Why, you must not speak that yet; that you answer to ^[101] Pyramus. You speak all your part at once, cues and all. Pyramus enter. Your cue is past; it is, "never tire."

Flu. O, — "As true as truest horse, that yet would never tire." ^[105]

[Re-enter ROBIN GOODFELLOW, and BOTTOM with an ass's head.]

Bot. "If I were, fair Thisby, I were only thine."

Quin. O monstrous! O strange! we are haunted. Pray, masters! fly, masters! Help!

[Exeunt [Quince, Snug, Flute, Snout, and Starveling].]

Robin. I'll follow you, I'll lead you about a round,

Through bog, through bush, through brake, through brier. ^[110]

Sometime a horse I'll be, sometime a hound,

A hog, a headless bear, sometime a fire;

And neigh, and bark, and grunt, and roar, and burn,

Like horse, hound, hog, bear, fire, at every turn. [Exit.]

Bot. Why do they run away? This is a knavery of them to make me afraid. ^[115]

Re-enter SNOOT.

Snout. O Bottom, thou art chang'd! What do I see on thee?

Bot. What do you see? You see an ass-head of your own, do you? [Exit Snout.] ^[120]

Re-enter QUINCE.

Quin. Bless thee, Bottom! bless thee! thou art translated. [Exit.]

Bot. I see their knavery; this is to make an ass of me, to fright me, if they could. But I will not stir from this place, do what they can. I will walk up and down here, and I will ^[127] sing, that they shall hear I am not afraid. [Sings.]

"The ouzel cock so black of hue,

With orange-tawny bill,

The throstle with his note so true, ^[130]

The wren with little quill," —

Tita. [Awaking.] What angel wakes me from my flowery bed?

Bot. [Sings.]

"The finch, the sparrow, and the lark,
The plain-song cuckoo gray,

Whose note full many a man doth mark,
And dares not answer nay;" ¹³⁰ for, indeed, who would set his wit to so foolish a bird? Who would give a bird the lie, though he cry "cuckoo" never so?

Tita. I pray thee, gentle mortal, sing again.
Mine ear is much enamour'd of thy note; ¹⁴¹
So is mine eye enthralled to thy shape;
And thy fair virtues, force perforce, doth move
me

On the first view to say, to swear, I love thee.

Bot. Methinks, mistress, you should have ¹⁴⁵ little reason for that; and yet, to say the truth, reason and love keep little company together now-a-days; the more the pity that some honest neighbours will not make them friends. Nay,
I can glean upon occasion. ¹⁵⁰

Tita. Thou art as wise as thou art beautiful.
Bot. Not so, neither; but if I had wit enough to get out of this wood, I have enough to serve mine own turn.

Tita. Out of this wood do not desire to go; ¹⁵⁵
Thou shalt remain here, whether thou wilt or no.

I am a spirit of no common rate;
The summer still doth tend upon my state;
And I do love thee; therefore, go with me.
I'll give thee fairies to attend on thee, ¹⁶⁰
And they shall fetch thee jewels from the deep,
And sing while thou on pressed flowers dost
sleep.

And I will purge thy mortal grossness so
That thou shalt like an airy spirit go.
Peaseblossom! Cobweb! Moth! and Mustard-seed! ¹⁶⁵

Enter PEASEBLOSSOM, COBWEB, MOTH, and MUSTARDSEED.

Peas. Ready.

Cob. And I.

Moth. And I.

Mus. And I.

All. Where shall we go?

Tita. Be kind and courteous to this gentle-
man.

Hop in his walks and gambol in his eyes;
Feed him with apricocks and dewberries,
With purple grapes, green figs, and mulber-ries; ¹⁷⁰

The honey-bags steal from the humble-bees,
And for night-tapers crop their waxen thighs
And light them at the fiery glow-worm's eyes,
To have my love to bed and to arise;
And pluck the wings from painted butterflies ¹⁷⁵

To fan the moonbeams from his sleeping eyes.
Nod to him, elves, and do him courtesies.

Peas. Hail, mortal!

Cob. Hail!

Moth. Hail! ¹⁸⁰

Mus. Hail!

Bot. I cry your worships mercy, heartily. I beseech your worship's name.

Cob. Cobweb.

Bot. I shall desire you of more acquaintance, good Master Cobweb. If I cut my finger, I ¹⁸⁵ shall make bold with you. Your name, honest gentleman?

Peas. Peaseblossom.

Bot. I pray you commend me to Mistress ¹⁹⁰
Squash, your mother, and to Master Peasecod, your father. Good Master Peaseblossom, I shall desire you of more acquaintance too. Your name, I beseech you, sir?

Mus. Mustardseed. ¹⁹⁵

Bot. Good Master Mustardseed, I know your patience well. That same cowardly, giant-like ox-beef hath devoured many a gentleman of your house. I promise you your kindred hath made my eyes water ere now. I desire you more acquaintance, good Master Mustard- ²⁰⁰ seed.

Tita. Come, wait upon him; lead him to my bower.

The moon methinks looks with a watery eye,
And when she weeps, weeps every little flower,
Lamenting some enforced chastity. ²⁰⁵

Tie up my love's tongue, bring him silently.
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. Another part of the wood.]

Enter OBERON.

Obe. I wonder if Titania be awak'd;
Then, what it was that next came in her eye,
Which she must dote on in extremity.

Enter ROBIN GOODFELLOW.

Here comes my messenger.

How now, mad spirit!
What night-rule now about this haunted grove? ⁵

Robin. My mistress with a monster is in love.

Near to her close and consecrated bower,
While she was in her dull and sleeping hour,
A crew of patches, rude mechanicals, ¹⁰
That work for bread upon Athenian stalls,
Were met together to rehearse a play
Intended for great Theseus' nuptial-day.
The shallowest thickskin of that barren sort,
Who Pyramus presented in their sport,
Forsook his scene and ent'red in a brake. ¹⁵
When I did him at this advantage take,
An ass's nose I fixed on his head.

Anon his Thisby must be answered,
And forth my mimic comes. When they him spy,

As wild geese that the creeping fowler eye, ²⁰
Or russet-pated choughs, many in sort,
Rising and cawing at the gun's report,
Sever themselves and madly sweep the sky,
So, at his sight, away his fellows fly;
And, at our stamp, here o'er and o'er one falls;

He murder cries, and help from Athens calls. ²⁵
Their sense thus weak, lost with their fears thus strong,

Made senseless things begin to do them wrong;
For briers and thorns at their apparel snatch;

Some sleeves, some hats, from yielders all things catch. 30

I led them on in this distracted fear,
And left sweet Pyramus translated there;
When in that moment, so it came to pass,
Titania wak'd and straightway lov'd an ass.

Obe. This falls out better than I could devise. 35

But hast thou yet latch'd the Athenian's eyes
With the love-juice, as I did bid thee do?

Robin. I took him sleeping, — that is finish'd too, —

And the Athenian woman by his side;
That, when he wak'd, of force she must be ey'd. 40

Enter DEMETRIUS and HERMIA.

Obe. Stand close; this is the same Athenian.

Robin. This is the woman, but not this the man.

Dem. O, why rebuke you him that loves you so?

Lay breath so bitter on your bitter foe.

Her. Now I but chide; but I should use thee worse. 45

For thou, I fear, hast given me cause to curse.
If thou hast slain Lysander in his sleep,
Being o'er shoes in blood, plunge in knee-deep,
And kill me too.

The sun was not so true unto the day 50

As he to me: would he have stolen away
From sleeping Hermia? I'll believe as soon
This whole earth may be bor'd and that the moon

May through the centre creep and so displease
Her brother's noontide with the Antipodes. 55
It cannot be but thou hast murd'rd him;
So should a murderer look, so dread, so grim.

Dem. So should the murdered look, and so should I,

Pierc'd through the heart with your stern cruelty;

Yet you, the murderer, look as bright, as clear,
As yonder Venus in her glimmering sphere. 61

Her. What's this to my Lysander? Where is he?

Ah, good Demetrius, wilt thou give him me?

Dem. I had rather give his carcass to my hounds.

Her. Out, dog! out, cur! thou driv'st me past the bounds 65

Of maiden's patience. Hast thou slain him, then?

Henceforth be never numb'rd among men!
O, once tell true, tell true, even for my sake!
Durst thou have look'd upon him being awake,
And hast thou kill'd him sleeping? O brave touch! 70

Could not a worm, an adder, do so much?

An adder did it; for with doubler tongue

Than thine, thou serpent, never adder stung.

Dem. You spend your passion on a mispris'd mood.

I am not guilty of Lysander's blood; 75

Nor is he dead, for aught that I can tell.

Her. I pray thee, tell me then that he is well.

Dem. An if I could, what should I get therefore?

Her. A privilege never to see me more.
And from thy hated presence part I so: 80
See me no more, whether he be dead or no.

[Exit.

Dem. There is no following her in this fierce vein;

Here therefore for a while I will remain.

So sorrow's heaviness doth heavier grow 84

For debt that bankrupt sleep doth sorrow owe;
Which now in some slight measure it will pay,
If for his tender here I make some stay.

[Lies down [and sleeps].

Obe. What hast thou done? Thou hast mistaken quite

And laid the love-juice on some true-love's sight.

Of thy misprision must perforce ensue 90
Some true love turn'd and not a false turn'd true.

Robin. Then fate o'er-rules, that, one man holding troth,

A million fail, confounding oath on oath.

Obe. About the wood go swifter than the wind,

And Helena of Athens look thou find. 95

All fancy-sick she is and pale of cheer
With sighs of love, that costs the fresh blood dear.

By some illusion see thou bring her here.

I'll charm his eyes against she do appear.

Robin. I go, I go; look how I go, 100
Swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow. [Exit.

Obe. Flower of this purple dye,
Hit with Cupid's archery,

Sink in apple of his eye.

When his love he doth espy, 105

Let her shine as gloriously

As the Venus of the sky.

When thou wak'st, if she be by,

Beg of her for remedy.

Re-enter ROBIN GOODFELLOW.

Robin. Captain of our fairy band, 110
Helena is here at hand;

And the youth, mistook by me,

Pleading for a lover's fee,

Shall we their fond pageant see?

Lord, what fools these mortals be! 115

Obe. Stand aside. The noise they make

Will cause Demetrius to awake.

Robin. Then will two at once woo one;

That must needs be sport alone.

And those things do best please me

That befall preposterously. 121

Enter LYSANDER and HELENA.

Lys. Why should you think that I should woo in scorn?

Scorn and derision never come in tears.

Look, when I vow, I weep; and vows so born,
In their nativity all truth appears. 125

How can these things in me seem scorn to you,
Bearing the badge of faith, to prove them true?

Hel. You do advance your cunning more and more.

When truth kills truth, O devilish-holy fray !
These vows are Hermia's ; will you give her o'er ? 130

Weigh oath with oath, and you will nothing weigh.

Your vows to her and me, put in two scales,
Will even weigh, and both as light as tales.

Lys. I had no judgement when to her I swore.

Hel. Nor none, in my mind, now you give her o'er. 135

Lys. Demetrius loves her, and he loves not
you.

Dem. [Awaking.] O Helen, goddess, nymph, perfect, divine !

To what, my love, shall I compare thine eyne ?
Crystal is muddy. O, how ripe in show

Thy lips, those kissing cherries, tempting grow ! 140

That pure congealed white, high Taurus' snow,
Fann'd with the eastern wind, turns to a crow
When thou hold'st up thy hand. O, let me kiss
This princess of pure white, this seal of bliss !

Hel. O spite ! O hell ! I see you all are bent
To set against me for your merriment. 145

If you were civil and knew courtesy,
You would not do me thus much injury.

Can you not hate me, as I know you do,
But you must join in souls to mock me too ? 150

If you were men, as men you are in show,
You would not use a gentle lady so ;

To vow, and swear, and superpraise my parts,
When I am sure you hate me with your hearts.

You both are rivals, and love Hermia ;
And now both rivals, to mock Helena. 155

A trim exploit, a manly enterprise,
To conjure tears up in a poor maid's eyes

With your derision ! None of noble sort
Would so offend a virgin and extort 160

A poor soul's patience, all to make you sport.
Lys. You are unkind, Demetrius ; be not so ;

For you love Hermia ; this you know I know.
And here, with all good will, with all my heart,

In Hermia's love I yield you up my part ; 165
And yours of Helena to me bequeath,

Whom I do love and will do till my death.
Hel. Never did mockers waste more idle

breath.
Dem. Lysander, keep thy Hermia ; I will
none.

If e'er I lov'd her, all that love is gone. 170
My heart to her but as guest-wise sojourn'd,

And now to Helen is it home return'd,
There to remain.

Lys. Helen, it is not so.

Dem. Disparage not the faith thou dost not
know,

Lest, to thy peril, thou aby it dear. 175
Look, where thy love comes ; yonder is thy

dear.

Re-enter HERMIA.

Her. Dark night, that from the eye his function takes,

The ear more quick of apprehension makes ;
Wherein it doth impair the seeing sense,

It pays the hearing double recompense. 180
Thou art not by mine eye, Lysander, found ;

Mine ear, I thank it, brought me to thy sound.
But why unkindly didst thou leave me so ?

Lys. Why should he stay, whom love doth press to go ?

Her. What love could press Lysander from my side ? 185

Lys. Lysander's love, that would not let him
bide,

Fair Helena, who more engilds the night
Than all your fiery oes and eyes of light.

Why seek'st thou me ? Could not this make thee know,

The hate I bare thee made me leave thee so ?
Her. You speak not as you think. It cannot
be. 191

Hel. Lo, she is one of this confederacy !
Now I perceive they have conjoin'd all three

To fashion this false sport, in spite of me,
Injurious Hermia ! most ungrateful maid ! 195

Have you conspir'd, have you with these con-triv'd

To bait me with this foul derision ?
Is all the counsel that we two have shar'd,

The sisters' vows, the hours that we have spent,

When we have chid the hasty-footed time 200
For parting us, — O, is all forgot ?

All school-days' friendship, childhood innocence ?

We, Hermia, like two artificial gods,
Have with our needles created both one flower,

Both on one sampler, sitting on one cushion, 205
Both warbling of one song, both in one key,

As if our hands, our sides, voices and minds,
Had been incorporate. So we grew together,

Like to a double cherry, seeming parted,
But yet an union in partition ; 210

Two lovely berries moulded on one stem ;
So, with two seeming bodies, but one heart ;

Two of the first, like coats in heraldry,
Due but to one and crowned with one crest.

And will you rend our ancient love asunder, 215
To join with men in scorn your poor friend ?

It is not friendly, 't is not maidenly.
Our sex, as well as I, may chide you for it,

Though I alone do feel the injury.
Her. I am amazed at your passionate words.

I scorn you not ; it seems that you scorn me. 221
Hel. Have you not set Lysander, as in scorn,

To follow me and praise my eyes and face ?
And made your other love, Demetrius,

Who even but now did spurn me with his foot,
To call me goddess, nymph, divine and rare, 225

Precious, celestial ? Wherefore speaks he this
To her he hates ? And wherefore doth Lysander

Deny your love, so rich within his soul,
And tender me, forsooth, affection, 230

But by your setting on, by your consent ?
What though I be not so in grace as you,

So hung upon with love, so fortunate,
But miserable most, to love unlov'd ?

This you should pity rather than despise. 235
Her. I understand not what you mean by this.

Hel. Ay, do, persevere, counterfeit sad looks,
Make mouths upon me when I turn my back,

Wink each at other, hold the sweet jest up;
This sport, well carried, shall be chronicled. 240
If you have any pity, grace, or manners,
You would not make me such an argument.
But fare ye well; 't is partly my own fault,
Which death or absence soon shall remedy.

Lys. Stay, gentle Helena; hear my excuse,
My love, my life, my soul, fair Helena! 246

Hel. O excellent!

Her. Sweet, do not scorn her so.

Dem. If she cannot entreat, I can compel.

Lys. Thou canst compel no more than she entreat.

Thy threats have no more strength than her weak prayers. 250

Helen, I love thee; by my life, I do!

I swear by that which I will lose for thee,

To prove him false that says I love thee not.

Dem. I say I love thee more than he can do.

Lys. If thou say so, withdraw, and prove it too. 255

Dem. Quick, come!

Her. Lysander, whereto tends all this?

Lys. Away, you Ethiop!

Dem. No, no; he'll [but]

Seem to break loose. Take on as you would follow,

But yet come not. You are a tame man, go!

Lys. Hang off, thou cat, thou burr! Vile thing, let loose, 260

Or I'll shake thee from me like a serpent!

Her. Why are you grown so rude? What change is this?

Sweet love, —

Lys. Thy love! Out, tawny Tartar, out!
Out, loathed medicine! O hated potion, hence!

Her. Do you not jest?

Hel. Yes, sooth; and so do you. 265

Lys. Demetrius, I will keep my word with thee.

Dem. I would I had your bond, for I perceive
A weak bond holds you. I'll not trust your word.

Lys. What, should I hurt her, strike her, kill her dead?

Although I hate her, I'll not harm her so. 270

Her. What, can you do me greater harm than hate?

Hate me! wherefore? O me! what news, my love!

Am not I Hermia? Are not you Lysander?

I am as fair now as I was erewhile.

Since night you lov'd me; yet since night you left me: 275

Why, then you left me — O, the gods forbid! —
In earnest, shall I say?

Lys. Ay, by my life;

And never did desire to see thee more.

Therefore be out of hope, of question, doubt;
Be certain, nothing truer; 't is no jest 280

That I do hate thee and love Helena.

Her. O me! you juggler! you canker-blossom!

You thief of love! What, have you come by night

And stolen my love's heart from him?

Hel. Fine, if faith!

Have you no modesty, no maiden shame, 285
No touch of bashfulness? What, will you tear Impatient answers from my gentle tongue?
Fie, fie! you counterfeit, you puppet, you!

Her. Puppet? Why so? Ay, that way goes the game.

Now I perceive that she hath made compare 290 Between our statures; she hath urg'd her height;

And with her personage, her tall personage,
Her height, forsooth, she hath prevail'd with him.

And are you grown so high in his esteem,
Because I am so dwarfish and so low? 295

How low am I, thou painted maypole? Speak,
How low am I? I am not yet so low

But that my nails can reach unto thine eyes.

Hel. I pray you, though you mock me, gentlemen,

Let her not hurt me. I was never curst; 300
I have no gift at all in shrewishness;

I am a right maid for my cowardice.

Let her not strike me. You perhaps may think,
Because she is something lower than myself,

That I can match her.

Her. Lower! hark, again.
Hel. Good Hermia, do not be so bitter with me. 306

I evermore did love you, Hermia,

Did ever keep your counsels, never wrong'd you;

Save that, in love unto Demetrius,
I told him of your stealth unto this wood. 310

He followed you; for love I followed him;
But he hath chid me hence and threat'ned me.

To strike me, spurn me, nay, to kill me too.
And now, so you will let me quiet go,

To Athens will I bear my folly back 315
And follow you no further. Let me go.

You see how simple and how fond I am.

Her. Why, get you gone; who is 't that hinders you?

Hel. A foolish heart, that I leave here behind.

Her. What, with Lysander?

Hel. With Demetrius.

Lys. Be not afraid; she shall not harm thee, Helena. 321

Dem. No, sir, she shall not, though you take her part.

Hel. O, when she's angry, she is keen and shrewd!

She was a vixen when she went to school;
And though she be but little, she is fierce. 325

Her. Little again! Nothing but low and little!

Why will you suffer her to flout me thus?

Let me come to her.

Lys. Get you gone, you dwarf,
You minimus, of hindering knot-grass made;

You bead, you acorn.

Dem. You are too officious 330
In her behalf that scorns your services.

Let her alone; speak not of Helena;

Take not her part; for, if thou dost intend

Never so little show of love to her,

Thou shalt aby it.

Lys. Now she holds me not. 336

Now follow, if thou dar'st, to try whose right,
Of thine or mine, is most in Helena.

Dem. Follow! Nay, I'll go with thee, cheek
by jowl.

[Exeunt Lysander and Demetrius.]

Her. You, mistress, all this coil is 'long of you.

Nay, go not back.

Hel. I will not trust you, I, 840
Nor longer stay in your curst company.

Your hands than mine are quicker for a fray,
My legs are longer though, to run away. [Exit.]

Her. I am amaz'd, and know not what to say. [Exit.]

Obe. This is thy negligence. Still thou mis-tak'st, 845

Or else committ'st thy knaveries wilfully.

Robin. Believe me, king of shadows, I mistook.

Did not you tell me I should know the man
By the Athenian garments he had on?

And so far blameless proves my enterprise, 850
That I have 'nointed an Athenian's eyes;

And so far am I glad it so did sort,
As this their jangling I esteem a sport.

Obe. Thou see'st these lovers seek a place to fight;

Hie therefore, Robin, overcast the night. 855
The starry welkin cover thou anon

With drooping fog as black as Acheron,
And lead these testy rivals so astray

As one come not within another's way.
Like to Lysander sometime frame thy tongue,

Then stir Demetrius up with bitter wrong; 861
And sometime rail thou like Demetrius;

And from each other look thou lead them, thus,
Till o'er their brows death-counterfeiting sleep

With leaden legs and batty wings doth creep.
Then crush this herb into Lysander's eye; 866

Whose liquor hath this virtuous property,
To take from thence all error with his might,

And make his eyeballs roll with wonted sight.
When they next wake, all this derision 870

Shall seem a dream and fruitless vision;
And back to Athens shall the lovers wend,

With league whose date till death shall never end.

Whiles I in this affair do thee employ,
I'll to my queen and beg her Indian boy; 875

And then I will her charmed eye release
From monster's view, and all things shall be peace.

Robin. My fairy lord, this must be done with haste,

For night's swift dragons cut the clouds full fast,

And yonder shines Aurora's harbinger, 880
At whose approach, ghosts, wandering here and

there,
Troop home to churchyards. Damned spirits all,

That in crossways and floods have burial,
Already to their wormy beds are gone.

For fear lest day should look their shames upon, 885

They wilfully themselves exile from light
And must for aye consort with black-brow'd

night.

Obe. But we are spirits of another sort.
I with the morning's love have oft made sport,
And, like a forester, the groves may tread, 890
Even till the eastern gate, all fiery-red,
Opening on Neptune with fair blessed beams,
Turns into yellow gold his salt green streams.
But, notwithstanding, haste, make no delay.
We may effect this business yet ere day.

[Exit.] 895

Robin. Up and down, up and down,
I will lead them up and down.

I am fear'd in field and town.

Goblin, lead them up and down.

Here comes one. 900

Re-enter LYSANDER.

Lys. Where art thou, proud Demetrius?
Speak thou now.

Robin. Here, villain; drawn and ready.

Where art thou?

Lys. I will be with thee straight.

Robin. Follow me, then,

To plainer ground.

[Exit Lysander, as following the voice.]

Re-enter DEMETRIUS.

Dem. Lysander, speak again!
Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fled? 905

Speak! In some bush? Where dost thou hide thy head?

Robin. Thou coward, art thou bragging to the stars,

Telling the bushes that thou look'st for wars,
And wilt not come? Come, recreant; come,

thou child,
I'll whip thee with a rod. He is defil'd 910

That draws a sword on thee.

Dem. Yea, art thou there?

Robin. Follow my voice. We'll try no manhood here. [Exeunt.]

[Re-enter LYSANDER.]

Lys. He goes before me and still dares me on.

When I come where he calls, then he is gone.
The villain is much lighter-heel'd than I; 915

I followed fast, but faster he did fly,
That fallen am I in dark uneven way,

And here will rest me. Come, thou gentle day!
[Lies down.]

For if but once thou show me thy grey light,
I'll find Demetrius and revenge this spite. 920

[Sleeps.]

Re-enter ROBIN GOODFELLOW and DEMETRIUS.

Robin. Ho, ho, ho! Coward, why com'st thou not?

Dem. Abide me, if thou dar'st; for well I wot

Thou runn'st before me, shifting every place,
And dar'st not stand, nor look me in the face.

Where art thou now?

Robin. Come hither; I am here.

Dem. Nay, then, thou mock'st me. Thou shalt buy this dear, 925

If ever I thy face by daylight see.
Now, go thy way. Faintness constraineth me

To measure out my length on this cold bed.
By day's approach look to be visited. 480
[Lies down and sleeps.]

Re-enter HELENA.

Hel. O weary night, O long and tedious
night,
Abate thy hours! Shine, comforts, from the east,
That I may back to Athens by daylight,
From these that my poor company detest.
And sleep, that sometimes shuts up sorrow's
eye, 485
Steal me awhile from mine own company.
[Lies down and] sleeps.

Robin. Yet but three? Come one more;
Two of both kinds makes up four.
Here she comes, curst and sad.
Cupid is a knavish lad, 440

Re-enter HERMIA.

Thus to make poor females mad.
Her. Never so weary, never so in woe,
Bedabbled with the dew and torn with briers,
I can no further crawl, no further go;
My legs can keep no pace with my desires.
Here will I rest me till the break of day. 446
Heavens shield Lysander, if they mean a fray! [Lies down and sleeps.]

Robin. On the ground
Sleep sound.
I'll apply 450
To your eye,
Gentle lover, remedy.
[Squeezing the juice on Lysander's eyes.]
When thou wak'st,
Thou tak'st
True delight 455
In the sight
Of thy former lady's eye;
And the country proverb known,
That every man should take his own,
In your waking shall be shown. 460
Jack shall have Jill;
Nought shall go ill;
The man shall have his mare again, and all shall be well. [Exit.]

ACT IV

[SCENE I. The same.]

[LYSANDER, DEMETRIUS, HELENA, and HER-
MIA, lying asleep.]

Enter TITANIA and Clown [BOTTOM; PEASE-BLOSSOM, COBWEB, MOTH, MUSTARDSEED,] and [other] Fairies [attending]; OBERON behind [unseen].

Tita. Come, sit thee down upon this flowery bed,
While I thy amiable cheeks do coy,
And stick musk-roses in thy sleek smooth head,
And kiss thy fair large ears, my gentle joy.
Bot. Where's Peaseblossom? 5
Peas. Ready.
Bot. Scratch my head, Peaseblossom.
Where's Mounsiur Cobweb?

Cob. Ready. —

Bot. Mounsiur Cobweb, good mounsiur, get you your weapons in your hand, and kill me a [1]
red-hipp'd humble-bee on the top of a thistle;
and, good mounsiur, bring me the honey-bag.
Do not fret yourself too much in the action, mounsiur; and, good mounsiur, have a care
the honey-bag break not; I would be loath to [18] have you overflown with a honey-bag, signior.
Where's Mounsiur Mustardseed?

Mus. Ready.

Bot. Give me your neaf, Mounsiur Mus- [20] tardseed. Pray you, leave your courtesy, good mounsiur.

Mus. What's your will?

Bot. Nothing, good mounsiur, but to help Cavalery Cobweb to scratch. I must to the barber's, mounsiur; for methinks I am [25] marvellous hairy about the face; and I am such a tender ass, if my hair do but tickle me, I must scratch.

Tita. What, wilt thou hear some music, my sweet love?

Bot. I have a reasonable good ear in music.
Let's have the tongs and the bones. 31

[Music. Tongs. Rural music.]

Tita. Or say, sweet love, what thou desir'st to eat.

Bot. Truly, a peck of provender; I could munch your good dry oats. Methinks I have a great desire to a bottle of hay. Good hay, sweet hay, hath no fellow. 38

Tita. I have a venturous fairy that shall seek
The squirrel's hoard, and fetch thee new nuts.

Bot. I had rather have a handful or two of dried peas. But, I pray you, let none of your [40] people stir me; I have an exposition of sleep come upon me.

Tita. Sleep thou, and I will wind thee in my arms.

Fairies, be gone, and be always away.

[Exeunt fairies.]

So doth the woodbine the sweet honeysuckle 45
Gently entwine; the female ivy so
Enrings the barks fingers of the elm.
O, how I love thee! how I dote on thee!

[They sleep.]

Enter ROBIN GOODFELLOW.

Obe. [Advancing.] Welcome, good Robin.
See'st thou this sweet sight?

Her dotage now I do begin to pity; 50
For, meeting her of late behind the wood,
Seeking sweet favours for this hateful fool,
I did upbraid her and fall out with her.
For she his hairy temples then had rounded
With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers; 55
And that same dew, which sometime on the buds

Was wont to swell like round and orient pearls,
Stood now within the pretty flowerets' eyes
Like tears that did their own disgrace bewail.

When I had at my pleasure taunted her 60
And she in mild terms begg'd my patience,
I then did ask of her her changeling child;

Which straight she gave me, and her fairy sent
To bear him to my bower in fairy land.
And, now I have the boy, I will undo
This hateful imperfection of her eyes;
And, gentle Puck, take this transformed scalp
From off the head of this Athenian swain,
That, he awaking when the other do,
May all to Athens back again repair,
And think no more of this night's accidents
But as the fierce vexation of a dream.
But first I will release the fairy queen.

[Touching her eyes.]

Be as thou wast wont to be;
See as thou wast wont to see;
Dian's bud o'er Cupid's flower
Hath such force and blessed power.

Now, my Titania; wake you, my sweet queen.

Tita. My Oberon! what visions have I seen!
Methought I was enamour'd of an ass.

Obe. There lies your love.

Tita. How came these things to pass?
O, how mine eyes do loathe his visage now!

Obe. Silence awhile. Robin, take off this head.

Titania, music call; and strike more dead
Than common sleep of all these five the sense.

Tita. Music, ho! music, such as charmeth sleep!
[Music, still.]

Robin. Now, when thou wak'st, with thine own fool's eyes peep.

Obe. Sound, music! Come, my queen, take hands with me,

And rock the ground whereon these sleepers be.
Now thou and I are new in amity

And will to-morrow midnight solemnly
Dance in Duke Theseus' house triumphantly
And bless it to all fair prosperity.

There shall the pairs of faithful lovers be Wedded, with Theseus, all in jollity.

Robin. Fairy king, attend, and mark;
I do hear the morning lark.

Obe. Then, my queen, in silence sad
Trip we after the night's shade.

We the globe can compass soon,
Swifter than the wandering moon.

Tita. Come, my lord, and in our flight
Tell me how it came this night

That I sleeping here was found
With these mortals on the ground.

[Exeunt. Horns winded [within].]

Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, EGEUS, and all his train.

The. Go, one of you, find out the forester,
For now our observation is perform'd,
And since we have the vaward of the day,
My love shall hear the music of my hounds.
Uncouple in the western valley, let them go.
Despatch, I say, and find the forester.

[Exit an attendant.]

We will, fair queen, up to the mountain's top
And mark the musical confusion
Of hounds and echo in conjunction.

Hip. I was with Hercules and Cadmus once,
When in a wood of Crete they bay'd the bear
With hounds of Sparta. Never did I hear
Such gallant chiding; for, besides the groves,

The skies, the fountains, every region near Seem'd all one mutual cry. I never heard
So musical a discord, such sweet thunder.

The. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind,

So flew'd, so sanded, and their heads are hung
With ears that sweep away the morning dew;
Crook-knee'd, and dew-lapp'd like Thessalian
bulls;

Slow in pursuit, but match'd in mouth like bells,
Each under each. A cry more tuneable
Was never holla'd to, nor cheer'd with horn,
In Crete, in Sparta, nor in Thessaly.
Judge when you hear. But, soft! what nymphs are these?

Ege. My lord, this is my daughter here asleep,

And this, Lysander; this Demetrius is;
This Helena, old Nedar's Helena.

I wonder of their being here together.

The. No doubt they rose up early to observe
The rite of May, and, hearing our intent,
Came here in grace of our solemnity.
But speak, Egeus; is not this the day

That Hermia should give answer of her choice?
Ege. It is, my lord.

The. Go, bid the huntsmen wake them with their horns.

[Horns and shout within. Lys., Dem., Hel., and Her. wake and start up.]

Good morrow, friends. Saint Valentine is past;
Begin these wood-birds but to couple now?

Lys. Pardon, my lord.

The. I pray you all, stand up.
I know you two are rival enemies;
How comes this gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is so far from jealousy,
To sleep by hate, and fear no enmity?

Lys. My lord, I shall reply amazedly,
Half sleep, half waking; but as yet, I swear,
I cannot truly say how I came here.

But, as I think, — for truly would I speak,
And now I do bethink me, so it is, —

I came with Hermia hither. Our intent
Was to be gone from Athens, where we might,
Without the peril of the Athenian law —

Ege. Enough, enough, my lord; you have enough.

I beg the law, the law, upon his head.
They would have stolen away; they would,

Demetrius,

Thereby to have defeated you and me,
You of your wife, and me of my consent,
Of my consent that she should be your wife.

Dem. My lord, fair Helen told me of their stealth,

Of this their purpose hither to this wood;
And I in fury hither followed them,
Fair Helena in fancy following me.

But, my good lord, I wot not by what power, —
But by some power it is, — my love to Hermia,
Melted as [is] the snow, seems to me now

As the remembrance of an idle gaud
Which in my childhood I did dote upon;
And all the faith, the virtue of my heart,
The object and the pleasure of mine eye,

Is only Helena. To her, my lord,

Was I betroth'd ere I saw Hermia;
But like a sickness did I loathe this food;
But, as in health, come to my natural taste,
Now I do wish it, love it, long for it,
And will for evermore be true to it. 180

The. Fair lovers, you are fortunately met;
Of this discourse we more will hear anon.
Egeus. I will overbear your will;
For in the temple, by and by, with us
These couples shall eternally be knit. 185
And, for the morning now is something worn,
Our purpos'd hunting shall be set aside.
Away with us to Athens; three and three,
We'll hold a feast in great solemnity.
Come, Hippolyta. 190

[Exeunt The., Hip., Ege., and train.]

Dem. These things seem small and undistinguishable,

Like far-off mountains turned into clouds.

Her. Methinks I see these things with parted eye,

When every thing seems double.

Hel. So methinks;
And I have found Demetrius like a jewel, 195
Mine own, and not mine own.

Dem. Are you sure that we're awake? It seems to me

That yet we sleep, we dream. Do not you think
The Duke was here, and bid us follow him?

Her. Yea; and my father.

Hel. And Hippolyta. 200

Lys. And he did bid us follow to the temple.

Dem. Why, then, we are awake. Let's follow him;

And by the way let us recount our dreams.

[Exeunt lovers.]

Bot. (Awaking.) When my cue comes, call me, and I will answer. My next is, "Most fair Pyramus." Heigh-ho! Peter Quince! 205
Flute, the bellows-mender! Snout, the tinker! Starveling! God's my life, stolen hence, and left me asleep! I have had a most rare vision. I have had a dream, past the wit of man to say what dream it was. Man is but an ass, if he 210 go about to expound this dream. Methought I was — there is no man can tell what. Methought I was, — and methought I had, — but man is but a patch'd fool, if he will offer to say what methought I had. The eye of man hath not 215 heard, the ear of man hath not seen, man's hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceive, nor his heart to report, what my dream was. I will get Peter Quince to write a ballad of this dream. It shall be called Bottom's 220 Dream, because it hath no bottom; and I will sing it in the latter end of a play, before the Duke; peradventure, to make it the more gracious, I shall sing it at her death. [Exit.]

[SCENE II. Athens. Quince's house.]

Enter QUINCE, FLUTE, SNAOUT, and STARVELING.

Quin. Have you sent to Bottom's house? Is he come home yet?

Star. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt he is transported.

Flu. If he come not, then the play is marr'd. It goes not forward, doth it?

Quin. It is not possible. You have not a man in all Athens able to discharge Pyramus but he.

Flu. No, he hath simply the best wit of any handicraft man in Athens. 10

Snout. Yea, and the best person too; and he is a very paramour for a sweet voice.

Flu. You must say "paragon"; a paramour is, God bless us, a thing of naught.

Enter SNUG.

Snug. Masters, the Duke is coming from 15 the temple, and there is two or three lords and ladies more married. If our sport had gone forward, we had all been made men.

Flu. O sweet bully Bottom! Thus hath he lost sixpence a day during his life; he could not have 'scaped sixpence a day. An the 20 Duke had not given him sixpence a day for playing Pyramus, I'll be hang'd. He would have deserved it. Sixpence a day in Pyramus, or nothing.

Enter BOTTOM.

Bot. Where are these lads? Where are these hearts? 25

Quin. Bottom! O most courageous day! O most happy hour!

Bot. Masters, I am to discourse wonders, but ask me not what; for if I tell you, I am no 30 true Athenian. I will tell you everything, right as it fell out.

Quin. Let us hear, sweet Bottom.

Bot. Not a word of me. All that I will tell you is, that the Duke hath dined. Get your 35 apparel together, good strings to your beards, new ribbons to your pumps; meet presently at the palace; every man look o'er his part; for the short and the long is, our play is preferr'd. In any case, let Thisby have clean linen; and let not him that plays the lion pare his nails, 40 for they shall hang out for the lion's claws. And, most dear actors, eat no onions nor garlic, for we are to utter sweet breath; and I do not doubt but to hear them say, it is a sweet comedy. No more words; away! go, away! 45

[Exeunt.]

ACT V

[SCENE I. Athens. The palace of Theseus.]

Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, PHILOSTRATE, Lords [and Attendants].

Hip. 'T is strange, my Theseus, that these lovers speak of.

The. More strange than true; I never may believe

These antique fables, nor these fairy toys. Lovers and madmen have such seething brains, Such shaping fantasies, that apprehend 5 More than cool reason ever comprehends.

The lunatic, the lover, and the poet Are of imagination all compact. One sees more devils than vast hell can hold;

That is, the madman. The lover, all as frantic,
Sees Helen's beauty in a brow of Egypt. 11

The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,
Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth
to heaven;

And as imagination bodies forth
The forms of things unknown, the poet's pen 15
Turns them to shapes and gives to airy nothing

A local habitation and a name.
Such tricks hath strong imagination,
That, if it would but apprehend some joy,
It comprehends some bringer of that joy; 20
Or in the night, imagining some fear,
How easy is a bush suppos'd a bear!

Hip. But all the story of the night told over,
And all their minds transfigur'd so together,
More witnesseth than fancy's images, 25
And grows to something of great constancy;
But, howsoever, strange and admirable.

Enter lovers, LYSANDER, DEMETRIUS, HERMIA, and HELENA.

The. Here come the lovers, full of joy and mirth.

Joy, gentle friends! joy and fresh days of love
Accompany your hearts!

Lys. More than to us 30
Wait in your royal walks, your board, your bed!

The. Come now; what masques, what dances shall we have,

To wear away this long age of three hours
Between our after-supper and bed-time?

Where is our usual manager of mirth? 35
What revels are in hand? Is there no play
To ease the anguish of a torturing hour?

Call Philostrate.

Phil. Here, mighty Theseus.

The. Say, what abridgement have you for this evening?

What masque? what music? How shall we beguile 40

The lazy time, if not with some delight?

Phil. There is a brief how many sports are ripe.

Make choice of which your Highness will see first. [Giving a paper.]

The. [Reads.] "The battle with the Centaurs, to be sung

By an Athenian eunuch to the harp." 45
We'll none of that: that have I told my love,
In glory of my kinsman Hercules.

"The riot of the tipsy Bacchanals, Tearing the Thracian singer in their rage."

That is an old device; and it was play'd 50
When I from Thebes came last a conqueror.

"The thrice three Muses mourning for the
death

Of Learning, late deceas'd in beggary."

That is some satire, keen and critical,
Not sorting with a nuptial ceremony. 55

"A tedious brief scene of young Pyramus
And his love Thisbe; very tragical mirth."

Merry and tragical! Tedious and brief!
That is, hot ice and wondrous strange snow.

How shall we find the concord of this discord? 60

Phil. A play there is, my lord, some ten words long,

Which is as brief as I have known a play;
But by ten words, my lord, it is too long;

Which makes it tedious; for in all the play
There is not one word apt, one player fitted. 65

And tragical, my noble lord, it is;
For Pyramus therein doth kill himself.

Which, when I saw rehears'd, I must confess,
Made mine eyes water; but more merry tears

The passion of loud laughter never shed. 70

The. What are they that do play it?

Phil. Hard-handed men that work in Athens
here,

Which never labour'd in their minds till now,
And now have toil'd their unbreath'd memories

With this same play, against your nuptial. 75

The. And we will hear it.

Phil. No, my noble lord;
It is not for you. I have heard it over,

And it is nothing, nothing in the world;
Unless you can find sport in their intents, 79

Extremely stretch'd and conn'd with cruel pain,
To do you service.

The. I will hear that play;
For never anything can be amiss,

When simpleness and duty tender it.
Go, bring them in; and take your places, ladies. [Exit Philostrate.]

Hip. I love not to see wretchedness o'er-charged, 85

And duty in his service perishing.

The. Why, gentle sweet, you shall see no such thing.

Hip. He says they can do nothing in this kind.

The. The kinder we, to give them thanks for nothing.

Our sport shall be to take what they mistake; 90
And what poor duty cannot do, noble respect
Takes it in might, not merit.

Where I have come, great clerks have purposed
To greet me with premeditated welcomes;

Where I have seen them shiver and look pale,
Make periods in the midst of sentences, 95

Throttle their practis'd accent in their fears,
And in conclusion dumbly have broke off,

Not paying me a welcome. Trust me, sweet,
Out of this silence yet I pick'd a welcome; 100

And in the modesty of fearful duty
I read as much as from the rattling tongue
Of saucy and audacious eloquence.

Love, therefore, and tongue-ti'd simplicity
In least speak most, to my capacity. 105

[Re-enter PHILOSTRATE.]

Phil. So please your Grace, the Prologue is address'd.

The. Let him approach. [Flourish of trumpets.]

Enter [QUINCE for] the Prologue.

Pro. If we offend, it is with our good will.
That you should think, we come not to offend,

But with good will. To show our simple skill,

That is the true beginning of our end. 111

Consider then we come but in despite.

We do not come as minding to content you,
Our true intent is. All for your delight

We are not here. That you should here repent you, 115

The actors are at hand, and by their show
You shall know all that you are like to know.

The. This fellow doth not stand upon points.

Lys. He hath rid his prologue like a rough colt; he knows not the stop. A good moral, my lord: it is not enough to speak, but to speak true. 121

Hip. Indeed he hath play'd on this prologue like a child on a recorder; a sound, but not in government.

The. His speech was like a tangled chain; 125 nothing impaired, but all disordered. Who is next?

Enter with a trumpet before them, PYRAMUS and THISBE, WALL, MOONSHINE, and LION.

Pro. Gentles, perchance you wonder at this show;

But wonder on, till truth make all things
plain.

This man is Pyramus, if you would know; 130

This beauteous lady Thisby is certain.

This man, with lime and rough-cast, doth present

Wall, that vile Wall which did these lovers
sunder;

And through Wall's chink, poor souls, they are content

To whisper. At the which let no man wonder. 135

This man, with lantern, dog, and bush of thorn,
Presenteth Moonshine; for, if you will know,
By moonshine did these lovers think no scorn

To meet at Ninus' tomb, there, there to woo.

This grisly beast, which Lion hight by name,

The trusty Thisby, coming first by night, 141

Did scare away, or rather did affright;

And, as she fled, her mantle she did fall,

Which Lion vile with bloody mouth did stain.

Anon comes Pyramus, sweet youth and tall, 145

And finds his trusty Thisby's mantle slain;

Whereat, with blade, with bloody blameful blade,

He bravely broach'd his boiling bloody breast;

And Thisby, tarrying in mulberry shade, 149

His dagger drew, and died. For all the rest,

Let Lion, Moonshine, Wall, and lovers twain

At large discourse, while here they do remain.

[Exeunt Prologue, Thisbe, Lion, and Moonshine.

The. I wonder if the lion be to speak.

Dem. No wonder, my lord; one lion may, 155

when many asses do.

Wall. In this same interlude it doth befall

That I, one Snout by name, present a wall;

And such a wall, as I would have you think,

That had in it a crannied hole or chink, 160

Through which the lovers, Pyramus and Thisby,

Did whisper often very secretly.

This loam, this rough-cast, and this stone doth

show

That I am that same wall; the truth is so;

And this the cranny is, right and sinister,
Through which the fearful lovers are to whisper. 165

The. Would you desire lime and hair to speak better?

Dem. It is the wittiest partition that ever I heard discourse, my lord. 169

Enter PYRAMUS.

The. Pyramus draws near the wall. Silence!
Pyr. O grim-look'd night! O night with hue so black!

O night, which ever art when day is not!
O night, O night! alack, alack, alack,

I fear my Thisby's promise is forgot!

And thou, O wall, O sweet, O lovely wall, 175

That stand'st between her father's ground and mine!

Thou wall, O wall, O sweet and lovely wall,

Show me thy chink, to blink through with mine eye!

[Wall holds up his fingers.]

Thanks, courteous wall; Jove shield thee well for this!

But what see I? No Thisby do I see. 180

O wicked wall, through whom I see no bliss!

Curs'd be thy stones for thus deceiving me!

The. The wall, methinks, being sensible, should curse again.

Pyr. No, in truth, sir, he should not. 185

"Deceiving me" is Thisby's cue. She is to enter now, and I am to spy her through the wall.

You shall see it will fall pat as I told you. Yonder she comes.

Enter THISBE.

This. O wall, full often hast thou heard my moans, 190

For parting my fair Pyramus and me!

My cherry lips have often kiss'd thy stones,

Thy stones with lime and hair knit up in thee.

Pyr. I see a voice! Now will I to the chink,

To spy an I can hear my Thisby's face. 195

Thisby!

This. My love thou art, my love I think.

Pyr. Think what thou wilt, I am thy lover's
grace;

And, like Limander, am I trusty still.

This. And I like Helen, till the Fates me
kill. 200

Pyr. Not Shafalus to Procrus was so true.

This. As Shafalus to Procrus, I to you.

Pyr. O, kiss me through the hole of this vile wall!

This. I kiss the wall's hole, not your lips at all.

Pyr. Wilt thou at Ninny's tomb meet me straightway? 205

This. 'Tide life, 'tide death, I come without delay. [Exeunt Pyramus and Thisbe.]

Wall. Thus have I, Wall, my part discharged
so;

And, being done, thus Wall away doth go. [Exit.
The. Now is the moon used between the two neighbours.

Dem. No remedy, my lord, when walls are so wilful to hear without warning. 211

Hip. This is the silliest stuff that ever I heard.

The. The best in this kind are but shadows; and the worst are no worse, if imagination amend them. 215

Hip. It must be your imagination then, and not theirs.

The. If we imagine no worse of them than they of themselves, they may pass for excellent men. Here come two noble beasts in, a man and a lion. 221

Enter LION and MOONSHINE.

Lion. You, ladies, you, whose gentle hearts do fear

The smallest monstrous mouse that creeps on floor,

May now perchance both quake and tremble here, When lion rough in wildest rage doth roar.

Then know that I, one Snug the joiner, am 226

A lion fell, nor else no lion's dam;

For, if I should as lion come in strife

Into this place, 't were pity on my life.

The. A very gentle beast, and of a good [230 conscience.

Dem. The very best at a beast, my lord, that e'er I saw.

Lys. This lion is a very fox for his valour.

The. True; and a goose for his discretion. [235

Dem. Not so, my lord; for his valour cannot carry his discretion, and the fox carries the goose.

The. His discretion, I am sure, cannot carry his valour; for the goose carries not the fox. It is well; leave it to his discretion, and let us [240

hearken to the moon.

Moon. This lantern doth the horned moon present; —

Dem. He should have worn the horns on his

head. 245

The. He is no crescent, and his horns are invisible within the circumference.

Moon. This lantern doth the horned moon

present;

Myself the man i' the moon do seem to be.

The. This is the greatest error of all the rest.

The man should be put into the lantern. [251

How is it else the man i' the moon?

Dem. He dares not come there for the candle; for, you see, it is already in snuff.

Hip. I am awear of this moon. Would he would change! 256

The. It appears, by his small light of discretion, that he is in the wane; but yet, in courtesy, in all reason, we must stay the time.

Lys. Proceed, Moon. 260

Moon. All that I have to say, is, to tell you that the lantern is the moon; I, the man i' the moon; this thorn-bush, my thorn-bush; and this dog, my dog.

Dem. Why, all these should be in the lantern; for all these are in the moon. But, [265 silence! here comes Thisbe.

Enter THISBE.

This. This is old Ninny's tomb. Where is my love?

Lion. (Roaring.) Oh — [Thisbe runs off. 270

Dem. Well roar'd, Lion.

The. Well run, Thisbe.

Hip. Well shone, Moon. Truly, the moon shines with a good grace.

[The Lion shakes Thisbe's mantle, and exit.]

The. Well mous'd, Lion.

Dem. And then came Pyramus.

Lys. And so the lion vanish'd. 275

Enter PYRAMUS.

Pyr. Sweet Moon, I thank thee for thy sunny beams;

I thank thee, Moon, for shining now so bright;

For, by thy gracious, golden, glittering gleams,

I trust to take of truest Thisby sight. 280

But stay, O spite!

But mark, poor knight,

What dreadful dole is here!

Eyes, do you see?

How can it be? 285

O dainty duck! O dear!

Thy mantle good,

What, stain'd with blood!

Approach, ye Furies fell!

O Fates, come, come,

Out thread and thrum;

Quail, crush, conclude, and quell!

The. This passion, and the death of a dear friend, would go near to make a man look sad.

Hip. Beshrew my heart, but I pity the man.

Pyr. O wherefore, Nature, didst thou lions

frame? 290

Since lion vile hath here deflower'd my dear;

Which is — no, no — which was the fairest dame

That liv'd, that lov'd, that lik'd, that look'd with cheer.

Come, tears, confound;

Out, sword, and wound

The pap of Pyramus;

Ay, that left pap,

Where heart doth hop. [Stabs himself.] 300

Thus die I, thus, thus, thus.

Now am I dead,

Now am I fled;

My soul is in the sky.

Tongue, lose thy light;

Moon, take thy flight. [Exit Moonshine.] 305

Now die, die, die, die, die. [Dies.]

Dem. No die, but an ace, for him; for he is but one.

Lys. Less than an ace, man, for he is dead;

he is nothing. 315

The. With the help of a surgeon he might yet recover, and yet prove an ass.

Hip. How chance Moonshine is gone before

Thisbe comes back and finds her lover?

Re-enter THISBE.

The. She will find him by starlight. Here [320

she comes; and her passion ends the play.

Hip. Methinks she should not use a long one for such a Pyramus. I hope she will be brief.

Dem. A mote will turn the balance, which Pyramus, which Thisbe, is the better; he for a man, God warrant us; she for a woman, [328]

God bless us.

Lys. She hath spied him already with those sweet eyes.

Dem. And thus she moans, videlicet :— 330

This. Asleep, my love?

What, dead, my dove?

O Pyramus, arise!

Speak, speak! Quite dumb?

Dead, dead? A tomb 335

Must cover thy sweet eyes.

These lily lips,

This cherry nose,

These yellow cowslip cheeks,

Are gone, are gone! 340

Lovers, make moan.

His eyes were green as leeks.

O Sisters Three,

Come, come to me,

With hands as pale as milk; 345

Lay them in gore,

Since you have shore

With shears his thread of silk.

Tongue, not a word!

Come, trusty sword; 350

Come, blade, my breast imbrue;

[Stabs herself.]

And, farewell, friends;

Thus, Thisby ends.

Adieu, adieu, adieu. [Dies.]

The. Moonshine and Lion are left to bury [355]
the dead.

Dem. Ay, and Wall too.

[Bot. Starting up.] No, I assure you; the wall is down that parted their fathers. Will it please you to see the epilogue, or to hear a Ber-gomask dance between two of our company? [361]

The. No epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuse. Never excuse; for when the players are all dead, there need none to be blamed. Marry, if he that writ it had played Pyramus and hang'd himself in Thisbe's gar- [365] ter, it would have been a fine tragedy; and so it is, truly; and very notably discharg'd. But, come, your Bergomask; let your epilogue alone.

[A dance.]

The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve.
Lovers, to bed; 't is almost fairy time. --- 371

I fear we shall out-sleep the coming morn
As much as we this night have overwatch'd.

This palpable-gross play hath well beguild
The heavy gait of night. Sweet friends, to bed.

A fortnight hold we this solemnity 376

In nightly revels and new jollity. [Exeunt.]

Enter ROBIN GOODFELLOW.

Robin. Now the hungry lion roars,
And the wolf behowls the moon;

Whilst the heavy ploughman snores, 380

All with weary task fordone.

Now the wasted brands do glow,

Whilst the screech-owl, screeching
loud,

Puts the wretch that lies in woe

In remembrance of a shroud. 385

Now it is the time of night

That the graves, all gaping wide,

Every one lets forth his sprite,

In the church-way paths to glide.

And we fairies, that do run 390

By the triple Hecate's team

From the presence of the sun,

Following darkness like a dream,

Now are frolic. Not a mouse

Shall disturb this hallowed house. 395

I am sent with broom before,

To sweep the dust behind the door.

Enter OBERON and TITANIA with their train.

Obe. Through the house give glimmering light

By the dead and drowsy fire,

Every elf and fairy sprite 400

Hop as light as bird from brier;

And this ditty, after me,

Sing, and dance it trippingly.

Tita. First, rehearse your song by rote,

To each word a warbling note. 405

Hand in hand, with fairy grace,

Will we sing, and bless this place.

[Song [and dance].]

Obe. Now, until the break of day,

Through this house each fairy stray.

To the best bride-bed will we, 410

Which by us shall blessed be;

And the issue there create

Ever shall be fortunate.

So shall all the couples three

Ever true in loving be; 415

And the blots of Nature's hand

Shall not in their issue stand;

Never mole, hare-lip, nor scar,

Nor mark prodigious, such as are

Despised in nativity, 420

Shall upon their children be.

With this field-dew consecrate,

Every fairy take his gait,

And each several chamber bless,

Through this palace, with sweet peace;

And the owner of it blest 425

Ever shall in safety rest.

Trip away; make no stay;

Meet me all by break of day.

[Exeunt [Oberon, Titania, and train].]

Robin. If we shadows have offended, 430

Think but this, and all is mended,

That you have but slumb'ring here

While these visions did appear.

And this weak and idle theme,

No more yielding but a dream, 435

Gentles, do not reprehend.

If you pardon, we will mend.

And, as I am an honest Puck,

If we have unearned luck

Now to 'scape the serpent's tongue, 440

We will make amends ere long;

Else the Puck a liar call.

So, good night unto you all.

Give me your hands, if we be friends,

And Robin shall restore amends. 445

[Exit.]

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE

ON July 22, 1598, James Roberts entered The Marchaunt of Venyce or otherwise called the Jewe of Venyce in the Stationers' Register, and in the same year the play was named in Meres's list. These two references fix a later limit for the date of the play; but no evidence equally strong has been found for an earlier. An entry in Henslowe's Diary notes the first production of "the Venesyon comodey" on August 25, 1594, in the theatre in which Shakespeare's company was then acting; and this has been interpreted as referring to The Merchant of Venice. But the frequency of plots from Italian sources makes the identification precarious. In 1594 Dr. Roderigo Lopez, a prominent Jewish physician, was hanged in London on a charge of treason and conspiracy to murder Queen Elizabeth and the Portuguese pretender, Antonio Perez. It has been supposed that the present play was produced about this time in order to take advantage of the popular excitement stirred up by the enemies of Lopez against Jews; and a slight corroboration of this theory has been found in the occurrence of the name Antonio as that of the intended victim in both the history and the drama. But the maturity exhibited in the workmanship of the play has made scholars reluctant to accept so early a date, and it is probably not earlier than 1596.

Though registered in 1598, the comedy did not appear till 1600, when two quartos were published, one by James Roberts, the other by Thomas Heyes, both, apparently, printed by Roberts. The text of the First Folio is taken from Heyes's edition. Opinion is divided as to the comparative merits of Roberts's and Heyes's quartos. Though differing but slightly, they seem to be printed from independent transcripts of the same copy of the original manuscript, so that neither can claim a superior authority throughout. The present text is the result of an attempt to reach as nearly as possible their original from a comparison of the readings in each case of variation.

It seems likely that Shakespeare's immediate source was a lost play of whose existence we are aware from a passage in Gosson's School of Abuse (1579), in which he speaks of the prose play of the Jew shown at the Bull, "representing the greediness of worldly chusers, and bloody mindes of Usurers." This is plausibly interpreted as indicating a play combining the story of the caskets with that of the pound of flesh. The connection of a ballad of uncertain date on the cruelty of "Gernutus the Jew" with Shakespeare's play is slight and doubtful in the extreme. Our author or his immediate predecessor, however, in all probability did have access to the first novel of the fourth day in Ser Giovanni Fiorentino's Il Pecorone (1378), which combines the stories of the bond and the rings, and names Belmont as the lady's residence. In the fourteenth tale of Masuccio di Salerno (fl. ca. 1470) a young man elopes with a miser's daughter who carries off her father's jewels; but the resemblance to the story of Jessica and Lorenzo is not strong enough to prove a connection. The only other document of importance as a possible immediate source is a declamation in The Orator by Alexander Silvayn, translated into English, and printed in 1596. After a summary of the story of the bond, Silvayn gives speeches by the Jew and the merchant, and the former of these may well have supplied hints for some of Shylock's lines. Besides the story of the caskets, however, both the underplots of Jessica and of Nerissa are absent from all of these extant versions of the story of the bond. Yet, so long as the play mentioned by Gosson remains undiscovered, it is impossible to say how much of the elaborate construction of The Merchant of Venice is due to Shakespeare, and how much to his unknown predecessor.

The constituent elements of the plot, when taken apart, are found to belong to several very old and widespread traditions. The story of the pound of flesh occurs in Oriental legend, in the Dolopathos, the Gesta Romanorum, the Cursor Mundi, and elsewhere. The story of the caskets appears in the romance of Barlaam and Josaphat, in the Speculum Historiale of Vincent of Beauvais, and in the Golden Legend of Jacobus de Voragine; while somewhat similar tales on the deceptiveness of appearances are still more widespread.

ACT I

[SCENE I. Venice. A street.]

Enter ANTONIO, SALARINO, and SALANIO.

Ant. In sooth, I know not why I am so sad.
 It wearies me; you say it wearies you;
 But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,
 What stuff 't is made of, whereof it is born,
 I am to learn;

And such a want-wit sadness makes of me,
 That I have much ado to know myself.

Salar. Your mind is tossing on the ocean,
 There, where your argosies with portly sail,
 Like signiors and rich burghers on the flood, 10
 Or, as it were, the pageants of the sea,
 Do overpeer the petty traffickers,
 That curtsy to them, do them reverence,
 As they fly by them with their woven wings.

Salan. Believe me, sir, had I such venture forth, 15

The better part of my affections would
 Be with my hopes abroad. I should be still Plucking the grass to know where sits the wind,

Peering in maps for ports and piers and roads;
 And every object that might make me fear 20
 Misfortune to my ventures, out of doubt
 Would make me sad.

Salar. My wind cooling my broth
 Would blow me to an ague when I thought
 What harm a wind too great at sea might do.
 I should not see the sandy hour-glass run 25
 But I should think of shallows and of flats,
 And see my wealthy Andrew dock'd in sand,
 Vailing her high-top lower than her ribs
 To kiss her burial. Should I go to church
 And see the holy edifice of stone, 30
 And not bethink me straight of dangerous rocks,
 Which, touching but my gentle vessel's side,
 Would scatter all her spices on the stream,
 Enrobe the roaring waters with my silks,

And, in a word, but even now worth this, 35
 And now worth nothing? Shall I have the thought

To think on this, and shall I lack the thought That such a thing bechanc'd would make me
 sad?

But tell not me; I know Antonio
 Is sad to think upon his merchandise. 40

Ant. Believe me, no. I thank my fortune for
 it,

My ventures are not in one bottom trusted,
 Nor to one place; nor is my whole estate
 Upon the fortune of this present year: 45
 Therefore my merchandise makes me not sad.

Salar. Why, then you are in love.

Ant. Fie, fie!
Salar. Not in love neither? Then let us say you are sad,

Because you are not merry; and 't were as easy

For you to laugh and leap and say you are merry,

Because you are not sad. Now, by two-headed Janus, 50

Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her time;
 Some that will evermore peep through their
 eyes

And laugh like parrots at a bag-piper,
 And other of such vinegar aspect That they'll not show their teeth in way of smile, 55

Though Nestor swear the jest be laughable.

Enter BASSANIO, LORENZO, and GRATIANO.

Salan. Here comes Bassanio, your most noble
 kinsman,

Gratiano, and Lorenzo. Fare ye well;
 We leave you now with better company.

Salar. I would have stay'd till I had made you merry, 60

If worthier friends had not prevented me.

Ant. Your worth is very dear in my regard.

I take it, your own business calls on you
And you embrace the occasion to depart.

Salar. Good morrow, my good lords. 85

Bass. Good signiors both, when shall we laugh? Say, when?

You grow exceeding strange. Must it be so?

Salar. We'll make our leisures to attend on yours. [Exeunt Salarino and Salanio.]

Lor. My Lord Bassanio, since you have found Antonio,

We two will leave you; but at dinner-time, 70
I pray you, have in mind where we must meet.

Bass. I will not fail you.

Gra. You look not well, Signior Antonio;

You have too much respect upon the world.

They lose it that do buy it with much care. 75

Believe me, you are marvellously chang'd.

Ant. I hold the world but as the world,
Gratiano,

A stage where every man must play a part,
And mine a sad one.

Gra. Let me play the fool!

With mirth and laughter let old wrinkles come,

And let my liver rather heat with wine 81

Than my heart cool with mortifying groans.

Why should a man, whose blood is warm within,

Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster,

Sleep when he wakes, and creep into the jaundice 85

By being peevish? I tell thee what, Antonio —

I love thee, and it is my love that speaks —

There are a sort of men whose visages

Do cream and mantle like a standing pond,

And do a wilful stillness entertain, 90

With purpose to be dress'd in an opinion

Of wisdom, gravity, profound conceit,

As who should say, "I am Sir Oracle,

And when I ope my lips let no dog bark!" 95

O my Antonio, I do know of those

That therefore only are reputed wise

For saying nothing, when, I am very sure,

If they should speak, would almost damn those ESTS

Which, hearing them, would call their brothers
fools.

I'll tell thee more of this another time; 100

But fish not with this melancholy bait

For this fool gudgeon, this opinion.

Come, good Lorenzo. Fare ye well awhile;

I'll end my exhortation after dinner.

Lor. Well, we will leave you then till dinnertime. 105

I must be one of these same dumb wise men,

For Gratiano never lets me speak.

Gra. Well, keep me company but two years
more,

Thou shalt not know the sound of thine own
tongue.

Ant. Farewell! I'll grow a talker for this gear. 110

Gra. Thanks, i' faith, for silence is only commendable

In a neat's tongue dri'd and a maid not vendible.

[Exeunt [Gratiano and Lorenzo].]

Ant. Is that any thing now?

Bass. Gratiano speaks an infinite deal of nothing, more than any man in all Venice. His reasons are as two grains of wheat hid in 115 two bushels of chaff; you shall seek all day ere you find them, and when you have them, they are not worth the search.

Ant. Well, tell me now what lady is the same

To whom you swore a secret pilgrimage, 120
That you to-day promis'd to tell me of?

Bass. 'T is not unknown to you, Antonio,

How much I have disabled mine estate

By something showing a more swelling port 124

Than my faint means would grant continuance.

Nor do I now make moan to be abridg'd

From such a noble rate; but my chief care

Is to come fairly off from the great debts

Wherein my time something too prodigal

Hath left me gag'd. To you, Antonio, 126

I owe the most, in money and in love,

And from your love I have a warranty

To unburden all my plots and purposes

How to get clear of all the debts I owe.

Ant. I pray you, good Bassanio, let me know
it; 128

And if it stand, as you yourself still do,

Within the eye of honour, be assur'd,

My purse, my person, my extremest means,

Lie all unlock'd to your occasions.

Bass. In my school-days, when I had lost one shaft, 140

I shot his fellow of the self-same flight

The self-same way with more advised watch

To find the other forth, and by adventuring
both

I oft found both. I urge this childhood proof,
Because what follows is pure innocence. 145

I owe you much, and, like a wilful youth,

That which I owe is lost; but if you please

To shoot another arrow that self way

Which you did shoot the first, I do not doubt,

As I will watch the aim, or to find both 150

Or bring your latter hazard back again

And thankfully rest debtor for the first.

Ant. You know me well, and herein spend but time

To wind about my love with circumstance;

And out of doubt you do me now more wrong

In making question of my uttermost 155

Than if you had made waste of all I have.

Then do but say to me what I should do

That in your knowledge may by me be done,

And I am prest unto it; therefore, speak. 160

Bass. In Belmont is a lady richly left;

And she is fair, and fairer than that word,

Of wondrous virtues. Sometimes from her eyes

I did receive fair speechless messages.

Her name is Portia, nothing undervalu'd 165

To Cato's daughter, Brutus' Portia.

Nor is the wide world ignorant of her worth,

For the four winds blow in from every coast

Renowned suitors; and her sunny locks

Hang on her temples like a golden fleece, 170

Which makes her seat of Belmont Colchus'
strand,

And many Jasons come in quest of her.

O my Antonio, had I but the means

To hold a rival place with one of them,

I have a mind presages me such thrift, 175
That I should questionless be fortunate!

Ant. Thou know'st that all my fortunes are at sea;

Neither have I money nor commodity
To raise a present sum. Therefore go forth;
Try what my credit can in Venice do. 180
That shall be rack'd, even to the uttermost,
To furnish thee to Belmont, to fair Portia.
Go, presently inquire, and so will I,
Where money is; and I no question make
To have it of my trust or for my sake. 185

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [Belmont. A room in Portia's house.]

Enter PORTIA with her waiting-woman, NERISSA.

Por. By my troth, Nerissa, my little body is awearied of this great world.

Ner. You would be, sweet madam, if your miseries were in the same abundance as your good fortunes are; and yet, for aught I see, they are as sick that surfeit with too much as they that starve with nothing. It is no mean happiness, therefore, to be seated in the mean.
Superfluity comes sooner by white hairs, but competency lives longer. 190

Por. Good sentences and well pronounc'd.

Ner. They would be better, if well followed.

Por. If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches and poor men's cottages princes' palaces. It is a good divine that follows his own instructions; 195
I can easier teach twenty what were good to be done, than to be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching. The brain may devise laws for the blood, but a hot temper leaps o'er a cold decree; such a hare is madness the youth, to 200 skip o'er the meshes of good counsel the cripple.
But this reasoning is not in the fashion to choose me a husband. O me, the word choose!
I may neither choose who I would nor refuse who I dislike; so is the will of a living 205 daughter curb'd by the will of a dead father.
Is it not hard, Nerissa, that I cannot choose one nor refuse none? 209

Ner. Your father was ever virtuous, and holy men at their death have good inspirations; therefore the lottery that he hath devised in these three chests of gold, silver, and lead, whereof who chooses his meaning chooses you,
will, no doubt, never be chosen by any rightly 215 but one who you shall rightly love. But what warmth is there in your affection towards any of these princely suitors that are already come?

Por. I pray thee, over-name them; and as thou namest them, I will describe them; and, 220 according to my description, level at my affection.

Ner. First, there is the Neapolitan prince.

Por. Ay, that's a colt indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horse; and he makes it a great appropriation to his own good parts, 225 that he can shoe him himself. I am much afraid my lady his mother played false with a smith.

Ner. Then there is the County Palatine.

Por. He doth nothing but frown, as who 230 should say, "If you will not have me, choose."
He hears merry tales and smiles not. I fear he will prove the weeping philosopher when he grows old, being so full of unmannerly sadness in his youth. I had rather be married to a 235 death's-head with a bone in his mouth than to either of these. God defend me from these two!

Ner. How say you by the French lord, Monsieur Le Bon? 239

Por. God made him, and therefore let him pass for a man. In truth, I know it is a sin to be a mocker; but, he! why, he hath a horse better than the Neapolitan's, a better bad habit of frowning than the Count Palatine. He is every man in no man. If a throstle sing, he falls straight a capering. He will fence with 245 his own shadow. If I should marry him, I should marry twenty husbands. If he would despise me, I would forgive him, for if he love me to madness, I shall never requite him. 250

Ner. What say you, then, to Falconbridge, the young baron of England?

Por. You know I say nothing to him, for he understands not me, nor I him. He hath neither Latin, French, nor Italian, and you will come into the court and swear that I have a 255 poor pennyworth in the English. He is a proper man's picture, but, alas, who can converse with a dumb-show? How oddly he is suited! I think he bought his doublet in Italy, his round hose in France, his bonnet in Germany, and 260 his behaviour everywhere.

Ner. What think you of the Scottish lord, his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charity in 265 him, for he borrowed a box of the ear of the Englishman and swore he would pay him again when he was able. I think the Frenchman became his surety and seal'd under for another.

Ner. How like you the young German, the Duke of Saxony's nephew? 270

Por. Very vilely in the morning, when he is sober, and most vilely in the afternoon, when he is drunk. When he is best, he is a little worse than a man, and when he is worst, he is little better than a beast. An the worst fall 275 that ever fell, I hope I shall make shift to go without him.

Ner. If he should offer to choose, and choose the right casket, you should refuse to perform your father's will, if you should refuse to 280 accept him.

Por. Therefore, for fear of the worst, I pray thee, set a deep glass of rhenish wine on the contrary casket, for if the devil be within and that temptation without, I know he will 285 choose it. I will do anything, Nerissa, ere I'll be married to a sponge.

Ner. You need not fear, lady, the having any of these lords. They have acquainted me with their determinations; which is, in- 290 deed, to return to their home and to trouble you with no more suit, unless you may be won by some other sort than your father's imposition depending on the caskets. 295

Por. If I live to be as old as Sibylla, I will die as chaste as Diana, unless I be obtained by the manner of my father's will. I am glad this parcel of wooers are so reasonable, for there is not one among them but I dote on his very absence, and I pray God grant them a fair departure.

Ner. Do you not remember, lady, in your father's time, a Venetian, a scholar and a soldier, that came hither in company of the Marquis of Montferrat?

Por. Yes, yes, it was Bassanio, — as I think, he was so call'd.

Ner. True, madam. He, of all the men that ever my foolish eyes look'd upon, was the best deserving a fair lady.

Por. I remember him well, and I remember him worthy of thy praise.

Enter a SERVING-MAN.

How now! what news?

Serv. The four strangers seek for you, madam, to take their leave; and there is a forerunner come from a fifth, the Prince of Morocco, who brings word the Prince his master will be here to-night.

Por. If I could bid the fifth welcome with so good a heart as I can bid the other four farewell, I should be glad of his approach. If he had the condition of a saint and the complexion of a devil, I had rather he should shrive me than wive me.

Come, Nerissa. Sirrah, go before. While we shut the gates upon one wooer, another knocks at the door. [Exeunt.]

[SCÈNE III. Venice. A public place.]

Enter BASSANIO and SHYLOCK the Jew.

Shy. Three thousand ducats; well.

Bass. Ay, sir, for three months.

Shy. For three months; well.

Bass. For the which, as I told you, Antonio shall be bound.

Shy. Antonio shall become bound; well.

Bass. May you stead me? Will you pleasure me? Shall I know your answer?

Shy. Three thousand ducats for three months, and Antonio bound.

Bass. Your answer to that.

Shy. Antonio is a good man.

Bass. Have you heard any imputation to the contrary?

Shy. Ho, no, no, no, no! My meaning in saying he is a good man is to have you understand me that he is sufficient. Yet his means are in supposition: he hath an argosy bound to Tripolis, another to the Indies; I understand, moreover, upon the Rialto, he hath a third at Mexico, a fourth for England, and other ventures he hath squand'ring abroad. But ships are but boards, sailors but men; there be land-rats and water-rats, water-thieves and land-thieves, I mean pirates, and then there is the peril of waters, winds, and rocks. The man is, notwithstanding, sufficient. Three thousand ducats; I think I may take his bond.

Bass. Be assured you may.

Shy. I will be assured I may; and, that I may be assured, I will bethink me. May I speak with Antonio?

Bass. If it please you to dine with us.

Shy. Yes, to smell pork; to eat of the habitation which your prophet the Nazarite conjured the devil into. I will buy with you, sell with you, talk with you, walk with you, and so following; but I will not eat with you, drink with you, nor pray with you. What news on the Rialto? Who is he comes here?

Enter ANTONIO.

Bass. This is Signior Antonio.

Shy. [Aside.] How like a fawning publican he looks!

I hate him for he is a Christian, But more for that in low simplicity He lends out money gratis, and brings down The rate of usance here with us in Venice. If I can catch him once upon the hip, I will feed fat the ancient grudge I bear him. He hates our sacred nation, and he rails, Even there where merchants most do congregate,

On me, my bargains, and my well-won thrift, Which he calls interest. Cursed be my tribe, If I forgive him!

Bass. Shylock, do you hear?

Shy. I am debating of my present store, And, by the near guess of my memory, I cannot instantly raise up the gross Of full three thousand ducats. What of that? Tubal, a wealthy Hebrew of my tribe, Will furnish me. But soft! how many months Do you desire? [To Ant.] Rest you fair, good signior;

Your worship was the last man in our mouths.

Ant. Shylock, although I neither lend nor borrow

By taking nor by giving of excess, Yet, to supply the ripe wants of my friend, I'll break a custom. Is he yet possess'd How much ye would?

Shy. Ay, ay, three thousand ducats.

Ant. And for three months.

Shy. I had forgot; three months; you told me so.

Well then, your bond; and let me see; — but hear you;

Methought you said you neither lend nor borrow Upon advantage.

Ant. I do never use it.

Shy. When Jacob graz'd his uncle Laban's sheep —

This Jacob from our holy Abram was, As his wise mother wrought in his behalf, The third possessor; ay, he was the third —

Ant. And what of him? Did he take interest?

Shy. No, not take interest, not, as you would say,

Directly interest. Mark what Jacob did. When Laban and himself were compromis'd That all the eanlings which were streak'd and pied

Should fall as Jacob's hire, the ewes, being rank,

In the end of autumn turned to the rams,
And, when the work of generation was Between these woolly breeders in the act,
The skilful shepherd pill'd me certain wands 85
And, in the doing of the deed of kind,
He stuck them up before the fulsome ewes,
Who then conceiving did in eaning time
Fall parti-colour'd lambs, and those were Jacob's.

This was a way to thrive, and he was blest; 90
And thrift is blessing, if men steal it not.

Ant. This was a venture, sir, that Jacob serv'd for;

A thing not in his power to bring to pass,
But sway'd and fashion'd by the hand of Heaven.

Was this inserted to make interest good? 95
Or is your gold and silver ewes and rams?

Shy. I cannot tell; I make it breed as fast.
But note me, signior.

Ant. Mark you this, Bassanio,
The devil can cite Scripture for his purpose. 100

An evil soul producing holy witness
Is like a villain with a smiling cheek,

A goodly apple rotten at the heart.
O, what a goodly outside falsehood hath!

Shy. Three thousand ducats; 'tis a good round sum.

Three months from twelve; then, let me see; the rate — 105

Ant. Well, Shylock, shall we be beholding to you?

Shy. Signior Antonio, many a time and oft
In the Rialto you have rated me
About my moneys and my usances.

Still have I borne it with a patient shrug, 110
For sufferance is the badge of all our tribe.

You call me misbeliever, cut-throat dog,
And spit upon my Jewish gaberdine,
And all for use of that which is mine own.

Well then, it now appears you need my help. 115
Go to, then! You come to me, and you say,

"Shylock, we would have moneys;" you say so —

You, that did void your rheum upon my beard
And foot me as you spurn a stranger cur

Over your threshold; moneys is your suit. 120
What should I say to you? Should I not say,

"Hath a dog money? Is it possible
A cur can lend three thousand ducats?" Or Shall I bend low and in a bondman's key, 124

With bated breath and whispering humbleness,

Say this:

"Fair sir, you spat on me on Wednesday last;
You spurn'd me such a day; another time

You call'd me dog; and for these courtesies
I'll lend you thus much moneys" 130

Ant. I am as like to call thee so again,
To spit on thee again, to spurn thee too.

If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not
As to thy friends; for when did friendship take

A breed for barren metal of his friend? 135
But lend it rather to thine enemy,

Who, if he break, thou mayst with better face
Exact the penalty.

Shy. Why, look you, how you storm!
I would be friends with you and have your love,

Forget the shames that you have stain'd me with, 140

Supply your present wants, and take no do it
Of usance for my moneys, and you'll not hear me.

This is kind I offer.
Bass. This were kindness.

Shy. This kindness will I show.
Go with me to a notary, seal me there 145

Your single bond; and, in a merry sport,
If you repay me not on such a day,

In such a place, such sum or sums as are Express'd in the condition, let the forfeit

Be nominated for an equal pound 150
Of your fair flesh, to be cut off and taken

In what part of your body pleaseth me.
Ant. Content, i' faith, I'll seal to such a bond,

And say there is much kindness in the Jew.

Bass. You shall not seal to such a bond for me; 155

I'll rather dwell in my necessity.

Ant. Why, fear not, man; I will not forfeit it.

Within these two months, that's a month before

This bond expires, I do expect return
Of thrice three times the value of this bond. 160

Shy. O father Abram, what these Christians are,

Whose own hard dealings teaches them suspect
The thoughts of others! Pray you, tell me this:

If he should break his day, what should I gain
By the exaction of the forfeiture? 165

A pound of man's flesh taken from a man
Is not so estimable, profitable neither,

As flesh of muttons, beefs, or goats. I say,
To buy his favour, I extend this friendship.

If he will take it, so; if not, adieu; 170
And, for my love, I pray you wrong me not.

Ant. Yes, Shylock, I will seal unto this bond.
Shy. Then meet me forthwith at the notary's;

Give him direction for this merry bond,
And I will go and purse the ducats straight, 175

See to my house, left in the fearful guard
Of an unthrifty knave, and presently

I will be with you. [Exit [Shylock].]

Ant. Hie thee, gentle Jew.

The Hebrew will turn Christian; he grows kind.
Bass. I like not fair terms and a villain's

mind. 180
Ant. Come on; in this there can be no dismay;

My ships come home a month before the day.
[Exeunt.]

ACT II

[SCENE I. Belmont. A room in Portia's house.]

Enter [the PRINCE OF] MOROCCO, a tawny Moor, all in white, and three or four followers accordingly, with PORTIA, NERISSA, and their train.

Flourish of cornets.

Mor. Mislike me not for my complexion,
The shadowed livery of the burnish'd sun,

To whom I am a neighbour and near bred.

Bring me the fairest creature northward born,
Where Phœbus' fire scarce thaws the icicles, 5
And let us make incision for your love,
To prove whose blood is reddest, his or mine.
I tell thee, lady, this aspect of mine
Hath fear'd the valiant. By my love, I swear
The best-regarded virgins of our clime 10
Have lov'd it too. I would not change this hue,
Except to steal your thoughts, my gentle queen.

Por. In terms of choice I am not solely led
By nice direction of a maiden's eyes;
Besides, the lottery of my destiny 15
Bars me the right of voluntary choosing.
But if my father had not scanted me
And hedg'd me by his wit, to yield myself
His wife who wins me by that means I told
you,

Yourself, renowned Prince, then stood as fair
As any comer I have look'd on yet 21
For my affection.

Mor. Even for that I thank you;
Therefore, I pray you, lead me to the caskets
To try my fortune. By this scimitar
That slew the Sophy and a Persian prince 25
That won three fields of Sultan Solymán,
I would outstare the sternest eyes that look,
Outbrave the heart most daring on the earth,
Pluck the young sucking cubs from the she-
bear,

Yea, mock the lion when he roars for prey, 30
To win thee, lady. But, alas the while!
If Hercules and Lichas play at dice
Which is the better man, the greater throw
May turn by fortune from the weaker hand.
So is Alcides beaten by his page; 35
And so may I, blind fortune leading me,
Miss that which one unworthier may attain,
And die with grieving.

Por. You must take your chance,
And either not attempt to choose at all,
Or swear before you choose, if you choose
wrong 40

Never to speak to lady afterward
In way of marriage; therefore be advis'd.

Mor. Nor will not. Come, bring me unto my chance.

Por. First, forward to the temple. After dinner

Your hazard shall be made.

Mor. Good fortune then! 45
To make me blest or curs'd 'st among men.

[Cornets, and exeunt.]

[SCENE II. Venice. A street.]

Enter the Clown [LAUNCELOT] alone.

Laun. Certainly my conscience will serve me to run from this Jew my master. The fiend is at mine elbow and tempts me, saying to me,
"Gobbo, Launcelot Gobbo, good Launcelot," or "good Gobbo," or "good Launcelot Gobbo," use your legs, take the start, run away." My 5 conscience says, "No; take heed, honest Launcelot; take heed, honest Gobbo," or, as aforesaid, "honest Launcelot Gobbo; do not run; scorn running with thy heels." Well, the most courageous fiend bids me pack. "Via!" 10 says the fiend; "away!" says the fiend; "for the heavens, rouse up a brave mind," says the fiend, "and run." Well, my conscience, hanging about the neck of my heart, says very wisely to me, "My honest friend Launcelot, being [is an honest man's son," or rather an honest woman's son; for, indeed, my father did something smack, something grow to, he had a kind of taste, — well, my conscience says, "Launcelot, budge not." "Budge," says the fiend. 20

"Budge not," says my conscience. "Conscience," say I, "you counsel well;" "Fiend," say I, "you counsel well." To be rul'd by my conscience, I should stay with the Jew my master, who, God bless the mark, is a kind of devil; and, to run away from the Jew, I 25 should be rul'd by the fiend, who, saving your reverence, is the devil himself. Certainly the Jew is the very devil incarnation; and, in my conscience, my conscience is but a kind of hard conscience, to offer to counsel me to stay with the Jew. The fiend gives the more friendly 31 counsel. I will run, fiend; my heels are at your commandment; I will run.

Enter Old Gobbo, with a basket.

Gob. Master young man, you, I pray you,
which is the way to master Jew's? 35

Laun. [Aside.] O heavens! this is my true-begotten father, who, being more than sand-blind, high-gravel blind, knows me not. I will try confusions with him.

Gob. Master young gentleman, I pray you,
which is the way to master Jew's? 41

Laun. Turn up on your right hand at the next turning, but at the next turning of all, on your left; marry at the very next turning, turn of no hand, but turn down indirectly to the Jew's house. 46

Gob. By God's sotties, 't will be a hard way to hit. Can you tell me whether one Launcelot, that dwells with him, dwell with him or no?

Laun. Talk you of young Master Launcelot? [Aside.] Mark me now; now will I raise 50 the waters. Talk you of young Master Launcelot?

Gob. No master, sir, but a poor man's son.
His father, though I say 't, is an honest exceeding poor man and, God be thanked, well to live. 55

Laun. Well, let his father be what 'a will, we talk of young Master Launcelot.

Gob. Your worship's friend and Launcelot,
sir.

Laun. But I pray you, ergo, old man, ergo,
I beseech you, talk you of young Master Launce-
lot. 60

Gob. Of Launcelot, an 't please your mastership.

Laun. Ergo, Master Launcelot. Talk not of Master Launcelot, father; for the young gentleman, according to Fates and Destinies and such odd sayings, the Sisters Three and such 65 branches of learning, is indeed deceased, or, as you would say in plain terms, gone to heaven.

Gob. Marry, God forbid! The boy was the very staff of my age, my very prop. 70

Laun. [Aside.] Do I look like a cudgel or a hovel-post, a staff or a prop? Do you know me, father?

Gob. Alack the day, I know you not, young gentleman; but I pray you, tell me, is my boy, God rest his soul, alive or dead?

Laun. Do you not know me, father?

Gob. Alack, sir, I am sand-blind; I know you not.

Laun. Nay, indeed, if you had your eyes, you might fail of the knowing me; it is a wise father that knows his own child. Well, old man, I will tell you news of your son. Give me your blessing; truth will come to light; murder cannot be hid long; a man's son may, but in the end truth will out.

Gob. Pray you, sir, stand up. I am sure you are not Launcelot, my boy.

Laun. Pray you, let's have no more fooling about it, but give me your blessing. I am Launcelot, your boy that was, your son that is, your child that shall be.

Gob. I cannot think you are my son.

Laun. I know not what I shall think of that; but I am Launcelot, the Jew's man, and I am sure Margery your wife is my mother.

Gob. Her name is Margery, indeed. I'll be sworn, if thou be Launcelot, thou art mine own flesh and blood. Lord worshipp'd might he be! what a beard hast thou got! Thou hast got more hair on thy chin than Dobbin my fill-horse has on his tail.

Laun. It should seem, then, that Dobbin's tail grows backward. I am sure he had more hair of his tail than I have of my face when I last saw him.

Gob. Lord, how art thou chang'd! How dost thou and thy master agree? I have brought him a present. How 'gree you now?

Laun. Well, well: but, for mine own part, as I have set up my rest to run away, so I will not rest till I have run some ground. My master's a very Jew. Give him a present! give him a halter. I am famish'd in his service; you may tell every finger I have with my ribs. Father, I am glad you are come; give me your present to one Master Bassanio, who, indeed, gives rare new liveries. If I serve not him, I will run as far as God has any ground. O rare fortune! here comes the man. To him, father; for I am a Jew, if I serve the Jew any longer.

Enter BASSANIO, with [LEONARDO and other] followers.

Bass. You may do so; but let it be so hasted that supper be ready at the farthest by five of the clock. See these letters delivered; put the liveries to making, and desire Gratiano to come anon to my lodging. [Exit one of his men.]

Laun. To him, father.

Gob. God bless your worship!

Bass. Gramercy! wouldst thou aught with me?

Gob. Here's my son, sir, a poor boy, —

Laun. Not a poor boy, sir, but the rich Jew's man; that would, sir, as my father shall specify —

Gob. He hath a great infection, sir, as one would say, to serve —

Laun. Indeed, the short and the long is, I serve the Jew, and have a desire, as my father shall specify —

Gob. His master and he, saving your worship's reverence, are scarce cater-cousins —

Laun. To be brief, the very truth is that the Jew, having done me wrong, doth cause me, as my father, being, I hope, an old man, shall frutify unto you —

Gob. I have here a dish of doves that I would bestow upon your worship, and my suit is —

Laun. In very brief, the suit is impertinent to myself, as your worship shall know by this honest old man; and, though I say it, though old man, yet poor man, my father.

Bass. One speak for both. What would you?

Laun. Serve you, sir.

Gob. That is the very defect of the matter, sir.

Bass. I know thee well; thou hast obtain'd thy suit.

Shylock thy master spoke with me this day, And hath preferr'd thee, if it be preferment To leave a rich Jew's service, to become The follower of so poor a gentleman.

Laun. The old proverb is very well parted between my master Shylock and you, sir: you have the grace of God, sir, and he hath enough.

Bass. Thou speak'st it well. Go, father, with thy son.

Take leave of thy old master, and inquire

My lodging out. Give him a livery

More guarded than his fellows'; see it done.

Laun. Father, in. I cannot get a service, no; I have ne'er a tongue in my head. [Looks on his palm.] Well, if any man in Italy have a fairer table, which doth offer to swear upon a book, I shall have good fortune. Go to, here's a simple line of life! Here's a small trifle of wives! Alas, fifteen wives is nothing! Eleven widows and nine maids is a simple coming-in for one man. And then to escape drowning thrice, and to be in peril of my life with the edge of a feather-bed; here are simple scapes. Well, if Fortune be a woman, she's a good wench for this gear. Father, come; I'll take my leave of the Jew in the twinkling of an eye.

[Exeunt Launcelot [and old Gobbo].]

Bass. I pray thee, good Leonardo, think on this:

These things being bought and orderly bestow'd, Return in haste, for I do feast to-night

My best esteem'd acquaintance. Hie thee, go.

Leon. My best endeavours shall be done herein.

Enter GRATIANO.

Gra. Where is your master?

Leon. Yonder, sir, he walks. [Exit.]

Gra. Signior Bassanio!

Bass. Gratiano!

Gra. I have a suit to you.

Bass. You have obtain'd it.

Gra. You must not deny me ; I must go with you to Belmont.

Bass. Why, then you must. But hear thee, Gratiano ;

Thou art too wild, too rude and bold of voice ;
Parts that become thee happily enough ¹⁹¹
And in such eyes as ours appear not faults ;
But where thou art not known, why, there they show

Something too liberal. Pray thee, take pain
To allay with some cold drops of modesty ¹⁹⁵
Thy skipping spirit, lest through thy wild behaviour

I be misconstru'd in the place I go to,
And lose my hopes.

Gra. Signior Bassanio, hear me :
If I do not put on a sober habit,
Talk with respect and swear but now and then, ²⁰⁰

Wear prayer-books in my pocket, look demurely,

Nay more, while grace is saying, hood mine eyes

Thus with my hat, and sigh and say Amen,
Use all the observance of civility,
Like one well studied in a sad ostent ²⁰⁵
To please his grandam, never trust me more.

Bass. Well, we shall see your bearing.

Gra. Nay, but I bar to-night ; you shall not gauge me

By what we do to-night.

Bass. No, that were pity.
I would entreat you rather to put on ²¹⁰
Your boldest suit of mirth, for we have friends
That purpose merriment. But fare you well !
I have some business.

Gra. And I must to Lorenzo and the rest ; ²¹⁴

But we will visit you at supper-time. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. The same. A room in Shylock's house.]

Enter JESSICA and the Clown [LAUNCELOT].

Jes. I am sorry thou wilt leave my father so.

Our house is hell, and thou, a merry devil,
Didst rob it of some taste of tediousness.

But fare thee well, there is a ducat for thee ;
And, Launcelot, soon at supper shalt thou see ⁵

Lorenzo, who is thy new master's guest.
Give him this letter ; do it secretly ;
And so farewell. I would not have my father see me in talk with thee. ⁹

Laun. Adieu ! tears exhibit my tongue. Most beautiful pagan, most sweet Jew ! if a Christian do not play the knave and get thee, I am much deceived. But, adieu ! these foolish drops do something drown my manly spirit. Adieu ! [Exit.]

Jes. Farewell, good Launcelot. ¹⁵
Alack, what heinous sin is it in me
To be asham'd to be my father's child !
But though I am a daughter to his blood,
I am not to his manners. O Lorenzo,
If thou keep promise, I shall end this strife, ²⁰
Become a Christian and thy loving wife. [Exit.]

[SCENE IV. The same. A street.]

Enter GRATIANO, LORENZO, SALARINO, and SALANIO.

Lor. Nay, we will slink away in supper-time,
Disguise us at my lodging and return,
All in an hour.

Gra. We have not made good preparation.

Salar. We have not spoke us yet of torch-bearers. ⁵

Salan. 'Tis vile, unless it may be quaintly order'd,

And better in my mind not undertook.

Lor. 'Tis now but four o'clock ; we have two hours

To furnish us.

Enter LAUNCELOT, with a letter.

Friend Launcelot, what's the news ?

Laun. An it shall please you to break up this, it shall seem to signify. ¹¹

Lor. I know the hand ; in faith, 'tis a fair hand,

And whiter than the paper it writ on

Is the fair hand that writ.

Gra. Love-news, in faith.

Laun. By your leave, sir. ¹⁵

Lor. Whither goest thou ?

Laun. Marry, sir, to bid my old master the Jew to sup to-night with my new master the Christian.

Lor. Hold, here, take this. Tell gentle

Jessica ²⁰

I will not fail her ; speak it privately ; go. [Exit Launcelot.]

Gentlemen,

Will you prepare you for this masque to-night ?

I am provided of a torch-bearer.

Salar. Ay, marry, I'll be gone about it straight. ²⁵

Salan. And so will I.

Lor. Meet me and Gratiano

At Gratiano's lodging some hour hence.

Salar. 'Tis good we do so.

[Exeunt [Salar. and Salan.].]

Gra. Was not that letter from fair Jessica ?

Lor. I must needs tell thee all. She hath directed ³⁰

How I shall take her from her father's house,

What gold and jewels she is furnish'd with,

What page's suit she hath in readiness.

If e'er the Jew her father come to heaven,

It will be for his gentle daughter's sake ; ³⁵

And never dare misfortune cross her foot,

Unless she do it under this excuse,

That she is issue to a faithless Jew.

Come, go with me ; peruse this as thou goest.

Fair Jessica shall be my torch-bearer. ⁴⁰ [Exeunt.]

[SCENE V. The same. Before Shylock's house.]

Enter the Jew [SHYLOCK] and LAUNCELOT.

Shy. Well, thou shalt see, thy eyes shall be thy judge,

The difference of old Shylock and Bassanio. —
What, Jessica ! — Thou shalt not gormandise,

As thou hast done with me, — What, Jessica! —
And sleep and snore, and rend apparel out; —
Why, Jessica, I say!

Laun. Why, Jessica!

Shy. Who bids thee call? I do not bid thee call.

Laun. Your worship was wont to tell me that I could do nothing without bidding.

Enter JESSICA.

Jes. Call you? What is your will? 10

Shy. I am bid forth to supper, Jessica.

There are my keys. But wherefore should I go?

I am not bid for love; they flatter me;

But yet I'll go in hate, to feed upon

The prodigal Christian. Jessica, my girl, 15

Look to my house. I am right loath to go.

There is some ill a-brewing towards my rest,

For I did dream of money-bags to-night.

Laun. I beseech you, sir, go. My young master doth expect your reproach. 20

Shy. So do I his.

Laun. And they have conspired together. I will not say you shall see a masque; but if you do, then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a-bleeding on Black Monday last at six o'clock; the morning, falling out that year on 25
Ash Wednesday was four year, in the afternoon.

Shy. What, are there masques? Hear you me, Jessica.

Lock up my doors; and when you hear the drum

And the vile squealing of the wry-neck'd fife, 30

Clamber not you up to the casements then,

Nor thrust your head into the public street

To gaze on Christian fools with varnish'd faces,

But stop my house's ears, I mean my case-ments.

Let not the sound of shallow foppery enter 35

My sober house. By Jacob's staff I swear

I have no mind of feasting forth to-night;

But I will go. Go you before me, sirrah;

Say I will come.

Laun. I will go before, sir. Mistress, look out at a window, for all this; 41

There will come a Christian by,

Will be worth a Jewess' eye. [Exit.]

Shy. What says that fool of Hagar's offspring, 42

Jes. His words were "Farewell, mistress!" nothing else. 45

Shy. The patch is kind enough, but a huge feeder;

Snail-slow in profit, and he sleeps by day

More than the wild-cat. Drones hive not with me;

Therefore I part with him, and part with him

To one that I would have him help to waste 50

His borrowed purse. Well, Jessica, go in.

Perhaps I will return immediately.

Do as I bid you, shut doors after you;

Fast bind, fast find;

A proverb never stale in thrifty mind. [Exit.] 55

Jes. Farewell; and if my fortune be not cross'd,

I have a father, you a daughter, lost. [Exit.]

[SCENE VI. The same.]

Enter GRATIANO and SALARINO, masked.

Gra. This is the pent-house under which Lorenzo

Desir'd us to make stand.

Salar. His hour is almost past.

Gra. And it is marvel he out-dwells his hour,
For lovers ever run before the clock.

Salar. O, ten times faster Venus' pigeons fly
To seal love's bonds new-made than they are wont 5

To keep obliged faith unforfeited!

Gra. That ever holds. Who riseth from a feast

With that keen appetite that he sits down?

Where is the horse that doth untread again? 10

His tedious measures with the unbated fire

That he did pace them first? All things that are,

Are with more spirit chased than enjoy'd.

How like a younker or a prodigal

The scarfed bark puts from her native bay, 15

Hugg'd and embraced by the strumpet wind!

How like the prodigal doth she return,

With over-weather'd ribs and ragged sails,

Lean, rent and beggar'd by the strumpet wind!

Salar. Here comes Lorenzo; more of this hereafter. 20

Enter LORENZO.

Lor. Sweet friends, your patience for my long abode;

Not I, but my affairs, have made you wait.

When you shall please to play the thieves for wives,

I'll watch as long for you then. Approach;

Here dwells my father Jew. Ho! who's within? 25

Enter JESSICA, above [in boy's clothes].

Jes. Who are you? Tell me, for more certainty,

Albeit I'll swear that I do know your tongue.

Lor. Lorenzo, and thy love.

Jes. Lorenzo, certain, and my love indeed,

For who love I so much? And now who knows

But you, Lorenzo, whether I am yours? 31

Lor. Heaven and thy thoughts are witness that thou art.

Jes. Here, catch this casket; it is worth the pains.

I am glad 't is night, you do not look on me,

For I am much asham'd of my exchange. 35

But love is blind and lovers cannot see

The pretty follies that themselves commit;

For if they could, Cupid himself would blush

To see me thus transformed to a boy.

Lor. Descend, for you must be my torch-bearer. 40

Jes. What, must I hold a candle to my shames?

They in themselves, good sooth, are too too light.

Why, 't is an office of discovery, love;

And I should be obscur'd.

Lor. So are you, sweet,

Even in the lovely garnish of a boy. 45
But come at once;
For the close night doth play the runaway,
And we are stay'd for at Bassanio's feast.

Jes. I will make fast the doors, and gild myself 49

With some moe ducats, and be with you straight. [Exit above.]

Gra. Now, by my hood, a Gentle and no Jew.

Lor. Beshrew me but I love her heartily;
For she is wise, if I can judge of her,
And fair she is, if that mine eyes be true,
And true she is, as she hath prov'd herself, 55
And therefore, like herself, wise, fair, and true,
Shall she be placed in my constant soul.

Enter JESSICA [below].

What, art thou come? On, gentlemen; away!
Our masquing mates by this time for us stay.

[Exit [with Jessica and Salarino].]

Enter ANTONIO.

Ant. Who's there? 60

Gra. Signior Antonio!

Ant. Fie, fie, Gratiano! where are all the rest?

'Tis nine o'clock; our friends all stay for you.

No masque to-night; the wind is come about,
Bassanio presently will go aboard. 65

I have sent twenty out to seek for you.

Gra. I am glad on't. I desire no more delight

Than to be under sail and gone to-night. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE VII. Belmont. A room in Portia's house.]

[Flourish of cornets.] Enter PORTIA with [the PRINCE OF] MOROCCO, and their trains.

Por. Go draw aside the curtains and discover
The several caskets to this noble prince.

Now make your choice.

Mor. The first, of gold, who this inscription bears,

"Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire;" 5

The second, silver, which this promise carries,
"Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves;"

This third, dull lead, with warning all as blunt,
"Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath."

How shall I know if I do choose the right? 10

Por. The one of them contains my picture, Prince:

If you choose that, then I am yours withal.

Mor. Some god direct my judgement! Let me see;

I will survey the inscriptions back again.
What says this leaden casket? 15

"Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath."

Must give; for what? For lead? Hazard for lead?

This casket threatens. Men that hazard all
Do it in hope of fair advantages;
A golden mind stoops not to shows of dross. 20
I'll then nor give nor hazard aught for lead.

What says the silver with her virgin hue?
"Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves."

As much as he deserves! Pause there, Morocco,

And weigh thy value with an even hand. 25

If thou be'st rated by thy estimation,
Thou dost deserve enough; and yet enough

May not extend so far as to the lady;
And yet to be afraid of my deserving

Were but a weak disabling of myself. 30
As much as I deserve! Why, that's the lady.

I do in birth deserve her, and in fortunes,
In graces, and in qualities of breeding;

But more than these, in love I do deserve.
What if I stray'd no farther, but chose here? 35

Let's see once more this saying grav'd in gold:
"Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire."

Why, that's the lady; all the world desires her.

From the four corners of the earth they come
To kiss this shrine, this mortal-breathing saint.

The Hyrcanian deserts and the vasty wilds 41
Of wide Arabia are as thoroughfares now

For princes to come view fair Portia.
The watery kingdom, whose ambitious head

Spits in the face of heaven, is no bar 45
To stop the foreign spirits, but they come

As o'er a brook to see fair Portia.
One of these three contains her heavenly picture.

Is't like that lead contains her? 'T were damnation

To think so base a thought. It were too gross 50
To rib her cerecloth in the obscure grave.

Or shall I think in silver she's immur'd,
Being ten times undervalu'd to tri'd gold?

O sinful thought! Never so rich a gem
Was set in worse than gold. They have in 55
England

A coin that bears the figure of an angel
Stamped in gold, but that's insculp'd upon;

But here an angel in a golden bed
Lies all within. Deliver me the key.

Here do I choose, and thrive I as I may! 60

Por. There, take it, Prince; and if my form lie there,

Then I am yours. [He unlocks the golden casket.]

Mor. O hell! what have we here?
A carrion Death within whose empty eye

There is a written scroll! I'll read the writing.

[Reads.] "All that glisters is not gold;" 65

Often have you heard that told.
Many a man his life hath sold

But my outside to behold.
Gilded tombs do worms infold.

Had you been as wise as bold, 70
Young in limbs, in judgement old,

Your answer had not been inscroll'd.
Fare you well; your suit is cold."

Cold, indeed ; and labour lost :
Then, farewell, heat, and welcome, frost ! 15
Portia, adieu. I have too griev'd a heart
To take a tedious leave ; thus losers part.

[Exit. Flourish of cornets.]
Por. A gentle riddance. Draw the curtains, go.
Let all of his complexion choose me so. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE VIII. Venice. A street.]

Enter SALARINO and SALANIO.

Salar. Why, man, I saw Bassanio under sail.
With him is Gratiano gone along,
And in their ship I'm sure Lorenzo is not.

Salan. The villain Jew with outcries rais'd
the Duke,

Who went with him to search Bassanio's ship. 5 Salar. He came too late, the ship was under sail ;

But there the Duke was given to understand
That in a gondola were seen together
Lorenzo and his amorous Jessica.

Besides, Antonio certified the Duke 10
They were not with Bassanio in his ship.

Salan. I never heard a passion so confus'd,
So strange, outrageous, and so variable,
As the dog Jew did utter in the streets.

"My daughter ! O my ducats ! O my daughter ! 15

Fled with a Christian ! O my Christian ducats !
Justice ! the law ! my ducats, and my daughter !
A sealed bag, two sealed bags of ducats,
Of double ducats, stolen from me by my daughter !

And jewels, two stones, two rich and precious
stones, 20

Stolen by my daughter ! Justice ! find the girl ;
She hath the stones upon her, and the ducats."

Salar. Why, all the boys in Venice follow
him,

Crying, his stones, his daughter, and his ducats.

Salan. Let good Antonio look he keep his
day, 25

Or he shall pay for this.

Salar. Marry, well rememb'ed.

I reason'd with a Frenchman yesterday,
Who told me, in the narrow seas that part

The French and English, there miscarried
A vessel of our country richly fraught, 30

I thought upon Antonio when he told me ;
And wish'd in silence that it were not his.

Salan. You were best to tell Antonio what you hear ;

Yet do not suddenly, for it may grieve him.

Salar. A kinder gentleman treads not the earth. 35

I saw Bassanio and Antonio part ;
Bassanio told him he would make some speed

Of his return ; he answer'd, "Do not so ;
Slubber not business for my sake, Bassanio,

But stay the very riping of the time ;
And for the Jew's bond which he hath of me,

Let it not enter in your mind of love.
Be merry, and employ your chiefest thoughts

To courtship and such fair ostents of love

As shall conveniently become you there." 40

And even there, his eye being big with tears,
Turning his face, he put his hand behind him,

And with affection wondrous sensible
He wrung Bassanio's hand ; and so they parted.

Salan. I think he only loves the world for
him. 60

I pray thee, let us go and find him out
And quicken his embraced heaviness

With some delight or other.
Salar. Do we so. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE IX. Belmont. A room in Portia's house.]

Enter NERISSA with a Servitor.

Ner. Quick, quick, I pray thee ; draw the curtain straight.

The Prince of Arragon hath ta'en his oath,
And comes to his election presently.

Flourish of cornets. Enter the PRINCE OF ARRA-
GON, PORTIA, and their trains.

Por. Behold, there stand the caskets, noble
Prince.

If you choose that wherein I am contain'd, 5
Straight shall our nuptial rites be solemniz'd ;

But if you fail, without more speech, my lord,
You must be gone from hence immediately.

Ar. I am enjoin'd by oath to observe three things :

First, never to unfold to any one 10
Which casket 't was I chose ; next, if I fail

Of the right casket, never in my life
To woo a maid in way of marriage ;

Lastly,
If I do fail in fortune of my choice, 15
Immediately to leave you and be gone.

Por. To these injunctions every one doth
swear

That comes to hazard for my worthless self.

Ar. And so have I address'd me. Fortune
now

To my heart's hope ! Gold ; silver ; and base lead. 20

"Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath."

You shall look fairer, ere I give or hazard.

What says the golden chest ? Ha ! let me see :

"Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire."

What many men desire ! That many may be meant 25

By the fool multitude, that choose by show,
Not learning more than the fond eye doth teach ;

Which pries not to the interior, but, like the martlet,

Builds in the weather on the outward wall,
Even in the force and road of casualty. 30

I will not choose what many men desire,
Because I will not jump with common spirits

And rank me with the barbarous multitudes.
Why, then to thee, thou silver treasure-house ;

Tell me once more what title thou dost bear : 35
"Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves ;"

And well said too; for who shall go about
To cozen fortune and be honourable Without the stamp of merit? Let none presume

To wear an undeserved dignity. 40
O, that estates, degrees, and offices
Were not deriv'd corruptly, and that clear honour

Were purchas'd by the merit of the wearer!
How many then should cover that stand bare!

How many be commanded that command! 45
How much low peasantry would then be glean'd
From the true seed of honour! and how much
honour

Pick'd from the chaff and ruin of the times
To be new-varnish'd! Well, but to my choice:
"Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves."

I will assume desert. Give me a key for this, 51
And instantly unlock my fortunes here.

[He opens the silver casket.]

Por. Too long a pause for that which you find there.

Ar. What's here? The portrait of a blinking idiot,

Presenting me a schedule! I will read it. 55
How much unlike art thou to Portia!
How much unlike my hopes and my deservings!
"Who chooseth me shall have as much as he deserves."

Did I deserve no more than a fool's head?
Is that my prize? Are my deserts no better? 60

Por. To offend and judge are distinct offices
And of opposed natures.

Ar. What is here?
[Reads.] "The fire seven times tried this;
Seven times tried that judgement is,
That did never choose amiss, 65
Some there be that shadows kiss,
Such have but a shadow's bliss.
There be fools alive, I wis,
Silver'd o'er; and so was this.
Take what wife you will to bed, 70
I will ever be your head.
So be gone; you are sped."

Still more fool I shall appear
By the time I linger here.
With one fool's head I came to woo, 75
But I go away with two.
Sweet, adieu. I'll keep my oath,
Patiently to bear my wroth.

[Exeunt Arragon and train.]

Por. Thus hath the candle sing'd the moth.
O, these deliberate fools! When they do choose, 80

They have the wisdom by their wit to lose.

Ner. The ancient saying is no heresy,
Hanging and wiving goes by destiny.

Por. Come, draw the curtain, Nerissa.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Where is my lady?

Por. Here; what would my lord? 85

Mess. Madam, there is alighted at your gate
A young Venetian, one that comes before

To signify the approaching of his lord;
From whom he bringeth sensible regrets,
To wit, besides commends and courteous breath,
Gifts of rich value. Yet I have not seen 91
So likely an ambassador of love.

A day in April never came so sweet,
To show how costly summer was at hand,
As this fore-spurrer comes before his lord. 95

Por. No more, I pray thee. I am half afraid
Thou wilt say anon he is some kin to thee,
Thou spend'st such high-day wit in praising
him.

Come, come, Nerissa, for I long to see
Quick Cupid's post that comes so mannerly. 100

Ner. Bassanio, lord Love, if thy will it be!
[Exeunt.]

ACT III

[SCENE I. Venice. A street.]

Enter SALANIO and SALARINO.

Salan. Now, what news on the Rialto?

Salan. Why, yet it lives there unchecked that Antonio hath a ship of rich lading wreck'd on the narrow seas; the Goodwins, I think they call the place; a very dangerous flat, and fatal, where the carcasses of many a tall ship lie 5 buried, as they say, if my gossip Report be an honest woman of her word.

Salan. I would she were as lying a gossip in that as ever knapp'd ginger or made her 10 neighbours believe she wept for the death of a third husband. But it is true, without any slips of prolixity or crossing the plain highway of talk, that the good Antonio, the honest Antonio, — O that I had a title good enough to keep his name company! — 15

Salan. Come, the full stop.

Salan. Ha! what sayest thou? Why, the end is, he hath lost a ship.

Salan. I would it might prove the end of his losses. 21

Salan. Let me say Amen betimes, lest the devil cross my prayer, for here he comes in the likeness of a Jew.

Enter SHYLOCK.

How now, Shylock! what news among the merchants? 26

Shy. You knew, none so well, none so well as you, of my daughter's flight.

Salan. That's certain. I, for my part, knew the tailor that made the wings she flew
withal. 30

Salan. And Shylock, for his own part, knew the bird was fleg'd; and then it is the complexion of them all to leave the dam.

Shy. She is damn'd for it.

Salan. That's certain, if the devil may be her judge. 35

Shy. My own flesh and blood to rebel!

Salan. Upon it, old carrion! Rebels it at these years?

Shy. I say, my daughter is my flesh and blood. 40

Salan. There is more difference between thy flesh and hers than between jet and ivory; more between your bloods than there is between red wine and rhenish. But tell us, do you hear whether Antonio have had any loss at sea or no? 45

Shy. There I have another bad match. A bankrupt, a prodigal, who dare scarce show his head on the Rialto; a beggar, that was us'd to come so smug upon the mart; let him look to his bond. He was wont to call me usurer; let him look to his bond. He was wont to lend ⁵⁰ money for a Christian courtesy; let him look to his bond.

Salar. Why, I am sure, if he forfeit, thou wilt not take his flesh. What's that good for?

Shy. To bait fish withal. If it will feed nothing else, it will feed my revenge. He hath ⁵⁵ disgrac'd me, and hind'rd me half a million; laugh'd at my losses, mock'd at my gains, scorned my nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies; and what's his reason? I am a Jew. Hath not a Jew eyes? ⁶⁰ Hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions; fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and ⁶⁵ summer, as a Christian is? If you prick us, do we not bleed? If you tickle us, do we not laugh? If you poison us, do we not die? And if you wrong us, shall we not revenge? If we are like you in the rest, we will resemble you ⁷⁰ in that. If a Jew wrong a Christian, what is his humility? Revenge. If a Christian wrong a Jew, what should his sufferance be by Christian example? Why, revenge. The villainy you teach me, I will execute, and it shall go hard but I will better the instruction. 75

Enter a [SERVANT].

Serv. Gentlemen, my master Antonio is at his house and desires to speak with you both.

Salar. We have been up and down to seek him.

Enter TUBAL.

Salan. Here comes another of the tribe; a ⁸⁰ third cannot be match'd, unless the devil himself turn Jew.

[Exeunt [Salan., Salar., and Servant].

Shy. How now, Tubal! what news from Genoa? Hast thou found my daughter?

Tub. I often came where I did hear of her, but cannot find her. 85

Shy. Why, there, there, there, there! A diamond gone, cost me two thousand ducats in Frankfort! The curse never fell upon our nation till now. I never felt it till now. Two thousand ducats in that; and other precious, ⁹⁰ precious jewels. I would my daughter were dead at my foot, and the jewels in her ear! Would she were hears'd at my foot, and the ducats in her coffin! No news of them? Why so? And I know not what's spent in the ⁹⁵ search. Why, thou loss upon loss! the thief gone with so much, and so much to find the thief; and no satisfaction, no revenge, nor no ill luck stirring but what lights on my shoulders, no sighs but of my breathing, no tears but of my shedding. 101

Tub. Yes, other men have ill luck too. Antonio, as I heard in Genoa, —

Shy. What, what, what? Ill luck, ill luck?

Tub. Hath an argosy cast away, coming from Tripolis. 105

Shy. I thank God, I thank God. Is't true, is't true?

Tub. I spoke with some of the sailors that escaped the wreck. 110

Shy. I thank thee, good Tubal; good news, good news! Ha, ha! Here in Genoa!

Tub. Your daughter spent in Genoa, as I heard, in one night fourscore ducats.

Shy. Thou stick'st a dagger in me. I shall ¹¹⁵ never see my gold again. Fourscore ducats at a sitting! Fourscore ducats!

Tub. There came divers of Antonio's creditors in my company to Venice, that swear he cannot choose but break. 120

Shy. I am very glad of it. I'll plague him; I'll torture him. I am glad of it.

Tub. One of them showed me a ring that he had of your daughter for a monkey.

Shy. Out upon her! Thou tortorest me, ¹²⁵ Tubal. It was my turquoise; I had it of Leah when I was a bachelor. I would not have given it for a wilderness of monkeys.

Tub. But Antonio is certainly undone.

Shy. Nay, that's true, that's very true. ¹³⁰ Go, Tubal, fee me an officer; bespeak him a fortnight before. I will have the heart of him, if he forfeit; for, were he out of Venice, I can make what merchandise I will. Go, go, Tubal, and meet me at our synagogue; go, good Tubal; at our synagogue, Tubal. [Exeunt. 135]

[SCENE II. Belmont. A room in Portia's house.]

Enter BASSANIO, PORTIA, GRATIANO, [NERISSA,] and all their train.

Por. I pray you, tarry. Pause a day or two before you hazard; for, in choosing wrong, I lose your company; therefore forbear awhile. There's something tells me, but it is not love, I would not lose you; and you know yourself ¹⁴⁰ Hate counsels not in such a quality.

But lest you should not understand me well, — And yet a maiden hath no tongue but thought, — I would detain you here some month or two before you venture for me. I could teach you ¹⁴⁵ How to choose right, but then I am forsworn; So will I never be; so may you miss me; But if you do, you'll make me wish a sin, That I had been forsworn. Beshrew your eyes, They have o'erlook'd me and divided me; ¹⁵⁰ One half of me is yours, the other half yours, Mine own, I would say; but if mine, then yours,

And so all yours. O, these naughty times Put bars between the owners and their rights! And so, though yours, not yours. Prove it so, Let fortune go to hell for it, not I. 155

I speak too long; but 't is to peize the time,
To eke it out and draw it out in length,
To stay you from election.

Bass. Let me choose;
For as I am, I live upon the rack. 25

Por. Upon the rack, Bassanio! Then confess
What treason there is mingled with your love.

Bass. None but that ugly treason of mistrust,
Which makes me fear the enjoying of my love.
There may as well be amity and life 30

'Tween snow and fire, as treason and my love.

Por. Ay, but I fear you speak upon the rack,
Where men enforced do speak anything.

Bass. Promise me life, and I'll confess the truth.

Por. Well then, confess and live.

Bass. "Confess and love" 35

Had been the very sum of my confession.

O happy torment, when my torturer

Doth teach me answers for deliverance!

But let me to my fortune and the caskets.

Por. Away, then! I am lock'd in one of
them; 40

If you do love me, you will find me out.

Nerissa and the rest, stand all aloof.

Let music sound while he doth make his choice;

Then, if he lose, he makes a swan-like end,

Fading in music. That the comparison 45

May stand more proper, my eye shall be the stream

And watery death-bed for him. He may win;

And what is music then? Then music is

Even as the flourish when true subjects bow

To a new-crowned monarch; such it is 50

As are those dulcet sounds in break of day

That creep into the dreaming bridegroom's ear

And summon him to marriage. Now he goes,

With no less presence, but with much more
love, 55

Than young Alcides, when he did redeem

The virgin tribute paid by howling Troy

To the sea-monster. I stand for sacrifice;

The rest aloof are the Dardanian wives,

With bleared visages, come forth to view

The issue of the exploit. Go, Hercules! 60

Live thou, I live. With much, much more dismay

I view the fight than thou that mak'st the fray.

A song, the whilst BASSANIO comments on the caskets to himself.

Tell me where is fancy bred,
Or in the heart or in the head?

How begot, how nourished? 65

Reply, reply.

It is engend'ed in the eyes,

With gazing fed; and fancy dies

In the cradle where it lies.

Let us all ring fancy's knell; 70

I'll begin it, — Ding, dong, bell.

All. Ding, dong, bell.

Bass. So may the outward shows be least themselves;

The world is still deceiv'd with ornament. 75

In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt

But, being season'd with a gracious voice,

Obscures the show of evil? In religion,
What damned error but some sober brow
Will bless it and approve it with a text,
Hiding the grossness with fair ornament? 80

There is no vice so simple but assumes

Some mark of virtue on his outward parts.

How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false

As stairs of sand, wear yet upon their chins

The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars, 85

Who, inward search'd, have livers white as milk;

And these assume but valour's excrement

To render them redoubted! Look on beauty,

And you shall see 't is purchas'd by the weight;

Which therein works a miracle in nature, 90

Making them lightest that wear most of it.

So are those crisped snaky golden locks,

Which make such wanton gambols with the wind

Upon supposed fairness, often known

To be the dowry of a second head, 95

The skull that bred them in the sepulchre.

Thus ornament is but the gilded shore

To a most dangerous sea; the beauteous scarf

Veiling an Indian beauty; in a word,

The seeming truth which cunning times put on

To entrap the wisest. Therefore, thou gaudy
gold, 101

Hard food for Midas, I will none of thee;

Nor none of thee, thou pale and common drudge

'Tween man and man; but thou, thou meagre
lead, 105

Which rather threat'nest than dost promise

Thy plainness moves me more than eloquence;

And here choose I. Joy be the consequence!

Por. [Aside.] How all the other passions fleet to air,

As doubtful thoughts, and rash-embraç'd despair, 111

And shuddering fear, and green-ey'd jealousy!

O love,

Be moderate; allay thy ecstasy;

In measure rein thy joy; scant this excess!

I feel too much thy blessing; make it less,

For fear I surfeit.

Bass. What find I here? 115

[Opening the leaden casket.]

Fair Portia's counterfeit! What demi-god

Hath come so near creation? Move these eyes?

Or whether, riding on the balls of mine,

Seem they in motion? Here are sever'd lips,

Parted with sugar breath; so sweet a bar 120

Should sunder such sweet friends. Here in her hairs

The painter plays the spider, and hath woven

A golden mesh to entrap the hearts of men

Faster than gnats in cobwebs. But her eyes, —

How could he see to do them? Having made
one, 125

Methinks it should have power to steal both his
And leave itself unfurnish'd. Yet look, how far

The substance of my praise doth wrong this shadow

In underprizing it, so far this shadow

Doth limp behind the substance. Here's the scroll, 130

The continent and summary of my fortune.

[Reads.] "You that choose not by the view,
Chance as fair and choose as true!
Since this fortune falls to you,
Be content and seek no new, 135
If you be well pleas'd with this
And hold your fortune for your bliss,
Turn you where your lady is
And claim her with a loving kiss."

A gentle scroll. Fair lady, by your leave; 140
I come by note, to give and to receive.
Like one of two contending in a prize,
That thinks he hath done well in people's
eyes,

Hearing applause and universal shout,
Giddy in spirit, still gazing in a doubt 145
Whether those peals of praise be his or no;
So, thrice-fair lady, stand I, even so,
As doubtful whether what I see be true,
Until confirm'd, sign'd, ratified by you.

Por. You see me, Lord Bassanio, where I stand, 150

Such as I am. Though for myself alone
I would not be ambitious in my wish,
To wish myself much better; yet, for you
I would be trebled twenty times myself,
A thousand times more fair, ten thousand times 155

More rich;
That only to stand high in your account,
I might in virtues, beauties, livings, friends,
Exceed account. But the full sum of me 160
Is sum of — something, which, to term in gross,
Is an unlesson'd girl, unschool'd, unpractis'd;
Happy in this, she is not yet so old
But she may learn; happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn;
Happiest of all is that her gentle spirit 165
Commits itself to yours to be directed,
As from her lord, her governor, her king.
Myself and what is mine to you and yours
Is now converted. But now I was the lord
Of this fair mansion, master of my servants, 170
Queen o'er myself; and even now, but now,
This house, these servants, and this same myself

Are yours, my lord; I give them with this ring;

Which when you part from, lose, or give away,
Let it presage the ruin of your love 175
And be my vantage to exclaim on you.

Bass. Madam, you have bereft me of all words,

Only my blood speaks to you in my veins;
And there is such confusion in my powers,
As, after some oration fairly spoke 180
By a beloved prince, there doth appear
Among the buzzing pleased multitude;
Where every something, being blent together,
Turns to a wild of nothing, save of joy Express'd and not express'd. But when this ring 185

Parts from this finger, then parts life from
hence;

O, then be bold to say Bassanio's dead!

Ner. My lord and lady, it is now our time,
That have stood by and seen our wishes prosper,
To cry good joy. Good joy, my lord and lady! 190

Gra. My Lord Bassanio and my gentle lady,
I wish you all the joy that you can wish,
For I am sure you can wish none from me;
And when your honours mean to solemnize
The bargain of your faith, I do beseech you, 195
Even at that time I may be married too.

Bass. With all my heart, so thou canst get a wife.

Gra. I thank your lordship, you have got me
one.

My eyes, my lord, can look as swift as yours.
You saw the mistress, I beheld the maid; 200
You lov'd, I lov'd; for intermission
No more pertains to me, my lord, than you.
Your fortune stood upon the casket there,
And so did mine too, as the matter falls;
For, wooing here until I sweat again, 205
And swearing till my very roof was dry
With oaths of love, at last, if promise last,
I got a promise of this fair one here
To have her love, provided that your fortune

Achiev'd her mistress.

Por. Is this true, Nerissa? 210

Ner. Madam, it is, so you stand pleas'd
withal.

Bass. And do you, Gratiano, mean good faith?

Gra. Yes, faith, my lord.

Bass. Our feast shall be much honour'd in your marriage. 215

Gra. We'll play with them the first boy for a thousand ducats.

Ner. What, and stake down?

Gra. No; we shall ne'er win at that sport and stake down. 220

But who comes here? Lorenzo and his infidel?
What, and my old Venetian friend Salerio?

Enter LORENZO, JESSICA, and SALERIO, a messenger from Venice.

Bass. Lorenzo and Salerio, welcome hither,
If that the youth of my new interest here Have power to bid you welcome. By your
leave, 225

I bid my very friends and countrymen,
Sweet Portia, welcome.

Por. So do I, my lord:
They are entirely welcome.

Lor. I thank your honour. For my part, my
lord,

My purpose was not to have seen you here; 230
But meeting with Salerio by the way,
He did intreat me, past all saying nay,
To come with him along.

Saler. I did, my lord;
And I have reason for it. Signior Antonio
Commends him to you.

[Gives Bassanio a letter.]
Bass. Ere I ope his letter, 235
I pray you, tell me how my good friend doth.

Saler. Not sick, my lord, unless it be in mind,

Nor well, unless in mind. His letter there
Will show you his estate.

[Bass. opens the letter.

Gra. Nerissa, cheer yon stranger; bid her welcome. 240

Your hand, Salerio. What's the news from Venice?

How doth that royal merchant, good Antonio?
I know he will be glad of our success;

We are the Jasons, we have won the fleece.

Saler. I would you had won the fleece that he hath lost. 245

Por. There are some shrewd contents in yon same paper,

That steals the colour from Bassanio's cheek.
Some dear friend dead; else nothing in the world

Could turn so much the constitution
Of any constant man. What, worse and worse!
With leave, Bassanio; I am half yourself, 251
And I must freely have the half of anything
That this same paper brings you.

Bass. O sweet Portia,
Here are a few of the unpleasant'st words
Than ever blotted paper! Gentle lady, 255
When I did first impart my love to you,
I freely told you, all the wealth I had Ran in my veins; I was a gentleman.

And then I told you true; and yet, dear lady,
Rating myself at nothing, you shall see 260
How much I was a braggart. When I told you My state was nothing, I should then have told
you

That I was worse than nothing; for, indeed,
I have engag'd myself to a dear friend,
Engag'd my friend to his mere enemy, 265
To feed my means. Here is a letter, lady;
The paper as the body of my friend,
And every word in it a gaping wound,
Issuing life-blood. But is it true, Salerio?
Hath all his ventures fail'd? What? not one hit? 270

From Tripolis, from Mexico, and England,
From Lisbon, Barbary, and India?

And not one vessel scape the dreadful touch
Of merchant-marring rocks?

Saler. Not one, my lord.

Besides, it should appear, that if he had 275

The present money to discharge the Jew,
He would not take it. Never did I know

A creature, that did bear the shape of man,
So keen and greedy to confound a man.

He plies the Duke at morning and at night, 280

And doth impeach the freedom of the state,
If they deny him justice. Twenty merchants,

The Duke himself, and the magnificoes
Of greatest port, have all persuaded with him;

But none can drive him from the envious plea
Of forfeiture, of justice, and his bond. 285

Jes. When I was with him I have heard him
swear

To Tubal and to Chus, his countrymen,
That he would rather have Antonio's flesh 290

Than twenty times the value of the sum
That he did owe him; and I know, my lord,
If law, authority, and power deny not,
It will go hard with poor Antonio.

Por. Is it your dear friend that is thus in trouble?

Bass. The dearest friend to me, the kindest
man, 295

The best-condition'd and unwearied spirit
In doing courtesies, and one in whom

The ancient Roman honour more appears
Than any that draws breath in Italy.

Por. What sum owes he the Jew? 300

Bass. For me, three thousand ducats.

Por. What, no more?

Pay him six thousand, and deface the bond;
Double six thousand, and then treble that,

Before a friend of this description

Shall lose a hair through Bassanio's fault, 305

First go with me to church and call me wife,
And then away to Venice to your friend;

For never shall you lie by Portia's side

With an unquiet soul. You shall have gold

To pay the petty debt twenty times over. 310

When it is paid, bring your true friend along.

My maid Nerissa and myself meantime

Will live as maids and widows. Come, away!

For you shall hence upon your wedding-day.
Bid your friends welcome, show a merry cheer; 315

Since you are dear bought, I will love you
dear.

But let me hear the letter of your friend.

[Bass. Reads.] "Sweet Bassanio, my ships have all miscarried, my creditors grow cruel, my estate is very low, my bond to the Jew is forfeit; and since in paying it, it is impos- 320 sible I should live, all debts are cleared between you and I, if I might but see you at my death. Notwithstanding, use your pleasure; if your love do not persuade you to come, let not my letter." 325

Por. O love, dispatch all business, and be gone!

Bass. Since I have your good leave to go
away,

I will make haste; but, till I come again,

No bed shall e'er be guilty of my stay,

No rest be interposer 'twixt us twain. 330
[Exeunt.

[SCENE III. Venice. A street.]

Enter the Jew [SHYLOCK], SALARINO, ANTONIO, and Gaoler.

Shy. Gaoler, look to him; tell not me of mercy.

This is the fool that lent out money gratis!

Gaoler, look to him.

Ant.

Hear me yet, good Shylock.
Shy. I'll have my bond; speak not against my bond.

I have sworn an oath that I will have my bond. 335

Thou call'st me dog before thou hadst a cause;

But, since I am a dog, beware my fangs.

The Duke shall grant me justice. I do wonder,

Thou naughty gaoler, that thou art so fond

To come abroad with him at his request. 340

Ant. I pray thee, hear me speak.

Shy. I'll have my bond; I will not hear thee speak.

I'll have my bond; and therefore speak no more.

I'll not be made a soft and dull-ey'd fool,
To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yield
To Christian intercessors. Follow not; 16
I'll have no speaking; I will have my bond.
[Exit.]

Salar. It is the most impenetrable cur
That ever kept with men.

Ant. Let him alone;
I'll follow him no more with bootless prayers.
He seeks my life; his reason well I know: 21
I oft deliver'd from his forfeitures
Many that have at times made moan to me;
Therefore he hates me.

Salar. I am sure the Duke
Will never grant this forfeiture to hold. 25

Ant. The Duke cannot deny the course of law;

For the commodity that strangers have
With us in Venice, if it be denied,
Will much impeach the justice of the state,
Since that the trade and profit of the city 30
Consisteth of all nations. Therefore, go.
These griefs and losses have so bated me,
That I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh
To-morrow to my bloody creditor.
Well, gaoler, on. Pray God, Bassanio come 35
To see me pay his debt, and then I care not!
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. Belmont. A room in Portia's house.]

Enter PORTIA, NERISSA, LORENZO, JESSICA, and [BALTHASAR,] a man of Portia's.

Lor. Madam, although I speak it in your presence,

You have a noble and a true conceit
Of god-like amity, which appears most strongly
In bearing thus the absence of your lord.
But if you knew to whom you show this hon- 5
our,

How true a gentleman you send relief,
How dear a lover of my lord your husband,
I know you would be prouder of the work
Than customary bounty can enforce you.

Por. I never did repent for doing good, 10
Nor shall not now: for in companions

That do converse and waste the time together,
Whose souls do bear an equal yoke of love,
There must be needs a like proportion
Of lineaments, of manners, and of spirit; 15

Which makes me think that this Antonio,
Being the bosom lover of my lord,
Must needs be like my lord. If it be so,
How little is the cost I have bestowed
In purchasing the semblance of my soul 20
From out the state of hellish misery!

This comes too near the praising of myself,
Therefore no more of it. Hear other things.
Lorenzo, I commit into your hands

The husbandry and manage of my house 25
Until my lord's return. For mine own part,

I have toward heaven breath'd a secret vow
To live in prayer and contemplation,
Only attended by Nerissa here,
Until her husband and my lord's return. 30

There is a monastery two miles off;
And there will we abide. I do desire you
Not to deny this imposition,
The which my love and some necessity
Now lays upon you.

Lor. Madam, with all my heart
I shall obey you in all fair commands. 35

Por. My people do already know my mind,
And will acknowledge you and Jessica
In place of Lord Bassanio and myself.
And so farewell till we shall meet again. 40

Lor. Fair thoughts and happy hours attend on you!

Jes. I wish your ladyship all heart's content.

Por. I thank you for your wish, and am well
pleas'd

To wish it back on you. Fare you well, Jessica.
[Exeunt [Jessica and Lorenzo].] 45

Now, Balthasar,
As I have ever found thee honest-true,
So let me find thee still. Take this same letter,
And use thou all the endeavour of a man
In speed to [Padua]. See thou render this Into my cousin's hands, Doctor Bellario; 50
And, look, what notes and garments he doth give thee,

Bring them, I pray thee, with imagin'd speed
Unto the traject, to the common ferry Which trades to Venice. Waste no time in words,

But get thee gone. I shall be there before
thee. 55

Balth. Madam, I go with all convenient speed. [Exit.]

Por. Come on, Nerissa; I have work in hand
That you yet know not of. We'll see our husbands

Before they think of us.

Ner. Shall they see us?

Por. They shall, Nerissa; but in such a habit, 60

That they shall think we are accomplished
With that we lack. I'll hold thee any wager,
When we are both accoutred like young men,
I'll prove the prettier fellow of the two,

And wear my dagger with the braver grace, 65
And speak between the change of man and boy
With a reed voice, and turn two mining steps
Into a manly stride, and speak of frays

Like a fine bragging youth, and tell quaint lies,
How honourable ladies sought my love, 70

Which I denying, they fell sick and died.
I could not do withal. Then I'll repent,

And wish, for all that, that I had not kill'd
them;

And twenty of these puny lies I'll tell, 75
That men shall swear I have discontinued school
Above a twelvemonth. I have within my mind
A thousand raw tricks of these bragging Jacks,

Which I will practise.

Ner. Why, shall we turn to men?

Por. Fie, what a question's that,
If thou wert near a lewd interpreter! 80

But come, I'll tell thee all my whole device
When I am in my coach, which stays for us
At the park gate; and therefore haste away,
For we must measure twenty miles to-day.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE V. The same. A garden.]

Enter Clown [LAUNCELOT] and JESSICA.

Laun. Yes, truly; for, look you, the sins of the father are to be laid upon the children; therefore, I promise ye, I fear you. I was always plain with you, and so now I speak my agitation of the matter; therefore be o' good ¹⁵ cheer, for truly I think you are damn'd. There is but one hope in it that can do you any good; and that is but a kind of bastard hope neither.

Jes. And what hope is that, I pray thee? ¹⁰

Laun. Marry, you may partly hope that your father got you not, that you are not the Jew's daughter.

Jes. That were a kind of bastard hope, indeed. So the sins of my mother should be visited upon me. ¹⁶

Laun. Truly then I fear you are damn'd both by father and mother; thus when I shun Scylla, your father, I fall into Charybdis, your mother. Well, you are gone both ways. ²⁰

Jes. I shall be sav'd by my husband. He hath made me a Christian.

Laun. Truly, the more to blame he; we were Christians enow before; e'en as many as could well live, one by another. This making of ²⁵ Christians will raise the price of hogs. If we grow all to be pork-eaters, we shall not shortly have a rasher on the coals for money.

Enter LORENZO.

Jes. I'll tell my husband, Launcelot, what you say. Here he comes. ³⁰

Lor. I shall grow jealous of you shortly, Launcelot, if you thus get my wife into corners.

Jes. Nay, you need not fear us, Lorenzo; Launcelot and I are out. He tells me flatly there is no mercy for me in heaven because I ³⁵ am a Jew's daughter; and he says, you are no good member of the commonwealth, for in converting Jews to Christians, you raise the price of pork. ³⁹

Lor. I shall answer that better to the commonwealth than you can the getting up of the negro's belly. The Moor is with child by you, Launcelot.

Laun. It is much that the Moor should be more than reason; but if she be less than an honest woman, she is indeed more than I ⁴⁵ took her for.

Lor. How every fool can play upon the word! I think the best grace of wit will shortly turn into silence, and discourse grow commendable in none only but parrots. Go ⁵⁰ in, sirrah; bid them prepare for dinner.

Laun. That is done, sir; they have all stomachs. ⁵⁴

Lor. Goodly Lord, what a wit-snapper are you! Then bid them prepare dinner.

Laun. That is done too, sir; only cover is the word.

Lor. Will you cover then, sir?

Laun. Not so, sir, neither; I know my duty.

Lor. Yet more quarrelling with occasion! ⁶⁰ Wilt thou show the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant? I pray thee, understand a plain man in his plain meaning: go to thy fellows; bid them cover the table, serve in the meat, and we will come in to dinner. ⁶⁵

Laun. For the table, sir, it shall be serv'd in; for the meat, sir, it shall be cover'd; for your coming in to dinner, sir, why, let it be as humours and conceits shall govern. [Exit.]

Lor. O dear discretion, how his words are suited! ⁷⁰

The fool hath planted in his memory
An army of good words; and I do know
A many fools, that stand in better place,
Garnish'd like him, that for a tricksy word
Defy the matter. How far'st thou, Jessica? ⁷⁵
And now, good sweet, say thy opinion,
How dost thou like the Lord Bassanio's wife?

Jes. Past all expressing. It is very meet
The Lord Bassanio live an upright life;
For, having such a blessing in his lady, ⁸⁰
He finds the joys of heaven here on earth;
And if on earth he do not mean it, then
In reason he should never come to heaven.

Why, if two gods should play some heavenly
match

And on the wager lay two earthly women, ⁸⁵
And Portia one, there must be something else
Pawn'd with the other, for the poor rude
world

Hath not her fellow.

Lor. Even such a husband.

Hast thou of me as she is for a wife.

Jes. Nay, but ask my opinion too of that. ⁹⁰

Lor. I will anon; first, let us go to dinner.

Jes. Nay, let me praise you while I have a stomach.

Lor. No, pray thee, let it serve for table-talk;

Then, howsoever thou speak'st, 'mong other things

I shall digest it.

Jes. Well, I'll set you forth. ⁹⁵

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV

[SCENE I. Venice. A court of justice.]

Enter the DUKE, the Magnificoes, ANTONIO, BASSANIO, GRATIANO [SALERIO, and others].

Duke. What, is Antonio here?

Ant. Ready, so please your Grace.

Duke. I am sorry for thee. Thou art come to answer

A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch

Uncapable of pity, void and empty ⁵

From any dram of mercy.

Ant. I have heard

Your Grace hath ta'en great pains to qualify
His rigorous course; but since he stands obdurate

And that no lawful means can carry me
Out of his envy's reach, I do oppose 10
My patience to his fury, and am arm'd
To suffer, with a quietness of spirit,
The very tyranny and rage of his.

Duke. Go one, and call the Jew into the court.

Saler. He is ready at the door. He comes, my lord. 15

Enter SHYLOCK.

Duke. Make room, and let him stand before our face.

Shylock, the world thinks, and I think so too,
That thou but lead'st this fashion of thy malice

To the last hour of act; and then 't is thought
Thou'lt show thy mercy and remorse more strange 20

Than is thy strange apparent cruelty;
And where thou now exact'st the penalty,
Which is a pound of this poor merchant's flesh,
Thou wilt not only loose the forfeiture,
But, touch'd with humane gentleness and love,
Forgive a moiety of the principal; 25
Glancing an eye of pity on his losses,
That have of late so huddled on his back,
Enow to press a royal merchant down
And pluck commiseration of his state 30
From brassy bosoms and rough hearts of flint,
From stubborn Turks and Tartars, never train'd

To offices of tender courtesy.

We all expect a gentle answer, Jew.

Shy. I have possess'd your Grace of what I purpose; 35

And by our holy Sabbath have I sworn
To have the due and forfeit of my bond.
If you deny it, let the danger light
Upon your charter and your city's freedom.
You'll ask me why I rather choose to have 40
A weight of carrion flesh than to receive Three thousand ducats. I'll not answer that;
But say it is my humour. Is it answer'd?
What if my house be troubled with a rat
And I be pleas'd to give ten thousand ducats 45
To have it ban'd? What, are you answer'd yet?

Some men there are love not a gaping pig;
Some, that are mad if they behold a cat;
And others, when the bagpipe sings i' the nose,
Cannot contain their urine: for affection, 50
Master of passion, sways it to the mood
Of what it likes or loathes. Now, for your answer:

As there is no firm reason to be rend' red
Why he cannot abide a gaping pig;
Why he, a harmless necessary cat; 55
Why he, a woollen bagpipe; but of force
Must yield to such inevitable shame
As to offend, himself being offended;
So can I give no reason, nor I will not,
More than a lodg'd hate and a certain loathing
I bear Antonio, that I follow thus 61
A losing suit against him. Are you answer'd?

Bass. This is no answer, thou unfeeling man,
To excuse the current of thy cruelty.

Shy. I am not bound to please thee with my answer. 65

Bass. Do all men kill the things they do not love?

Shy. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?

Bass. Every offence is not a hate at first.

Shy. What, wouldst thou have a serpent sting thee twice?

Ant. I pray you, think, you question with the Jew. 70

You may as well go stand upon the beach
And bid the main flood bate his usual height;
You may as well use question with the wolf
Why he hath made the ewe bleat for the lamb;
You may as well forbid the mountain pines 75
To wag their high tops and to make no noise
When they are fretten with the gusts of heaven;
You may as well do any thing most hard,
As seek to soften that—than which what's harder?—

His Jewish heart. Therefore, I do beseech you,
Make no more offers, use no farther means, 81
But with all brief and plain conveniency
Let me have judgement and the Jew his will.

Bass. For thy three thousand ducats here is six.

Shy. If every ducat in six thousand ducats
Were in six parts, and every part a ducat, 85
I would not draw them; I would have my bond.

Duke. How shalt thou hope for mercy, rendering none?

Shy. What judgement shall I dread, doing no wrong?

You have among you many a purchas'd slave, 90
Which, like your asses and your dogs and mules,

You use in abject and in slavish parts,
Because you bought them. Shall I say to you,
"Let them be free! Marry them to your heirs!
Why sweat they under burdens? Let their beds 95

Be made as soft as yours and let their palates Be season'd with such viands"? You will answer,

"The slaves are ours." So do I answer you.
The pound of flesh, which I demand of him,
Is dearly bought; 't is mine and I will have it.
If you deny me, fie upon your law!
There is no force in the decrees of Venice. 101
I stand for judgement! Answer: shall I have
it?

Duke. Upon my power I may dismiss this court,

Unless Bellario, a learned doctor, 105
Whom I have sent for to determine this,
Come here to-day.

Saler. My lord, here stays without
A messenger with letters from the doctor,
New come from Padua.

Duke. Bring us the letters; call the messenger. 110

Bass. Good cheer, Antonio! What, man, courage yet!

The Jew shall have my flesh, blood, bones, and
all,

Ere thou shalt lose for me one drop of blood.

Ant. I am a tainted wether of the flock,
Meetest for death. The weakest kind of fruit
Drops earliest to the ground, and so let me. ¹¹⁸
You cannot better be employ'd, Bassanio,
Than to live still and write mine epitaph.

Enter NERISSA [dressed like a lawyer's clerk].

Duke. Came you from Padua, from Bellario?

Ner. From both, my lord. Bellario greets your Grace. ^[Presenting a letter.]

Bass. Why dost thou whet thy knife so earnestly? ¹²¹

Shy. To cut the forfeiture from that bankrupt there.

Gra. Not on thy sole, but on thy soul, harsh Jew,

Thou mak'st thy knife keen; but no metal can,
No, not the hangman's axe, bear half the keenness ¹²⁵

Of thy sharp envy. Can no prayers pierce thee?

Shy. No, none that thou hast wit enough to make.

Gra. O, be thou damn'd, inexecrable dog!

And for thy life let justice be accus'd.
Thou almost mak'st me waver in my faith ¹³⁰

To hold opinion with Pythagoras,
That souls of animals infuse themselves

Into the trunks of men. Thy currish spirit Govern'd a wolf, who, hang'd for human slaughter,

Even from the gallows did his fell soul fleet, ¹³⁵

And, whilst thou lay'st in thy unhallowed dam,

Infus'd itself in thee; for thy desires
Are volwish, bloody, starv'd, and ravenous.

Shy. Till thou canst rail the seal from off my bond,

Thou but offend'st thy lungs to speak so loud.
Repair thy wit, good youth, or it will fall ¹⁴¹

To cureless ruin. I stand here for law.

Duke. This letter from Bellario doth commend

A young and learned doctor to our court.
Where is he?

Ner. He attendeth here hard by, ¹⁴⁵

To know your answer, whether you'll admit him.

Duke. With all my heart. Some three or four of you Go give him courteous conduct to this place.

Meantime the court shall hear Bellario's letter. ¹⁴⁹

[Clerk. Reads.] "Your Grace shall understand that at the receipt of your letter I am very sick; but in the instant that your messenger came, in loving visitation was with me a young doctor of Rome. His name is Balthazar. I acquainted him with the cause in controversy between the Jew and Antonio the merchant. ¹⁵⁵

We turned o'er many books together. He is furnished with my opinion; which, bett'ed with his own learning, the greatness whereof I cannot enough commend, comes with him, at my importunity, to fill up your Grace's request in my stead. I beseech you, let his lack of years be no impediment to let him lack a reverend estimation; for I never knew so young a body with so old a head. I leave him to your gracious acceptance, whose trial shall better ¹⁶³ publish his commendation."

Enter PORTIA for BALTHAZAR.

Duke. You hear the learn'd Bellario, what he writes;

And here, I take it, is the doctor come.
Give me your hand. Come you from old Bellario?

Por. I did, my lord.

Duke. You are welcome; take your place.
Are you acquainted with the difference ¹⁷¹

That holds this present question in the court?

Por. I am informed thoroughly of the cause.
Which is the merchant here, and which the Jew?

Duke. Antonio and old Shylock, both stand forth. ¹⁷⁵

Por. Is your name Shylock?

Shy. Shylock is my name.

Por. Of a strange nature is the suit you follow;

Yet in such rule that the Venetian law
Cannot impugn you as you do proceed.

You stand within his danger, do you not? ¹⁸⁰

Ant. Ay, so he says.

Por. Do you confess the bond?

Ant. I do.

Por. Then must the Jew be merciful.

Shy. On what compulsion must I? Tell me that.

Por. The quality of mercy is not strain'd.
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven ¹⁸⁵

Upon the place beneath. It is twice blest:

It blesseth him that gives and him that takes.

'T is mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes

The throned monarch better than his crown.

His sceptre shows the force of temporal power,

The attribute to awe and majesty, ¹⁹¹

Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;

But mercy is above the sceptred sway;

It is enthroned in the hearts of kings;

It is an attribute to God himself; ¹⁹⁵

And earthly power doth then show likest God's

When mercy seasons justice. Therefore, Jew,

Though justice be thy plea, consider this,

That, in the course of justice, none of us

Should see salvation. We do pray for mercy, ²⁰⁰

And that same prayer doth teach us all to render

The deeds of mercy. I have spoke thus much

To mitigate the justice of thy plea,

Which if thou follow, this strict court of Venice

Must needs give sentence 'gainst the merchant there. ²⁰⁵

Shy. My deeds upon my head! I crave the law,

The penalty and forfeit of my bond.

Por. Is he not able to discharge the money?

Bass. Yes, here I tender it for him in the court;

Yea, twice the sum. If that will not suffice, ²¹⁵

I will be bound to pay it ten times o'er,

On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart.

If this will not suffice, it must appear
That malice bears down truth. And I beseech
you,

Wrest once the law to your authority; 215
To do a great right, do a little wrong,
And curb this cruel devil of his will.

Por. It must not be; there is no power in Venice

Can alter a decree established.
'T will be recorded for a precedent, 220
And many an error by the same example
Will rush into the state. It cannot be.

Shy. A Daniel come to judgement! yea, a Daniel!

O wise young judge, how I do honour thee!
Por. I pray you, let me look upon the bond.

Shy. Here 't is, most reverend doctor, here it is. 225

Por. Shylock, there's thrice thy money of-f'red thee.

Shy. An oath, an oath, I have an oath in heaven!

Shall I lay perjury upon my soul?
No, not for Venice.

Por. Why, this bond is forfeit;
And lawfully by this the Jew may claim 231

A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off
Nearest the merchant's heart. Be merciful;

Take thrice thy money; bid me tear the bond.
Shy. When it is paid according to the ten- 235

our,
It doth appear you are a worthy judge;

You know the law, your exposition Hath been most sound. I charge you by the law,

Whereof you are a well-deserving pillar,
Proceed to judgement. By my soul I swear 240

There is no power in the tongue of man
To alter me. I stay here on my bond.

Ant. Most heartily I do beseech the court
To give the judgement.

Por. Why then, thus it is:
You must prepare your bosom for his knife,— 245

Shy. O noble judge! O excellent young
man!

Por. For the intent and purpose of the law
Hath full relation to the penalty,

Which here appeareth due upon the bond.
Shy. 'T is very true. O wise and upright 250

judge!
How much more elder art thou than thy looks!

Por. Therefore lay bare your bosom.
Shy. Ay, his breast;

So says the bond; doth it not, noble judge?
"Nearest his heart;" those are the very
words.

Por. It is so. Are there balance here to weigh 255

The flesh?
Shy. I have them ready.

Por. Have by some surgeon, Shylock, on your charge,

To stop his wounds, lest he do bleed to death.
Shy. Is it so nominated in the bond?

Por. It is not so express'd; but what of
that? 260

'T were good you do so much for charity.

Shy. I cannot find it; 't is not in the bond.

Por. You, merchant, have you anything to say?

Ant. But little; I am arm'd and well pre-par'd.

Give me your hand, Bassanio; fare you well!
Grieve not that I am fallen to this for you; 265

For herein Fortune shows herself more kind
Than is her custom. It is still her use

To let the wretched man outlive his wealth,
To view with hollow eye and wrinkled brow 270

An age of poverty; from which lingering penance

Of such a misery doth she cut me off.
Commend me to your honourable wife.

Tell her the process of Antonio's end; 274
Say how I lov'd you, speak me fair in death,

And, when the tale is told, bid her be judge
Whether Bassanio had not once a love.

Repent but you that you shall lose your friend,
And he repents not that he pays your debt;

For if the Jew do cut but deep enough,
I'll pay it instantly with all my heart.

Bass. Antonio, I am married to a wife
Which is as dear to me as life itself;

But life itself, my wife, and all the world,
Are not with me esteem'd above thy life. 281

I would lose all, ay, sacrifice them all
Here to this devil, to deliver you.

Por. Your wife would give you little thanks for that,

If she were by, to hear you make the offer.
Gra. I have a wife, who, I protest, I love;

I would she were in heaven, so she could 291
Entreat some power to change this curish

Jew.
Ner. 'T is well you offer it behind her back.

The wish would make else an unquiet house.
Shy. These be the Christian husbands. I 295 have a daughter;

Would any of the stock of Barrabas

Had been her husband rather than a Christian!
[Aside.]

We trifle time. I pray thee, pursue sentence.
Por. A pound of that same merchant's flesh 301 is thine.

The court awards it, and the law doth give it.

Shy. Most rightful judge!

Por. And you must cut this flesh from off his breast.

The law allows it, and the court awards it.
Shy. Most learned judge! A sentence!

Come, prepare!

Por. Tarry a little; there is something else. 305

This bond doth give thee here no jot of blood;
The words expressly are "a pound of flesh."

Take then thy bond, take thou thy pound of flesh;

But, in the cutting it, if thou dost shed
One drop of Christian blood, thy lands and goods 311

Are, by the laws of Venice, confiscate
Unto the state of Venice.

Gra. O upright judge! Mark, Jew: O learned judge!

Shy. Is that the law?
Por. Thyself shall see the act;

For, as thou urgest justice, be assur'd
Thou shalt have justice, more than thou desir'st.

Gra. O learned judge! Mark, Jew: a learned judge!

Shy. I take this offer, then; pay the bond thrice

And let the Christian go.

Bass. Here is the money.

Por. Soft!

The Jew shall have all justice. Soft! no haste. He shall have nothing but the penalty.

Gra. O Jew! an upright judge, a learned judge!

Por. Therefore prepare thee to cut off the flesh.

Shed thou no blood, nor cut thou less nor more But just a pound of flesh. If thou tak'st more Or less than a just pound, be it but so much As makes it light or heavy in the substance Or the division of the twentieth part

Of one poor scruple, nay, if the scale do turn But in the estimation of a hair,

Thou diest and all thy goods are confiscate.

Gra. A second Daniel! A Daniel, Jew!

Now, infidel, I have you on the hip.

Por. Why doth the Jew pause? Take thy forfeiture.

Shy. Give me my principal, and let me go.

Bass. I have it ready for thee; here it is.

Por. He hath refus'd it in the open court.

He shall have merely justice and his bond.

Gra. A Daniel, still say I, a second Daniel!

I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word.

Shy. Shall I not have barely my principal?

Por. Thou shalt have nothing but the forfeiture,

To be so taken at thy peril, Jew.

Shy. Why, then the devil give him good of it!

I'll stay no longer question.

Por. Tarry, Jew:

The law hath yet another hold on you.

It is enacted in the laws of Venice,

If it be prov'd against an alien

That by direct or indirect attempts

He seek the life of any citizen,

The party 'gainst the which he doth contrive

Shall seize one half his goods; the other half

Comes to the privy coffer of the state;

And the offender's life lies in the mercy

Of the Duke only, 'gainst all other voice:

In which predicament, I say, thou stand'st;

For it appears, by manifest proceeding,

That indirectly, and directly too,

Thou hast contriv'd against the very life

Of the defendant; and thou hast incur'd

The danger formerly by me rehears'd.

Down therefore and beg mercy of the Duke.

Gra. Beg that thou mayst have leave to hang thyself;

And yet, thy wealth being forfeit to the state, Thou hast not left the value of a cord;

Therefore thou must be hang'd at the state's charge.

Duke. That thou shalt see the difference of our spirits,

I pardon thee thy life before thou ask it.

For half thy wealth, it is Antonio's;

The other half comes to the general state,

Which humbleness may drive unto a fine.

Por. Ay, for the state, not for Antonio.

Shy. Nay, take my life and all; pardon not that.

You take my house when you do take the prop That doth sustain my house; you take my life When you do take the means whereby I live.

Por. What mercy can you render him, Antonio?

Gra. A halter gratis; nothing else, for God's sake.

Ant. So please my lord the Duke and all the court

To quit the fine for one half of his goods,

I am content; so he will let me have

The other half in use, to render it,

Upon his death, unto the gentleman

That lately stole his daughter:

Two things provided more, that, for this favour,

He presently become a Christian;

The other, that he do record a gift,

Here in the court, of all he dies possess'd,

Unto his son Lorenzo and his daughter.

Duke. He shall do this, or else I do recant

The pardon that I late pronounced here:

Por. Art thou contented, Jew? What dost thou say?

Shy. I am content.

Por. Clerk, draw a deed of gift.

Shy. I pray you, give me leave to go from hence.

I am not well. Send the deed after me,

And I will sign it.

Duke. Get thee gone, but do it.

Gra. In christening shalt thou have two god-fathers:

Had I been judge, thou shouldst have had ten more,

To bring thee to the gallows, not the font.

[Exit [Shylock].

Duke. Sir, I entreat you home with me to dinner.

Por. I humbly do desire your Grace of pardon.

I must away this night toward Padua,

And it is meet I presently set forth.

Duke. I am sorry that your leisure serves you not.

Antonio, gratify this gentleman;

For, in my mind, you are much bound to him.

[Exeunt Duke and his train.

Bass. Most worthy gentleman, I and my friend

Have by your wisdom been this day acquitted Of grievous penalties; in lieu whereof

Three thousand ducats, due unto the Jew,

We freely cope your courteous pains withal.

Ant. And stand indebted, over and above,

In love and service to you evermore.

Por. He is well paid that is well satisfied;

And I, delivering you, am satisfied

And therein do account myself well paid.

My mind was never yet more mercenary.

I pray you, know me when we meet again.
 I wish you well, and so I take my leave. 420
Bass. Dear sir, of force I must attempt you further.

Take some remembrance of us, as a tribute,
 Not as a fee. Grant me two things, I pray you,
 Not to deny me, and to pardon me.

Por. You press me far, and therefore I will yield. 425

[To Ant.] Give me your gloves, I'll wear them for your sake;

[To Bass.] And, for your love, I'll take this ring from you.

Do not draw back your hand; I'll take no more;

And you in love shall not deny me this.

Bass. This ring, good sir, alas, it is a trifle! I will not shame myself to give you this. 431

Por. I will have nothing else but only this; And now methinks I have a mind to it.

Bass. There's more depends on this than on the value.

The dearest ring in Venice will I give you, 435
 And find it out by proclamation;

Only for this, I pray you, pardon me.

Por. I see, sir, you are liberal in offers. You taught me first to beg; and now methinks

You teach me how a beggar should be answer'd. 440

Bass. Good sir, this ring was given me by my wife;

And when she put it on, she made me vow That I should neither sell nor give nor lose it.

Por. That'seue serves many men to save their gifts.

An if your wife be not a mad-woman, 445
 And know how well I have deserv'd the ring,

She would not hold out enemy for ever, For giving it to me. Well, peace be with you!

[Exeunt [Portia and Nerissa].]
Ant. My Lord Bassanio, let him have the ring.

Let his deservings and my love withal 450
 Be valued against your wife's commandment.

Bass. Go, Gratiano, run and overtake him; Give him the ring, and bring him, if thou canst, Unto Antonio's house. Away! make haste.

[Exit Gratiano.]
 Come, you and I will thither presently; 455
 And in the morning early will we both

Fly toward Belmont. Come, Antonio.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. The same. A street.]

Enter PORTIA and NERISSA.

Por. Inquire the Jew's house out, give him this deed

And let him sign it. We'll away to-night, And be a day before our husbands home.

This deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.

Enter GRATIANO.

Gra. Fair sir, you are well o'erta'en. 5
 My Lord Bassanio upon more advice

Hath sent you here this ring, and doth entreat Your company at dinner.

Por. That cannot be. His ring I do accept most thankfully,

And so, I pray you, tell him; furthermore, 10
 I pray you, show my youth old Shylock's house.

Gra. That will I do.

Ner. Sir, I would speak with you. [Aside to Por.] I'll see if I can get my husband's ring,

Which I did make him swear to keep for ever.

Por. [Aside to Ner.] Thou mayst, I warrant. We shall have old swearing 15

That they did give the rings away to men; But we'll outface them, and outswear them too.

[Aloud.] Away! make haste. Thou know'st where I will tarry.

Ner. Come, good sir, will you show me to this house? [Exeunt.]

ACT V

[SCENE I. Belmont. Avenue to Portia's house.]

Enter LORENZO and JESSICA.

Lor. The moon shines bright. In such a night as this,

When the sweet wind did gently kiss the trees

And they did make no noise, in such a night Troilus methinks mounted the Trojan walls,

And sigh'd his soul toward the Grecian tents, 5
 Where Cressid lay that night.

Jes. In such a night Did Thisbe fearfully o'ertrip the dew,

And saw the lion's shadow ere himself And ran dismay'd away.

Lor. In such a night Stood Dido with a willow in her hand 10

Upon the wild sea banks, and waft her love To come again to Carthage.

Jes. In such a night Medea gathered the enchanted herbs

That did renew old Æson.

Lor. In such a night Did Jessica steal from the wealthy Jew, 15

And with an unthrift love did run from Venice As far as Belmont.

Jes. In such a night Did young Lorenzo swear he lov'd her well, Stealing her soul with many vows of faith And ne'er a true one.

Lor. In such a night Did pretty Jessica, like a little shrew,

Slander her love, and he forgave it her.

Jes. I would out-night you, did no body come; But, hark, I hear the footing of a man.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Lor. Who comes so fast in silence of the night? 25

Mess. A friend.

Lor. A friend! what friend? Your name, I pray you, friend?

Mess. Stephano is my name; and I bring word

My mistress will before the break of day
Be here at Belmont. She doth stray about 30
By holy crosses, where she kneels and prays
For happy wedlock hours.

Lor. Who comes with her?

Mess. None but a holy hermit and her maid.
I pray you, is my master yet return'd?

Lor. He is not, nor we have not heard from him. 35

But go we in, I pray thee, Jessica,
And ceremoniously let us prepare
Some welcome for the mistress of the house.

Enter Clown [LAUNCELOT].

Laun. Sola, sola! wo ha, ho! sola, sola!

Lor. Who calls? 40

Laun. Sola! did you see Master Lorenzo?
Master Lorenzo, sola, sola!

Lor. Leave hollaing, man; here.

Laun. Sola! where? where?

Lor. Here. 45

Laun. Tell him there's a post come from my master, with his horn full of good news.
My master will be here ere morning. [Exit.]

Lor. Sweet soul, let's in, and there expect their coming.

And yet no matter; why should we go in? 50
My friend Stephano, signify, I pray you,
Within the house, your mistress is at hand;
And bring your music forth into the air.

[Exit Mess.]

How sweet the moonlight sleeps upon this bank!

Here will we sit and let the sounds of music 55
Creep in our ears. Soft stillness and the night
Become the touches of sweet harmony.

Sit, Jessica. Look how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlaid with patines of bright gold.
There's not the smallest orb which thou be- 60
hold'st

But in his motion like an angel sings,
Still quiring to the young-ey'd cherubins;
Such harmony is in immortal souls;
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay 65
Doth grossly close it in, we cannot hear it.

[Enter Musicians.]

Come, ho! and wake Diana with a hymn;
With sweetest touches pierce your mistress' ear
And draw her home with music. [Music.]

Jes. I am never merry when I hear sweet music.

Lor. The reason is, your spirits are attentive;
For do but note a wild and wanton herd, 71
Or race of youthful and unhandled colts,
Fetchng mad bounds, bellowing and neighing
loud,

Which is the hot condition of their blood,
If they but hear perchance a trumpet sound, 75
Or any air of music touch their ears,
You shall perceive them make a mutual stand,
Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze
By the sweet power of music; therefore the poet
Did feign that Orpheus drew trees, stones, and 80
floods;

Since nought so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But music for the time doth change his nature.
The man that hath no music in himself,
Nor is not mov'd with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils. 85
The motions of his spirit are dull as night
And his affections dark as Erebus.
Let no such man be trusted. Mark the music.

Enter PORTIA and NERISSA.

Por. That light we see is burning in my hall.
How far that little candle throws his beams! 90
So shines a good deed in a naughty world.

Ner. When the moon shone, we did not see the candle.

Por. So doth the greater glory dim the less.
A substitute shines brightly as a king
Until a king be by; and then his state 95
Empties itself, as doth an inland brook
Into the main of waters. Music! Hark!

Ner. It is your music, madam, of the house.

Por. Nothing is good, I see, without respect;
Methinks it sounds much sweeter than by
day. 100

Ner. Silence bestows that virtue on it, madam.

Por. The crow doth sing as sweetly as the lark

When neither is attended, and I think
The nightingale, if she should sing by day,
When every goose is cackling, would be thought 105
No better a musician than the wren.
How many things by season season'd are
To their right praise and true perfection!
Peace, ho! the moon sleeps with Endymion
And would not be awak'd. [Music ceases.]

Lor. That is the voice,
Or I am much deceiv'd, of Portia. 111

Por. He knows me as the blind man knows the cuckoo,
By the bad voice.

Lor. Dear lady, welcome home!
Por. We have been praying for our husbands' welfare, 114

Which speed, we hope, the better for our words.
Are they return'd?

Lor. Madam, they are not yet;
But there is come a messenger before,
To signify their coming.

Por. Go in, Nerissa;
Give order to my servants that they take
No note at all of our being absent hence; 120
Nor you, Lorenzo; Jessica, nor you.

[A trumpet sounds.]

Lor. Your husband is at hand; I hear his trumpet.

We are no tell-tales, madam; fear you not.

Por. This night methinks is but the daylight sick;
It looks a little paler. 'Tis a day, 125
Such as the day is when the sun is hid.

Enter BASSANIO, ANTONIO, GRATIANO, and their followers.

Bass. We should hold day with the Antipodes,
If you would walk in absence of the sun.

Por. Let me give light, but let me not be light;
For a light wife doth make a heavy husband,
And never be Bassanio so for me. 131
But God sort all! You're welcome home, my lord.

Bass. I thank you, madam. Give welcome to my friend.

This is the man, this is Antonio,
To whom I am so infinitely bound. 135

Por. You should in all sense be much bound to him,

For, as I hear, he was much bound for you.

Ant. No more than I am well acquitted of.

Por. Sir, you are very welcome to our house.

It must appear in other ways than words, 140
Therefore I scant this breathing courtesy.

Gra. [To Ner.] By yonder moon I swear you do me wrong;

In faith, I gave it to the judge's clerk.

Would he were gelt that had it, for my part,
Since you do take it, love, so much at heart. 145

Por. A quarrel, ho, already! What's the matter?

Gra. About a hoop of gold, a paltry ring

That she did give me, whose posy was

For all the world like cutler's poetry

Upon a knife, "Love me, and leave me not."

Ner. What talk you of the posy or the value? 151

You swore to me, when I did give it you,
That you would wear it till your hour of death,

And that it should lie with you in your grave.
Though not for me, yet for your vehement oaths, 155

You should have been respective and have kept it.

Gave it a judge's clerk! No, God's my judge,
The clerk will ne'er wear hair on 's face that had it.

Gra. He will, an if he live to be a man.

Ner. Ay, if a woman live to be a man. 160

Gra. Now, by this hand, I gave it to a youth,

A kind of boy, a little scrubbed boy,

No higher than thyself, the judge's clerk,

A prating boy, that begg'd it as a fee.

I could not for my heart deny it him. 165

Por. You were to blame, I must be plain with you,

To part so slightly with your wife's first gift;
A thing stuck on with oaths upon your finger

And so riveted with faith unto your flesh.

I gave my love a ring, and made him swear 170

Never to part with it; and here he stands.

I dare be sworn for him he would not leave it
Nor pluck it from his finger, for the wealth

That the world masters. Now, in faith, Gratiano,

You give your wife too unkind a cause of grief.

An't were to me, I should be mad at it. 175

Bass. [Aside.] Why, I were best to cut my left hand off

And swear I lost the ring defending it.

Gra. My Lord Bassanio gave his ring away

Unto the judge that begg'd it, and indeed 180
Deserv'd it too; and then the boy, his clerk,
That took some pains in writing, he begg'd it mine;

And neither man nor master would take aught
But the two rings.

Por. What ring gave you, my lord?

Not that, I hope, which you receiv'd of me. 185

Bass. If I could add a lie unto a fault,
I would deny it; but you see my finger

Hath not the ring upon it; it is gone.

Por. Even so void is your false heart of truth.

By heaven, I will ne'er come in your bed 190
Until I see the ring.

Ner. Nor I in yours
Till I again see mine.

Bass. Sweet Portia,

If you did know to whom I gave the ring,

If you did know for whom I gave the ring, 194

And would conceive for what I gave the ring,

And how unwillingly I left the ring,

When nought would be accepted but the ring,

You would abate the strength of your displeasure.

Por. If you had known the virtue of the ring,

Or half her worthiness that gave the ring, 200

Or your own honour to contain the ring,

You would not then have parted with the ring.

What man is there so much unreasonable,

If you had pleas'd to have defended it

With any terms of zeal, wanted the modesty

To urge the thing held as a ceremony?

Nerissa teaches me what to believe:

I'll die for't but some woman had the ring.

Bass. No, by my honour, madam, by my soul,

No woman had it, but a civil doctor, 210

Which did refuse three thousand ducats of me

And begg'd the ring; the which I did deny him

And suffer'd him to go displeas'd away;

Even he that did uphold the very life

Of my dear friend. What should I say, sweet lady? 215

I was enforc'd to send it after him;

I was beset with shame and courtesy;

My honour would not let ingratitude

So much besmear it. Pardon me, good lady;

For, by these blessed candles of the night, 220

Had you been there, I think you would have begg'd

The ring of me to give the worthy doctor.

Por. Let not that doctor e'er come near my house.

Since he hath got the jewel that I lov'd,

And that which you did swear to keep for me,

I will become as liberal as you. 225

I'll not deny him any thing I have,

No, not my body nor my husband's bed.

Know him I shall, I am well sure of it.

Lie not a night from home. Watch me like

Argus. 230

If you do not, if I be left alone,

Now, by mine honour, which is yet mine own,

I'll have that doctor for my bedfellow.

Ner. And I his clerk; therefore be well advis'd

How you do leave me to mine own protection.

Gra. Well, do you so; let not me take him then;

For if I do, I'll mar the young clerk's pen.

Ant. I am the unhappy subject of these quarrels.

Por. Sir, grieve not you; you are welcome notwithstanding.

Bass. Portia, forgive me this enforced wrong;

And in the hearing of these many friends I swear to thee, even by thine own fair eyes, Wherein I see myself —

Por. Mark you but that!

In both my eyes he doubly sees himself, In each eye, one. Swear by your double self, And there's an oath of credit.

Bass. Nay, but hear me.

Pardon this fault, and by my soul I swear I never more will break an oath with thee.

Ant. I once did lend my body for his wealth, Which, but for him that had your husband's ring,

Had quite miscarried. I dare be bound again, My soul upon the forfeit, that your lord

Will never more break faith advisedly.

Por. Then you shall be his surety. Give him this

And bid him keep it better than the other.

Ant. Here, Lord Bassanio; swear to keep this ring.

Bass. By heaven, it is the same I gave the doctor!

Por. I had it of him. Pardon me, Bassanio; For, by this ring, the doctor lay with me.

Ner. And pardon me, my gentle Gratiano; For that same scrubbed boy, the doctor's clerk,

In lieu of this last night did lie with me.

Gra. Why, this is like the mending of highways

In summer, where the ways are fair enough.

What, are we cuckolds ere we have deserv'd it?

Por. Speak not so grossly. You are all amaz'd.

Here is a letter; read it at your leisure.

It comes from Padua, from Bellario.

There you shall find that Portia was the doctor, Nerissa there her clerk. Lorenzo here

Shall witness I set forth as soon as you

And even but now return'd; I have not yet Ent'red my house. Antonio, you are welcome;

And I have better news in store for you

Than you expect. Unseal this letter soon;

There you shall find three of your argosies

Are richly come to harbour suddenly.

You shall not know by what strange accident I chanced on this letter.

Ant. I am dumb.

Bass. Were you the doctor and I knew you not?

Gra. Were you the clerk that is to make me cuckold?

Ner. Ay, but the clerk that never means to do it,

Unless he live until he be a man.

Bass. Sweet doctor, you shall be my bed-fellow.

When I am absent, then lie with my wife.

Ant. Sweet lady, you have given me life and living;

For here I read for certain that my ships

Are safely come to road.

Por. How now, Lorenzo!

My clerk hath some good comforts too for you.

Ner. Ay, and I'll give them him without a fee.

There do I give to you and Jessica, From the rich Jew, a special deed of gift,

After his death, of all he dies possess'd of.

Lor. Fair ladies, you drop manna in the way Of starved people.

Por. It is almost morning,

And yet I am sure you are not satisfied

Of these events at full. Let us go in;

And charge us there upon inter'gatories,

And we will answer all things faithfully.

Gra. Let it be so. The first inter'gatory

That my Nerissa shall be sworn on is,

Whether till the next night she had rather stay,

Or go to bed now, being two hours to day.

But were the day come, I should wish it dark,

That I were conching with the doctor's clerk.

Well, while I live I'll fear no other thing

So sore as keeping safe Nerissa's ring.

[Exeunt.]

THE TAMING OF THE SHREW

THE Taming of the Shrew was first printed, so far as is known, in the First Folio. On this all subsequent texts have been based.

Evidence for the date of composition is purely internal; and this is exceptionally weak on account of the doubt as to the extent of Shakespeare's part in the authorship. Metrical tests are inconclusive. Similarities to other plays, such as The Comedy of Errors in the treatment of the servants, and to Hamlet in the prince's reception of the players, suggest any date from 1590 to 1602. The wit-contest between Katherine and Petruchio in II. i. associates it with plays like Much Ado and As You Like It; while the occurrence of lines in the dancing measure of the speeches of the Dromios would lead us to place it before these plays. Perhaps 1596-97 is a fair guess.

The immediate source was an earlier play of unknown authorship called The Taming of A Shrew, published in 1594. The story of the taming of a wife is found in German, Spanish, Italian, and, in a version considerably closer to that in the play, in Danish. In English it appears in the old verse tale of A Shrewd and Cursd Wife Lapped in Morel's Skin. But no direct connection can be shown between any of these and the play. In the transforming of the earlier into the present play, phrases and occasionally whole lines are retained, and the incidents in the Katherine-Petruchio plot are essentially the same; but the dialogue is greatly polished and invigorated, and the details of the stage-craft bettered throughout. Greater changes are made in the Bianca plot. The older play gives Katherine two sisters, each of whom has a lover; and their wooing, hindered only by the necessity of getting Katherine married first, and lacking the interest of rival suitors, is flat and stupid. The device of inducing a casual stranger to personate a suitor's father had been borrowed by the author of A Shrew from George Gascoigne's Supposes, a translation of Ariosto's I Suppositi. This source was used in the revision also for most of the incident in the Bianca plot. In Supposes we have no shrew, but a plot turning on the wooing of a lady by two lovers; and from it were taken direct the aged suitor and the device by which Lucentio and his servant exchange characters. Hortensio and his widow occur in neither of the earlier plays. The trick of the feigned instructors is elaborated from a scene in A Shrew in which Tranio's prototype attempts to give Kate a music lesson in order to afford his master and his friend an opportunity to court her sisters. The Latin lesson may have been suggested by a somewhat similar scene in Robert Wilson's Three Lords and Three Ladies of London, printed in 1590.

The Induction is taken from A Shrew. A story similar to that of the tinker is found in The Arabian Nights, and the trick played on him by the lord is said by Heuterus (De Rebus Burgundicis, ca. 1580) to have been actually perpetrated by Philip the Good about 1440. But none of the several English versions of the narrative of Heuterus appeared before 1598. Warton mentions a similar tale as told by Richard Edwardes in 1570, and some have thought that this version has survived in The Waking Man's Dream, an undated fragment of a lost book. A ballad in Percy's Reliques is based on a version later than the play.

In A Shrew the characters of the Induction appear from time to time throughout the play, and at the close Sly again falls asleep and is restored to his former state. A reason for dropping the Induction at the end of I. i. of the Shakespearean play may perhaps be found in the necessity of clearing the gallery, from which Sly is viewing the play, for the appearance of the Pedant from a window in V. i.

It is generally agreed that in the working over of A Shrew into the present play another hand than Shakespeare's is evident. The revised Induction and the scenes between Kate and Petruchio are usually assigned to Shakespeare, while the lines in the Bianca plot are thought not to show his style. This points either to an intermediate play, or to revision in collaboration. It has been tacitly assumed that the part of each author was confined to the scenes in which his style appears in the verse and diction. But it is clearly possible that a joint author might have a large share in planning the action of scenes which his partner wrote, and vice versa. Thus no one knows, or is ever likely to know, that Shakespeare is not entitled to credit for the remarkable ingenuity exhibited in the remodelling of the minor plot.

[INDUCTION

SCENE I. Before an alehouse on a heath.]

Enter HOSTESS, and beggar, CHRISTOPHERO SLY.

Sly. I'll pheeze you, in faith.

Host. A pair of stocks, you rogue!

Sly. Y^e are a baggage; the Slys are no rogues. Look in the chronicles; we came in with Richard Conqueror. Therefore paucas pallabris; let the world slide; aessa!

Host. You will not pay for the glasses you have burst?

Sly. No, not a denier. Go by, Jeronimy! Go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Host. I know my remedy; I must go fetch the thirdborough. [Exit.]

Sly. Third, or fourth, or fifth borough, I'll answer him by law. I'll not budge an inch, boy; let him come, and kindly.

[Falls asleep.]

Wind horns. Enter a LORD from hunting, with his train.

Lord. Huntsman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds,

Brach Merriman, the poor cur, is emboss'd;
And couple Clowder with the deep-mouth'd brach.

Saw'st thou not, boy, how Silver made it good At the hedge-corner, in the coldest fault?

I would not lose the dog for twenty pound.

1. Hun. Why, Belman is as good as he, my lord;

He cried upon it at the merest loss,
And twice to-day pick'd out the dullest scent.

Trust me, I take him for the better dog.

Lord. Thou art a fool; if Echo were as fleet,
I would esteem him worth a dozen such.
But sup them well and look unto them all;
To-morrow I intend to hunt again.

1 Hun. I will, my lord.

Lord. What's here? One dead, or drunk?
See, doth he breathe?

2. Hun. He breathes, my lord. Were he not warm'd with ale,

This were a bed but cold to sleep so soundly.

Lord. O monstrous beast! how like a swine he lies!

Grim death, how foul and loathsome is thine image!

Sirs, I will practise on this drunken man.

What think you, if he were convey'd to bed,
Wrapp'd in sweet clothes, rings put upon his fingers,

A most delicious banquet by his bed,
And brave attendants near him when he wakes,

Would not the beggar then forget himself?

1. Hun. Believe me, lord, I think he cannot choose.

2. Hun. It would seem strange unto him when he wak'd.

Lord. Even as a flattering dream or worthless fancy.

Then take him up and manage well the jest.

Carry him gently to my fairest chamber,
And hang it round with all my wanton pictures.

Balm his foul head in warm distilled waters,
And burn sweet wood to make the lodging sweet.

Procure me music ready when he wakes,

To make a dulcet and a heavenly sound;
And if he chance to speak, be ready straight

And with a low submissive reverence
Say, "What is it your honour will command?"

Let one attend him with a silver basin
Full of rose-water and bestrew'd with flowers;

Another bear the ewer, the third a diaper,
And say, "Will 't please your lordship cool your hands?"

Some one be ready with a costly suit

And ask him what apparel he will wear. 60
 Another tell him of his hounds and horse,
 And that his lady mourns at his disease.
 Persuade him that he hath been lunatic;
 And when he says he is, say that he dreams,
 For he is nothing but a mighty lord. 65
 This do and do it kindly, gentle sirs.
 It will be pastime passing excellent,
 If it be husbanded with modesty.

1. Hun. My lord, I warrant you we will play our part

As he shall think by our true diligence 70
 He is no less than what we say he is.

Lord. Take him up gently and to bed with him;

And each one to his office when he wakes.

[Some bear out Sly.] Sound trumpets.

Sirrah, go see what trumpet 'tis that sounds.

[Exit Servingman.]

Belike, some noble gentleman that means, 75
 Travelling some journey, to repose him here.

Re-enter SERVINGMAN.

How now! who is it?

Serv. An 't please your honour, players That offer service to your lordship.

Enter PLAYERS.

Lord. Bid them come near. Now, fellows, you are welcome.

Players. We thank your honour. 80

Lord. Do you intend to stay with me to-night?

A Player. So please your lordship to accept our duty.

Lord. With all my heart. This fellow I remember

Since once he play'd a farmer's eldest son.

'Twas where you woo'd the gentlewoman so well. 85

I have forgot your name; but, sure, that part Was aptly fitted and naturally perform'd.

A Player. I think 't was Soto that your honour means.

Lord. 'T is very true; thou didst it excellent. Well, you are come to me in happy time, 90

The rather for I have some sport in hand Wherein your coming can assist me much.

There is a lord will hear you play to-night; But I am doubtful of your modesties,

Lest, over-eyeing of his odd behaviour, — 95

For yet his honour never heard a play, — You break into some merry passion

And so offend him; for I tell you, sirs, If you should smile he grows impatient.

A Player. Fear not, my lord; we can contain ourselves, 100

Were he the veriest antic in the world. Lord. Go, sirrah, take them to the buttery,

And give them friendly welcome every one. Let them want nothing that my house affords.

[Exit one with the Players.]

Sirrah, go you to Barthol'mew my page, 105

And see him dress'd in all suits like a lady. That done, conduct him to the drunkard's chamber;

And call him madam, do him obeisance. Tell him from me, as he will win my love, He bear himself with honourable action, 110
 Such as he hath observ'd in noble ladies
 Unto their lords, by them accomplished;
 Such duty to the drunkard let him do
 With soft low tongue and lowly courtesy,
 And say, "What is't your honour will command, 115

Wherein your lady and your humble wife May show her duty and make known her love?"

And then with kind embracements, tempting kisses,

And with declining head into his bosom, Bid him shed tears, as being overjoy'd, 120

To see her noble lord restor'd to health, Who for this seven years hath esteemed him

No better than a poor and loathsome beggar. And if the boy have not a woman's gift

To rain a shower of commanded tears, 125

An onion will do well for such a shift, Which in a napkin being close convey'd

Shall in despite enforce a watery eye. See this dispatch'd with all the haste thou canst; Anon I'll give thee more instructions. 130

[Exit a Servingman.]

I know the boy will well usurp the grace, Voice, gait, and action of a gentlewoman.

I long to hear him call the drunkard husband; And how my men will stay themselves from laughter When they do homage to this simple peasant. I'll in to counsel them; haply my presence 135

May well abate the over-merry spleen Which otherwise would grow into extremes.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. A bedchamber in the Lord's house.]

Enter aloft the drunkard [SLY, richly dressed,] with ATTENDANTS; some with apparel, basin and ewer, and other appurtenances; and LORD [like a servant].

Sly. For God's sake, a pot of small ale.

1. Serv. Will 't please your lordship drink a cup of sack?

2. Serv. Will 't please your honour taste of these conserves?

3. Serv. What raiment will your honour wear to-day?

Sly. I am Christophero Sly; call not me [5 honour nor lordship. I ne'er drank sack in my life; and if you give me any conserves, give me conserves of beef. Ne'er ask me what raiment I'll wear; for I have no more doublets than backs, no more stockings than legs, nor no more shoes than feet; nay, sometime more feet [10 than shoes, or such shoes as my toes look through the overleather.

Lord. Heaven cease this idle humour in your honour!

O, that a mighty man of such descent, 15

Of such possessions, and so high esteem, Should be infused with so foul a spirit!

Sly. What, would you make me mad? 20 not I Christopher Sly, old Sly's son of Burton heath, by birth a pedlar, by education a [30] card-maker, by transmutation a bear-herd, and now by present profession a tinker? Ask Marian Hacket, the fat ale-wife of Wincot, if she know me not. If she say I am not fourteen pence on the score for sheer ale, score me up for the lying'st knave in Christendom. [25]

 What! I am not bestraught. Here's—

3. Serv. O, this it is that makes your lady mourn!

2. Serv. O, this is it that makes your servants droop!

Lord. Hence comes it that your kindred shuns your house, [30]

As beaten hence by your strange lunacy.

O noble lord, bethink thee of thy birth,
 Call home thy ancestral thoughts from banish-
 ment

And banish hence these abject lowly dreams.
 Look how thy servants do attend on thee, [35]
 Each in his office ready at thy beck.

Wilt thou have music? Hark! Apollo plays,
 [Music.]

And twenty caged nightingales do sing.
 Or wilt thou sleep? We'll have thee to a couch

Softer and sweeter than the lustful bed [40]
 On purpose trimm'd up for Semiramis.
 Say thou wilt walk; we will bestrew the
 ground.

Or wilt thou ride? Thy horses shall be trapp'd,
 Their harness studded all with gold and pearl.

Dost thou love hawking? Thou hast hawks will soar [45]

Above the morning lark. Or wilt thou hunt?
 Thy hounds shall make the welkin answer
 them

And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth.

1. Serv. Say thou wilt course; thy greyhounds are as swift

As breathed stags, ay, fleetest than the roe. [50]
 2. Serv. Dost thou love pictures? We will fetch thee straight

Adonis painted by a running brook,
 And Cytherea all in sedges hid,
 Which seem to move and wanton with her
 breath [54]

Even as the waving sedges play with wind.

Lord. We'll show thee Io as she was a maid,
 And how she was beguiled and surpris'd,
 As lively painted as the deed was done.

3. Serv. Or Daphne roaming through a thorny wood,
 Scratching her legs that one shall swear she bleeds, [60]

And at that sight shall sad Apollo weep,
 So workmanly the blood and tears are drawn.

Lord. Thou art a lord and nothing but a
 lord.

Thou hast a lady far more beautiful
 Than any woman in this waning age. [65]

1. Serv. And till the tears that she hath shed for thee

Like envious floods o'er-run her lovely face,

She was the fairest creature in the world;
 And yet she is inferior to none. [69]

Sly. Am I a lord? And have I such a lady?
 Or do I dream? Or have I dream'd till now?

I do not sleep; I see, I hear, I speak,
 I smell sweet savours, and I feel soft things.

Upon my life, I am a lord indeed
 And not a tinker nor Christophero Sly. [75]

Well, bring our lady hither to our sight;
 And once again, a pot o' the smallest ale.

2. Serv. Will 't please your mightiness to wash your hands?

O, how we joy to see your wit restor'd!
 O, that once more you knew but what you
 are! [80]

These fifteen years you have been in a dream;
 Or when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept.

Sly. These fifteen years! by my fay, a goodly nap.

But did I never speak of all that time?

1. Serv. O, yes, my lord, but very idle
 words. [85]

For though you lay here in this goodly chamber,

Yet would you say ye were beaten out of
 door,

And rail upon the hostess of the house,
 And say you would present her at the leet

Because she brought stone jugs and no seal'd quarts. [90]

Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacket.

Sly. Ay, the woman's maid of the house.

3. Serv. Why, sir, you know no house nor no such maid,

Nor no such men as you have reckon'd up,
 As Stephen Sly, and old John Naps of Greece,

And Peter Turph, and Henry Pimpernell, [95]
 And twenty more such names and men as these
 Which never were, nor no man ever saw.

Sly. Now Lord be thanked for my good amends!

All. Amen. [100]

Enter [the PAGE as a] lady, with attendants.

Sly. I thank thee; thou shalt not lose by it.
Page. How fares my noble lord?

Sly. Marry, I fare well, for here is cheer enough.

Where is my wife?

Page. Here, noble lord; what is thy will with her? [105]

Sly. Are you my wife and will not call me husband?

My men should call me "lord"; I am your Goodman.

Page. My husband and my lord, my lord and
 husband,

I am your wife in all obedience.

Sly. I know it well. What must I call her?
Lord. Madam. [111]

Sly. Al'ce madam, or Joan madam?

Lord. Madam, and nothing else: so lords call ladies.

Sly. Madam wife, they say that I have dream'd

And slept above some fifteen year or more. [115]

Page. Ay, and the time seems thirty unto me,

Being all this time abandon'd from your bed.
Sly. 'T is much. Servants, leave me and her alone.

Madam, undress you and come now to bed.

Page. Thrice-noble lord, let me entreat of you 120

To pardon me yet for a night or two,
Or, if not so, until the sun be set;
For your physicians have expressly charg'd,
In peril to incur your former malady,
That I should yet absent me from your bed. 125
I hope this reason stands for my excuse.

Sly. Ay, it stands so that I may hardly tarry so long. But I would be loath to fall into my dreams again. I will therefore tarry in despite of the flesh and the blood. 130

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Your honour's players, hearing your amendment,

Are come to play a pleasant comedy;
For so your doctors hold it very meet,
Seeing too much sadness hath congeal'd your blood,

And melancholy is the nurse of frenzy. 135
Therefore they thought it good you hear a play
And frame your mind to mirth and merriment,
Which bars a thousand harms and lengthens life.

Sly. Marry, I will; let them play it. Is not a comonty a Christmas gambold, or a tum- 140 bling-trick?

Page. No, my good lord; it is more pleasing stuff.

Sly. What, household stuff?

Page. It is a kind of history. 144

Sly. Well, we'll see 't. Come, madam wife, sit by my side and let the world slip.
We shall ne'er be younger.

[They all sit.] Flourish.

[ACT I

SCENE I. Padua. A public place.]

Enter LUCENTIO and his man TRANIO.

Luc. Tranio, since for the great desire I had
To see fair Padua, nursery of arts,
I am arriv'd for fruitful Lombardy,
The pleasant garden of great Italy;
And by my father's love and leave am arm'd 5
With his good will and thy good company,
My trusty servant, well approv'd in all,
Here let us breathe and haply institute
A course of learning and ingenious studies.
Pisa, renowned for grave citizens, 10
Gave me my being-and my father first,
A merchant of great traffic through the world,
Vincentio, come of the Bentivolii.
Vincentio's son, brought up in Florence,
It shall become to serve all hopes conceiv'd, 15
To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds;
And therefore, Tranio, for the time I study,
Virtue and that part of philosophy

Will I apply that treats of happiness

By virtue specially to be achiev'd. 20

Tell me thy mind; for I have Pisa left
And am to Padua come, as he that leaves
A shallow plash to plunge him in the deep
And with satiety seeks to quench his thirst.

Tra. Mi perdonato, gentle master mine, 25
I am in all affected as yourself;

Glad that you thus continue your resolve
To suck the sweets of sweet philosophy.
Only, good master, while we do admire

This virtue and this moral discipline, 30
Let's be no stoics nor no stocks, I pray,
Or so devote to Aristotle's checks
As Ovid be an outcast quite abjur'd.

Balk logic with acquaintance that you have,
And practise rhetoric in your common talk. 35

Music and poesy use to quicken you.
The mathematics and the metaphysics,

Fall to them as you find your stomach serves
you;

No profit grows where is no pleasure ta'en.
In brief, sir, study what you most affect. 40

Luc. Gramercies, Tranio, well dost thou advise.

If, Biondello, thou wert come ashore,
We could at once put us in readiness,

And take a lodging fit to entertain
Such friends as time in Padua shall beget. 45

But stay a while, what company is this?

Tra. Master, some show to welcome us to town.

Enter BAPTISTA, KATHERINA, BIANCA, GREMIO, a pantaloon, and HORTENSIO. LUCENTIO and TRANIO stand by.

Bap. Gentlemen, importune me no farther,
For how I firmly am resolv'd you know;

That is, not to bestow my youngest daughter 50
Before I have a husband for the elder.

If either of you both love Katherina,
Because I know you well and love you well,

Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.

Gre. [Aside.] To cart her rather; she's too rough for me. 55

There, there, Hortensio, will you any wife?

Kath. I pray you, sir, is it your will
To make a stale of me amongst these mates?

Hor. Mates, maid! how mean you that?

No mates for you,

Unless you were of gentler, milder mould. 60

Kath. I' faith, sir, you shall never need to fear.

I-wis it is not half way to her heart;
But if it were, doubt not her care should be

To comb your noddle with a three-legg'd stool

And paint your face and use you like a fool. 65

Hor. From all such devils, good Lord deliver
us!

Gre. And me too, good Lord!

Tra. Hush, master! here's some good pastime toward.

That wench is stark mad or wonderful fro-
ward.

Luc. But in the other's silence do I see 70

Maid's mild behaviour and sobriety.

Peace, Tranio!

Tra. Well said, master; mum! and gaze your fill.

Bap. Gentlemen, that I may soon make good

What I have said, Bianca, get you in; 75

And let it not displease thee, good Bianca,

For I will love thee ne'er the less, my girl.

Kath. A pretty peat! it is best

Put finger in the eye, an she knew why.

Bian. Sister, content you in my discontent.

Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe. 81

My books and instruments shall be my company,

On them to look and practise by myself.

Luc. Hark, Tranio! thou may'st hear Minerva speak.

Hor. Signior Baptista, will you be so strange? 85

Sorry am I that our good will effects

Bianca's grief.

Gre. Why will you mew her up,

Signior Baptista, for this fiend of hell,

And make her bear the penance of her tongue?

Bap. Gentlemen, content ye; I am resolv'd.

Go in, Bianca; [Exit Bianca.] 91

And for I know she taketh most delight

In music, instruments, and poetry,

Schoolmasters will I keep within my house,

Fit to instruct her youth. If you, Hortensio,

Or Signior Gremio, you, know any such, 95

Prefer them hither; for to cunning men

I will be very kind, and liberal

To mine own children in good bringing up;

And so farewell. Katherina, you may stay; 100

For I have more to commune with Bianca. [Exit.]

Kath. Why, and I trust I may go too, may I not?

What, shall I be appointed hours, as though, belike,

I knew not what to take, and what to leave?

Ha! [Exit.] 105

Gre. You may go to the devil's dam; your gifts are so good, here's none will hold you.

Their love is not so great, Hortensio, but we may blow our nails together, and fast it fairly out. Our cake's dough on both sides. Farewell; yet, for the love I bear my sweet Bi- [110]

anca, if I can by any means light on a fit man to teach her that wherein she delights, I will wish him to her father. 114

Hor. So will I, Signior Gremio. But a word, I pray. Though the nature of our quarrel yet never brook'd parle, know now, upon advice, it toucheth us both, that we may yet again have access to our fair mistress and be happy rivals in Bianca's love, to labour and effect one thing specially. 121

Gre. What 's that, I pray?

Hor. Marry, sir, to get a husband for her sister.

Gre. A husband! a devil. 125

Hor. I say, a husband.

Gre. I say, a devil. Think'st thou, Hortensio, though her father be very rich, any man is so very a fool to be married to hell? 130

Hor. Tush, Gremio, though it pass your patience and mine to endure her loud alarms, why, man, there be good fellows in the world, an a man could light on them, would take her with all faults, and money enough. 134

Gre. I cannot tell; but I had as lief take her dowry with this condition, to be whipp'd at the high cross every morning.

Hor. Faith, as you say, there 's small choice in rotten apples. But come; since this bar in law makes us friends, it shall be so far forth [140] friendly maintain'd till by helping Baptista's eldest daughter to a husband we set his youngest free for a husband, and then have to 't afresh. Sweet Bianca! Happy man be his dole! He that runs fastest gets the ring. How say you, Signior Gremio? 146

Gre. I am agreed; and would I had given him the best horse in Padua to begin his wooing that would thoroughly woo her, wed her and bed her, and rid the house of her! Come on. [Exeunt Gremio and Hortensio.] 150

Tra. I pray, sir, tell me, is it possible That love should of a sudden take such hold?

Luc. O Tranio, till I found it to be true, I never thought it possible or likely;

But see, while idly I stood looking on, 155

I found the effect of love in idleness;

And now in plainness do confess to thee,

That art to me as secret and as dear

As Anna to the Queen of Carthage was,

Tranio, I burn, I pine, I perish, Tranio, 160

If I achieve not this young modest girl.

Counsel me, Tranio, for I know thou canst;

Assist me, Tranio, for I know thou wilt.

Tra. Master, it is no time to chide you now;

Affection is not rated from the heart. 165

If love have touch'd you, naught remains but so, [Redime te captum quam queas minimo.]

Luc. Gramercies, lad, go forward; this contents.

The rest will comfort, for thy counsel's sound.

Tra. Master, you look'd so longly on the maid, 170

Perhaps you mark'd not what 's the pith of all.

Luc. O yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face,

Such as the daughter of Agenor had,

That made great Jove to humble him to her

hand,

When with his knees he kiss'd the Cretan

strand. 175

Tra. Saw you no more? Mark'd you not how her sister

Began to scold and raise up such a storm

That mortal ears might hardly endure the din?

Luc. Tranio, I saw her coral lips to move

And with her breath she did perfume the air.

Sacred and sweet was all I saw in her. 181

Tra. Nay, then, 'tis time to stir him from his trance.

I pray, awake, sir. If you love the maid,

Bend thoughts and wits to achieve her. Thus it stands:

Her elder sister is so curst and shrewd 185

That till the father rid his hands of her,

Master, your love must live a maid at home;

And therefore has he closely mew'd her up,
Because she will not be annoy'd with suitors.

Luc. Ah, Tranio, what a cruel father's he!
But art thou not advis'd, he took some care
To get her cunning schoolmasters to instruct
her?

Tra. Ay, marry, am I, sir; and now 't is plotted.

Luc. I have it, Tranio.

Tra. Master, for my hand,
Both our inventions meet and jump in one.

Luc. Tell me thine first.

Tra. You will be schoolmaster
And undertake the teaching of the maid:
That's your device.

Luc. It is; may it be done?

Tra. Not possible; for who shall bear your part,

And be in Padua here Vincentio's son, Keep house and ply his book, welcome his
friends,

Visit his countrymen and banquet them?

Luc. Basta, content thee, for I have it full.

We have not yet been seen in any house,
Nor can we be distinguish'd by our faces

For man or master. Then it follows thus:

Thou shalt be master, Tranio, in my stead,
Keep house and port and servants, as I should.

I will some other be, some Florentine,

Some Neapolitan, or meaner man of Pisa.

'T is hatch'd and shall be so. Tranio, at once

Uncase thee; take my colour'd hat and cloak.

When Biondello comes, he waits on thee;

But I will charm him first to keep his tongue.

Tra. So had you need.

In brief, sir, sith thy pleasure is,

And I am tied to be obedient,—

For so your father charg'd me at our parting,

"Be serviceable to my son," quoth he,

Although I think 't was in another sense,—

I am content to be Lucentio,

Because so well I love Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio, be so, because Lucentio loves;

And let me be a slave, to achieve that maid

Whose sudden sight hath thrall'd my wounded

eye.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Here comes the rogue. Sirrah, where have you been?

Bion. Where have I been! Nay, how now!
where are you? Master, has my fellow Tranio stolen your clothes? or you stolen his? or both?

Pray, what's the news?

Luc. Sirrah, come hither; 't is no time to jest,

And therefore frame your manners to the time.

Your fellow Tranio here, to save my life,

Puts my apparel and my countenance on,

And I for my escape have put on his;

For in a quarrel since I came ashore

I kill'd a man and fear I was descried.

Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes,

While I make way from hence to save my life.

You understand me?

Bion. I, sir! ne'er a whit.

Luc. And not a jot of Tranio in your mouth.
Tranio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Bion. The better for him; would I were so too!

Tra. So could I, faith, boy, to have the next wish after,

That Lucentio indeed had Baptista's youngest daughter.

But, sirrah, not for my sake, but your master's,
I advise

You use your manners discreetly in all kind of companies.

When I am alone, why, then I am Tranio;
But in all places else your master Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio, let's go. One thing more rests, that thyself execute, to make one among these wooers. If thou ask me why, sufficeth, my reasons are both good and weighty.

[Exeunt.]

The presenters above speak.

1. Serv. My lord, you nod; you do not mind
the play.

Sly. Yes, by Saint Anne, do I. A good matter, surely; comes there any more of it?

Page. My lord, 't is but begun.

Sly. 'T is a very excellent piece of work, madam lady; would 't were done!

[They sit and mark.]

[SCENE II. Padua. Before Hortensio's house.]

Enter PETRUCHIO and his man GRUMIO.

Pet. Verona, for a while I take my leave,
To see my friends in Padua, but of all

My best beloved and approved friend,
Hortensio; and I trow this is his house.

Here, sirrah Grumio; knock, I say.

Gru. Knock, sir! whom should I knock? Is there any man has rebus'd your worship?

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me here soundly.

Gru. Knock you here, sir! Why, sir, what am I, sir, that I should knock you here, sir?

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me at this gate

And rap me well, or I'll knock your knave's spate.

Gru. My master is grown quarrelsome. I should knock you first,

And then I know after who comes by the worst.

Pet. Will it not be?

Faith, sirrah, an you'll not knock, I'll ring it.

I'll try how you can sol, fa, and sing it.

[He wrings him by the ears.]

Gru. Help, masters, help! my master is mad.

Pet. Now, knock when I bid you, sirrah

villain!

Enter HORTENSIO.

Hor. How now! what's the matter? My old friend Grumio! and my good friend Petruchio!

How do you all at Verona?

Pet. Signior Hortensio, come you to part the fray?

Con tutto il cuore, ben trovato, may I say.

Hor. Alla nostra casa ben venuto, molto honorato signor mio Petruchio.

Rise, Grumio, rise; we will compound this quarrel.

Gru. Nay, 't is no matter, sir, what he 'leges in Latin. If this be not a lawful cause for me to leave his service, look you, sir. He bid me knock him and rap him soundly, sir. Well, [30] was it fit for a servant to use his master so, being perhaps, for aught I see, two and thirty, a pip out?

Whom would to God I had well knock'd at first, Then had not Grumio come by the worst. 35

Pet. A senseless villain! Good Hortensio, I bade the rascal knock upon your gate And could not get him for my heart to do it.

Gru. Knock at the gate! O heavens! Spake you not these words plain, "Sirrah, knock me here, rap me here, knock me well, and [40] knock me soundly"? And come you now with, "knocking at the gate"?

Pet. Sirrah, be gone, or talk not, I advise you.

Hor. Petruchio, patience; I am Grumio's pledge. 45

Why, this 's a heavy chance 'twixt him and you,

Your ancient, trusty, pleasant servant Grumio. And tell me now, sweet friend, what happy gale

Blows you to Padua here from old Verona?

Pet. Such wind as scatters young men through the world 50

To seek their fortunes farther than at home Where small experience grows. But in a few, Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me:

Antonio, my father, is deceas'd; And I have thrust myself into this maze, 55

Haply to wive and thrive as best I may. Crowns in my purse I have and goods at home, And so am come abroad to see the world.

Hor. Petruchio, shall I then come roundly to thee

And wish thee to a shrewd ill-favour'd wife? Thou 'dst thank me but a little for my counsel; 61

And yet I'll promise thee she shall be rich And very rich. But thou 'rt too much my friend,

And I'll not wish thee to her.

Pet. Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends as we 65

Few words suffice; and therefore, if thou know

One rich enough to be Petruchio's wife, As wealth is burden of my wooing dance, Be she as foul as was Florentius' love, As old as Sibyl, and as curst and shrewd 70

As Socrates' Xanthippe, or a worse, She moves me not, or not removes, at least, Affection's edge in me, were she as rough

As are the swelling Adriatic seas. I come to wive it wealthily in Padua; 75

If wealthily, then happily in Padua. Gru. Nay, look you, sir, he tells you flatly what his mind is. Why, give him gold enough, and marry him to a puppet or an aglet-baby, or an old trot with ne'er a tooth in her head, though she have as many diseases as two [80] and fifty horses. Why, nothing comes amiss, so money comes withal.

Hor. Petruchio, since we are stepp'd thus far in,

I will continue that I broach'd in jest. I can, Petruchio, help thee to a wife 85

With wealth enough and young and beauteous, Brought up as best becomes a gentlewoman.

Her only fault, and that is faults enough, Is that she is intolerable curst

And shrewd and froward, so beyond all measure 90

That, were my state far worsen than it is, I would not wed her for a mine of gold.

Pet. Hortensio, peace! thou know'st not gold's effect.

Tell me her father's name and 't is enough; 94 For I will board her, though she chide as loud As thunder when the clouds in autumn crack.

Hor. Her father is Baptista Minola, An affable and courteous gentleman.

Her name is Katherina Minola, Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue. 100

Pet. I know her father, though I know nother; And he knew my deceased father well.

I will not sleep, Hortensio, till I see her; And therefore let me be thus bold with you

To give you over at this first encounter, 105 Unless you will accompany me thither.

Gru. I pray you, sir, let him go while the humour lasts. O' my word, an she knew him as well as I do, she would think scolding would do little good upon him. She may perhaps call him half a score knaves or so, why, [110] that's nothing. An he begin once, he'll rail in his rope-tricks. I'll tell you what, sir, an

she stand him but a little, he will throw a figure in her face and so disfigure her with it that she shall have no more eyes to see [115] withal than a cat. You know him not, sir.

Hor. Tarry, Petruchio, I must go with thee, For in Baptista's keep my treasure is.

He hath the jewel of my life in hold, His youngest daughter, beautiful Bianca, 120

And her withholds from me and other more, Suitors to her and rivals in my love,

Supposing it a thing impossible, For those defects I have before rehears'd,

That ever Katherina will be woo'd. 125

Therefore this order hath Baptista ta'en, That none shall have access unto Bianca

Till Katherine the curst have got a husband. Gru. Katherine the curst!

A title for a maid of all titles the worst. 130

Hor. Now shall my friend Petruchio do me grace,

And offer me disguis'd in sober robes To old Baptista as a schoolmaster

Well seen in music, to instruct Bianca; That so I may, by this device, at least 135

Have leave and leisure to make love to her And unsuspected court her by herself.

Enter GREMIO, and LUCENTIO disguised.

Gru. Here's no knavery! See, to beguile the old folks, how the young folks lay their heads together!

Master, master, look about you! Who goes there, ha?

Hor. Peace, Grumio! it is the rival of my love.

Petruchio, stand by a while.

Gru. A proper strippling and an amorous!

Gre. O, very well; I have perus'd the note.

Hark you, sir; I'll have them very fairly bound; 146

All books of love, see that at any hand;

And see you read no other lectures to her.

You understand me? Over and beside

Signior Baptista's liberality, 150

I'll mend it with a largess. Take your paper too,

And let me have them very well perfum'd,

For she is sweeter than perfume itself

To whom they go to. What will you read to her?

Luc. What'er I read to her, I'll plead for you 155

As for my patron, stand you so assur'd,

As firmly as yourself were still in place;

Yea, and perhaps with more successful words

Than you, unless you were a scholar, sir.

Gre. O this learning, what a thing it is! 160

Gru. O this woodcock, what an ass it is!

Pet. Peace, sirrah!

Hor. Grumio, mum! God save you, Signior Gremio.

Gre. And you are well met, Signior Hortensio.

Trow you whither I am going? To Baptista Minola. 165

I promis'd to inquire carefully

About a schoolmaster for the fair Bianca;

And by good fortune I have lighted well

On this young man, for learning and behaviour

Fit for her turn, well read in poetry 170

And other books, good ones, I warrant ye.

Hor. 'Tis well; and I have met a gentleman

Hath promis'd me to help me to another,

A fine musician to instruct our mistress;

So shall I no whit be behind in duty 175

To fair Bianca, so belov'd of me.

Gre. Belov'd of me; and that my deeds shall prove.

Gru. And that his bags shall prove.

Hor. Gremio, 'tis now no time to vent our love.

Listen to me, and if you speak me fair, 180

I'll tell you news indifferent good for either.

Here is a gentleman whom by chance I met,

Upon agreement from us to his liking,

Will undertake to woo curst Katherine,

Yea, and to marry her, if her dowry please. 185

Gre. So said, so done, is well.

Hortensio, have you told him all her faults?

Pet. I know she is an irksome brawling scold.

If that be all, masters, I hear no harm.

Gre. No, say'st me so, friend? What countryman? 190

Pet. Born in Verona, old Antonio's son.

My father dead, my fortune lives for me;

And I do hope good days and long to see.

Gre. O sir, such a life with such a wife, were strange!

But if you have a stomach, to 't! God's name;

You shall have me assisting you in all. 190
But will you woo this wild-cat?

Pet. Will I live?

Gru. Will he woo her? Ay, or I'll hang her.

Pet. Why came I hither but to that intent?

Think you a little din can daunt mine ears? 200

Have I not in my time heard lions roar?

Have I not heard the sea, puff'd up with winds,

Rage like an angry boar chafed with sweat?

Have I not heard great ordnance in the field,

And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies? 205

Have I not in a pitched battle heard

Loud 'larums, neighing steeds, and trumpets' clang?

And do you tell me of a woman's tongue,

That gives not half so great a blow to hear 210

As will a chestnut in a farmer's fire?

Tush, tush! fear boys with bugs.

Gru. For he fears none.

Gre. Hortensio, hark.

This gentleman is happily arriv'd,

My mind presumes, for his own good and ours.

Hor. I promis'd we would be contributors 215

And bear his charge of wooing, whatsoe'er.

Gre. And so we will, provided that he win her.

Gru. I would I were as sure of a good dinner.

Enter TRANIO brave, and BIONDELLO.

Tra. Gentlemen, God save you. If I may be bold,

Tell me, I beseech you, which is the readiest way 220

To the house of Signior Baptista Minola?

Bion. He that has the two fair daughters?

Is 't he you mean?

Tra. Even he, Biondello.

Gre. Hark you, sir; you mean not her to—

Tra. Perhaps, him and her, sir; what have you to do? 225

Pet. Not her that chides, sir, at any hand, I pray.

Tra. I love no chiders, sir. Biondello, let's away.

Luc. Well begun, Tranio.

Hor. Sir, a word ere you go; Are you a suitor to the maid you talk of, yea or no? 230

Tra. And if I be, sir, is it any offence?

Gre. No; if without more words you will get you hence.

Tra. Why, sir, I pray, are not the streets as free

For me as for you?

Gre. But so is not she. 234

Tra. For what reason, I beseech you?

Gre. For this reason, if you'll know, That she's the choice love of Signior Gremio.

Hor. That she's the chosen of Signior Hortensio.

Tra. Softly, my masters! If you be gentlemen,

Do me this right: hear me with patience. Baptista is a noble gentleman, 240

To whom my father is not all unknown;

And were his daughter fairer than she is,

She may more suitors have, and me for one.
 Fair Leda's daughter had a thousand wooers;
 Then well one more may fair Bianca have;²⁴⁵
 And so she shall. Lucentio shall make one,
 Though Paris came in hope to speed alone.

Gre. What! this gentleman will out-talk us all.

Luc. Sir, give him head; I know he'll prove a jade.

Pet. Hortensio, to what end are all these words?²⁵⁰

Hor. Sir, let me be so bold as ask you, Did you yet ever see Baptista's daughter?

Tra. No, sir; but hear I do that he hath two,

The one as famous for a scolding tongue
 As is the other for beauteous modesty.²⁵⁵

Pet. Sir, sir, the first 's for me; let her go by.

Gre. Yea, leave that labour to great Hercules;

And let it be more than Alcides' twelve.

Pet. Sir, understand you this of me in sooth:
 The youngest daughter, whom you hearken for,²⁶⁰

Her father keeps from all access of suitors,
 And will not promise her to any man
 Until the elder sister first be wed.

The younger then is free and not before.

Tra. If it be so, sir, that you are the man²⁶⁵
 Must stead us all, and me amongst the rest,

And if you break the ice and do this feat,

Achieve the elder, set the younger free

For our access, whose hap shall be to have her
 Will not so graceless be to be ingrate.²⁷⁰

Hor. Sir, you say well, and well you do conceive;

And since you do profess to be a suitor,
 You must, as we do, gratify this gentleman,
 To whom we all rest generally beholding.

Tra. Sir, I shall not be slack; in sign whereof,²⁷⁵

Please ye we may contrive this afternoon

And quaff carouses to our mistress' health;

And do as adversaries do in law,

Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends.

Gr. Bion. O excellent motion! Fellows, let 's be gone.²⁸⁰

Hor. The motion 's good indeed, and be it so.
 Petruchio, I shall be your ben venuto.

[Exeunt.]

[ACT II

SCENE I. Padua. A room in Baptista's house.]

Enter KATHERINA and BIANCA.

Bian. Good sister, wrong me not, nor wrong yourself,

To make a bondmaid and a slave of me.

That I disdain; but for these other gawds,

Unbind my hands, I'll pull them off myself,⁵

Yea, all my raiment, to my petticoat;

Or what you will command me will I do,

So well I know my duty to my elders.

Kath. Of all thy suitors, here I charge thee,
 tell

Whom thou lov'st best; see thou dissemble not.

Bian. Believe me, sister, of all the men alive¹⁰

I never yet beheld that special face

Which I could fancy more than any other.

Kath. Minion, thou liest. Is't not Hortensio?

Bian. If you affect him, sister, here I swear
 I'll plead for you myself, but you shall have him.¹⁵

Kath. O then, belike, you fancy riches more.
 You will have Gremio to keep you fair.

Bian. Is it for him you do envy me so?

Nay then you jest, and now I well perceive

You have but jested with me all this while.²⁰
 I prithee, sister Kate, untie my hands.

Kath. If that be jest, then all the rest was so.
 [Strikes her.]

Enter BAPTISTA.

Bap. Why, how now, dame! whence grows this insolence?

Bianca, stand aside. Poor girl! she weeps.

Go ply thy needle; meddle not with her.²⁵

For shame, thou hiding of a devilish spirit,
 Why dost thou wrong her that did ne'er wrong thee?

When did she cross thee with a bitter word?

Kath. Her silence flouts me, and I'll be reveng'd.
 [Flies after Bianca.]

Bap. What, in my sight? Bianca, get thee in.
 [Exit Bianca.]

Kath. What, will you not suffer me? Nay, now I see

She is your treasure, she must have a husband.

I must dance bare-foot on her wedding-day

And for your love to her lead apes in hell.

Talk not to me; I will go sit and weep.³⁰
 Till I can find occasion of revenge. [Exit.]

Bap. Was ever gentleman thus griev'd as I?
 But who comes here?

Enter GREMIO, LUCENTIO in the habit of a mean man; PETRUCHIO with [Hortensio as a musician; and] TRANIO, with his boy [Biondello] bearing a lute and books.

Gre. Good morrow, neighbour Baptista.³⁵

Bap. Good morrow, neighbour Gremio. God save you, gentlemen!

Pet. And you, good sir! Pray, have you not a daughter

Call'd Katherina, fair and virtuous?

Bap. I have a daughter, sir, call'd Katherina.

Gre. You are too blunt, go to it orderly.⁴⁰

Pet. You wrong me, Signior Gremio; give me leave.

I am a gentleman of Verona, sir,

That, hearing of her beauty and her wit,

Her affability and bashful modesty,

Her wondrous qualities and mild behaviour,⁵⁰

Am bold to show myself a forward guest

Within your house, to make mine eye the witness

Of that report which I so oft have heard.

And, for an entrance to my entertainment,

I do present you with a man of mine.⁵⁵
 [Presenting Hortensio.]

Cunning in music and the mathematics,

To instruct her fully in those sciences,

Whereof I know she is not ignorant.
Accept of him, or else you do me wrong:
His name is Licio, born in Mantua.

Bap. You're welcome, sir; and he, for your good sake.

But for my daughter Katherine, this I know,
She is not for your turn, the more my grief.

Pet. I see you do not mean to part with her,
Or else you like not of my company.

Bap. Mistake me not; I speak but as I find.
Whence are you, sir? What may I call your name?

Pet. Petruchio is my name; Antonio's son,
A man well known throughout all Italy.

Bap. I know him well; you are welcome for his sake.

Gre. Saving your tale, Petruchio, I pray,
Let us, that are poor petitioners, speak too.
Baccare! you are marvellous forward.

Pet. O, pardon me, Signior Gremio; I would fain be doing.

Gre. I doubt it not, sir; but you will curse your wooing.

Neighbour, this is a gift very grateful, I am sure of it. To express the like kindness, myself, that have been more kindly beholding to you than any, freely give unto you this young scholar [presenting Lucentio], that hath been long studying at Rheims; as cunning in Greek, Latin, and other languages, as the other in music and mathematics. His name is Cambio; pray, accept his service.

Bap. A thousand thanks, Signior Gremio. Welcome, good Cambio. [To Tranio.] But, gentle sir, methinks you walk like a stranger. May I be so bold to know the cause of your coming?

Tra. Pardon me, sir, the boldness is mine own, That, being a stranger in this city here,
Do make myself a suitor to your daughter,
Unto Bianca, fair and virtuous.
Nor is your firm resolve unknown to me,
In the preferment of the eldest sister.
This liberty is all that I request,
That, upon knowledge of my parentage,
I may have welcome 'mongst the rest that woo,
And free access and favour as the rest;
And, toward the education of your daughters,
I here bestow a simple instrument,
And this small packet of Greek and Latin books.

If you accept them, then their worth is great.

Bap. Lucentio is your name; of whence, I pray?

Tra. Of Pisa, sir; son to Vincentio.
Bap. A mighty man of Pisa; by report I know him well. You are very welcome, sir. Take you the lute, and you the set of books. You shall go see your pupils presently. Holla, within!

Enter a Servant.

Sirrah, lead these gentlemen
To my daughters; and tell them both,
These are their tutors. Bid them use them well.
[Exit Servant, with Lucentio and Hortensio, Biondello following.]

We will go walk a little in the orchard,
And then to dinner. You are passing welcome,
And so I pray you all to think yourselves.

Pet. Signior Baptista, my business asketh haste,

And every day I cannot come to woo.
You knew my father well, and in him me,
Left solely heir to all his lands and goods,
Which I have bettered rather than decreas'd.
Then tell me, if I get your daughter's love,
What dowry shall I have with her to wife?

Bap. After my death the one half of my lands,
And in possession twenty thousand crowns.

Pet. And, for that dowry, I'll assure her of Her widowhood, be it that she survive me,
In all my lands and leases whatsoever.
Let specialties be therefore drawn between us,
That covenants may be kept on either hand.

Bap. Ay, when the special thing is well obtain'd,

That is, her love; for that is all in all.

Pet. Why, that is nothing; for I tell you,
father,

I am as peremptory as she proud minded;
And where two raging fires meet together
They do consume the thing that feeds their fury.

Though little fire grows great with little wind,
Yet extreme gusts will blow out fire and all;
So I to her, and so she yields to me;

For I am rough and woo not like a babe.
Bap. Well mayst thou woo, and happy be thy speed!

But be thou arm'd for some unhappy words.

Pet. Ay, to the proof; as mountains are for winds,

That shake not, though they blow perpetually.

Re-enter HORTENSIO, with his head broke.

Bap. How now, my friend! why dost thou look so pale?

Hor. For fear, I promise you, if I look pale.

Bap. What, will my daughter prove a good musician?

Hor. I think she'll sooner prove a soldier.

Iron may hold with her, but never lutes.

Bap. Why, then thou canst not break her to the lute?

Hor. Why, no; for she hath broke the lute to me.

I did but tell her she mistook her frets,
And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering;

When, with a most impatient devilish spirit,
"Frets, call you these?" quoth she; "I'll fume with them;"

And, with that word, she struck me on the head,

And through the instrument my pate made way;

And there I stood amazed for a while,
As on a pillory, looking through the lute;
While she did call me rascal fiddler
And twangling Jack, with twenty such vile terms,

As had she studied to misuse me so.

Pet. Now, by the world, it is a lusty wench;

I love her ten times more than e'er I did.
O, how I long to have some chat with her!

Bap. Well, go with me and be not so discomfited.

Proceed in practice with my younger daughter;
She's apt to learn and thankful for good turns. 166

Signior Petruchio, will you go with us,
Or shall I send my daughter Kate to you?

Pet. I pray you do. [Exeunt all but Petruchio.] I will attend her here,
And woo her with some spirit when she comes. 170

Say that she rail, why then I'll tell her plain
She sings as sweetly as a nightingale.

Say that she frown, I'll say she looks as clear
As morning roses newly wash'd with dew.

Say she be mute and will not speak a word, 175
Then I'll commend her volubility,

And say she uttereth piercing eloquence.
If she do bid me pack, I'll give her thanks,
As though she bid me stay by her a week. 180

If she deny to wed, I'll crave the day
When I shall ask the bans and when be married.

But here she comes; and now, Petruchio, speak.

Enter KATHERINA.

Good morrow, Kate; for that's your name, I hear.

Kath. Well have you heard, but something hard of hearing.

They call me Katherine that do talk of me. 185

Pet. You lie, in faith; for you are call'd plain Kate,

And bonny Kate, and sometimes Kate the curst;

But Kate, the prettiest Kate in Christendom,
Kate of Kate Hall, my super-dainty Kate,

For dainties are all cates, and therefore, Kate,
Take this of me, Kate of my consolation; 191

Hearing thy mildness praised in every town,
Thy virtues spoke of, and thy beauty sounded,

Yet not so deeply as to thee belongs,
Myself am mov'd to woo thee for my wife. 195

Kath. Mov'd! in good time. Let him that mov'd you hither

Remove you hence. I knew you at the first
You were a moveable.

Pet. Why, what's a moveable?

Kath. A join'd-stool.

Pet. Thou hast hit it; come, sit on me.

Kath. Asses are made to bear, and so are you. 200

Pet. Women are made to bear, and so are you.

Kath. No such jade as you, if me you mean.

Pet. Alas! good Kate, I will not burden thee;

For, knowing thee to be but young and light—
Kath. Too light for such a swain as you to catch; 205

And yet as heavy as my weight should be.
Pet. Should be! should—buzz!

Kath. Well ta'en, and like a buzzard.

Pet. O slow-wing'd turtle! shall a buzzard take thee?

Kath. Ay, for a turtle, as he takes a buzzard.

Pet. Come, come, you wasp; i' faith, you are too angry. 210

Kath. If I be waspish, best beware my sting.

Pet. My remedy is then, to pluck it out.

Kath. Ay, if the fool could find it where it lies.

Pet. Who knows not where a wasp does wear his sting?

In his tail. 215

Kath. In his tongue.

Pet. Whose tongue?

Kath. Yours, if you talk of tales: and so farewell.

Pet. What, with my tongue in your tail? Nay, come again,

Good Kate; I am a gentleman—

Kath. That I'll try. [She strikes him.]

Pet. I swear I'll cuff you, if you strike again. 221

Kath. So may you lose your arms.

If you strike me, you are no gentleman;
And if no gentleman, why then no arms.

Pet. A herald, Kate? O, put me in thy books! 225

Kath. What is your crest? A coxcomb?

Pet. A combs cock, so Kate will be my hen.

Kath. No cock of mine; you crow too like a craven.

Pet. Nay, come, Kate, come; you must not look so sour.

Kath. It is my fashion, when I see a crab. 230

Pet. Why, here's no crab; and therefore look not sour.

Kath. There is, there is.

Pet. Then show it me.

Kath. Had I a glass, I would.

Pet. What, you mean my face? 235

Kath. Well aim'd of such a young one.

Pet. Now, by Saint George, I am too young for you.

Kath. Yet you are wither'd.

Pet. 'Tis with cares. 240

Kath. I care not.

Pet. Nay, hear you, Kate. In sooth you scape not so.

Kath. I chafe you, if I tarry. Let me go.

Pet. No, not a whit; I find you passing gentle.

'T was told me you were rough and coy and sullen. 245

And now I find report a very liar;
For thou art pleasant, gamesome, passing courteous,

But slow in speech, yet sweet as spring-time

flowers.
Thou canst not frown, thou canst not look askance,

Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will, 250

Nor hast thou pleasure to be cross in talk,
But thou with mildness entertain'st thy wooers,

With gentle conference, soft and affable.
Why does the world report that Kate doth limp? 254

O slanderous world! Kate like the hazel-twig

Is straight and slender, and as brown in hue

As hazel nuts and sweeter than the kernels.
O, let me see thee walk. Thou dost not halt.
Kath. Go, fool, and whom thou keep'st command.

Pet. Did ever Dian so become a grove ²⁶⁰
As Kate this chamber with her princely gait?
O, be thou Dian, and let her be Kate;
And then let Kate be chaste and Dian sportful!

Kath. Where did you study all this goodly speech?

Pet. It is extempore, from my mother-wit. ²⁶⁵

Kath. A witty mother! witless else her son.

Pet. Am I not wise?

Kath. Yes; keep you warm.

Pet. Marry, so I mean, sweet Katherine, in thy bed;

And therefore, setting all this chat aside, ²⁷⁰
Thus in plain terms. Your father hath consented

That you shall be my wife; your dowry 'greed
on;

And, will you, will you, I will marry you.
Now, Kate, I am a husband for your turn;
For, by this light, whereby I see thy beauty, ²⁷⁵
Thy beauty, that doth make me like thee well,
Thou must be married to no man but me;

Re-enter BAPTISTA, GREMIO, and TRANIO.

For I am he am born to tame you Kate,
And bring you from a wild Kate to a Kate
Conformable as other household Kates. ²⁸⁰

Here comes your father. Never make denial;
I must and will have Katherine to my wife.

Bap. Now, Signior Petruchio, how speed
you with my daughter?

Pet. How but well, sir? How but well?
It were impossible I should speed amiss. ²⁸⁵

Bap. Why, how now, daughter Katherine!
In your dumps?

Kath. Call you me daughter? Now I promise you

You have show'd a tender fatherly regard,
To wish me wed to one half lunatic;
A mad-cap ruffian and a swearing Jack, ²⁹⁰
That thinks with oaths to face the matter out.

Pet. Father, 'tis thus. Yourself and all the
world,

That talk'd of her, have talk'd amiss of her.
If she be curst, it is for policy,

For she's not froward, but modest as the dove;
She is not hot, but temperate as the morn; ²⁹⁵

For patience she will prove a second Grissel,
And Roman Lucrece for her chastity;

And to conclude, we have 'greed so well together

That upon Sunday is the wedding-day. ³⁰⁰

Kath. I'll see thee hang'd on Sunday first.

Gre. Hark, Petruchio; she says she'll see thee hang'd first.

Tra. Is this your speeding? Nay, then, good night our part!

Pet. Be patient, gentlemen; I choose her for myself.

If she and I be pleas'd, what's that to you? ³⁰⁵

'Tis bargain'd 'twixt us twain, being alone,
That she shall still be curst in company.

I tell you, 'tis incredible to believe

How much she loves me. O, the kindest Kate!
She hung about my neck; and kiss on kiss ³¹⁰
She vied so fast, protesting oath on oath,
That in a twink she won me to her love.
O, you are novices! 'Tis a world to see,
How tame, when men and women are alone,
A meacock wretch can make the curstest
shrew. ³¹⁵

Give me thy hand, Kate. I will unto Venice,
To buy apparel 'gainst the wedding-day.
Provide the feast, father, and bid the guests;
I will be sure my Katherine shall be fine.

Bap. I know not what to say; but give me your hands. ³²⁰

God send you joy, Petruchio! 'Tis a match.

Gre. Tra. Amen, say we. We will be witnesses.

Pet. Father, and wife, and gentlemen,
adieu.

I will to Venice; Sunday comes apace.
We will have rings and things and fine array; ³²⁵
And kiss me, Kate, "we will be married o' Sunday."

[Exeunt Petruchio and Katherine [severally].]

Gre. Was ever match clapp'd up so suddenly?

Bap. Faith, gentlemen, now I play a merchant's part,

And venture madly on a desperate mart.

Tra. 'T was a commodity lay fretting by
you. ³³⁰

'T will bring you gain, or perish on the seas.

Bap. The gain I seek is, quiet in the match.

Gre. No doubt but he hath got a quiet catch.
But now, Baptista, to your younger daughter.

Now is the day we long have looked for. ³³⁵
I am your neighbour, and was suitor first.

Tra. And I am one that love Bianca more Than words can witness, or your thoughts can guess.

Gre. Youngling, thou canst not love so dear
as I.

Tra. Greybeard, thy love doth freeze.

Gre. But thine doth fry.
Skipper, stand back! 'T is age that nourish-
eth. ³⁴¹

Tra. But youth in ladies' eyes that flourish-eth.

Bap. Content you, gentlemen; I will compound this strife.

'T is deeds must win the prize; and he of both
That can assure my daughter greatest dower

Shall have my Bianca's love. ³⁴⁵

Say, Signior Gremio, what can you assure her?

Gre. First, as you know, my house within the city

Is richly furnished with plate and gold;

Basins and ewers to lave her dainty hands; ³⁵⁰

My hangings all of Tyrian tapestry;

In ivory coffers I have stuff'd my crowns,

In cypress chests my arras counterpoints,

Costly apparel, tents, and canopies,

Fine linen, Turkey cushions boss'd with pearl,

Valance of Venice gold in needle-work, ³⁵⁵

Pewter and brass and all things that belongs

To house or housekeeping. Then, at my farm

I have a hundred milch-kine to the pail,

Six score fat oxen standing in my stalls, 360
And all things answerable to this portion.
Myself am struck in years, I must confess;
And if I die to-morrow, this is hers,
If whilst I live she will be only mine.

Tra. That "only" came well in. Sir, list to me. 365

I am my father's heir and only son.
If I may have your daughter to my wife,
I'll leave her houses three or four as good,
Within rich Pisa walls, as any one
Old Signior Gremio has in Padua; 370
Besides two thousand ducats by the year
Of fruitful land, all which shall be her jointure.

What, have I pinch'd you, Signior Gremio?

Gre. Two thousand ducats by the year of land!

(My land amounts not to so much in all,) 375

[Aside.]
That she shall have; besides an argosy
That now is lying in Marseilles' road.

What, have I chok'd you with an argosy?

Tra. Gremio, 't is known my father hath no less Than three great argosies, besides two gal-liases 380

And twelve tight galleys. These I will assure
her,

And twice as much, whate'er thou off'rest
next.

Gre. Nay, I have off'red all, I have no
more;

And she can have no more than all I have.

If you like me, she shall have me and mine. 385

Tra. Why, then the maid is mine from all the world,

By your firm promise; Gremio is out-vied.

Bap. I must confess your offer is the best;
And, let your father make her the assurance,
She is your own; else, you must pardon me, 390
If you should die before him, where's her
dower?

Tra. That's but a cavil. He is old, I
young.

Gre. And may not young men die, as well as old?

Bap. Well, gentlemen,
I am thus resolv'd: on Sunday next you know
My daughter Katherine is to be married. 395
Now, on the Sunday following, shall Bianca
Be bride to you, if you make this assurance;
If not, to Signior Gremio.

And so, I take my leave, and thank you both.

[Exit.]
Gre. Adieu, good neighbour. Now I fear
thee not. 401

Sirrah young gamester; your father were a fool
To give thee all, and in his waning age
Set foot under thy table. Tut, a toy!

An old Italian fox is not so kind, my boy. 405
[Exit.]

Tra. A vengeance on your crafty withered hide!

Yet I have fac'd it with a card of ten.

'T is in my head to do my master good.

I see no reason but suppos'd Lucentio

Must get a father, call'd "suppos'd Vincentio"; 410

And that's a wonder. Fathers commonly Do get their children; but in this case of woo-
ing,

A child shall get a sire, if I fail not of my cunning. [Exit.]

ACT III

[SCENE I. Padua. Baptista's house.]

Enter LUCENTIO, HORTENSIO, and BIANCA.

Luc. Fiddler, forbear; you grow too forward, sir.

Have you so soon forgot the entertainment
Her sister Katherine welcom'd you withal?

Hor. But, wrangling pedant, this is
The patroness of heavenly harmony. 5

Then give me leave to have prerogative;
And when in music we have spent an hour,
Your lecture shall have leisure for as much.

Luc. Preposterous ass, that never read so far

To know the cause why music was ordain'd! 10
Was it not to refresh the mind of man
After his studies or his usual pain?

Then give me leave to read philosophy,
And while I pause, serve in your harmony.

Hor. Sirrah, I will not bear these braves of thine. 15

Bian. Why, gentlemen, you do me double
wrong,

To strive for that which resteth in my choice.
I am no breeching scholar in the schools.

I'll not be tied to hours nor 'pointed times,
But learn my lessons as I please myself. 20

And, to cut off all strife, here sit we down;
Take you your instrument, play you the whiles;

His lecture will be done ere you have tun'd.

Hor. You'll leave his lecture when I am in tune?

Luc. That will be never; tune your instrument. 25

Bian. Where left we last?

Luc. Here, madam:

"*Hic ibat Simois; hic est Sigeia tellus;
Hic steterat Priami regia celsa senis.*"

Bian. Construe them. 30

Luc. "Hic ibat," as I told you before,
"Simois," I am Lucentio, "hic est," son unto Vincentio of Pisa, "Sigeia tellus," disguised thus to get your love; "Hic steterat," and that Lucentio that comes a-wooing, "Priami," is my man Tranio, "regia," bearing my port, 35
"celsa senis," that we might beguile the old pantaloon.

Hor. Madam, my instrument's in tune.

Bian. Let's hear. O fie! the treble jars.

Luc. Spit in the hole, man, and tune again.

Bian. Now let me see if I can construe
it: 41

"Hic ibat Simois," I know you not, "*hic est
Sigeia tellus*," I trust you not; "Hic steterat Priami," take heed he hear us not, "regia," presume not, "celsa senis," despair not. 45

Hor. Madam, 't is now in time.

Luc. All but the base.

Hor. The base is right; 't is the base knave that jars.

[Aside.] How fiery and forward our pedant is! Now, for my life, the knave doth court my love:

Pedascule, I'll watch you better yet. 50

Bian. In time I may believe, yet I mistrust.

Luc. Mistrust it not; for, sure, Æacides

Was Ajax, call'd so from his grandfather.

Bian. I must believe my master; else, I promise you,

I should be arguing still upon that doubt. 55

But let it rest. Now, Licio, to you.

Good master, take it not unkindly, pray,

That I have been thus pleasant with you both.

Hor. You may go walk, and give me leave a while.

My lessons make no music in three parts. 60

Luc. Are you so formal, sir? Well, I must wait,

[Aside.] And watch withal; for, but I be deceiv'd,

Our fine musician groweth amorous.

Hor. Madam, before you touch the instrument,

To learn the order of my fingering, 65

I must begin with rudiments of art;

To teach you gamut in a briefer sort,

More pleasant, pithy, and effectual,

Than hath been taught by any of my trade;

And there it is in writing, fairly drawn. 70

Bian. Why, I am past my gamut long ago.

Hor. Yet read the gamut of Hortensio.

Bian. [Reads.]

"Gamut I am, the ground of all accord,

A re, to plead Hortensio's passion.

B mi, Bianca, take him for thy lord, 75

C fa ut, that loves with all affection.

D sol re, one clef, two notes have I.

E la mi, show pity, or I die."

Call you this gamut? Tut, I like it not:

Old fashions please me best; I am not so nice, 80

To change true rules for odd inventions.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Mistress, your father prays you leave your books

And help to dress your sister's chamber up.

You know to-morrow is the wedding-day.

Bian. Farewell, sweet masters both; I must be gone. 85

[Exeunt Bianca and Messenger.]

Luc. Faith, mistress, then I have no cause to stay. [Exit.]

Hor. But I have cause to pry into this pedant.

Methinks he looks as though he were in love;

Yet if thy thoughts, Bianca, be so humble

To cast thy wandering eyes on every stale, 90

Seize thee that list. If once I find thee ranging,

Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing.

[Exit.]

[SCENE II. Padua. Before Baptista's house.]

Enter BAPTISTA, GREMIO, TRANIO, KATHERINA, BIANCA, [LUCENTIO,] and others, attending.

Bap. [To Tranio.] Signior Lucentio, this is the 'pointed day,

That Katherine and Petruchio should be married,

And yet we hear not of our son-in-law.

What will be said? What mockery will it be, To want the bridegroom when the priest attends 5

To speak the ceremonial rites of marriage!

What says Lucentio to this shame of ours?

Kath. No shame but mine. I must, forsooth, be forc'd

To give my hand oppos'd against my heart

Unto a mad-brain rudesby full of spleen, 10

Who woo'd in haste and means to wed at leisure.

I told you, I, he was a frantic fool, Hiding his bitter jests in blunt behaviour;

And, to be noted for a merry man, He'll woo a thousand, 'point the day of marriage, 15

Make friends, invite, yes, and proclaim the banns,

Yet never means to wed where he hath woo'd.

Now must the world point at poor Katherine, And say, "Lo, there is mad Petruchio's wife,

If it would please him come and marry her!" 20

Tra. Patience, good Katherine, and Baptista too.

Upon my life, Petruchio means but well, Whatever fortune stays him from his word,

Though he be blunt, I know him passing wise;

Though he be merry, yet withal he's honest. 25

Kath. Would Katherine had never seen him though!

[Exit weeping [followed by Bianca and others].]

Bap. Go, girl, I cannot blame thee now to weep;

For such an injury would vex a very saint, Much more a shrew of thy impatient humour.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Bion. Master, master! news, [old news,] and such news as you never heard of! 30

Bap. Is it new and old too? How may that be?

Bion. Why, is it not news to hear of Petruchio's coming?

Bap. Is he come? 35

Bion. Why, no, sir.

Bap. What then?

Bion. He is coming.

Bap. When will he be here?

Bion. When he stands where I am and sees you there. 40

Tra. But say, what to thine old news?

Bion. Why, Petruchio is coming in a new hat and an old jerkin; a pair of old breeches thrice turn'd; a pair of boots that have been candle-cases, one buckled, another [45 lae'd; an old rusty sword ta'en out of the town-armoury, with a broken hilt, and chapeless; with two broken points; his horse hipp'd with an old mothy saddle and stirrups of no kindred, besides, possess'd with the glanders⁵⁰ and like to mose in the chine, troubled with the lampass, infected with the fashions, full of windgalls, sped with spavins, rayed with the yellows, past cure of the fives, stark spoil'd with the staggers, begnawn with the bots,⁵⁵ sway'd in the back and shoulder-shotten, near-legg'd before, and with a half-check'd bit and a head-stall of sheep's leather which, being restrain'd to keep him from stumbling, hath been often burst and now repaired with knots; one girth six times piec'd, and a woman's⁶⁰ crupper of velure, which hath two letters for her name fairly set down in studs, and here and there piec'd with packthread.

Bap. Who comes with him?⁶⁵

Bion. O, sir, his lackey, for all the world caparison'd like the horse; with a linen stock on one leg and a kersey boot-hose on the other, gart'ed with a red and blue list; an old hat and the humour of forty fancies prick'd in 't for a feather: a monster, a very monster⁷⁰ in apparel, and not like a Christian footboy or a gentleman's lackey.

Tra. 'T is some odd humour pricks him to this fashion;

Yet oftentimes he goes but mean-apparell'd.⁷⁵

Bap. I am glad he's come, howsoe'er he comes.

Bion. Why, sir, he comes not.

Bap. Didst thou not say he comes?

Bion. Who? That Petruccio came?

Bap. Ay, that Petruccio came.⁸⁰

Bion. No, sir; I say his horse comes, with him on his back.

Bap. Why, that's all one.

Bion. Nay, by Saint Jany,
I hold you a penny,⁸⁵
A horse and a man
Is more than one,
And yet not many.

Enter PETRUCHIO and GRUMIO.

Pet. Come, where be these gallants? Who's at home?⁹⁰

Bap. You are welcome, sir.

Pet. And yet I come not well.

Bap. And yet you halt not.

Tra. Not so well apparell'd

As I wish you were.

Pet. Were it better, I should rush in thus.
But where is Kate? Where is my lovely bride?
How does my father? Gentles, methinks you frown;⁹⁵

And wherefore gaze this goodly company,
As if they saw some wondrous monument,
Some comet or unusual prodigy?

Bap. Why, sir, you know this is your wedding-day.

First were we sad, fearing you would not come;
Now sadder, that you come so unprovided.¹⁰¹
Fie, doff this habit, shame to your estate,
An eye-sore to our solemn festival!

Tra. And tell us, what occasion of import
Hath all so long detain'd you from your wife,
And sent you hither so unlike yourself?¹⁰⁵

Pet. Tedious it were to tell, and harsh to hear.

Sufficeit, I am come to keep my word,
Though in some part enforced to digress;
Which, at more leisure, I will so excuse¹¹⁰
As you shall well be satisfied withal.

But where is Kate? I stay too long from her.
The morning wears, 't is time we were at church.

Tra. See not your bride in these unreverent robes.

Go to my chamber; put on clothes of mine.¹¹⁵

Pet. Not I, believe me; thus I'll visit her.

Bap. But thus, I trust, you will not marry her.

Pet. Good sooth, even thus; therefore ha' done with words.

To me she's married, not unto my clothes.
Could I repair what she will wear in me,¹²⁰
As I can change these poor accoutrements,
'T were well for Kate and better for myself.

But what a fool am I to chat with you,
When I should bid good morrow to my bride,
And seal the title with a lovely kiss!¹²⁵

[Exeunt [Petruccio and Grumio].]

Tra. He hath some meaning in his mad attire.

We will persuade him, be it possible,
To put on better ere he go to church.

Bap. I'll after him, and see the event of this.

[Exeunt [Baptista, Gremio, and attendants].]

Tra. But to her love concerneth us to add¹³⁰
Her father's liking; which to bring to pass,
As I before imparted to your worship,

I am to get a man, — whate'er he be,
It skills not much, we'll fit him to our turn, —
And he shall be Vincentio of Pisa;¹³⁵
And make assurance here in Padua
Of greater sums than I have promised.
So shall you quietly enjoy your hope,
And marry sweet Bianca with consent.

Luc. Were it not that my fellow-schoolmaster
Doth watch Bianca's steps so narrowly,¹⁴¹
'T were good, methinks, to steal our marriage;
Which once perform'd, let all the world say no,
I'll keep mine own, despite of all the world.

Tra. That by degrees we mean to look into,
And watch our vantage in this business.¹⁴⁶
We'll over-reach the greybeard, Gremio,
The narrow prying father, Minola,
The quaint musician, amorous Licio,
All for my master's sake, Lucentio.¹⁵⁰

Re-enter GREMIO.

Signior Gremio, came you from the church?

Gre. As willingly as e'er I came from school.

Tra. And is the bride and bridegroom coming home?

Gre. A bridegroom say you? 'T is a groom indeed,¹⁵⁴

A grumbling groom, and that the girl shall find.

Tra. Curster than she? Why, 't is impossible.

Gre. Why, he's a devil, a devil, a very fiend.
Tra. Why, she's a devil, a devil, the devil's dam.

Gre. Tut, she's a lamb, a dove, a fool to him! I'll tell you, Sir Lucentio: when the priest ¹⁵⁰ Should ask, if Katherine should be his wife, "Ay, by gogs-wouns," quoth he; and swore so loud,

That, all-amaz'd, the priest let fall the book;
 And, as he stoop'd again to take it up,
 The mad-brain'd bridegroom took him such a cuff ¹⁶⁵

That down fell priest and book, and book and priest.

"Now take them up," quoth he, "if any list."
Tra. What said the wench when he rose again?

Gre. Trembled and shook; for why, he stamp'd and swore,

As if the vicar meant to cozen him. ¹⁷⁰

But after many ceremonies done,
 He calls for wine. "A health!" quoth he, as if He had been aboard, carousing to his mates

After a storm; quaff'd off the muscadel,
 And threw the sops all in the sexton's face, ¹⁷⁵
 Having no other reason

But that his beard grew thin and hungerly,
 And seem'd to ask him sops as he was drinking.

This done, he took the bride about the neck
 And kiss'd her lips with such a clamorous smack ¹⁸⁰

That at the parting all the church did echo.
 And I seeing this, came thence for very shame,

And after me, I know, the rout is coming.
 Such a mad marriage never was before.
 Hark, hark! I hear the minstrels play. ¹⁸⁵

[Music plays.]

Re-enter PETRUCHIO, KATHERINA, BIANCA, BAPTISTA, HORTENSIO [GRUMIO, and Train].

Pet. Gentlemen and friends, I thank you for your pains.

I know you think to dine with me to-day,
 And have prepar'd great store of wedding cheer;

But so it is, my haste doth call me hence, ¹⁸⁹
 And therefore here I mean to take my leave.

Bap. Is't possible you will away to-night?

Pet. I must away to-day, before night come.
 Make it no wonder; if you knew my business,
 You would entreat me rather go than stay.

And, honest company, I thank you all ¹⁹⁵
 That have beheld me give away myself
 To this most patient, sweet, and virtuous wife.

Dine with my father, drink a health to me,
 For I must hence; and farewell to you all.

Tra. Let us entreat you stay till after dinner. ²⁰⁰

Pet. It may not be.

Gre. Let me entreat you.

Pet. It cannot be.

Kath. Let me entreat you.

Pet. I am content.

Kath. Are you content to stay?

Pet. I am content you shall entreat me stay;
 But yet not stay, entreat me how you can. ²⁰⁵

Kath. Now, if you love me, stay.

Pet. Grumio, my horse.

Gr. Ay, sir, they be ready; the oats have eaten the horses.

Kath. Nay, then,

Do what thou canst, I will not go to-day; ²¹⁰

No, nor to-morrow, not till I please myself.

The door is open, sir; there lies your way;

You may be joggling whiles your boots are green.

For me, I'll not be gone till I please myself.

'Tis like you'll prove a jolly surly groom, ²¹⁵

That take it on you at the first so roundly.

Pet. O Kate, content thee; prithee, be not angry.

Kath. I will be angry. What hast thou to do?

Father, be quiet; he shall stay my leisure.

Gre. Ay, marry, sir, now it begins to work.

Kath. Gentlemen, forward to the bridal dinner. ²²¹

I see a woman may be made a fool,

If she had not a spirit to resist.

Pet. They shall go forward, Kate, at thy command.

Obeys the bride, you that attend on her. ²²⁵

Go to the feast, revel and domineer,

Carouse full measure to her maidenhead,

Be mad and merry, or go hang yourselves;

But for my bouny Kate, she must with me.

Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret; ²³⁰

I will be master of what is mine own.

She is my goods, my chattels; she is my house,

My household stuff, my field, my barn,

My horse, my ox, my ass, my any thing;

And here she stands, touch her whoever dare,

I'll bring mine action on the proudest he ²³⁵

That stops my way in Padua. Grumio,

Draw forth thy weapon, we are beset with thieves;

Rescue thy mistress, if thou be a man.

Fear not, sweet wench, they shall not touch thee, Kate; ²⁴⁰

I'll buckler thee against a million.
 [Exeunt Petruchio, Katherine [and Grumio].]

Bap. Nay, let them go, a couple of quiet ones.

Gre. Went they not quickly, I should die with laughing.

Tra. Of all mad matches never was the like.

Luc. Mistress, what's your opinion of your sister? ²⁴⁵

Bian. That, being mad herself, she's madly mated.

Gre. I warrant him, Petruchio is Kated.

Bap. Neighbours and friends, though bride and bridegroom wants

For to supply the places at the table,

You know there wants no junkets at the feast.
 Lucentio, you shall supply the bridegroom's place; ²⁵¹

And let Bianca take her sister's room.

Tra. Shall sweet Bianca practise how to bride it?

Bap. She shall, Lucentio. Come, gentlemen, let's go. [Exeunt.]

[ACT IV

SCENE I. Petruchio's country house.

Enter GRUMIO.

Gru. Fie, fie on all tired jades, on all mad masters, and all foul ways! Was ever man so beaten? Was ever man so ray'd? Was ever man so weary? I am sent before to make a fire, and they are coming after to warm them. Now, were not I a little pot and soon hot, my [5] very lips might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roof of my mouth, my heart in my belly, ere I should come by a fire to thaw me; but I, with blowing the fire, shall warm myself; for, considering the weather, a taller man than I [10] will take cold. Holla, ho! Curtis.

Enter CURTIS.

Curt. Who is that calls so coldly?

Gru. A piece of ice. If thou doubt it, thou mayst slide from my shoulder to my heel with no greater a run but my head and my neck. [15] A fire, good Curtis.

Curt. Is my master and his wife coming, Grumio?

Gru. O, ay, Curtis, ay; and therefore fire, [20] fire; cast on no water.

Curt. Is she so hot a shrew as she's reported?

Gru. She was, good Curtis, before this frost; but, thou know'st, winter tames man, woman, and beast; for it hath tam'd my old master and my new mistress and myself, fel- [25] low Curtis.

Curt. Away, you three-inch fool! I am no beast.

Gru. Am I but three inches? Why, thy horn is a foot; and so long am I at the least. But wilt thou make a fire, or shall I com- [30] plain on thee to our mistress, whose hand, she being now at hand, thou shalt soon feel, to thy cold comfort, for being slow in thy hot office?

Curt. I prithee, good Grumio, tell me, how goes the world? 36

Gru. A cold world, Curtis, in every office but thine; and therefore fire. Do thy duty and have thy duty, for my master and mistress are almost frozen to death. 40

Curt. There's fire ready; and therefore, good Grumio, the news.

Gru. Why, "Jack, boy! ho! boy!" and as much news as thou wilt.

Curt. Come, you are so full of cony-catching! 45

Gru. Why, therefore fire; for I have caught extreme cold. Where's the cook? Is supper ready, the house trimm'd, rushes strew'd, cobwebs swept; the servingmen in their new fustian, the white stockings, and every officer his wedding garment on? Be the jacks fair [50] within, the gills fair without, the carpets laid, and every thing in order?

Curt. All ready; and therefore, I pray thee, news. 56

Gru. First, know, my horse is tired; my master and mistress fallen out.

Curt. How?

Gru. Out of their saddles into the dirt; and thereby hangs a tale. 60

Curt. Let's ha't, good Grumio.

Gru. Lend thine ear.

Curt. Here.

Gru. There. [Strikes him.]

Curt. This is to feel a tale, not to hear a tale. 65

Gru. And therefore 't is call'd a sensible tale; and this cuff was but to knock at your ear, and beseech listening. Now I begin: Imprimis, we came down a foul hill, my master riding behind my mistress, — 70

Curt. Both of one horse?

Gru. What's that to thee?

Curt. Why, a horse.

Gru. Tell thou the tale. But hadst thou not cross'd me, thou shouldst have heard how her horse fell and she under her horse; thou [75] shouldst have heard in how merry a place, how she was bemoil'd, how he left her with the horse upon her, how he beat me because her horse stumbled, how she waded through the dirt to pluck him off me, how he swore, how [80] she pray'd that never pray'd before, how I cried, how the horses ran away, how her bridle was burst, how I lost my crupper, with many things of worthy memory, which now shall die in oblivion and thou return unexperienc'd to thy grave. 86

Curt. By this reckoning he is more shrew than she.

Gru. Ay; and that thou and the proudest of you all shall find when he comes home. But what talk I of this? Call forth Nathaniel, [90] Joseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Sugarsop and the rest; let their heads be slickly comb'd, their blue coats brush'd and their garters of an indifferent knit; let them curtsy with their left legs and not presume to touch a hair [95] of my master's horse-tail till they kiss their hands. Are they all ready?

Curt. They are.

Gru. Call them forth. 99

Curt. Do you hear, ho? You must meet my master to countenance my mistress.

Gru. Why, she hath a face of her own.

Curt. Who knows not that?

Gru. Thou, it seems, that calls for company to countenance her. 100

Curt. I call them forth to credit her.

Enter four or five SERVINGMEN.

Gru. Why, she comes to borrow nothing of them.

Nath. Welcome home, Grumio!

Phil. How now, Grumio! 116

Jos. What, Grumio!

Nich. Fellow Grumio.

Nath. How now, old lad?

Gru. Welcome, you; how now, you; what, you; fellow, you;—and thus much for greeting. Now, my spruce companions, is ¹¹⁵ all ready, and all things neat?

Nath. All things is ready. How near is our master? ¹¹⁹

Gru. E'en at hand, alighted by this; and therefore be not—Cock's passion, silence! I hear my master.

Enter PETRUCHIO and KATHERINA.

Pet. Where be these knaves? What, no man at door

To hold my stirrup nor to take my horse! Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip? ¹²⁵

All Serv. Here, here, sir; here, sir.

Pet. Here, sir! here, sir! here, sir! here, sir!

You logger-headed and unpolish'd grooms! What, no attendance? No regard? No duty?

Where is the foolish knave I sent before? ¹³⁰

Gru. Here, sir; as foolish as I was before.

Pet. You peasant swain! You whoreson malt-horse drudge!

Did I not bid thee meet me in the park, And bring along these rascal knaves with thee?

Gru. Nathaniel's coat, sir, was not fully made, ¹³⁵

And Gabriel's pumps were all unpink'd i' the heel;

There was no link to colour Peter's hat, And Walter's dagger was not come from sheathing;

There were none fine but Adam, Ralph, and Gregory;

The rest were ragged, old, and beggarly; ¹⁴⁰

Yet, as they are, here are they come to meet you.

Pet. Go, rascals, go, and fetch my supper in. ^[Exeunt Servants.]

[Singing.] "Where is the life that late I led"—

Where are those?—Sit down, Kate, and welcome.—

Soud, soud, soud, soud! ¹⁴⁵

Re-enter SERVANTS, with supper.

Why, when, I say? Nay, good sweet Kate, be merry.

Off with my boots, you rogues! You villains, when?

[Sings.] "It was the friar of orders grey, As he forth walked on his way:"—

Out, you rogue! you pluck my foot awry. ¹⁵⁰

Take that, and mend the plucking off the other. ^[Strikes him.]

Be merry, Kate. Some water, here; what, ho!

Enter one with water.

Where's my spaniel Troilus? Sirrah, get you hence,

And bid my cousin Ferdinand come hither;

One, Kate, that you must kiss, and be acquainted with. ¹⁵⁵

Where are my slippers? Shall I have some water?

Come, Kate, and wash, and welcome heartily. You whoreson villain! Will you let it fall? ^[Strikes him.]

Kath. Patience, I pray you; 't was a fault unwilling.

Pet. A whoreson beetle-headed, flap-ear'd knave! ¹⁵⁰

Come, Kate, sit down; I know you have a stomach.

Will you give thanks, sweet Kate; or else shall I?

What's this? Mutton?

I. Serv. Ay.

Pet. Who brought it?

Peter. I.

Pet. 'T is burnt; and so is all the meat.

What dogs are these! Where is the rascal cook? ¹⁵⁵

How durst you, villains, bring it from the dresser,

And serve it thus to me that love it not? There, take it to you, trenchers, cups, and all.

^[Throws the meat, etc., about the stage.]

You heedless joltheads and unmanner'd slaves! What, do you grumble? I'll be with you straight. ¹⁷⁰

Kath. I pray you, husband, be not so disquiet.

The meat was well, if you were so contented.

Pet. I tell thee, Kate, 't was burnt and dried away,

And I expressly am forbid to touch it, For it engenders choler, planteth anger; ¹⁷⁵

And better 't were that both of us did fast, Since, of ourselves, ourselves are choleric,

Than feed it with such over-roasted flesh. Be patient; to-morrow 't shall be mended,

And, for this night, we'll fast for company. ¹⁸⁰

Come, I will bring thee to thy bridal chamber. ^[Exeunt.]

Re-enter SERVANTS severally.

Nath. Peter, didst ever see the like?

Peter. He kills her in her own humour.

Re-enter CURTIS, a servant.

Gru. Where is he?

Curt. In her chamber, making a sermon of continency to her; ¹⁸⁵

And rails, and swears, and rates, that she, poor soul,

Knows not which way to stand, to look, to speak,

And sits as one new-risen from a dream. Away, away! for he is coming hither. ¹⁹⁰

^[Exeunt.]

Re-enter PETRUCHIO.

Pet. Thus have I politely begun my reign, And 't is my hope to end successfully.

My falcon now is sharp and passing empty;

And till she stoop she must not be full-gorg'd, For then she never looks upon her lure. ¹⁹⁵

Another way I have to man my haggard, To make her come and know her keeper's call,

That is, to watch her, as we watch these kites

That bate and beat and will not be obedient.
She eat no meat to-day, nor none shall eat; 200
Last night she slept not, nor to-night she shall not;

As with the meat, some undeserved fault
I'll find about the making of the bed;
And here I'll fling the pillow, there the bolster,
This way the coverlet, another way the sheets.
Ay, and amid this hurly I intend 206
That all is done in reverend care of her;
And in conclusion she shall watch all night;
And if she chance to nod I'll rail and bawl
And with the clamour keep her still awake.
This is a way to kill a wife with kindness, 211
And thus I'll curb her mad and headstrong humour.

He that knows better how to tame a shrew,
Now let him speak; 't is charity to show. [Exit.]

[SCENE II. Padua. Before Baptista's house.]

Enter TRANIO and HORTENSIO.

Tra. Is 't possible, friend Licio, that Mistress Bianca

Doth fancy any other but Lucentio?

I tell you, sir, she bears me fair in hand.

[Hor.] Sir, to satisfy you in what I have said,
Stand by and mark the manner of his teaching.

Enter BIANCA [and LUCENTIO].

[Luc.] Now, mistress, profit you in what you read? 6

Bian. What, master, read you? First resolve me that.

[Luc.] I read that I profess, the Art to Love.

Bian. And may you prove, sir, master of your art!

Luc. While you, sweet dear, prove mistress of my heart! 10

Hor. Quick proceeders, marry! Now, tell me, I pray,

You that durst swear that your mistress Bianca
Lov'd none in the world so well as Lucentio.

Tra. O spiteful love! Unconstant woman-kind!

I tell thee, Licio, this is wonderful. 15

Hor. Mistake no more; I am not Licio,
Nor a musician, as I seem to be;
But one that scorn to live in this disguise,
For such a one as leaves a gentleman,
And makes a god of such a cullion. 20

Know, sir, that I am call'd Hortensio.

Tra. Signior Hortensio, I have often heard
Of your entire affection to Bianca;
And since mine eyes are witness of her light-
ness,

I will with you, if you be so contented, 25
Forswear Bianca and her love for ever.

Hor. See, how they kiss and court! Signior Lucentio,

Here is my hand, and here I firmly vow
Never to woo her more, but do forswear her,
As one unworthy all the former favours 30
That I have fondly flatter'd her withal.

Tra. And here I take the like unfeigned
oath,

Never to marry with her though she would entreat.

Fie on her! see, how beastly she doth court
him!

Hor. Would all the world but he had quite forsworn! 35

For me, that I may surely keep mine oath,
I will be married to a wealthy widow,
Ere three days pass, which hath as long lov'd
me

As I have lov'd this proud disdainful haggard.
And so farewell, Signior Lucentio. 40

Kindness in women, not their beauteous looks,
Shall win my love; and so I take my leave,
In resolution as I swore before. [Exit.]

Tra. Mistress Bianca, bless you with such grace

As 'longeth to a lover's blessed case! 45

Nay, I have ta'en you napping, gentle love,
And have forsworn you with Hortensio.

Bian. Tranio, you jest; but have you both forsworn me?

Tra. Mistress, we have.

Luc. Then we are rid of Licio.

Tra. I' faith, he'll have a lusty widow-
now, 50

That shall be woo'd and wedded in a day.

Bian. God give him joy!

Tra. Ay, and he'll tame her.

Bian. He says so, Tranio.

Tra. Faith, he is gone unto the tamingschool.

Bian. The taming-school! What, is there such a place? 55

Tra. Ay, mistress, and Petruchio is the
master;

That teacheth tricks eleven and twenty long,
To tame a shrew and charm her chattering tongue.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Bion. O master, master, I have watch'd so long

That I am dog-weary; but at last I spied 60
An ancient angel coming down the hill,

Will serve the turn.

Tra. What is he, Biondello?

Bion. Master, a mercantante, or a pedant,
I know not what; but formal in apparel,
In gait and countenance surely like a father. 65

Luc. And what of him, Tranio?

Tra. If he be credulous and trust my tale,
I'll make him glad to seem Vincentio,
And give assurance to Baptista Minola,
As if he were the right Vincentio. 70

Take in your love, and then let me alone.
[Exit Lucentio and Bianca.]

Enter a PEDANT.

Ped. God save you, sir!

Tra. And you, sir! you are welcome.
Travel you far on, or are you at the farthest?

Ped. Sir, at the farthest for a week or two;
But then up farther, and as far as Rome; 75
And so to Tripoli, if God lend me life.

Tra. What countryman, I pray?

Ped. Of Mantua.

Tra. Of Mantua, sir? Marry, God forbid!
And come to Padua, careless of your life?

Ped. My life, sir! How, I pray? for that goes hard. 80

Tra. 'Tis death for any one in Mantua
To come to Padua. Know you not the cause?
Your ships are stay'd at Venice, and the Duke,

For private quarrel 'twixt your Duke and him,
Hath publish'd and proclaim'd it openly. 85

'Tis marvel, but that you are but newly come,
You might have heard it else proclaim'd about.

Ped. Alas! sir, it is worse for me than so;
For I have bills for money by exchange
From Florence, and must here deliver them. 90

Tra. Well, sir, to do you courtesy,
This will I do, and this I will advise you.
First, tell me, have you ever been at Pisa?

Ped. Ay, sir, in Pisa have I often been,
Pisa renowned for grave citizens. 95

Tra. Among them know you one Vincentio?

Ped. I know him not, but I have heard of him;

A merchant of incomparable wealth.

Tra. He is my father, sir; and, sooth to say,

In countenance somewhat doth resemble you.
Bion. [Aside.] As much as an apple doth an oyster, and all one. 101

Tra. To save your life in this extremity,
This favour will I do you for his sake;
And think it not the worst of all your fortunes
That you are like to Sir Vincentio. 105

His name and credit shall you undertake,
And in my house you shall be friendly lodg'd.
Look that you take upon you as you should;
You understand me, sir? So shall you stay
Till you have done your business in the city. 110
If this be courtesy, sir, accept of it.

Ped. O sir, I do; and will repute you ever
The patron of my life and liberty.

Tra. Then go with me to make the matter good.

This, by the way, I let you understand; 115
My father is here look'd for every day,
To pass assurance of a dower in marriage
'Twixt me and one Baptista's daughter here.
In all these circumstances I'll instruct you.
Go with me to clothe you as becomes you. 120

[Exeunt.]

SCENE [III. A room in Petruchio's house].

Enter KATHERINA and GRUMIO.

Gru. No, no, forsooth; I dare not for my life.

Kath. The more my wrong, the more his spite appears.

What, did he marry me to famish me?
Beggars, that come unto my father's door,
Upon entreaty have a present alms;
If not, elsewhere they meet with charity;
But I, who never knew how to entreat,
Nor never needed that I should entreat,

Am starv'd for meat, giddy for lack of sleep,
With oaths kept waking, and with brawling fed; 125

And that which spites me more than all these wants,

He does it under name of perfect love,
As who should say, if I should sleep or eat,
'T were deadly sickness or else present death. 130

I prithee go and get me some repast;
I care not what, so it be wholesome food.

Gru. What say you to a neat's foot?

Kath. 'Tis passing good; I prithee let me have it.

Gru. I fear it is too choleric a meat.

How say you to a fat tripe finely broil'd? 135

Kath. I like it well; good Grumio, fetch it me.

Gru. I cannot tell; I fear 't is choleric.

What say you to a piece of beef and mustard?

Kath. A dish that I do love to feed upon.

Gru. Ay, but the mustard is too hot a little.

Kath. Why then, the beef, and let the mustard rest. 140

Gru. Nay then, I will not; you shall have the mustard.

Or else you get no beef of Grumio.

Kath. Then both, or one, or any thing thou wilt.

Gru. Why then, the mustard without the beef. 145

Kath. Go, get thee gone, thou false deluding slave, [Beats him.]

That feed'st me with the very name of meat.
Sorrow on thee and all the pack of you,
That triumph thus upon my misery!
Go, get thee gone, I say. 150

Enter PETRUCHIO and HORTENSIO, with meat.

Pet. How fares my Kate? What, sweeting, all amok!

Hor. Mistress, what cheer?

Kath. Faith, as cold as can be.

Pet. Pluck up thy spirits; look cheerfully upon me.

Here, love, thou see'st how diligent I am
To dress thy meat myself and bring it thee. 155
I am sure, sweet Kate, this kindness merits thanks.

What, not a word? Nay, then thou lov'st it not;

And all my pains is sorted to no proof.

Here, take away this dish.

Kath. I pray you, let it stand.

Pet. The poorest service is repaid with thanks, 160

And so shall mine, before you touch the meat.

Kath. I thank you, sir.

Hor. Signior Petruchio, fie! you are to blame.

Come, Mistress Kate, I'll bear you company.

Pet. [Aside.] Eat it up all, Hortensio, if thou lovest me. 165

Much good do it unto thy gentle heart!
Kate, eat apace. And now, my honey love,
Will we return unto thy father's house
And revel it as bravely as the best,
With silken coats and caps and golden rings, 170

With ruffs and cuffs and farthingales and things,
 With scarfs and fans and double change of bravery,
 With amber bracelets, beads, and all this knavery.
 What, hast thou din'd? The tailor stays thy leisure,
 To deck thy body with his ruffling treasure. 60

Enter TAILOR.

Come, tailor, let us see these ornaments;

Enter HABERDASHER.

Lay forth the gown. What news with you, sir?
 [Hab.] Here is the cap your worship did bespeak.

Pet. Why, this was moulded on a porringer;
 A velvet dish. Fie, fie! 't is lewd and filthy. 65
 Why, 't is a cockle or a walnut-shell,
 A knack, a toy, a trick, a baby's cap.
 Away with it! come, let me have a bigger.

Kath. I'll have no bigger; this doth fit the time,

And gentewomen wear such caps as these. 70

Pet. When you are gentle, you shall have one too,

And not till then.

Hor. [Aside.] That will not be in haste.

Kath. Why, sir, I trust I may have leave to speak;

And speak I will. I am no child, no babe.
 Your betters have endur'd me say my mind, 75
 And if you cannot, best you stop your ears.
 My tongue will tell the anger of my heart,
 Or else my heart concealing it will break,
 And rather than it shall, I will be free
 Even to the uttermost, as I please, in words. 80

Pet. Why, thou say'st true; it is a paltry cap,

A custard-coffin, a bauble, a silken pie.

I love thee well, in that thou lik'st it not.

Kath. Love me or love me not, I like the cap;
 And it I will have, or I will have none. 85

[Exit Haberdasher.]

Pet. Thy gown? Why, ay. Come, tailor, let us see 't.

O mercy, God! what masquing stuff is here?
 What's this? A sleeve? 'Tis like a demi-cannon.

What, up and down, carv'd like an apple-tart?
 Here's snip and nip and cut and slish and slash, 90

Like to a censer in a barber's shop.

Why, what, i' devil's name, tailor, call'st thou this?

Hor. [Aside.] I see she's like to have neither cap nor gown.

Tai. You bid me make it orderly and well,
 According to the fashion and the time. 95

Pet. Marry, and did; but if you be remembered,

I did not bid you mar it to the time.

Go, hop me over every kennel home,
 For you shall hop without my custom, sir. 99

I'll none of it. Hence! make your best of it.

Kath. I never saw a better-fashion'd gown,

More quaint, more pleasing, nor more commendable.

Belike you mean to make a puppet of me.

Pet. Why, true; he means to make a puppet of thee.

Tai. She says your worship means to make a puppet of her. 100

Pet. O monstrous arrogance! Thou liest, thou thread, thou thimble,
 Thou yard, three-quarters, half-yard, quarter,
 nail!

Thou flea, thou nit, thou winter-cricket thou!
 Brav'd in mine own house with a skein of thread? 111

Away, thou rag, thou quantity, thou remnant,
 Or I shall so be-mete thee with thy yard
 As thou shalt think on prating whilst thou liv'st!

I tell thee, I, that thou hast marr'd her gown.

Tai. Your worship is deceiv'd; the gown is made 116

Just as my master had direction.

Grumio gave order how it should be done.

Gru. I gave him no order; I gave him the stuff.

Tai. But how did you desire it should be made? 120

Gru. Marry, sir, with needle and thread.

Tai. But did you not request to have it cut?

Gru. Thou hast fac'd many things.

Tai. I have. 124

Gru. Face not me; thou hast brav'd many men, brave not me; I will neither be fac'd nor brav'd. I say unto thee, I bid thy master cut out the gown; but I did not bid him cut it to pieces; ergo, thou liest. 129

Tai. Why, here is the note of the fashion to testify.

Pet. Read it.

Gru. The note lies in 's throat, if he say I said so.

Tai. [Reads.] "Imprimis, a loose-bodied gown" — 135

Gru. Master, if ever I said loose-bodied gown, sew me in the skirts of it, and beat me to death with a bottom of brown thread. I said a gown.

Pet. Proceed.

Tai. [Reads.] "With a small compass'd cape" — 140

Gru. I confess the cape.

Tai. [Reads.] "With a trunk sleeve" —

Gru. I confess two sleeves.

Tai. [Reads.] "The sleeves curiously cut."

Pet. Ay, there 's the villainy. 145

Gru. Error i' the bill, sir; error i' the bill. I commanded the sleeves should be cut out and sew'd up again; and that I'll prove upon thee, though thy little finger be armed in a thimble.

Tai. This is true that I say; an I had thee in place where, thou shouldst know it. 151

Gru. I am for thee straight. Take thou the bill, give me thy mete-yard, and spare not me.

Hor. God-a-mercy, Grumio! then he shall have no odds. 155

Pet. Well, sir, in brief, the gown is not for me.

Gru. You are i' the right, sir; 't is for my mistress.

Pet. Go, take it up unto thy master's use.

Gru. Villain, not for thy life! Take up my mistress' gown for thy master's use! ¹⁶¹

Pet. Why, sir, what's your conceit in that?

Gru. O, sir, the conceit is deeper than you think for.

Take up my mistress' gown to his master's use!

O, fie, fie, fie! ¹⁶⁵

Pet. [Aside.] Hortensio, say thou wilt see the tailor paid. —

Go take it hence; be gone, and say no more.

Hor. Tailor, I'll pay thee for thy gown to-morrow;

Take no unkindness of his hasty words.

Away! I say; commend me to thy master. ¹⁷⁰

[Exit Tailor.]

Pet. Well, come, my Kate; we will unto your father's

Even in these honest mean habiliments.

Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor,

For 't is the mind that makes the body rich;

And as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds, ¹⁷⁵

So honour peereth in the meanest habit.

What, is the jay more precious than the lark,

Because his feathers are more beautiful?

Or is the adder better than the eel,

Because his painted skin contents the eye? ¹⁸⁰

O, no, good Kate; neither art thou the worse

For this poor furniture and mean array.

If thou account'st it shame, lay it on me;

And therefore frolic. We will hence forthwith,

To feast and sport us at thy father's house. ¹⁸⁵

Go, call my men, and let us straight to him,

And bring our horses unto Long-lane end.

There will we mount, and thither walk on foot.

Let's see; I think 't is now some seven o'clock,

And well we may come there by dinner-time.

Kath. I dare assure you, sir, 't is almost two; ¹⁹¹

And 't will be supper-time ere you come there.

Pet. It shall be seven ere I go to horse.

Look, what I speak, or do, or think to do,

You are still crossing it. Sirs, let 't alone, ¹⁹⁵

I will not go to-day, and ere I do,

It shall be what o'clock I say it is.

Hor. [Aside.] Why, so this gallant will command the sun. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. Padua. Before Baptista's house.]

Enter TRANIO, and the PEDANT dressed like Vincentio.

Tra. Sir, this is the house; please it you that I call?

Ped. Ay, what else? And, but I be deceived,

Signior Baptista may remember me,

Near twenty years ago, in Genoa,

Where we were lodgers at the Pegasus. ⁵

Tra. 'T is well; and hold your own, in any case,
With such austerity as 'longeth to a father.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Ped. I warrant you. But, sir, here comes your boy;

'T were good he were school'd.

Tra. Fear you not him. Sirrah Biondello, ¹⁰

Now do your duty thoroughly, I advise you.

Imagine 't were the right Vincentio.

Bion. Tut, fear not me.

Tra. But hast thou done thy errand to Baptista?

Bion. I told him that your father was at Venice, ¹⁵

And that you look'd for him this day in Padua.

Tra. Thou 'rt a tall fellow; hold thee that to drink.

Here comes Baptista; set your countenance, sir.

Enter BAPTISTA and LUCENTIO: PEDANT booted and bare-headed.

Signior Baptista, you are happily met.

[To the Pedant.] Sir, this is the gentleman I told you of. ²⁰

I pray you, stand good father to me now,

Give me Bianca for my patrimony.

Ped. Soft, son!

Sir, by your leave. Having come to Padua

To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio ²⁵

Made me acquainted with a weighty cause

Of love between your daughter and himself;

And, for the good report I hear of you,

And for the love he beareth to your daughter

And she to him, to stay him not too long, ³⁰

I am content, in a good father's care,

To have him match'd; and if you please to like

No worse than I, upon some agreement

Me shall you find ready and willing

With one consent to have her so bestow'd; ³⁵

For curious I cannot be with you,

Signior Baptista, of whom I hear so well.

Bap. Sir, pardon me in what I have to say.

Your plainness and your shortness please me well.

Right true it is, your son Lucentio here ⁴⁰

Doth love my daughter and she loveth him,

Or both dissemble deeply their affections;

And therefore, if you say no more than this,

That like a father you will deal with him

And pass my daughter a sufficient dower, ⁴⁵

The match is made, and all is done.

Your son shall have my daughter with consent.

Tra. I thank you, sir. Where, then, do you know best

We be affied and such assurance ta'en

As shall with either part's agreement stand? ⁵⁰

Bap. Not in my house, Lucentio; for, you know,

Pitchers have ears, and I have many servants,

Besides, old Gremio is hearkening still,

And happily we might be interrupted.

Tra. Then at my lodging, an it like you. ⁵⁵
There doth my father lie; and there, this
night,

We'll pass the business privately and well.
Send for your daughter by your servant here;
My boy shall fetch the scrivener presently.
The worst is this, that, at so slender warning, ⁶⁰

You are like to have a thin and slender pittance.

Bap. It likes me well. Cambio, hie you home,

And bid Bianca make her ready straight;
And, if you will, tell what hath happened,
Lucentio's father is arriv'd in Padua. ⁶⁵
And how she's like to be Lucentio's wife.

Bion. I pray the gods she may with all my heart! [Exit.]

Tra. Daily not with the gods, but get thee
gone.

Signior Baptista, shall I lead the way?
Welcome! one mess is like to be your cheer; ⁷⁰
Come, sir; we will better it in Pisa.

Bap. I follow you. [Exeunt omnes.]

Re-enter LUCENTIO and BIONDELLO.

Bion. Cambio!

Luc. What say'st thou, Biondello?

Bion. You saw my master wink and laugh upon you? ⁷⁵

Luc. Biondello, what of that?

Bion. Faith, nothing; but has left me here behind, to expound the meaning or moral of his signs and tokens. ⁸⁰

Luc. I pray thee, moralize them.

Bion. Then thus. Baptista is safe, talking with the deceiving father of a deceitful son.

Luc. And what of him?

Bion. His daughter is to be brought by you to the supper. ⁸⁵

Luc. And then?

Bion. The old priest of Saint Luke's church is at your command at all hours.

Luc. And what of all this? ⁹⁰

Bion. I cannot tell. Expect they are busied about a counterfeit assurance; take you assurance of her, "cum privilegio ad imprinendum solum." To the church! Take the priest, clerk, and some sufficient honest witnesses. ⁹⁵

If this be not that you look for, I have no more to say,

But bid Bianca farewell for ever and a day.

Luc. Hear'st thou, Biondello?

Bion. I cannot tarry. I knew a wench married in an afternoon as she went to the garden for parsley to stuff a rabbit, and so may ¹⁰⁰ you, sir; and so, adieu, sir. My master hath appointed me to go to Saint Luke's, to bid the priest be ready to come against you come with your appendix. [Exit.] ¹⁰⁴

Luc. I may, and will, if she be so contented.
She will be pleased; then wherefore should I doubt?

Hap what hap may, I'll roundly go about
her;

It shall go hard if Cambio go without her.

[Exit.]

[SCENE V. A public road.]

*Enter PETRUCHIO, KATHERINA, HORTENSIO
[and Servants].*

Pet. Come on, i' God's name; once more toward our father's.

Good Lord, how bright and goodly shines the moon!

Kath. The moon! the sun. It is not moonlight now.

Pet. I say it is the moon that shines so bright.

Kath. I know it is the sun that shines so bright. ⁵

Pet. Now, by my mother's son, and that's myself,

It shall be moon, or star, or what I list,
Or ere I journey to your father's house.
Go on, and fetch our horses back again.
Evermore cross'd and cross'd; nothing but cross'd! ¹⁰

Hor. Say as he says, or we shall never go.

Kath. Forward, I pray, since we have come so far,

And be it moon, or sun, or what you please.
An if you please to call it a rush-candle,
Henceforth I vow it shall be so for me. ¹⁵

Pet. I say it is the moon.

Kath. I know it is the moon.

Pet. Nay, then you lie; it is the blessed sun.

Kath. Then, God be bless'd, it is the blessed sun;

But sun it is not, when you say it is not;
And the moon changes even as your mind. ²⁰
What you will have it nam'd, even that it is;
And so it shall be so for Katherine.

Hor. Petruchio, go thy ways; the field is won.

Pet. Well, forward, forward! thus the bowl should run,

And not unluckily against the bias. ²⁵
But, soft! company is coming here.

Enter VINCENTIO.

[To Vincentio.] Good morrow, gentle mistress;
where away?

Tell me, sweet Kate, and tell me truly too,
Hast thou beheld a fresher gentlerwoman?
Such war of white and red within her cheeks! ³⁰
What stars do spangle heaven with such beauty,
As those two eyes become that heavenly face?
Fair lovely maid, once more good day to thee.
Sweet Kate, embrace her for her beauty's sake.

Hor. 'A will make the man mad, to make a woman of him. ³⁵

Kath. Young budding virgin, fair and fresh and sweet,

Whither away, or where is thy abode?
Happy the parents of so fair a child!
Happier the man, whom favourable stars ⁴⁰
Allots thee for his lovely bed-fellow!

Pet. Why, how now, Kate! I hope thou art not mad.

This is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, withered,
And not a maiden, as thou say'st he is.

Kath. Pardon, old father, my mistaking eyes, ⁴⁵

That have been so bedazzled with the sun
That every thing I look on seemeth green.
Now I perceive thou art a reverend father.
Pardon, I pray thee, for my mad mistaking.

Pet. Do, good old grandsire; and withal make known 50

Which way thou travellest. If along with us,
We shall be joyful of thy company.

Vin. Fair sir, and you my merry mistress,
That with your strange encounter much amaz'd
me,

My name is call'd Vincentio; my dwelling Pisa;
And bound I am to Padua, there to visit 55
A son of mine, which long I have not seen.

Pet. What is his name?

Vin. Lucentio, gentle sir.

Pet. Happily met; the happier for thy son.
And now by law, as well as reverend age, 60
I may entitle thee my loving father.

The sister to my wife, this gentlewoman,
Thy son by this hath married. Wonder not,
Nor be not grieved; she is of good esteem,
Her dowry wealthy, and of worthy birth; 65

Beside, so qualified as may beseech
The spouse of any noble gentleman.

Let me embrace with old Vincentio,
And wander we to see thy honest son,
Who will of thy arrival be full joyous. 70

Vin. But is this true, or is it else your pleasure,

Like pleasant travellers, to break a jest
Upon the company you overtake?

Hor. I do assure thee, father, so it is.

Pet. Come, go along, and see the truth hereof; 75

For our first merriment hath made thee jealous.
[Exeunt [all but Hortensio].]

Hor. Well, Petruchio, this has put me in heart.

Have to my widow! and if she be froward,
Then hast thou taught Hortensio to be untoward. [Exit.]

[ACT V

SCENE I. Padua. Before Lucentio's house.]

Enter BIONDELLO, LUCENTIO, and BIANCA.
GREMIO is out before.

Bion. Softly and swiftly, sir; for the priest is ready.

Luc. I fly, Biondello; but they may chance to need thee at home, therefore leave us.

[Exeunt [Lucentio and Bianca].]
Bion. Nay, faith, I'll see the church o' your back; and then come back to my master's as soon as I can. [Exit.]

Gre. I marvel Cambio comes not all this while.

Enter PETRUCHIO, KATHERINA, VINCENTIO,
GRUMIO, with Attendants.

Pet. Sir, here's the door, this is Lucentio's house.

My father's bears more toward the marketplace; 10

Thither must I, and here I leave you, sir.

Vin. You shall not choose but drink before you go.

I think I shall command your welcome here,
And, by all likelihood, some cheer is toward.

[Knocks.]

Gre. They're busy within; you were best knock louder. 15

PEDANT looks out of the window.

Ped. What's he that knocks as he would beat down the gate?

Vin. Is Signior Lucentio within, sir?

Ped. He's within, sir, but not to be spoken
withal. 21

Vin. What if a man bring him a hundred pound or two, to make merry withal?

Ped. Keep your hundred pounds to yourself;
he shall need none, so long as I live. 25

Pet. Nay, I told you your son was well beloved in Padua. Do you hear, sir? To leave frivolous circumstances, I pray you, tell Signior Lucentio that his father is come from Pisa and is here at the door to speak with him. 30

Ped. Thou liest. His father is come from Padua and is here looking out at the window.

Vin. Art thou his father?

Ped. Ay, sir; so his mother says, if I may believe her. 35

Pet. [To Vincentio.] Why, how now, gentleman! Why, this is flat knavery, to take upon you another man's name.

Ped. Lay hands on the villain. I believe 'a means to cozen somebody in this city under my countenance. 41

Re-enter BIONDELLO.

Bion. I have seen them in the church together; God send 'em good shipping! But who is here? Mine old master Vincentio! Now we are undone and brought to nothing. 45

Vin. [Seeing Biondello.] Come hither, crackhemp.

Bion. I hope I may choose, sir.

Vin. Come hither, you rogue. What, have you forgot me? 50

Bion. Forgot you? No, sir; I could not forget you, for I never saw you before in all my life.

Vin. What, you notorious villain, didst thou never see thy master's father, Vincentio? 55

Bion. What, my old worshipful old master?
Yes, marry, sir; see where he looks out of the window.

Vin. Is't so, indeed? [Beats Biondello.]

Bion. Help, help, help! here's a madman will murder me. [Exit.] 61

Ped. Help, son! help, Signior Baptista!

[Exit from above.]

Pet. Prithce, Kate, let's stand aside and see the end of this controversy. [They retire.]

Re-enter PEDANT [below], TRANIO, BAPTISTA, and Servants.

Tra. Sir, what are you that offer to beat my servant? 66

Vin. What am I, sir! Nay, what are you, sir? O immortal gods! O fine villain! A silken doublet! a velvet hose! a scarlet cloak! and a copatain hat! O, I am undone! I am undone! While I play the good husband at home, [70 my son and my servant spend all at the university.

Tra. How now! what's the matter?

Bap. What, is the man lunatic? 74

Tra. Sir, you seem a sober ancient gentleman by your habit, but your words show you a madman. Why, sir, what 'cerns it you if I wear pearl and gold? I thank my good father, I am able to maintain it. 79

Vin. Thy father! O villain! he is a sail-maker in Bergamo.

Bap. You mistake, sir, you mistake, sir. Pray, what do you think is his name?

Vin. His name! as if I knew not his name! I have brought him up ever since he was three years old, and his name is Tranio. 86

Ped. Away, away, mad ass! his name is Lucentio; and he is mine only son, and heir to the lands of me, Signior Vincentio. 89

Vin. Lucentio! O, he hath murd'ed his master! Lay hold on him, I charge you, in the Duke's name. O, my son, my son! Tell me, thou villain, where is my son Lucentio?

Tra. Call forth an officer.

[Enter one with an officer.]

Carry this mad knave to the gaol. Father [85 Baptista, I charge you see that he be forth-coming.

Vin. Carry me to the gaol!

Gre. Stay, officer; he shall not go to prison. Bap. Talk not, Signior Gremio; I say he shall go to prison. 100

Gre. Take heed, Signior Baptista, lest you be cony-catch'd in this business. I dare swear this is the right Vincentio.

Ped. Swear, if thou dar'st.

Gre. Nay, I dare not swear it. 105

Tra. Then thou wert best say that I am not Lucentio.

Gre. Yes, I know thee to be Signior Lucentio.

Bap. Away with the dotard! To the gaol with him! 110

Re-enter BIONDELLO, with LUCENTIO and BIANCA.

Vin. Thus strangers may be hal'd and abus'd. O monstrous villain!

Bion. O! we are spoil'd and — yonder he is. Deny him, forswear him, or else we are all undone. [Exeunt Biondello, Tranio, and Pedant, as fast as may be.

Luc. (Kneeling.) Pardon, sweet father.

Vin. Lives my sweet son? 115

Bian. Pardon, dear father.

Bap. How hast thou offended?

Where is Lucentio?

Luc. Here's Lucentio,

Right son to the right Vincentio, That have by marriage made thy daughter mine, 119

While counterfeit supposes blear'd thine eye,

Gre. Here's packing, with a witness, to deceive us all!

Vin. Where is that damned villain Tranio,

That fac'd and brav'd me in this matter so?

Bap. Why, tell me, is not this my Cam- bio? 125

Bian. Cambio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Luc. Love wrought these miracles. Bianca's love

Made me exchange my state with Tranio, While he did bear my countenance in the town;

And happily I have arrived at the last 130 Unto the wished haven of my bliss.

What Tranio did, myself enforc'd him to; Then pardon him, sweet father, for my sake.

Vin. I'll slit the villain's nose, that would have sent me to the gaol. 135

Bap. But do you hear, sir? Have you married my daughter without asking my good will?

Vin. Fear not, Baptista; we will content you, go to; but I will in, to be reveng'd for this villainy. [Exit. 140

Bap. And I, to sound the depth of this knavery. [Exit.

Luc. Look not pale, Bianca; thy father will not frown. [Exeunt Lucentio and Bianca].

Gre. My cake is dough; but I'll in among the rest, 145

Out of hope of all but my share of the feast. [Exit.]

Kath. Husband, let's follow, to see the end of this ado.

Pet. First kiss me, Kate, and we will.

Kath. What, in the midst of the street?

Pet. What, art thou asham'd of me? 155

Kath. No, sir, God forbid; but asham'd to kiss.

Pet. Why, then let's home again. Come, sirrah, let's away.

Kath. Nay, I will give thee a kiss; now pray thee, love, stay.

Pet. Is not this well? Come, my sweet Kate:

Better once than never, for never too late. 165 [Exeunt.]

SCENE [II. Padua. Lucentio's house].

Enter BAPTISTA, VINCENTIO, GREMIO, the PEDANT, LUCENTIO, BIANCA [PETRUCHIO, KATHERINA, HORTENSIO], and WIDOW, TRANIO, BIONDELLO, and GREMIO: the Servants with Tranio bringing in a banquet.

Luc. At last, though long, our jarring notes agree;

And time it is, when raging war is done, To smile at scapes and perils overblown.

My fair Bianca, bid my father welcome, While I with self-same kindness welcome thine. 6

Brother Petruchio, sister Katherina, And thou, Hortensio, with thy loving widow, Feast with the best, and welcome to my house.

My banquet is to close our stomachs up,
After our great good cheer. Pray you, sit
down; 10

For now we sit to chat as well as eat.

Pet. Nothing but sit and sit, and eat and eat!

Bap. Padua affords this kindness, son Petruchio.

Pet. Padua affords nothing but what is kind.

Hor. For both our sakes, I would that word were true. 15

Pet. Now, for my life, Hortensio fears his widow.

Wid. Then never trust me, if I be afraid.

Pet. You are very sensible, and yet you miss my sense.

I mean, Hortensio is afraid of you.

Wid. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round. 20

Pet. Roundly replied.

Kath. Mistress, how mean you that?

Wid. Thus I conceive by him.

Pet. Conceives by me! How likes Hortensio that?

Hor. My widow says, thus she conceives her tale.

Pet. Very well mended. Kiss him for that, good widow. 25

Kath. "He that is giddy thinks the world turns round:"

I pray you, tell me what you meant by that.

Wid. Your husband, being troubled with a shrew,

Measures my husband's sorrow by his woe:

And now you know my meaning. 30

Kath. A very mean meaning.

Wid. Right, I mean you.

Kath. And I am mean indeed, respecting you.

Pet. To her, Kate!

Hor. To her, widow!

Pet. A hundred marks, my Kate does put her down. 35

Hor. That's my office.

Pet. Spoke like an officer. Ha! to thee, lad! [Drinks to Hortensio.]

Bap. How likes Gremio these quick-witted folks?

Gre. Believe me, sir, they butt together well.

Bian. Head, and butt! An hasty-witted body 40

Would say your head and butt were head and horn.

Vin. Ay, mistress bride, hath that awakened you?

Bian. Ay, but not frightened me; therefore I'll sleep again.

Pet. Nay, that you shall not; since you have begun,

Have at you for a bitter jest or two! 45

Bian. Am I your bird? I mean to shift my bush;

And then pursue me as you draw your bow.

You are welcome all.

[Exeunt Bianca [Katherina, and Widow].]

Pet. She hath prevented me. Here, Signior Tranio, 49

This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not; Therefore a health to all that shot and miss'd.

Tra. O, sir, Lucentio slipp'd me like his greyhound,

Which runs himself and catches for his master.

Pet. A good swift simile, but something currish.

Tra. 'Tis well, sir, that you hunted for yourself; 55

'Tis thought your deer does hold you at a bay.

Bap. O ho, Petruchio! Tranio hits you now.

Luc. I thank thee for that gird, good Tranio.

Hor. Confess, confess, hath he not hit you here?

Pet. 'A has a little gall'd me, I confess; 60 And, as the jest did glance away from me,

'Tis ten to one it maim'd you two outright.

Bap. Now, in good sadness, son Petruchio, I think thou hast the veriest shrew of all.

Pet. Well, I say no; and therefore for assurance 65

Let's each one send unto his wife, And he whose wife is most obedient

To come at first when he doth send for her, Shall win the wager which we will propose.

Hor. Content. What is the wager?

Luc. Twenty crowns.

Pet. Twenty crowns! 71

I'll venture so much of my hawk or hound, But twenty times so much upon my wife.

Luc. A hundred then.

Hor. Content.

Pet. A match! 'tis done.

Hor. Who shall begin?

Luc. That will I. 75

Go, Biondello, bid your mistress come to me.

Bion. I go. [Exit.]

Bap. Son, I'll be your half, Bianca comes.

Luc. I'll have no halves; I'll bear it all myself.

Re-enter BIONDELLO.

How now! what news?

Bion. Sir, my mistress sends you word That she is busy and she cannot come. 81

Pet. How! she is busy and she cannot come! Is that an answer?

Gre. Ay, and a kind one too. Pray God, sir, your wife send you not a worse.

Pet. I hope, better. 85

Hor. Sirrah Biondello, go and entreat my wife

To come to me forthwith. [Exit Bion.]

Pet. O, ho! entreat her! Nay, then she must needs come.

Hor. I am afraid, sir, Do what you can, yours will not be entreated.

Re-enter BIONDELLO.

Now, where's my wife? 90

Bion. She says you have some goodly jest in hand.

She will not come; she bids you come to her.

Pet. Worse and worse; she will not come! O vile,

Intolerable, not to be endur'd!
 Sirrah Grumio, go to your mistress;
 Say, I command her come to me.

95

[Exit Grumio.]

Hor. I know her answer.

Pet.

What?

Hor.

She will not.

Pet. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Re-enter KATHERINA.

Bap. Now, by my holidame, here comes Katherina!

Kath. What is your will, sir, that you send for me?

100

Pet. Where is your sister, and Hortensio's wife?

Kath. They sit conferring by the parlour fire.

Pet. Go, fetch them hither. If they deny to come,

Swinge me them soundly forth unto their husbands.

Away, I say, and bring them hither straight.

[Exit Katherina.]

Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder.

106

Hor. And so it is; I wonder what it bodes.

Pet. Marry, peace it bodes, and love, and quiet life,

And awful rule, and right supremacy;

And, to be short, what not, that's sweet and happy.

110

Bap. Now, fair befall thee, good Petruchio! The wager thou hast won; and I will add Unto their losses twenty thousand crowns, Another dowry to another daughter, For she is chang'd, as she had never been.

115

Pet. Nay, I will win my wager better yet And show more sign of her obedience, Her new-built virtue and obedience.

Re-enter KATHERINA, with BIANCA and WIDOW.

See where she comes and brings your froward wives

As prisoners to her womanly persuasion.

120

Katherine, that cap of yours becomes you not; Off with that bauble, throw it under-foot.

[Kate throws down her cap.]

Wid. Lord, let me never have cause to sigh, Till I be brought to such a silly pass!

124

Bian. Fie! what a foolish duty call you this?

Luc. I would your duty were as foolish too.

The wisdom of your duty, fair Bianca, Hath cost me an hundred crowns since supper-time.

Bian. The more fool you, for laying on my duty.

Pet. Katherine, I charge thee, tell these headstrong women

130

What duty they doowe their lords and husbands.

Wid. Come, come, you're mocking; we will have no telling.

Pet. Come on, I say; and first begin with her.

Wid. She shall not.

Pet. I say she shall; and first begin with her.

Kath. Fie, fie! unknit that threatening un-kind brow,

136

And dart not scornful glances from those eyes, To wound thy lord, thy king, thy governor. It blots thy beauty as frosts do bite the meads, Confounds thy fame as whirlwinds shake fair buds,

140

And in no sense is meet or amiable.

A woman mov'd is like a fountain troubled, Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty; And while it is so, none so dry or thirsty Will deign to sip or touch one drop of it. Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper, Thy head, thy sovereign; one that cares for thee,

145

And for thy maintenance commits his body To painful labour both by sea and land, To watch the night in storms, the day in cold, Whilst thou liest warm at home, secure and safe; And craves no other tribute at thy hands But love, fair looks, and true obedience; Too little payment for so great a debt.

Such duty as the subject owes the prince Even such a woman oweth to her husband;

And when she is froward, peevish, sullen, sour, And not obedient to his honest will,

What is she but a foul contending rebel And graceless traitor to her loving lord?

160

I am asham'd that women are so simple To offer war where they should kneel for peace,

Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway, When they are bound to serve, love, and obey.

Why are our bodies soft and weak and smooth, Unapt to toil and trouble in the world,

166

But that our soft conditions and our hearts Should well agree with our external parts?

Come, come, you froward and unable worms! My mind hath been as big as one of yours,

170

My heart as great, my reason haply more, To bandy word for word and frown for frown;

But now I see our lances are but straws, Our strength as weak, our weakness past compare,

That seeming to be most which we indeed least are.

175

Then vail your stomachs, for it is no boot, And place your hands below your husband's foot;

In token of which duty, if he please, My hand is ready; may it do him ease.

Pet. Why, there's a wench! Come on, and kiss me, Kate.

180

Luc. Well, go thy ways, old lad; for thou shalt ha't.

Vin. 'Tis a good hearing when children are toward.

Luc. But a harsh hearing when women are froward.

Pet. Come, Kate, we'll to bed. We three are married, but you two are sped.

185

[To Luc.] 'T was I won the wager, though you hit the white;

And, being a winner, God give you good night!

[Exit Petruchio and Katherina.]

Hor. Now, go thy ways; thou hast tam'd a curst shrew.

Luc. 'T is a wonder, by your leave, she will be tam'd so.

[Exit.]

THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR

THE earliest known mention of The Merry Wives of Windsor is an entry in the books of the Stationers' Company for January 18, 1604½. Later in the same year appeared a much garbled and abbreviated edition, now known as the First Quarto, and this was reprinted with a new title-page in 1619. The version in the First Folio is much longer and immeasurably more accurate, and forms the basis of all modern texts.

The relation of these two versions is still a matter of debate. The theory, however, that the First Quarto represents an earlier sketch is being abandoned by an increasing number of modern critics in favor of the belief that it is derived from the same version of the play as we have in the First Folio, but shortened for acting purposes, and corrupted by the short-hand writer who reported it for a piratical publisher. But the uninterrupted bungling of the lines leaves room for all the possible methods of debasing a text, and it may be suggested that the report was made from a performance in which the actors had a very imperfect knowledge of their parts. The Folio text itself shows signs of having been tampered with, notably in the omission of the working out of the plot of Caius and Evans against the Host (a device whose culmination may be preserved in the episode of the loss of the horses), and in the loss of a few passages which can be restored with a fair amount of certainty from the Quarto. It has been suggested that some of the flaws may be accounted for by supposing that passages omitted for acting purposes have been unskillfully restored.

A tradition, first recorded by John Dennis in 1702, says that the comedy was written in a fortnight to the order of Queen Elizabeth, who wished to see Falstaff in love. There is nothing improbable in this, and the suggestion of haste receives corroboration from the fact that so much of the dialogue is in prose. It implies, moreover, what would be inferred on other grounds, that Henry IV had already been performed, and so fixes 1598 as the earliest possible date. The only objection to this as an earlier limit has arisen from the desire of some older editors to bring it nearer to 1592, the date of the visit of Count Mömpelgard, alluded to in iv. v.; but these allusions would still have point six or seven years later. The question as to whether it preceded or followed Henry V is more difficult. That Falstaff dies in that play does not, of course, affect the question, since it is plainly indicated that the future Henry V is still "the mad Prince of Wales" (Quarto, Sc. 18), so that the period in which the plot is laid cannot come after Henry IV, in the fifth act of which the Prince becomes King. If Nym be regarded, like the rest of Falstaff's followers, as a revival, the play must be later than Henry V, the only other play in which he appears. But the evidence is not conclusive, and the variation in date between the two theories is merely from 1598 to the latter part of 1599.

The main plot of the Merry Wives is thought to have been suggested by The Tale of the Two Lovers of Pisa in Tarlton's Newses out of Purgatorie (1590). This is an adaptation of the story of Nerisio of Portugal from Straparola's Tredici Piacevoli Notte (1569). The resemblance is only general, and the few similarities of phrase that have been pointed out are insignificant. In the Italian story, which is of a common type, a lover is repeatedly surprised in the house of his lady by her husband, of whom he has unwittingly made a confidant; and on one occasion he is hidden in a vat of feathers, on another carried out in a chest of papers. In the play, the initial betrayal of Falstaff by Pistol and Nym, the disguise as Mother Prat, the pinching by the fairies, the underplot of the triple wooing of Anne Page, and all the characters save the commonplace of the jealous husband, seem to be original. A story similar to Straparola's is found in Ser Giovanni Fiorentino's Il Pecorone, second tale, first day, but this was not translated till after Shakespeare's death. The fourth tale of the second night of Straparola tells of the concerted vengeance of three ladies on a would-be lover who made advances to all of them on the same evening. But the resemblance goes no farther. The Fishwife's Tale of Brainford in Westward for Smelts was suggested by Malone as a source, but has no claim to be so considered.

ACT I

SCENE I. [Windsor. Before Page's house.]

Enter JUSTICE SHALLOW, SLENDER, and SIR HUGH EVANS.

Shal. Sir Hugh, persuade me not; I will make a Star-chamber matter of it. If he were twenty Sir John Falstoffs, he shall not abuse Robert Shallow, esquire.

Slen. In the county of Gloucester, justice of peace and "Coram."

Shal. Ay, cousin Slender, and "Custalorum."

Slen. Ay, and "Rato-lorum" too; and a gentleman born, master parson; who writes himself "Armigero," in any bill, warrant, quittance, or obligation, "Armigero."

Shal. Ay, that I do; and have done any time these three hundred years.

Slen. All his successors gone before him hath done 't; and all his ancestors that come after him may. They may give the dozen white laces in their coat.

Shal. It is an old coat.

Evans. The dozen white louses do become an old coat well; it agrees well, passant. It is a familiar beast to man, and signifies love.

Shal. The luce is the fresh fish; the salt fish is an old coat.

Slen. I may quarter, coz.

Shal. You may, by marrying.

Evans. It is marring indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whit.

Evans. Yes, py'r lady. If he has a quarter of your coat, there is but three skirts for yourself, in my simple conjectures. But that is all one. If Sir John Falstaff have committed disparagements unto you, I am of the church, and will be glad to do my benevolence to make atonements and compromises between you.

Shal. The council shall hear it; it is a riot.

Evans. It is not meet the council hear a riot; there is no fear of Got in a riot. The council, look you, shall desire to hear the fear of Got, and not to hear a riot. Take your vizaments in that.

Shal. Ha! O' my life, if I were young again, the sword should end it.

Evans. It is petter that friends is the sword, and end it; and there is also another device in my prain, which peradventure prings goot discretions with it: there is Anne Page, which is daughter to Master George Page, which is pretty virginity.

Slen. Mistress Anne Page? She has brown hair, and speaks small like a woman.

Evans. It is that fery person for all the orld, as just as you will desire; and seven hundred pounds of moneys, and gold and silver, is her grandsire upon his death's-bed—Got deliver to a joyful resurrections!—give, when she is able to overtake seventeen years old. It were a goot motion if we leave our pribles and prables, and desire a marriage between Master Abraham and Mistress Anne Page.

Shal. Did her grandsire leave her seven hundred pound?

Evans. Ay, and her father is make her a petter penny.

Shal. I know the young gentlewoman; she has good gifts.

Evans. Seven hundred pounds and possibilities is goot gifts.

Shal. Well, let us see honest Master Page. Is Falstaff there?

Evans. Shall I tell you a lie? I do despise a liar as I do despise one that is false, or as I despise one that is not true. The knight, Sir John, is there; and, I beseech you, be ruled by your well-willers. I will peat the door for Master Page. [Knocks.] What, ho! Gotpless your house here!

Page. [Within.] Who's there?

[Enter PAGE.]

Evans. Here is Got's plessing, and your friend, and Justice Shallow; and here young Master Slender, that peradventures shall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.

Page. I am glad to see your worshippers well. I thank you for my venison, Master Shallow.

Shal. Master Page, I am glad to see you. Much good do it your good heart! I wish'd your venison better; it was ill kill'd. How doth good Mistress Page?—and I thank you always with my heart, la! with my heart.

Page. Sir, I thank you.

Shal. Sir, I thank you; by yea and no, I do.

Page. I am glad to see you, good Master Slender.

Slen. How does your fallow greyhound, sir? I heard say he was outrun on Cotsall.

Page. It could not be judg'd, sir.

Slen. You'll not confess, you'll not confess.

Shal. That he will not. 'Tis your fault, 'tis your fault; 'tis a good dog.

Page. A cur, sir.

Shal. Sir, he's a good dog, and a fair dog; can there be more said? He is good and fair. Is Sir John Falstaff here?

Page. Sir, he is within; and I would I could do a good office between you.

Evans. It is spoke as a Christians ought to speak.

Shal. He hath wrong'd me, Master Page.

Page. Sir, he doth in some sort confess it.

Shal. If it be confessed, it is not redressed. Is not that so, Master Page? He hath wrong'd me; indeed he hath; at a word, he hath. Believe me, Robert Shallow, esquire, saith he is wrong'd.

Page. Here comes Sir John.

[Enter SIR JOHN FALSTAFF, BARDOLPH, NYM, and PISTOL.]

Fal. Now, Master Shallow, you'll complain of me to the King?

Shal. Knight, you have beaten my men, kill'd my deer, and broke open my lodge.

Fal. But not kiss'd your keeper's daughter?

Shal. Tut, a pin! This shall be answer'd.

Fal. I will answer it straight; I have done all this.

That is now answer'd.

Shal. The council shall know this.

Fal. 'T were better for you if it were known in counsel. You'll be laugh'd at.

Evans. Pauca verba, Sir John; goot words.

Fal. Good words! good cabbage. Slender, I broke your head; what matter have you against me?

Slen. Marry, sir, I have matter in my head against you; and against your cony-catching rascals, Bardolph, Nym, and Pistol. [They carried me to the tavern and made me drunk, and afterward pick'd my pocket.]

Bard. You Banbury cheese!

Slen. Ay, it is no matter.

Pist. How now, Mephostophilus!

Slen. Ay, it is no matter.

Nym. Slice, I say! pauca, pauca. Slice! that's my humour.

Slen. Where's Simple, my man? Can you tell, cousin?

Evans. Peace, I pray you. Now let us understand. There is three umpires in this matter, as I understand; that is, Master Page, fidelicet Master Page; and there is myself, fidelicet myself; and the three party is, lastly and finally, mine host of the Garter.

Page. We three to hear it and end it between them.

Evans. Fery goot. I will make a prief of it in my note-book, and we will afterwards ork upon the cause with as great discreetly as we can.

Fal. Pistol!

Pist. He hears with ears.

Evans. The tevil and his tam! what phrase is this, "He hears with ear"? Why, it is affectations.

Fal. Pistol, did you pick Master Slender's purse?

Slen. Ay, by these gloves, did he, or I would I might never come in mine own great chamber again else, of seven groats in mill-sixpences, and two Edward shovel-boards, that cost me two shilling and two pence a-piece of Yead Miller, by these gloves.

Fal. Is this true, Pistol?

Evans. No; it is false, if it is a pick-purse.

Pist. Ha, thou mountain-foreigner! Sir John and master mine,

I combat challenge of this latten bilbo. Word of denial in thy labras here!

Word of denial! Froth and scum, thou liest!

Slen. By these gloves, then, 't was he.

Nym. Be avis'd, sir, and pass good humours. I will say "marry trap" with you, if you run the nuthook's humour on me. That is the very note of it.

Slen. By this hat, then, he in the red face had it; for though I cannot remember what I did when you made me drunk, yet I am not altogether an ass.

Fal. What say you, Scarlet and John?

Bard. Why, sir, for my part, I say the gentleman had drunk himself out of his five sentences.

Evans. It is his five senses. Fie, what the ignorance is!

Bard. And being fap, sir, was, as they say, cashier'd; and so conclusions pass'd the ca-reers.

Slen. Ay, you spake in Latin then too. But 'tis no matter; I'll ne'er be drunk whilst I live again, but in honest, civil, godly company, for this trick. If I be drunk, I'll be drunk with those that have the fear of God, and not with drunken knaves.

Evans. So Got udge me, that is a virtuous mind.

Fal. You hear all these matters deni'd, gentlemen; you hear it.

Slen. O heaven! this is Mistress Anne Page.

Page. How now, Mistress Ford!

Fal. Mistress Ford, by my troth, you are very well met. By your leave, good mistress. 200

[Kisses her.]

Page. Wife, bid these gentlemen welcome. Come, we have a hot venison pasty to dinner. Come, gentlemen, I hope we shall drink down all unkindness.

[Exeunt all except Shal., Slen., and Evans.]

Slen. I had rather than forty shillings I [205] had my Book of Songs and Sonnets here.

[Enter SIMPLE.]

How now, Simple! where have you been? I must wait on myself, must I? You have not the Book of Riddles about you, have you? 209

Sim. Book of Riddles! Why, did you not lend it to Alice Shortcake upon All-hallowmas last, a fortnight afore Michaelmas?

Shal. Come, coz; come, coz; we stay for you. A word with you, coz; marry, this, coz: there is, as 't were, a tender, a kind of tender, made afar off by Sir Hugh here. Do you understand me? 216

Slen. Ay, sir, you shall find me reasonable. If it be so, I shall do that that is reason.

Shal. Nay, but understand me.

Slen. So I do, sir. 220

Evans. Give ear to his motions, Master Slender. I will description the matter to you, if you be capacity of it.

Slen. Nay, I will do as my cousin Shallow says. I pray you, pardon me; he's a justice of peace in his country, simple though I stand here. 226

Evans. But that is not the question: the question is concerning your marriage.

Shal. Ay, there's the point, sir.

Evans. Marry, is it; the very point of it; to Mistress Anne Page. 231

Slen. Why, if it be so, I will marry her upon any reasonable demands.

Evans. But can you affection the 'oman? Let us command to know that of your mouth or of your lips; for divers philosophers hold [235] that the lips is parcel of the mouth. Therefore, precisely, can you carry your good will to the maid?

Shal. Cousin Abraham Slender, can you love her? 240

Slen. I hope, sir, I will do as it shall become one that would do reason.

Evans. Nay, Got's lords and his ladies! You must speak possible, if you can carry her your desires towards her. 245

Shal. That you must. Will you, upon good dowry, marry her?

Slen. I will do a greater thing than that, upon your request, cousin, in any reason. 249

Shal. Nay, conceive me, conceive me, sweet coz; what I do is to pleasure you, coz. Can you love the maid?

Slen. I will marry her, sir, at your request; but if there be no great love in the beginning, yet heaven may decrease it upon better acquaintance, when we are married and have [255] more occasion to know one another. I hope, upon familiarity will grow more content. But if you say, "Marry her," I will marry her; that I am freely dissolved, and dissolutely. 260

Evans. It is a fery discretion answer, save the fall is in the ort "dissolutely." The ort is, according to our meaning, "resolutely." His meaning is good.

Shal. Ay, I think my cousin meant well. 265

Slen. Ay, or else I would I might be hang'd, la!

Shal. Here comes fair Mistress Anne.

[Re-enter ANNE PAGE.]

Would I were young for your sake, Mistress Anne!

Anne. The dinner is on the table. My father desires your worships' company. 271

Shal. I will wait on him, fair Mistress Anne.

Evans. Od's plessed will, I will not be absence at the grace.

[Exeunt Shallow and Evans.]

Anne. Will 't please your worship to come in, sir? 276

Slen. No, I thank you, forsooth, heartily; I am very well.

Anne. The dinner attends you, sir.

Slen. I am not a-hungry; I thank you, [280] forsooth. Go, sirrah, for all you are my man, go wait upon my cousin Shallow. [Exit Simple.] A justice of peace sometime may be beholding to his friend for a man. I keep but three men and a boy yet, till my mother be dead. But [285] what though? Yet I live like a poor gentleman born.

Anne. I may not go in without your worship. They will not sit till you come.

Slen. I' faith, I'll eat nothing. I thank you as much as though I did. 291

Anne. I pray you, sir, walk in.

Slen. I had rather walk here, I thank you. I bruise'd my shin the other day with playing at sword and dagger with a master of fence; three veneys for a dish of stew'd prunes; [296] and, by my troth, I cannot abide the smell of hot meat since. Why do your dogs bark so? Be there bears i' the town?

Anne. I think there are, sir; I heard them talk'd of. 301

Slen. I love the sport well; but I shall as soon quarrel at it as any man in England. You are afraid, if you see the bear loose, are you not?

Anne. Ay, indeed, sir. 305

Slen. That's meat and drink to me, now. I have seen Sackerson loose twenty times, and have taken him by the chain; but, I warrant you, the women have so cri'd and shriek'd at it, that it pass'd. But women, indeed, cannot [310] abide 'em; they are very ill-favour'd rough things.

[Re-enter PAGE.]

Page. Come, gentle Master Slender, come; we stay for you.

Slen. I'll eat nothing, I thank you, sir. ⁸¹⁵

Page. By cock and pie, you shall not choose, sir! Come, come.

Slen. Nay, pray you, lead the way.

Page. Come on, sir.

Slen. Mistress Anne, yourself shall go first.

Anne. Not I, sir; pray you, keep on. ⁸²¹

Slen. Truly, I will not go first; truly, la! I will not do you that wrong.

Anne. I pray you, sir.

Slen. I'll rather be unmannerly than troublesome. You do yourself wrong, indeed, la! ⁸²⁶

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [The same.]

Enter SIR HUGH EVANS and SIMPLE.

Evans. Go your ways, and ask of Doctor Caius' house which is the way; and there dwells one Mistress Quickly, which is in the manner of his nurse, or his dry nurse, or his cook, or his laundry, or his washer, and his wringer. ⁸

Sim. Well, sir.

Evans. Nay, it is petter yet. Give her this letter; for it is a 'oman that altogether's acquaintance with Mistress Anne Page; and the letter is, to desire and require her to solicit your master's desires to Mistress Anne Page. ¹⁰ I pray you, pegone. I will make an end of my dinner; there's pippins and cheese to come.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [A room in the Garter Inn.]

Enter FALSTAFF, HOST, BARDOLPH, NYM, PISTOL, and page [ROBIN].

Fal. Mine host of the Garter!

Host. What says my bully-rook? Speak scholarly and wisely.

Fal. Truly, mine host, I must turn away some of my followers. ⁵

Host. Discard, bully Hercules; cashier. Let them wag. Trot, trot.

Fal. I sit at ten pounds a week.

Host. Thou'rt an emperor, Cæsar, Keisar, and Pheezar. I will entertain Bardolph; he ¹⁰ shall draw, he shall tap. Said I well, bully Hector?

Fal. Do so, good mine host.

Host. I have spoke; let him follow. [To Bard.] Let me see thee froth and lime. I am at a word; follow. ¹⁵

Fal. Bardolph, follow him. A tapster is a good trade. An old cloak makes a new jerkin; a wither'd serving-man a fresh tapster. Go; adieu. ²⁰

Bard. It is a life that I have desir'd. I will thrive. ²⁵

Pistol. O base Hungarian wight! wilt thou the spigot wield?

Nym. He was gotten in drink. Is not the humour conceited? ³⁰

Fal. I am glad I am so acquit of this tinder-box; his thefts were too open. His filching was like an unskilful singer; he kept not time.

Nym. The good humour is to steal at a minute's rest. ³¹

Pistol. "Convey," the wise it call. "Steal!" foh! A fico for the phrase!

Fal. Well, sirs, I am almost out at heels.

Pistol. Why, then, let kibes ensue. ³⁵

Fal. There is no remedy; I must cony-catch; I must shift.

Pistol. Young ravens must have food.

Fal. Which of you know Ford of this town?

Pistol. I ken the wight; he is of substance good. ⁴¹

Fal. My honest lads, I will tell you what I am about.

Pistol. Two yards, and more.

Fal. No quips now, Pistol! Indeed, I am in ⁴⁵ the waist two yards about; but I am now about no waste, I am about thrift. Briefly, I do mean to make love to Ford's wife. I spy entertainment in her. She discourses, she carves, she gives the leer of invitation. I can construe the action of her familiar style; and the hardest ⁵⁰ voice of her behaviour, to be English'd rightly, is, "I am Sir John Falstaff's."

Pistol. He hath studied her well, and translated her will out of honesty into English. ⁵⁵

Nym. The anchor is deep. Will that humour pass?

Fal. Now, the report goes she has all the rule of her husband's purse. He hath a legion of angels. ⁶⁰

Pistol. As many devils entertain; and "To her, boy," say I.

Nym. The humour rises; it is good. Humour me the angels. ⁶⁴

Fal. I have writ me here a letter to her; and here another to Page's wife, who even now gave me good eyes too, examin'd my parts with most judicious ecclades; sometimes the beam of her view gilded my foot, sometimes my portly belly.

Pistol. Then did the sun on dunghill shine. ⁷⁰

Nym. I thank thee for that humour.

Fal. O, she did so course o'er my exteriors with such a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye did seem to scorch me up like a burning-glass! Here's another letter to her. She bears the purse too; she is a region in ⁷⁵ Guiana, all gold and bounty. I will be cheaters to them both, and they shall be exchequers to me. They shall be my East and West Indies, and I will trade to them both. Go bear thou this letter to Mistress Page; and thou this ⁸⁰ to Mistress Ford. We will thrive, lads, we will thrive.

Pistol. Shall I Sir Pandarus of Troy become, And by my side wear steel? Then, Lucifer take all! ⁸⁴

Nym. I will run no base humour. Here, take the humour-letter; I will keep the ha-viour of reputation.

Fal. [To Robin.] Hold, sirrah, bear you these letters tightly;

Sail like my pinnacle to these golden shores.

Rogues, hence, avaunt ! Vanish like hailstones,
go !

Trudge ! Plod away o' the hoof ! Seek shelter !
Pack !

Falstaff will learn the humour of the age,
French thrift, you rogues ; myself and skirted page. [Exeunt Falstaff and Robin.]

Pist. Let vultures gripe thy guts ! for gourd and fullam holds,

And high and low beguiles the rich and poor. 95
Tester I'll have in pouch when thou shalt lack,

Base Phrygian Turk !

Nym. I have operations which be humours of revenge.

Pist. Wilt thou revenge ? 100

Nym. By welkin and her star !

Pist. With wit or steel ?

Nym. With both the humours, I
I will discuss the humour of this love to Page.

Pist. And I to Ford shall eke unfold 105

How Falstaff, varlet vile,

His dove will prove, his gold will hold,
And his soft couch defile.

Nym. My humour shall not cool. I will incense Page to deal with poison ; I will possess 110 him with yellowness, for the revolt of mine is dangerous. That is my true humour.

Pist. Thou art the Mars of malcontents. I second thee ; troop on. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [A room in Doctor Caius's house.]

Enter MISTRESS QUICKLY, SIMPLE, and JOHN RUGBY.

Quick. What, John Rugby ! I pray thee, go to the casement, and see if you can see my master, Master Doctor Caius, coming. If he do, i' faith, and find any body in the house, here will be an old abusing of God's patience and the King's English. 6

Rug. I'll go watch.

Quick. Go ; and we'll have a posset for 't soon at night, in faith, at the latter end of a sea-coal fire. [Exit Rugby.] An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever servant shall come in 10 house withal, and, I warrant you, no tell-tale nor no breed-bate. His worst fault is, that he is given to prayer. He is something peevish that way ; but nobody but has his fault. But let that pass. Peter Simple, you say your name is ? 15

Sim. Ay, for fault of a better.

Quick. And Master Slender's your master ?

Sim. Ay, forsooth.

Quick. Does he not wear a great round beard, like a glover's paring-knife ? 21

Sim. No, forsooth ; he hath but a little wee face, with a little yellow beard, a Cain-colour'd beard.

Quick. A softly-sprighted man, is he not ? 25

Sim. Ay, forsooth ; but he is as tall a man of his hands as any is between this and his head. He hath fought with a warrener.

Quick. How say you ? O, I should remember him. Does he not hold up his head, as it were,
and strut in his gait ? 31

Sim. Yes, indeed, does he.

Quick. Well, Heaven send Anne Page no worse fortune ! Tell Master Parson Evans I will do what I can for your master. Anne is a good girl, and I wish — 36

[Re-enter RUGBY.]

Rug. Out, alas ! here comes my master.

Quick. We shall all be shent. Run in here, good young man ; go into this closet. He will not stay long. [Shuts Simple in the closet.]
What, John Rugby ! John ! what, John, I 40 say ! Go, John, go inquire for my master ; I doubt he be not well, that he comes not home.

[Singing.] And down, down, adown-a, etc.

[Enter DOCTOR CAIUS.]

Caius. Vat is you sing ? I do not like dese 45 toys. Pray you, go and vetch me in my closet une boîte en verde, a box, a green-a box. Do intend vat I speak ? A green-a box.

Quick. Ay, forsooth ; I'll fetch it you.
[Aside.] I am glad he went not in himself ; if he had found the young man, he would have 50 been horn-mad.

Caius. Fe, fe, fe, fe ! ma foi, il fait fort chaud. Je m'en vais à la cour, — la grande affaire.

Quick. Is it this, sir ? 55

Caius. Oui ; mette le au mon pocket ; dépêche, quickly. Vere is dat knave Rugby ?

Quick. What, John Rugby ! John !

Rug. Here, sir ! 60

Caius. You are John Rugby, and you are Jack Rugby. Come, take-a your rapier, and come after my heel to the court.

Rug. 'Tis ready, sir, here in the porch.

Caius. By my trot, I tarry too long. Od's me ! Qu'ai-je oublié ? Dere is some simples in my closet, dat I vill not for the varld I shall 65 leave behind.

Quick. Ay me, he'll find the young man
there, and be mad ! 70

Caius. O diable, diable ! vat is in my closet ?
Villainy ! Laron ! [Pulling Simple out.] Rugby, my rapier !

Quick. Good master, be content.

Caius. Wherefore shall I be content-a ?

Quick. The young man is an honest man. 75 Caius. What shall de honest man do in my closet ? Dere is no honest man dat shall come in my closet.

Quick. I beseech you, be not so phlegmatic.
Hear the truth of it : he came of an errand to me from Parson Hugh. 81

Caius. Vell ?

Sim. Ay, forsooth ; to desire her to —

Quick. Peace, I pray you.

Caius. Peace-a your tongue. Speak-a your tale. 86

Sim. To desire this honest gentlewoman, your maid, to speak a good word to Mistress Anne Page for my master in the way of marriage.

Quick. This is all, indeed, la ! but I'll ne'er put my finger in the fire, and need not. 91

Caius. Sir Hugh send-a you? Rugby, bailliez me some paper. Tarry you a little-a while.

[Writes.]

Quick. [Aside to Simple.] I am glad he is so quiet. If he had been thoroughly moved, you ¹⁰⁵ should have heard him so loud and so melancholy. But notwithstanding, man, I'll do you your master what good I can; and the very yea and the no is, the French doctor, my master, — I may call him my master, look you, for I keep his house; and I wash, wring, brew, ¹⁰⁰ bake, scour, dress meat and drink, make the beds, and do all myself, —

Sim. [Aside to Quickly.] 'T is a great charge to come under one body's hand. ¹⁰⁵

Quick. [Aside to Simple.] Are you avis'd o' that? You shall find it a great charge; and to be up early and down late; but notwithstanding, — to tell you in your ear; I would have no words of it, — my master himself is in love with Mistress Anne Page; but notwithstanding ¹¹⁰ that, I know Anne's mind, — that's neither here nor there.

Caius. You jack'nape, give-a this letter to Sir Hugh. By gar, it is a shallenge. I will cut his throat in de park; and I will teach a scurvy jack-a-nape priest to meddle-or ¹¹⁵ make. You may be gone; it is not good you tarry here. By gar, I will cut all his two stones; by gar, he shall not have a stone to throw at his dog. [Exit Simple.]

Quick. Alas, he speaks but for his friend. ¹²⁰
Caius. It is no matter-a ver dat. Do not you tell-a me dat I shall have Anne Page for myself? By gar, I will kill de Jack priest; and I have appointed mine host of de Jarteer to measure our weapon. By gar, I will myself have Anne Page. ¹²⁵

Quick. Sir, the maid loves you, and all shall be well. We must give folks leave to prate; what, the good-year!

Caius. Rugby, come to the court with me. ¹³⁰
By gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turn your head out of my door. Follow my heels, Rugby. [Exeunt Caius and Rugby.]

Quick. You shall have An — fool's-head of your own. No, I know Anne's mind for that. Never a woman in Windsor knows more of ¹³⁵ Anne's mind than I do; nor can do more than I do with her, I thank Heaven.

Fent. [Within.] Who's within there? ho!

Quick. Who's there, I trow! Come near the house, I pray you. ¹⁴¹

[Enter FENTON.]

Fent. How now, good woman! how dost thou?

Quick. The better that it pleases your good worship to ask. ¹⁴⁵

Fent. What news? How does pretty Mistress Anne?

Quick. In truth, sir, and she is pretty, and honest, and gentle; and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way; I praise Heaven for it. ¹⁵¹

Fent. Shall I do any good, think'st thou? Shall I not lose my suit?

Quick. Troth, sir, all is in His hands above. But notwithstanding, Master Fenton, I'll be sworn on a book, she loves you. Have not your worship a wart above your eye? ¹⁵⁷

Fent. Yes, marry, have I; what of that?

Quick. Well, thereby hangs a tale. Good faith, it is such another Nan; but, I detest, an honest maid as ever broke bread. We ¹⁶⁰ had an hour's talk of that wart. I shall never laugh but in that maid's company! But indeed she is given too much to allicholy and musing; but for you — well, go to. ¹⁶⁵

Fent. Well, I shall see her to-day. Hold, there's money for thee; let me have thy voice in my behalf. If thou seest her before me, commend me — ¹⁶⁹

Quick. Will I? I' faith, that we will; and I will tell your worship more of the wart the next time we have confidence; and of other woovers.

Fent. Well, farewell; I am in great haste now. ¹⁷⁵

Quick. Farewell to your worship. [Exit Fenton.] Truly, an honest gentleman; but Anne loves him not; for I know Anne's mind as well as another does. Out upon 't! what have I forgot? [Exit. ¹⁸⁰

ACT II

SCENE I. [Before Page's house.]

Enter MISTRESS PAGE [with a letter].

Mrs. Page. What, have I scap'd love-letters in the holiday-time of my beauty, and am I now a subject for them? Let me see. [Reads.]

"Ask me no reason why I love you; for though Love use Reason for his precisian, he admits [5 him not for his counsellor. You are not young, no more am I; go to then, there's sympathy. You are merry, so am I; ha, ha! then there's more sympathy. You love sack, and so do I; would you desire better sympathy? Let it [10 suffice thee, Mistress Page,—at the least, if the love of a soldier can suffice,—that I love thee. I will not say, pity me; 't is not a soldier-like phrase; but I say, love me. By me,

Thine own true knight, ¹⁵

By day or night,

Or any kind of light,

With all his might

For thee to fight,

JOHN FALSTAFF."

What a Herod of Jewry is this! O wicked, [20 wicked world! One that is well-nigh worn to pieces with age to show himself a young gallant! What an unweigh'd behaviour hath this Flemish drunkard pick'd — with the devil's name! — out of my conversation, that he dares in this manner assay me? Why, he hath not [25 been thrice in my company! What should I say to him? I was then frugal of my mirth. Heaven forgive me! Why, I'll exhibit a bill in the parliament for the putting down of men. How shall I be reveng'd on him? for reveng'd I [30 will be, as sure as his guts are made of puddings.

[Enter MISTRESS FORD.]

Mrs. Ford. Mistress Page! trust me, I was going to your house. ³⁴

Mrs. Page. And, trust me, I was coming to you. You look very ill.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I'll ne'er believe that; I have to show to the contrary.

Mrs. Page. Faith, but you do, in my mind. ³⁹

Mrs. Ford. Well, I do then; yet I say I could show you to the contrary. O Mistress Page, give me some counsel!

Mrs. Page. What's the matter, woman?

Mrs. Ford. O woman, if it were not for one trifling respect, I could come to such honour! ⁴⁵

Mrs. Page. Hang the trifle, woman! take the honour. What is it? Dispense with trifles. What is it?

Mrs. Ford. If I would but go to hell for an eternal moment or so, I could be knighted. ⁵⁰

Mrs. Page. What? Thou liest! Sir Alice Ford! These knights will hack; and so thou shouldst not alter the article of thy gentry.

Mrs. Ford. We burn daylight. Here, read, read; perceive how I might be knighted. I shall think the worse of fat men, as long as ⁵⁵ I have an eye to make difference of men's liking; and yet he would not swear; praised women's modesty; and gave such orderly and well-behaved reproof to all uncomeliness, that I would have sworn his disposition would ⁶⁰ have gone to the truth of his words; but they do no more adhere and keep place together than the Hundredth Psalm to the tune of "Green Sleeves." What tempest, I trow, threw this whale, with so many tons of oil in his belly, ⁶⁵ ashore at Windsor? How shall I be revenged on him? I think the best way were to entertain him with hope, till the wicked fire of lust have melted him in his own grease. Did you ever hear the like? ⁷⁰

Mrs. Page. Letter for letter, but that the name of Page and Ford differs! To thy great comfort in this mystery of ill opinions, here's the twin-brother of thy letter; but let thine inherit first; for, I protest, mine never shall. ⁷⁵ I warrant he hath a thousand of these letters writ with blank space for different names,—sure, more,—and these are of the second edition. He will print them, out of doubt; for he cares not what he puts into the press, when he would put us two. I had rather be a ⁸⁰ giantess, and lie under Mount Pelion. Well, I will find you twenty lascivious turtles ere one chaste man.

Mrs. Ford. Why, this is the very same; the very hand, the very words. What doth he think of us? ⁸⁵

Mrs. Page. Nay, I know not. It makes me almost ready to wrangle with mine own honesty. I'll entertain myself like one that I am not acquainted withal; for, sure, unless he know some strain in me that I know not ⁹⁰ myself, he would never have boarded me in this fury.

Mrs. Ford. "Boarding," call you it? I'll be sure to keep him above deck. ⁹⁴

Mrs. Page. So will I. If he come under my hatches, I'll never to sea again. Let's be reveng'd on him. Let's appoint him a meeting, give him a show of comfort in his suit, and lead him on with a fine-baited delay, till he hath pawn'd his horses to mine host of the Garter. ¹⁰⁰

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I will consent to act any villainy against him, that may not sully the chariness of our honesty. O, that my husband saw this letter! It would give eternal food to his jealousy. ¹⁰⁵

Mrs. Page. Why, look where he comes; and my good man too. He's as far from jealousy as I am from giving him cause; and that I hope is an unmeasurable distance.

Mrs. Ford. You are the happier woman. ¹¹⁰

Mrs. Page. Let's consult together against this greasy knight. Come hither.

[They retire.]

[Enter FORD with PISTOL, and PAGE with NYM.]

Ford. Well, I hope it be not so.

Pist. Hope is a curial dog in some affairs.

Sir John affects thy wife. ¹¹⁵

Ford. Why, sir, my wife is not young.

Pist. He woos both high and low, both rich and poor.

Both young and old, one with another, Ford.

He loves the gallimaufry. Ford, perpend.

Ford. Love my wife! ¹²⁰

Pist. With liver burning hot. Prevent, or go thou,

Like Sir Actæon he, with Ringwood at thy heels.

O, odious is the name!

Ford. What name, sir?

Pist. The horn, I say. Farewell. ¹²⁵

Take heed, have open eye, for thieves do foot by night.

Take heed, ere summer comes or cuckoo-birds do sing.

Away, Sir Corporal Nym!

Believe it, Page; he speaks sense. [Exit.]

Ford. [Aside.] I will be patient; I will find out this. ¹³¹

Nym. [To Page.] And this is true; I like not the humour of lying. He hath wronged me in some humours. I should have borne the humour'd letter to her; but I have a sword and it shall bite upon my necessity. He ¹³⁵ loves your wife; there's the short and the long. My name is Corporal Nym; I speak and I avouch; 'tis true; my name is Nym and Falstaff loves your wife. Adieu. I love not the humour of bread and cheese [and there's the humour of it]. Adieu. [Exit.] ¹⁴¹

Page. "The humour of it," quoth 'a! Here's a fellow frights English out of his wits.

Ford. I will seek out Falstaff.

Page. I never heard such a drawling, af fecting rogue. ¹⁴⁶

Ford. If I do find it! Well.

Page. I will not believe such a Cataian, though the priest o' the town commended him for a true man. ¹⁵⁰

Ford. 'T was a good sensible fellow. Well.
Page. How now, Meg!

[Mrs. Page and Mrs. Ford come forward.]

Mrs. Page. Whither go you, George? Hark you.

Mrs. Ford. How now, sweet Frank! Why art thou melancholy?

Ford. I melancholy! I am not melancholy. Get you home, go.

Mrs. Ford. Faith, thou hast some crotchets in thy head now. Will you go, Mistress Page?

Mrs. Page. Have with you. You'll come to dinner, George. [Aside to Mrs. Ford.] Look who comes yonder. She shall be our messenger to this paltry knight.

Mrs. Ford. [Aside to Mrs. Page.] Trust me, I thought on her. She'll fit it.

[Enter MISTRESS QUICKLY.]

Mrs. Page. You are come to see my daughter Anne?

Quick. Ay, forsooth; and, I pray, how does good Mistress Anne?

Mrs. Page. Go in with us and see. We have an hour's talk with you.

[Exeunt Mrs. Page, Mrs. Ford, and Mrs. Quickly.]

Page. How now, Master Ford!

Ford. You heard what this knave told me, did you not?

Page. Yes; and you heard what the other told me?

Ford. Do you think there is truth in them?

Page. Hang 'em, slaves! I do not think the knight would offer it; but these that accuse him in his intent towards our wives are a yoke of his discarded men; very rogues, now they be out of service.

Ford. Were they his men?

Page. Marry, were they.

Ford. I like it never the better for that. Does he lie at the Garter?

Page. Ay, marry, does he. If he should intend this voyage towards my wife, I would turn her loose to him; and what he gets more of her than sharp words, let it lie on my head.

Ford. I do not misdoubt my wife; but I would be loath to turn them together. A man may be too confident. I would have nothing lie on my head. I cannot be thus satisfied.

[Enter Host.]

Page. Look where my ranting host of the Garter comes. There is either liquor in his pate or money in his purse when he looks so merrily.

How now, mine host!

Host. How new, bully-rook! thou'rt a gentleman. Cavaleiro-justice, I say!

[Enter SHALLOW.]

Shal. I follow, mine host, I follow. Good even and twenty, good Master Page! Master Page, will you go with us? We have sport in hand.

Host. Tell him, cavaleiro-justice; tell him, bully-rook.

Shal. Sir, there is a fray to be fought between Sir Hugh the Welsh priest and Caius the French doctor.

Ford. Good mine host o' the Garter, a word with you. [Drawing him aside.]

Host. What say'st thou, my bully-rook?

Shal. [To Page.] Will you go with us to behold it? My merry host hath had the mear-suring of their weapons, and, I think, hath appointed them contrary places; for, believe me, I hear the parson is no jester. Hark, I will tell you what our sport shall be.

[They draw aside.]
Host. Hast thou no suit against my knight, my guest-cavaleiro?

[Ford.] None, I protest; but I'll give you a pottle of burnt sack to give me recourse to him and tell him my name is Brook; only for a jest.

Host. My hand, bully; thou shalt have egress and regress;—said I well?—and thy name shall be Brook. It is a merry knight. Will you go, Mynheers?

Shal. Have with you, mine host.

Page. I have heard the Frenchman hath good skill in his rapier.

Shal. Tut, sir, I could have told you more. In these times you stand on distance, your passes, stoccadoes, and I know not what. 'Tis the heart, Master Page; 't is here, 't is here. I have seen the time, with my long sword I would have made you four tall fellows skip like rats.

Host. Here, boys, here, here! shall we wag?

Page. Have with you. I had rather hear them scold than fight.

[Exeunt Host, Shal. [and Page.]]

Ford. Though Page be a secure fool, and stands so firmly on his wife's frailty, yet I cannot put off my opinion so easily. She was in his company at Page's house; and what they made there, I know not. Well, I will look further into 't; and I have a disguise to sound Falstaff. If I find her honest, I lose not my labour; if she be otherwise, 't is labour well bestowed.

SCENE II. [A room in the Garter Inn.]

[Enter FALSTAFF and PISTOL.]

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.

Pist. Why, then the world's mine oyster, Which I with sword will open.

Fal. Not a penny. I have been content, sir, you should lay my countenance to pawn. I have grated upon my good friends for three [s] reprieves for you and your coach-fellow Nym; or else you had look'd through the grate, like a geminy of baboons. I am damn'd in hell for swearing to gentlemen my friends, you were good soldiers and tall fellows; and when Mistress Bridget lost the handle of her fan, I took 't upon mine honour thou hadst it not.

Pist. Didst not thou share? Hadst thou not fifteen pence?

Fal. Reason, you rogue, reason. Think'st thou I'll endanger my soul gratis? At a word, hang no more about me; I am no gibbet for you. Go. A short knife and a throng! To your manor of Picket-hatch! Go. You'll not bear a letter for me, you rogue! You stand upon your ³⁰ honour! Why, thou unconfinable baseness, it is as much as I can do to keep the terms of my honour precise. Ay, I myself sometimes, leaving the fear of God on the left hand and hiding mine honour in my necessity, am fain to shuffle, to hedge, and to lurch; and yet you, rogue, ³⁶ will ensconce your rags, your cat-a-mountain looks, your red-lattice phrases, and your bold-beating oaths, under the shelter of your honour! You will not do it! You! ³⁹ Pist. I do relent. What would thou more of man?

[Enter ROBIN.]

Rob. Sir, here's a woman would speak with you.

Fal. Let her approach.

Enter MISTRESS QUICKLY.

Quick. Give your worship good morrow.

Fal. Good morrow, good wife. ³⁵

Quick. Not so, an't please your worship.

Fal. Good maid, then.

Quick. I'll be sworn,

As my mother was, the first hour I was born.

Fal. I do believe the swearer. What with me? ⁴⁰

Quick. Shall I vouchsafe your worship a word or two?

Fal. Two thousand, fair woman; and I'll vouchsafe thee the hearing. ⁴⁴

Quick. There is one Mistress Ford, sir;—I pray, come a little nearer this way;—I myself dwell with Master Doctor Caius,— Fal. Well, on. Mistress Ford, you say,—

Quick. Your worship says very true. I pray your worship, come a little nearer this way. ⁵⁰

Fal. I warrant thee, nobody hears; mine own people, mine own people.

Quick. Are they so? God bless them and make them his servants!

Fal. Well, Mistress Ford; what of her? ⁵⁵

Quick. Why, sir, she's a good creature. Lord, Lord! your worship's a wanton! Well, Heaven forgive you, and all of us, I pray!

Fal. Mistress Ford; come, Mistress Ford,—

Quick. Marry, this is the short and the long of it: you have brought her into such ⁶⁰ as canaries as 'tis wonderful. The best courtier of them all, when the court lay at Windsor, could never have brought her to such a canary. Yet there has been knights, and lords, and gentlemen, with their coaches, I warrant you, ⁶⁵ coach after coach, letter after letter, gift after gift; smelling so sweetly, all musk, and so rushing, I warrant you, in silk and gold; and in such alligant terms; and in such wine and sugar of the best and the fairest, that would ⁷⁰ have won any woman's heart; and, I warrant you, they could never get an eye-wink of her. I had myself twenty angels given me this morning; but I defy all angels, in any such sort, as they say, but in the way of honesty; and, I ⁷⁵ warrant you, they could never get her so much as sip on a cup with the proudest of them all; and yet there has been earls, nay, which is more, pensioners; but, I warrant you, all is one with her. ⁸⁰

Fal. But what says she to me? Be brief, my good she-Mercury.

Quick. Marry, she hath receiv'd your letter, for the which she thanks you a thousand times; and she gives you to notify that her hus- ⁸⁵ band will be absence from his house between ten and eleven.

Fal. Ten and eleven?

Quick. Ay, forsooth; and then you may come and see the picture, she says, that you wot ⁹⁰ of. Master Ford, her husband, will be from home. Alas! the sweet woman leads an ill life with him. He's a very jealousy man. She leads a very frampold life with him, good heart.

Fal. Ten and eleven. Woman, commend me to her; I will not fail her. ⁹⁵

Quick. Why, you say well. But I have another messenger to your worship. Mistress Page hath her hearty commendations to you too; and let me tell you in your ear, she's as fartuous a civil modest wife, and one, I tell ¹⁰⁰ you, that will not miss you morning nor evening prayer, as any is in Windsor, whoe'er be the other; and she bade me tell your worship that her husband is seldom from home; but she hopes there will come a time. I never ¹⁰⁵ knew a woman so dote upon a man. Surely I think you have charms, la; yes, in truth.

Fal. Not I, I assure thee. Setting the attraction of my good parts aside I have no other charms. ¹¹¹

Quick. Blessing on your heart for't!

Fal. But, I pray thee, tell me this: has Ford's wife and Page's wife acquainted each other how they love me? ¹¹⁵

Quick. That were a jest indeed! They have not so little grace, I hope. That were a trick indeed! But Mistress Page would desire you to send her your little page, of all loves. Her husband has a marvellous infection to the little page; and truly Master Page is an hon- ¹²⁰ est man. Never a wife in Windsor leads a better life than she does; do what she will, say what she will, take all, pay all, go to bed when she list, rise when she list, all is as she will; and truly she deserves it, for if there be a kind ¹²⁵ woman in Windsor, she is one. You must send her your page; no remedy.

Fal. Why, I will.

Quick. Nay, but do so, then; and, look you, he may come and go between you both; and in any case have a nay-word, that you may ¹³¹ know one another's mind, and the boy never need to understand any thing; for 'tis not good that children should know any wickedness. Old folks, you know, have discretion, as they say, and know the world. ¹³⁶

Fal. Fare thee well. Commend me to them both. There's my purse; I am yet thy debtor. Boy, go along with this woman. [Exit Mistress Quickly and Robin.] This news distracts me! 140

Pist. This punk is one of Cupid's carriers. Clap on more sails; pursue; up with your fights;

Give fire! She is my prize, or ocean overwhelm them all! [Exit.]

Fal. Say'st thou so, old Jack? Go thy ways. I'll make more of thy old body than I have done. Will they yet look after thee? Wilt thou, after the expense of so much money, be now a gainer? Good body, I thank thee. Let them say 't is grossly done; so it be fairly done, no matter. 149

Enter BARDOLPH.

Bard. Sir John, there's one Master Brook below would fain speak with you, and be acquainted with you; and hath sent your worship a morning's draught of sack.

Fal. Brook is his name?

Bard. Ay, sir. 155

Fal. Call him in. [Exit Bardolph.] Such Brooks are welcome to me, that o'erflows such liquor. Ah, ha! Mistress Ford and Mistress Page, have I encompass'd you? Go to; via!

Re-enter [BARDOLPH, with] FORD disguised like Brook.

Ford. Bless you, sir! 160

Fal. And you, sir! Would you speak with me?

Ford. I make bold to press with so little preparation upon you.

Fal. You're welcome. What's your will? Give us leave, drawer. [Exit Bardolph.] 165

Ford. Sir, I am a gentleman that have spent much. My name is Brook.

Fal. Good Master Brook, I desire more acquaintance of you. 169

Ford. Good Sir John, I sue for yours; — not to charge you; for I must let you understand I think myself in better plight for a lender than you are; the which hath something embold'ned me to this unseason'd intrusion; for they say, if money go before, all ways do lie open. 175

Fal. Money is a good soldier, sir, and will on.

Ford. Troth, and I have a bag of money here troubles me. If you will help to bear it, Sir John, take all, or half, for easing me of the carriage.

Fal. Sir, I know not how I may deserve to be your porter. 181

Ford. I will tell you, sir, if you will give me the hearing.

Fal. Speak, good Master Brook; I shall be glad to be your servant. 185

Ford. Sir, I hear you are a scholar, — I will be brief with you, — and you have been a man long known to me, though I had never so good means as desire to make myself acquainted with you. I shall discover a thing to you, wherein I must very much lay open mine own imperfection; but, good Sir John, as you have one eye upon my follies, as you hear them unfolded, turn another into the register of your own, that I may pass with a reproof the easier, sith you yourself know how easy it is to be such an offender. 196

Fal. Very well, sir; proceed.

Ford. There is a gentlewoman in this town; her husband's name is Ford.

Fal. Well, sir. 200

Ford. I have long lov'd her, and, I protest to you, bestowed much on her; followed her with a doting observance; engross'd opportunities to meet her; fee'd every slight occasion that could but niggardly give me sight of her; not only bought many presents to give her, but have given largely to many to know what she would have given; briefly, I have pursu'd her as love hath pursued me; which hath been on the wing of all occasions. But whatsoever I have merited, either in my mind or in my means, meed, I am sure, I have received none; unless experience be a jewel that I have purchased at an infinite rate, and that hath taught me to say this:

"Love like a shadow flies when substance love pursues; Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues."

Fal. Have you receive'd no promise of satisfaction at her hands?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Have you importun'd her to such a purpose? 221

Ford. Never.

Fal. Of what quality was your love, then?

Ford. Like a fair house built on another man's ground; so that I have lost my edifice by mistaking the place where I erected it. 226

Fal. To what purpose have you unfolded this to me?

Ford. When I have told you that, I have told you all. Some say, that though she appear honest to me, yet in other places she enlargeth her mirth so far that there is shrewd construction made of her. Now, Sir John, here is the heart of my purpose: you are a gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable discourse, of great admittance, authentic in your place and person, generally allow'd for your many war-like, court-like, and learned preparations.

Fal. O, sir! 230

Ford. Believe it, for you know it. There is money; spend it, spend it; spend more; spend all I have; only give me so much of your time in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable siege to the honesty of this Ford's wife. Use your art of wooing; win her to consent to you; if any man may, you may as soon as any. 246

Fal. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection, that I should win what you would enjoy? Methinks you prescribe to yourself very preposterously. 250

Ford. O, understand my drift. She dwells so securely on the excellency of her honour, that the folly of my soul dares not present itself. She is too bright to be look'd against. Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand, my desires had instance and 255 argument to commend themselves. I could drive her then from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too too strongly embattled against me. What say you to 't, Sir John?

Fal. Master Brook, I will first make bold with your money; next, give me your hand; and last, as I am a gentleman, you shall, if you will, enjoy Ford's wife.

Ford. O good sir!

Fal. I say you shall.

Ford. Want no money, Sir John; you shall want none.

Fal. Want no Mistress Ford, Master Brook; you shall want none. I shall be with her, I may tell you, by her own appointment; even as you came in to me, her assistant or go-between parted from me. I say I shall be with her between ten and eleven; for at that time the jealous rascally knave her husband will be forth. Come you to me at night; you shall know how I speed.

Ford. I am blest in your acquaintance. Do you know Ford, sir?

Fal. Hang him, poor cuckoldly knave! I know him not. Yet I wrong him to call him poor. They say the jealous wittolly knave hath masses of money; for the which his wife seems to me well-favour'd. I will use her as the key of the cuckoldly rogue's coffer; and there's my harvest-home.

Ford. I would you knew Ford, sir, that you might avoid him if you saw him.

Fal. Hang him, mechanical salt-butter rogue! I will stare him out of his wits; I will awe him with my cudgel; it shall hang like a meteor o'er the cuckold's horns. Master Brook, thou shalt know I will predominate over the peasant, and thou shalt lie with his wife. Come to me soon at night. Ford's a knave, and I will aggravate his style; thou, Master Brook, shalt know him for knave and cuckold. Come to me soon at night.

Ford. What a damn'd Epicurean rascal is this! My heart is ready to crack with impatience. Who says this is improvident jealousy? My wife hath sent to him; the hour is fix'd; the match is made. Would any man have thought this? See the hell of having a false woman! My bed shall be abus'd, my coffers ransack'd, my reputation gnawn at; and I shall not only receive this villanous wrong, but stand under the adoption of abominable terms, and by him that does me this wrong. Terms! Names! Amaimon sounds well; Lucifer, well; Barbason, well; yet they are devils' additions, the names of fiends; but Cuckold! Wittol!—Cuckold! The devil himself hath not such a name. Page is an ass, a secure ass. He will trust his wife; he will not be jealous. I will rather trust a Fleming with my butter, Parson Hugh the Welshman with my cheese, an Irishman with my aqua-vitæ bottle, or a thief to walk my ambling gelding, than my wife with herself. Then she plots, then she rummages, then she devises; and what they think in their hearts they may effect, they will break their hearts but they will effect. God be prais'd for my jealousy! Eleven o'clock the hour. I will prevent this, detect my wife, be reveng'd on Falstaff, and laugh at Page. I will about it; better three hours too soon than a minute too late. Fie, fie, fie! cuckold! cuckold! cuckold! [Exit.]

SCENE III. [A field near Windsor.]

Enter CAIUS and RUGBY.

Caius. Jack Rugby!

Rug. Sir?

Caius. Vat is the clock, Jack?

Rug. 'T is past the hour, sir, that Sir Hugh promis'd to meet.

Caius. By gar, he has save his soul, dat he is no come; he has pray his Fible well, dat he is no come. By gar, Jack Rugby, he is dead already, if he be come.

Rug. He is wise, sir; he knew your worship would kill him, if he came.

Caius. By gar, de herring is no dead so as I vill kill him. Take your rapier, Jack; I vill tell you how I vill kill him.

Rug. Alas, sir, I cannot fence.

Caius. Villainy, take your rapier.

Rug. Forbear; here's company.

Enter HOST, SHALLOW, SLENDER, and PAGE.

Host. God bless thee, bully doctor!

Shal. God save you, Master Doctor Caius!

Page. Now, good Master Doctor!

Slen. Give you good morrow, sir.

Caius. Vat be all you, one, two, tree, four, come for?

Host. To see thee fight, to see thee foine, to see thee traverse; to see thee here, to see thee there; to see thee pass thy punto, thy stock, thy reverse, thy distance, thy montant. Is he dead, my Ethiopian? Is he dead, my Francisco? Ha, bully! What says my Æsculapius? my Galen? my heart of elder? Ha! is he dead, bully stale? Is he dead?

Caius. By gar, he is de coward Jack priest of de world; he is not show his face.

Host. Thou art a Castalion-King-Urinal. Hector of Greece, my boy!

Caius. I pray you, bear witness that me have stay six or seven, two, tree hours for him, and he is no come.

Shal. He is the wiser man, Master Doctor. He is a curer of souls, and you a curer of bodies. If you should fight, you go against the hair of your professions. Is it not true, Master Page?

Page. Master Shallow, you have yourself been a great fighter, though now a man of peace.

Shal. Bodykins, Master Page, though I now be old and of the peace, if I see a sword out, my finger itches to make one. Though we are justices and doctors and churchmen, Master Page, we have some salt of our youth in us; we are the sons of women, Master Page.

Page. 'T is true, Master Shallow.

Shal. It will be found so, Master Page. Master Doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home. I am sworn of the peace. You have ⁵⁵ show'd yourself a wise physician, and Sir Hugh hath shown himself a wise and patient churman. You must go with me, Master Doctor.

Host. Pardon, guest-justice. A word, Mounseur Mockwater. ⁶⁰

Caius. Mock-water! Vat is dat?

Host. Mock-water, in our English tongue, is valour, bully.

Caius. By gar, den, I have as much mock-water as de Englishman. Scurvy jack-dog priest! By gar, me vill cut his ears. ⁶⁵

Host. He will clapper-claw thee tightly, bully.

Caius. Clapper-de-claw! Vat is dat?

Host. That is, he will make thee amends. ⁷⁰

Caius. By gar, me do look he shall clapper-de-claw me; for, by gar, me vill have it.

Host. And I will provoke him to 't, or let him wag.

Caius. Me tank you for dat. ⁷⁵

Host. And, moreover, bully, — but first, master guest, and Master Page, and eke Cavaleiro Slender, go you through the town to Frogmore, ^[Aside to them.]

Page. Sir Hugh is there, is he? ⁷⁹

Host. He is there. See what humour he is in; and I will bring the doctor about by the fields. Will it do well?

Shal. We will do it.

Caius. By gar, me vill kill de priest; for he speak for a jack-an-ape to Anne Page.

Host. Let him die; [but first] sheathe thy impatience, throw cold water on thy choler, go about the fields with me through Frogmore. I will bring thee where Mistress Anne Page ⁹⁰ is, at a farm-house a-feasting; and thou shalt woo her. Cried game, said I well?

Caius. By gar, me dank you vor dat. By gar, I love you; and I shall procure a you de good guest, de earl, de knight, de lords, de ⁹⁵ gentlemen, my patients.

Host. For the which I will be thy adversary toward Anne Page. Said I well?

Caius. By gar, 't is good; vell said. ¹⁰⁰

Host. Let us wag, then.

Caius. Come at my heels, Jack Rugby. ^[Exeunt.]

ACT III

SCENE I. [A field near Frogmore.]

Enter SIR HUGH EVANS and SIMPLE.

Evans. I pray you now, good Master Slender's serving-man, and friend Simple by your name, which way have you look'd for Master Caius, that calls himself doctor of physic?

Sim. Marry, sir, the pittie-ward, the [s] park-ward, every way; Old Windsor way, and every way but the town way.

Evans. I most feheemently desire you you will also look that way.

Sim. I will, sir. ^[Exit.] ¹⁰

Evans. Pless my soul, how full of chollors I am, and tremping of mind! I shall be glad if he have deceived me. How melancholies I am! I will knog his urinals about his knave's costard when I have good opportunities for the ork. Pless my soul! ^[Sings.] ¹⁵

"To shallow rivers, to whose falls
Melodious birds sings madrigals;
There will we make our peds of roses,
And a thousand fragrant posies.
To shallow" — ²⁰

Mercy on me! I have a great dispositions to cry. ^[Sings.]

"Melodious birds sing madrigals" —

"When as I sat in Babylon" —

"And a thousand vagram posies. ²⁵

To shallow," etc.

^[Re-enter SIMPLE.]

Sim. Yonder he is coming; this way, Sir Hugh.

Evans. He's welcome. ^[Sings.]

"To shallow rivers, to whose falls" —
Heaven prosper the right! What weapons is he? ³⁰

Sim. No weapons, sir. There comes my master, Master Shallow, and another gentleman, from Frogmore, over the stile, this way.

Evans. Pray you, give me my gown; or else keep it in your arms. ³⁵

Enter PAGE, SHALLOW, and SLENDER.

Shal. How now, Master Parson! Good morrow, good Sir Hugh. Keep a gamester from the dice, and a good student from his book, and it is wonderful.

Slen. ^[Aside.] Ah, sweet Anne Page! ⁴⁰

Page. God save you, good Sir Hugh!

Evans. God pless you from his mercy sake, all of you!

Shal. What, the sword and the word! Do you study them both, Master Parson? ⁴⁵

Page. And youthful still! In your doublet and hose this raw rheumatic day!

Evans. There is reasons and causes for it.

Page. We are come to you to do a good office, Master Parson. ⁵⁰

Evans. Fery well; what is it?

Page. Yonder is a most reverend gentleman, who, belike having received wrong by some person, is at most odds with his own gravity and patience that ever you saw. ⁵⁵

Shal. I have lived fourscore years and upward; I never heard a man of his place, gravity, and learning, so wide of his own respect.

Evans. What is he?

Page. I think you know him; Master Doctor Caius, the renowned French physician. ⁶¹

Evans. Got's will, and his passion! Of my heart, I had as lief you would tell me of a mess of porridge.

Page. Why?

Evans. He has no more knowledge in Hibo-crates and Galen — and he is a knave besides;

a cowardly knave as you would desires to be acquainted withal.

Page. I warrant you, he's the man should fight with him. 71

Slen. [Aside.] O sweet Anne Page!

Enter HOST, CAIUS [and RUGBY].

Shal. It appears so by his weapons. Keep them asunder; here comes Doctor Caius.

Page. Nay, good Master Parson, keep in your weapon. 75

Shal. So do you, good Master Doctor.

Host. Disarm them, and let them question. Let them keep their limbs whole and hack our English. 80

Caius. I pray you, let-a me speak a word with your ear. Wherefore will you not meet-a me?

Evans. [Aside to Caius.] Pray you, use your patience. In good time.

Caius. By gar, you are de coward, de Jack dog, John ape. 85

Evans. [Aside to Caius.] Pray you, let us not be laughing-stocks to other men's humours. I desire you in friendship, and I will one way or other make you amends. [Aloud.] I will knog your urnal about your knave's coqs- 90 comb [for missing your meetings and appointments].

Caius. Diable! Jack Rugby, — mine host de Jartere, — have I not stay for him to kill him? Have I not, at de place I did appoint? 95

Evans. As I am a Christians soul, now look you, this is the place appointed. I'll be judgement by mine host of the Garter.

Host. Peace, I say, Gallia and Gaul, French and Welsh, soul-curer and body-curer! 100

Caius. Ay, dat is very good; excellent.

Host. Peace, I say! hear mine host of the Garter. Am I politic? Am I subtle? Am I a Machiavel? Shall I lose my doctor? No; he gives me the potions and the motions. Shall I lose my parson, my priest, my Sir Hugh? 105 No; he gives me the proverbs and the no-verbs. [Give me thy hand, terrestrial; so.] Give me thy hand, celestial; so. Boys of art, I have deceiv'd you both; I have directed you to wrong places. Your hearts are mighty, 110 your skins are whole, and let burnt sack be the issue. Come, lay their swords to pawn. Follow me, lad of peace; follow, follow, follow. [Exit Host.]

Shal. Trust me, a mad host. Follow, gentlemen, follow. 115

Slen. [Aside.] O sweet Anne Page!

[Exeunt Shal., Slen., and Page.]

Caius. Ha, do I perceive dat? Have you make-a de sot of us, ha, ha?

Evans. This is well; he has made us his 120 vouting-stog. I desire you that we may be friends; and let us knog our prains together to be revenge on this same scall, scurvy, coggng companion, the host of the Garter. 124

Caius. By gar, with all my heart. He promise to bring me where is Anne Page; by gar, he deceive me too.

Evans. Well, I will smite his noddles. Pray you, follow. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [A street.]

Enter MISTRESS PAGE and ROBIN.

Mrs. Page. Nay, keep your way, little gal-lant; you were wont to be a follower, but now you are a leader. Whether had you rather lead mine eyes, or eye your master's heels?

Rob. I had rather, forsooth, go before you like a man than follow him like a dwarf. 6

Mrs. Page. O, you are a flattering boy. Now I see you'll be a courtier.

[Enter FORD.]

Ford. Well met, Mistress Page. Whither go you? 10

Mrs. Page. Truly, sir, to see your wife. Is she at home?

Ford. Ay; and as idle as she may hang to-gether, for want of company. I think, if your husbands were dead, you two would marry. 15

Mrs. Page. Be sure of that, — two other husbands.

Ford. Where had you this pretty weather-cock?

Mrs. Page. I cannot tell what the dickens his name is my husband had him of. What do you call your knight's name, sirrah! 21

Rob. Sir John Falstaff.

Ford. Sir John Falstaff!

Mrs. Page. He, he; I can never hit on 's name. There is such a league between my good man and he! Is your wife at home indeed? 25

Ford. Indeed she is.

Mrs. Page. By your leave, sir. I am sick till I see her. [Exeunt Mrs. Page and Robin.]

Ford. Has Page any brains? Hath he any 30 eyes? Hath he any thinking? Sure, they sleep; he hath no use of them. Why, this boy will carry a letter twenty mile, as easy as a cannon will shoot point-blank twelve score. He pieces out his wife's inclination; he gives her folly motion and advantage; and now she's going to 35 my wife, and Falstaff's boy with her. A man may hear this shower sing in the wind. And Falstaff's boy with her! Good plots, they are laid; and our revolted wives share damnation together. Well; I will take him, then tor- 40 ture my wife, pluck the borrowed veil of modesty from the so seeming Mistress Page, divulge Page himself for a secure and wilful Actæon; and to these violent proceedings all my neigh- 45 bours shall cry aim. [Clock heard.] The clock gives me my cue, and my assurance bids me search. There I shall find Falstaff. I shall be rather prais'd for this than mock'd, for it is as positive as the earth is firm that Falstaff is there. I will go. 50

[Enter PAGE, SHALLOW, SLENDER, HOST, SIR HUGH EVANS, CAIUS, and RUGBY.]

Shal., Page, etc. Well met, Master Ford.

Ford. Trust me, a good knot. I have good cheer at home, and I pray you all go with me.

Shal. I must excuse myself, Master Ford. 54

Slen. And so must I, sir. We have appointed to dine with Mistress Anne, and I would not break with her for more money than I'll speak of.

Shal. We have linger'd about a match between Anne Page and my cousin Slender, and this day we shall have our answer. ⁶⁰

Slen. I hope I have your good will, father Page.

Page. You have, Master Slender; I stand wholly for you: but my wife, Master Doctor, is for you altogether.

Caius. Ay, be-gar; and de maid is love-a-me. My nurrah-A Quickly tell me so much. ⁶⁶

Host. What say you to young Master Fenton? He capers, he dances, he has eyes of youth, he writes verses, he speaks holiday, he smells April and May. He will carry 't, he will carry 't; 't is in his buttons; he will carry 't. ⁷¹

Page. Not by my consent, I promise you. The gentleman is of no having. He kept company with the wild Prince and Poins; he is of too high a region; he knows too much. No, he shall not knit a knot in his fortunes with ⁷⁶ the finger of my substance. If he take her, let him take her simply. The wealth I have waits on my consent, and my consent goes not that way. ⁷⁹

Ford. I beseech you heartily, some of you go home with me to dinner. Besides your cheer, you shall have sport; I will show you a monster. Master Doctor, you shall go; so shall you, Master Page; and you, Sir Hugh. ⁸⁴

Shal. Well, fare you well. We shall have the freer wooing at Master Page's.

[Exeunt Shal. and Slen.]

Caius. Go home, John Rugby; I come anon. [Exit Rugby.]

Host. Farewell, my hearts. I will to my honest knight Falstaff, and drink canary with him. [Exit. ⁸⁹]

Ford. [Aside.] I think I shall drink in pipe-wine first with him; I'll make him dance. Will you go, gentles?

All. Have with you to see this monster. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [A room in Ford's house.]

Enter MISTRESS FORD and MISTRESS PAGE.

Mrs. Ford. What, John! What, Robert!

Mrs. Page. Quickly, quickly! Is the buck-basket—

Mrs. Ford. I warrant. What, Robin, I say!

[Enter Servants with a basket.]

Mrs. Page. Come, come, come. ⁸

Mrs. Ford. Here, set it down.

Mrs. Page. Give your men the charge; we must be brief.

Mrs. Ford. Marry, as I told you before, John and Robert, be ready here hard by in the brew-house; and when I suddenly call ¹⁰ you, come forth; and without any pause or staggering take this basket on your shoulders. That done, trudge with it in all haste, and carry it among the whitsters in Datchet-mead, and there empty it in the muddy ditch close by the Thames side. ¹⁶

Mrs. Page. You will do it?

Mrs. Ford. I ha' told them over and over;

they lack no direction. Be gone, and come when you are call'd. [Exeunt Servants. ²⁰]

Mrs. Page. Here comes little Robin.

[Enter ROBIN.]

Mrs. Ford. How now, my eyas-musket! what news with you?

Rob. My master, Sir John, is come in at your back-door, Mistress Ford, and requests your company. ²⁸

Mrs. Page. You little Jack-a-Lent, have you been true to us?

Rob. Ay, I'll be sworn. My master knows not of your being here and hath threat'ned to put me into everlasting liberty if I tell ³¹ you of it; for he swears he'll turn me away.

Mrs. Page. Thou'rt a good boy. This secrecy of thine shall be a tailor to thee and shall make thee a new doublet and hose. I'll go hide me. ³⁶

Mrs. Ford. Do so. Go tell thy master I am alone. [Exit Robin.] Mistress Page, remember you your cue.

Mrs. Page. I warrant thee; if I do not act it, hiss me. [Exit. ⁴¹]

Mrs. Ford. Go to, then. We'll use this unwholesome humidity, this gross watery pum-pion. We'll teach him to know turtles from jays.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. "Have I caught" thee, "my heavenly jewel?" Why, now let me die, for I have ⁴⁸ liv'd long enough. This is the period of my ambition. O this blessed hour!

Mrs. Ford. O sweet Sir John!

Fal. Mistress Ford, I cannot cog, I can- ⁵⁰ not prate, Mistress Ford. Now shall I sin in my wish: I would thy husband were dead. I'll speak it before the best lord; I would make thee my lady.

Mrs. Ford. I your lady, Sir John! Alas, I should be a pitiful lady! ⁵⁶

Fal. Let the court of France show me such another. I see how thine eye would emulate the diamond. Thou hast the right arched beauty of the brow that becomes the ship-tire, the tire-valiant, or any tire of Venetian admittance. ⁶¹

Mrs. Ford. A plain kerchief, Sir John. My brows become nothing else; nor that well neither. ⁶⁴

Fal. [By the Lord,] thou art a tyrant to say so. Thou wouldst make an absolute courtier; and the firm fixture of thy foot would give an excellent motion to thy gait in a semi-circled farthingale. I see what thou wert, if Fortune thy foe were not, Nature thy friend. Come, thou canst not hide it. ⁷¹

Mrs. Ford. Believe me, there's no such thing in me.

Fal. What made me love thee? Let that persuade thee there's something extraordinary in thee. Come, I cannot cog and say thou ⁷⁶ art this and that, like a many of these lipping hawthorn-buds, that come like women in men's apparel, and smell like Bucklersbury in simple time; I cannot; but I love thee, none but thee, and thou deserv'st it. 81

Mrs. Ford. Do not betray me, sir. I fear you love Mistress Page.

Fal. Thou mightst as well say I love to walk by the Counter-gate, which is as hateful to me as the reek of a lime-kiln. 86

Mrs. Ford. Well, heaven knows how I love you; and you shall one day find it.

Fal. Keep in that mind; I'll deserve it.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, I must tell you, so you do; or else I could not be in that mind. 91

Rob. [Within.] Mistress Ford, Mistress Ford! here's Mistress Page at the door, sweating, and blowing, and looking wildly, and would needs speak with you presently. 95

Fal. She shall not see me. I will ensconce me behind the arras.

Mrs. Ford. Pray you, do so; she's a very tattling woman.

[Falstaff stands behind the arras.]

[Re-enter MISTRESS PAGE and ROBIN.]

What's the matter? How now! 100

Mrs. Page. O Mistress Ford, what have you done? You're sham'd, you're overthrown, you're undone for ever!

Mrs. Ford. What's the matter, good Mistress Page? 105

Mrs. Page. O well-a-day, Mistress Ford! having an honest man to your husband, to give him such cause of suspicion!

Mrs. Ford. What cause of suspicion?

Mrs. Page. What cause of suspicion! Out upon you! How am I mistook in you! 111

Mrs. Ford. Why, alas, what's the matter?

Mrs. Page. Your husband's coming hither, woman, with all the officers in Windsor, to search for a gentleman that he says is here now in the house by your consent, to take [115] an ill advantage of his absence. You are undone.

Mrs. Ford. 'Tis not so, I hope.

Mrs. Page. Pray heaven it be not so, that you have such a man here, but 'tis most certain your husband's coming, with half [120] Windsor at his heels, to search for such a one. I come before to tell you. If you know yourself clear, why, I am glad of it; but if you have a friend here, convey, convey him out. Be not amaz'd, call all your senses to you, [125] defend your reputation, or bid farewell to your good life forever.

Mrs. Ford. What shall I do? There is a gentleman my dear friend; and I fear not mine own shame so much as his peril. I had rather [130] than a thousand pound he were out of the house.

Mrs. Page. For shame! never stand "you had rather" and "you had rather." Your husband's here at hand. Bethink you of some conveyance. In the house you cannot hide him. [135] O, how have you deceiv'd me! Look, here is a basket. If he be of any reasonable stature, he may creep in here; and throw foul linen upon him, as if it were going to bucking, or—it is whiting-time—send him by your two men to Datchet-mead. 141

Mrs. Ford. He's too big to go in there. What shall I do?

Fal. [Coming forward.] Let me see 't, let me see 't, O, let me see 't! I'll in, I'll in. Follow your friend's counsel. I'll in. 146

Mrs. Page. What, Sir John Falstaff! Are these your letters, knight?

Fal. I love thee. Help me away. Let me creep in here. I'll never— 150

[Gets into the basket; they put clothes over him.]

Mrs. Page. Help to cover your master, boy. Call your men, Mistress Ford. You dissembling knight!

Mrs. Ford. What, John! Robert! John! 154
[Exit Robin.]

[Re-enter SERVANTS.]

Go take up these clothes here quickly. Where's the cowl-staff? Look, how you drumble! Carry them to the laundress in Datchet-mead; quickly, come. 158

[Enter FORD, PAGE, CAIUS, and SIR HUGH EVANS.]

Ford. Pray you, come near. If I suspect without cause, why then make sport at me; then let me be your jest; I deserve it. How now! whither bear you this? 162

Serv. To the laundress, forsooth.

Mrs. Ford. Why, what have you to do whither they bear it? You were best meddle with buck-washing. 166

Ford. Buck! I would I could wash myself of the buck! Buck, buck, buck! Ay, buck; I warrant you, buck, and of the season too, it shall appear. [Exeunt Servants with the [170] basket.] Gentlemen, I have dream'd to-night; I'll tell you my dream. Here, here, here be my keys. Ascend my chambers, search, seek, find out. I'll warrant we'll unkennel the fox. Let me stop this way first. [Locking the door.] So, now uncape. 176

Page. Good Master Ford, be contented. You wrong yourself too much.

Ford. True, Master Page. Up, gentlemen; you shall see sport anon. Follow me, gentlemen. [Exit.] 180

Evans. This is fery fantastical humours and jealousies.

Caius. By gar, 'tis no the fashion of France; it is not jealous in France.

Page. Nay, follow him, gentlemen; see the issue of his search. 186

[Exeunt Page, Caius, and Evans.]

Mrs. Page. Is there not a double excellency in this?

Mrs. Ford. I know not which pleases me better, that my husband is deceived, or Sir John. 190

Mrs. Page. What a taking was he in when your husband ask'd who was in the basket!

Mrs. Ford. I am half afraid he will have need of washing, so throwing him into the water will do him a benefit. 195

Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest rascal! I would all of the same strain were in the same distress.

Mrs. Ford. I think my husband hath some special suspicion of Falstaff's being here; for I never saw him so gross in his jealousy ²⁰⁰ till now.

Mrs. Page. I will lay a plot to try that; and we will yet have more tricks with Falstaff. His dissolute disease will scarce obey this medicine. ²⁰⁴

Mrs. Ford. Shall we send that foolish carrion, Mistress Quickly, to him, and excuse his throwing into the water; and give him another hope, to betray him to another punishment?

Mrs. Page. We will do it. Let him be sent for to-morrow, eight o'clock, to have amends. ²¹⁰

[Re-enter FORD, PAGE, CAIUS, and SIR HUGH EVANS.]

Ford. I cannot find him. May be the knave bragg'd of that he could not compass.

Mrs. Page. [Aside to Mrs. Ford.] Heard you that?

Mrs. Ford. You use me well, Master Ford, do you? ²¹⁵

Ford. Ay, I do so.

Mrs. Ford. Heaven make you better than your thoughts!

Ford. Amen! ²²⁰

Mrs. Page. You do yourself mighty wrong, Master Ford.

Ford. Ay, ay; I must bear it.

Evans. If there be any pody in the house, and in the chambers, and in the coffers, and in the presses, heaven forgive my sins at the day of judgement! ²²⁷

Caius. By gar, nor I too; there is no bodies.

Page. Fie, fie, Master Ford! are you not asham'd? What spirit, what devil suggests this imagination? I would not ha' your ²³⁰ distemper in this kind for the wealth of Windsor Castle.

Ford. 'Tis my fault, Master Page. I suffer for it. ²³⁴

Evans. You suffer for a pad conscience. Your wife is as honest a 'omans as I will desires among five thousand, and five hundred too.

Caius. By gar, I see 't is an honest woman.

Ford. Well, I promis'd you a dinner. Come, come, walk in the Park. I pray you, pardon me. I will hereafter make known to you ²⁴⁰ why I have done this. Come, wife; come, Mistress Page. I pray you, pardon me; pray heartily, pardon me.

Page. Let's go in, gentlemen; but, trust me, we'll mock him. I do invite you to-morrow ²⁴⁵ morning to my house to breakfast; after, we'll a-birding together. I have a fine hawk for the bush. Shall it be so?

Ford. Anything.

Evans. If there is one, I shall make two in the company. ²⁵¹

Caius. If dere be one or two, I shall make-a the turd.

Ford. Pray you, go, Master Page.

Evans. I pray you now, remembrance to-morrow on the lousy knave, mine host. ²⁵⁶

Caius. Dat is good; by gar, with all my heart!

Evans. A lousy knave, to have his gibes and his mockeries! [Exeunt. ²⁶⁰

SCENE IV. [A room in Page's house.]

Enter FENTON and ANNE PAGE.

Fent. I see I cannot get thy father's love, Therefore no more turn me to him, sweet Nan.

Anne. Alas, how then?

Fent. Why, thou must be thyself. He doth object I am too great of birth;

And that, my state being gall'd with my expense,

I seek to heal it only by his wealth. Besides these, other bars he lays before me,

My riots past, my wild societies;

And tells me 't is a thing impossible

I should love thee but as a property. ¹⁰

Anne. May be he tells you true.

Fent. No, heaven so speed me in my time to come!

Albeit I will confess thy father's wealth

Was the first motive that I woo'd thee, Anne; Yet, wooing thee, I found thee of more value ¹⁵

Than stamps in gold or sums in sealed bags;

And 't is the very riches of thyself

That now I aim at.

Anne. Gentle Master Fenton,

Yet seek my father's love; still seek it, sir.

If opportunity and humblest suit ²⁰

Cannot attain it, why, then, — hark you hither!

[They converse apart.]

[Enter SHALLOW, SLENDER, and MISTRESS QUICKLY.]

Shal. Break their talk, Mistress Quickly. My kinsman shall speak for himself.

Slen. I'll make a shaft or a bolt on 't. 'Slid, 't is but venturing. ²⁵

Shal. Be not dismay'd.

Slen. No, she shall not dismay me. I care not for that, but that I am afraid.

Quick. Hark ye; Master Slender would speak a word with you. ³⁰

Anne. I come to him. [Aside.] This is my father's choice.

O, what a world of vile ill-favour'd faults Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a-year!

Quick. And how does good Master Fenton? Pray you, a word with you. ³⁵

Shal. She's coming; to her, coz. O boy, thou hadst a father!

Slen. I had a father, Mistress Anne; my uncle can tell you good jests of him. Pray you, uncle, tell Mistress Anne the jest, how my father stole two geese out of a pen, good uncle. ⁴¹

Shal. Mistress Anne, my cousin loves you.

Slen. Ay, that I do; as well as I love any woman in Gloucestershire.

Shal. He will maintain you like a gentlewoman. ⁴⁵

Slen. Ay, that I will, come cut and long-tail, under the degree of a squire.

Shal. He will make you a hundred and fifty pounds jointure.

Anne. Good Master Shallow, let him woo for himself.

Shal. Marry, I thank you for it; I thank you for that good comfort. She calls you, coz. I'll leave you.

Anne. Now, Master Slender, —

Slen. Now, good Mistress Anne, —

Anne. What is your will?

Slen. My will! 'Od's heartlings, that's a pretty jest indeed! I ne'er made my will yet, I thank heaven. I am not such a sickly creature, I give heaven praise.

Anne. I mean, Master Slender, what would you with me?

Slen. Truly, for mine own part, I would little or nothing with you. Your father and my uncle hath made motions. If it be my luck, so; if not, happy man be his dole! They can tell you how things go better than I can. You may ask your father; here he comes.

Why, how now! What does Master Fenton here?

You wrong me, sir, thus still to haunt my house.

I told you, sir, my daughter is dispos'd of.

Fent. Nay, Master Page, be not impatient.

Mrs. Page. Good Master Fenton, come not to my child.

Page. She is no match for you.

Fent. Sir, will you hear me?

Page. No, good Master Fenton.

Come, Master Shallow; come, son Slender, in. Knowing my mind, you wrong me, Master Fenton. [Exit Page, Shal., and Slen.]

Quick. Speak to Mistress Page.

Fent. Good Mistress Page, for that I love your daughter

In such a righteous fashion as I do, Perforce, against all checks, rebukes, and manners,

I must advance the colours of my love And not retire. Let me have your good will.

Anne. Good mother, do not marry me to yond fool.

Mrs. Page. I mean it not; I seek you a better husband.

Quick. That's my master, Master Doctor.

Anne. Alas, I had rather be set quick i' the earth

And bowl'd to death with turnips!

Mrs. Page. Come, trouble not yourself.

Good Master Fenton,

I will not be your friend nor enemy.

My daughter will I question how she loves you,

And as I find her, so am I affected.

Till then farewell, sir; she must needs go in.

Her father will be angry.

Fent. Farewell, gentle mistress; farewell, Nan. [Exit Mrs. Page and Anne.]

Quick. This is my doing, now. "Nay," said I, "will you cast away your child on a fool, and a physician? Look on Master Fenton." This is my doing.

Fent. I thank thee; and I pray thee, once to-night

Give my sweet Nan this ring. There's for thy pains.

Quick. Now heaven send thee good fortune! [Exit Fenton.] A kind heart he hath. A woman would run through fire and water for such a kind heart. But yet I would my master had Mistress Anne; or I would Master Slender had her; or, in sooth, I would Master Fenton had her. I will do what I can for them all three; for so I have promis'd, and I'll be as good as my word; but speciously for Master Fenton. Well, I must of another errand to Sir John Falstaff from my two mistresses. What a beast am I to slack it!

[Exit.]

SCENE V. [A room in the Garter Inn.]

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, I say!

Bard. Here, sir.

Fal. Go fetch me a quart of sack. Put a toast in 't. [Exit Bard.] Have I liv'd to be carried in a basket, and to be thrown in the Thames like a barrow of butcher's offal? Well, if I be serv'd such another trick, I'll have my brains ta'en out and butter'd, and give them to a dog for a new-year's gift. The rogues slid me into the river with as little remorse as they would have drown'd a blind bitch's puppies, fifteen i' the litter; and you may know by my size that I have a kind of alacrity in sinking. If the bottom were as deep as hell, I should drown. I had been drown'd, but that the shore was shelvy and shallow, — a death that I abhor; for the water swells a man; and what a thing should I have been when I had been swell'd! I should have been a mountain of mummy.

[Re-enter BARDOLPH, with sack.]

Bard. Here's Mistress Quickly, sir, to speak with you.

Fal. Come, let me pour in some sack to the Thames water; for my belly's as cold as if I had swallow'd snowballs for pills to cool the reins. Call her in.

Bard. Come in, woman!

Enter MISTRESS QUICKLY.

Quick. By your leave; I cry you mercy. Give your worship good morrow.

Fal. Take away these chalices. Go brew me a pottle of sack finely.

Bard. With eggs, sir?

Fal. Simple of itself. I'll no pullet-sperm in my brewage. [Exit Bardolph.] How now?

Quick. Marry, sir, I come to your worship from Mistress Ford.

Fal. Mistress Ford! I have had ford enough. I was thrown into the ford; I have my belly full of ford.

Quick. Alas the day! Good heart, that was not her fault. She does so take on with her men; they mistook their erection.

Fal. So did I mine, to build upon a foolish woman's promise.

Quick. Well, she laments, sir, for it, that it would yearn your heart to see it. Her husband goes this morning a-birding. She desires you once more to come to her between eight and nine. I must carry her word quickly. She'll make you amends, I warrant you.

Fal. Well, I will visit her. Tell her so; and bid her think what a man is. Let her consider his frailty, and then judge of my merit.

Quick. I will tell her.

Fal. Do so. Between nine and ten, say'st thou?

Quick. Eight and nine, sir.

Fal. Well, be gone. I will not miss her.

Quick. Peace be with you, sir.

Fal. I marvel I hear not of Master Brook; he sent me word to stay within. I like his money well. O, here he comes.

Enter FORD.

Ford. Bless you, sir!

Fal. Now, Master Brook, you come to know what hath pass'd between me and Ford's wife?

Ford. That, indeed, Sir John, is my business.

Fal. Master Brook, I will not lie to you. I was at her house the hour she appointed me.

Ford. And sped you, sir?

Fal. Very ill-favour'dly, Master Brook.

Ford. How so, sir? Did she change her determination?

Fal. No, Master Brook; but the peaking cornuto her husband, Master Brook, dwelling in a continual 'larum of jealousy, comes me in the instant of our encounter, after we had embrac'd, kiss'd, protested, and, as it were, spok'd the prologue of our comedy; and at his heels a rabble of his companions, thither provoked and instigated by his distemper, and, forsooth, to search his house for his wife's love.

Ford. What, while you were there?

Fal. While I was there.

Ford. And did he search for you, and could not find you?

Fal. You shall hear. As good luck would have it, comes in one Mistress Page; gives intelligence of Ford's approach; and, in her invention and Ford's wife's distraction, they convey'd me into a buck-basket.

Ford. A buck-basket!

Fal. [By the Lord,] a buck-basket! Ramm'd me in with foul shirts and smocks, socks, foul stockings, greasy napkins; that, Master Brook, there was the rankest compound of villanous smell that ever offended nostril.

Ford. And how long lay you there?

Fal. Nay, you shall hear, Master Brook, what I have suffer'd to bring this woman to evil for your good. Being thus cramm'd in the basket, a couple of Ford's knaves, his hinds, were call'd forth by their mistress to carry me in the name of foul clothes to Datchet-lane. They took me on their shoulders; met the jealous knave their master in the door, who ask'd them once or twice what they had in their basket. I quak'd for fear, lest the lunatic knave would have search'd it; but fate, or—daining he should be a cuckold, held his hand.

Well, on went he for a search, and away went I for foul clothes. But mark the sequel, Master Brook. I suffered the pangs of three several deaths; first, an intolerable fright, to be detected with a jealous rotten bell-wether; next, to be compass'd, like a good bilbo, in the circumference of a peck, hilt to point, heel to head; and then, to be stopp'd in, like a strong distillation, with stinking clothes that fretted in their own grease. Think of that,—a man of my kidney,—think of that,—that am as subject to heat as butter; a man of continual dissolution and thaw,—it was a miracle to scape suffocation. And in the height of this bath, when I was more than half stew'd in grease, like a Dutch dish, to be thrown into the Thames, and cool'd, glowing hot, in that surge, like a horse-shoe; think of that,—hissing hot,—think of that, Master Brook.

Ford. In good sadness, sir, I am sorry that for my sake you have suffer'd all this. My suit then is desperate; you'll undertake her no more?

Fal. Master Brook, I will be thrown into Etna, as I have been into Thames, ere I will leave her thus. Her husband is this morning gone a-birding. I have received from her another embassy of meeting. 'Twixt eight and nine is the hour, Master Brook.

Ford. 'Tis past eight already, sir.

Fal. Is it? I will then address me to my appointment. Come to me at your convenient leisure, and you shall know how I speed; and the conclusion shall be crowned with your enjoying her. Adieu. You shall have her, Master Brook. Master Brook, you shall cuckold Ford.

Ford. Hum! ha! is this a vision? Is this a dream? Do I sleep? Master Ford, awake! awake. Master Ford! there's a hole made in your best coat, Master Ford. This 'tis to be married! This 'tis to have linen and buck-baskets! Well, I will proclaim myself what I am. I will now take the lecher; he is at my house; he cannot scape me; 'tis impossible he should. He cannot creep into a halfpenny purse, nor into a pepper-box; but, lest the devil that guides him should aid him, I will search impossible places. Though what I am I cannot avoid, yet to be what I would not shall not make me tame. If I have horns to make one mad, let the proverb go with me: I'll be horn mad.

[Exit.]

ACT IV

SCENE I. [A street.]

Enter MISTRESS PAGE, MISTRESS QUICKLY, and WILLIAM.

Mrs. Page. Is he at Master Ford's already, think'st thou?

Quick. Sure he is by this, or will be presently. But, truly, he is very courageous mad about his throwing into the water. Mistress Ford desires you to come suddenly.

Mrs. Page. I'll be with her by and by; I'll but bring my young man here to school.

[Enter SIR HUGH EVANS.]

Look, where his master comes; 't is a playing-day, I see. How now, Sir Hugh! no school to-day?

Evans. No; Master Slender is let the boys leave to play.

Quick. Blessing of his heart!

Mrs. Page. Sir Hugh, my husband says my son profits nothing in the world at his book. I pray you, ask him some questions in his accidence.

Evans. Come hither, William; hold up your head; come.

Mrs. Page. Come on, sirrah, hold up your head. Answer your master, be not afraid.

Evans. William, how many numbers is in nouns?

Will. Two.

Quick. Truly, I thought there had been one number more, because they say, "'Od's nouns."

Evans. Peace your tattlings! What is "fair," William?

Will. Pulcher.

Quick. Polecats! There are fairer things than polecats, sure.

Evans. You are a very simplicity 'oman. I pray you, peace. What is lapis, William?

Will. A stone.

Evans. And what is "a stone," William?

Will. A pebble.

Evans. No, it is lapis. I pray you, remember in your prain.

Will. Lapis.

Evans. That is a good William. What is he, William, that does lend articles?

Will. Articles are borrowed of the pronoun, and be thus declined, Singulariter, nominativo, hic, hæc, hoc.

Evans. Nominativo, hig, hag, hog; pray you, mark; genitivo, hujus. Well, what is your accusative case?

Will. Accusativo, hinc.

Evans. I pray you, have your remembrance, child. Accusativo, hing, hang, hog.

Quick. "Hang-hog" is Latin for bacon, I warrant you.

Evans. Leave your prabbles, 'oman. What is the focative case, William?

Will. O, — vocativo, O.

Evans. Remember, William; focative is caret.

Quick. And that's a good root.

Evans. 'Oman, forbear.

Mrs. Page. Peace!

Evans. What is your genitive case plural, William?

Will. Genitive case?

Evans. Ay.

Will. Genitive, horum, harum, horum.

Quick. Vengeance of Jenny's case! Fie on her! Never name her, child, if she be a whore.

Evans. For shame, 'oman.

Quick. You do ill to teach the child such words. He teaches him to hick and to hack, which they'll do fast enough of themselves, and to call "horum," — fie upon you!

Evans. 'Oman, art thou lunatics? Hast thou no understandings for thy cases and the numbers of the genders? Thou art as foolish Christian creatures as I would desires.

Mrs. Page. Prithee, hold thy peace.

Evans. Show me now, William, some declensions of your pronouns.

Will. Forsooth, I have forgot.

Evans. It is qui, quæ, quod: if you forget your quies, your quæ, and your quods, you must be preeches. Go your ways, and play; go.

Mrs. Page. He is a better scholar than I thought he was.

Evans. He is a good sprag memory. Farewell, Mistress Page.

Mrs. Page. Adieu, good Sir Hugh. [Exit Sir Hugh.] Get you home, boy. Come, we stay too long. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [A room in Ford's house.]

Enter FALSTAFF and MISTRESS FORD.

Fal. Mistress Ford, your sorrow hath eaten up my sufferance. I see you are obsequious in your love, and I profess requital to a hair's breadth; not only, Mistress Ford, in the simple office of love, but in all the accoutrement, complement, and ceremony of it. But are you sure of your husband now?

Mrs. Ford. He's a-birding, sweet Sir John.

Mrs. Page. [Within.] What, ho, gossip Ford! What, ho!

Mrs. Ford. Step into the chamber, Sir John.

[Exit Falstaff.]

[Enter MISTRESS PAGE.]

Mrs. Page. How now, sweetheart! who's at home besides yourself?

Mrs. Ford. Why, none but mine own people.

Mrs. Page. Indeed!

Mrs. Ford. No, certainly. [Aside to her.] Speak louder.

Mrs. Page. Truly, I am so glad you have nobody here.

Mrs. Ford. Why?

Mrs. Page. Why, woman, your husband is in his old lines again. He so takes on yonder with my husband; so rails against all married mankind; so curses all Eve's daughters, of what complexion soever; and so buffets himself on the forehead, crying, "Peer out, peer out!" that any madness I ever yet beheld seemed but tameness, civility, and patience, to this his distemper he is in now. I am glad the fat knight is not here.

Mrs. Ford. Why, does he talk of him? 30

Mrs. Page. Of none but him; and swears he was carried out, the last time he search'd for him, in a basket; protests to my husband he is now here, and hath drawn him and the rest of their company from their sport, to make another experiment of his suspicion. But I 35 am glad the knight is not here. Now he shall see his own foolery.

Mrs. Ford. How near is he, Mistress Page?

Mrs. Page. Hard by; at street end. He will be here anon. 41

Mrs. Ford. I am undone! The knight is here.

Mrs. Page. Why then you are utterly sham'd, and he's but a dead man. What a woman are you!—Away with him, away with him! Better shame than murder. 46

Mrs. Ford. Which way should he go? How should I bestow him? Shall I put him into the basket again?

[Re-enter FALSTAFF.]

Fal. No, I'll come no more i' the basket. May I not go out ere he come? 51

Mrs. Page. Alas, three of Master Ford's brothers watch the door with pistols, that none shall issue out; otherwise you might slip away ere he came. But what make you here? 55

Fal. What shall I do? I'll creep up into the chimney.

Mrs. Ford. There they always use to discharge their birding-pieces. Creep into the kiln-hole.

Fal. Where is it? 60

Mrs. Ford. He will seek there, on my word. Neither press, coffer, chest, trunk, well, vault, but he hath an abstract for the remembrance of such places, and goes to them by his note. There is no hiding you in the house. 65

Fal. I'll go out then.

[Mrs. Page.] If you go out in your own semblance, you die, Sir John. Unless you go out disguis'd—

Mrs. Ford. How might we disguise him? 70

Mrs. Page. Alas the day, I know not! There is no woman's gown big enough for him; otherwise he might put on a hat, a muffler, and a kerchief, and so escape.

Fal. Good hearts, devise something. Any extremity rather than a mischief. 75

Mrs. Ford. My maid's aunt, the fat woman of Brainford, has a gown above.

Mrs. Page. On my word, it will serve him. She's as big as he is; and there's her thrum'd hat and her muffler too. Run up, 80 Sir John.

Mrs. Ford. Go, go, sweet Sir John. Mistress Page and I will look some linen for your head.

Mrs. Page. Quick, quick! we'll come dress you straight. Put on the gown the while. 85

[Exit Falstaff.]

Mrs. Ford. I would my husband would meet him in this shape. He cannot abide the old woman of Brainford. He swears she's a witch; forbade her my house, and hath threat'ned to beat her. 89

Mrs. Page. Heaven guide him to thy husband's cudgel, and the devil guide his cudgel afterwards!

Mrs. Ford. But is my husband coming?

Mrs. Page. Ay, in good sadness, is he; and talks of the basket too, howsoever he hath had intelligence. 95

Mrs. Ford. We'll try that; for I'll appoint my men to carry the basket again, to meet him at the door with it, as they did last time.

Mrs. Page. Nay, but he'll be here presently. Let's go dress him like the witch of Brainford. 100

Mrs. Ford. I'll first direct my men what they shall do with the basket. Go up; I'll bring linen for him straight. [Exit.]

Mrs. Page. Hang him, dishonest varlet! We cannot misuse him enough. 105

We'll leave a proof, by that which we will do, Wives may be merry, and yet honest too.

We do not act that often jest and laugh;

'Tis old, but true, Still swine eats all the draft. [Exit.]

[Re-enter MISTRESS FORD with two SERVANTS.]

Mrs. Ford. Go, sirs, take the basket again on your shoulders. Your master is hard at the door. If he bid you set it down, obey him. Quickly, dispatch. [Exit.]

1. Serv. Come, come, take it up.

2. Serv. Pray heaven it be not full of knight again. 110

1. Serv. I hope not; I had as lief bear so much lead.

Enter FORD, PAGE, SHALLOW [CAIUS], and SIR HUGH EVANS.

Ford. Ay, but if it prove true, Master Page, have you any way then to unfool me again? Set down the basket, villain! Somebody call 115 my wife. Youth in a basket! O you panderly rascals! there's a knot, a ging, a pack, a conspiracy against me. Now shall the devil be sham'd. What, wife, I say! Come, come forth! Behold what honest clothes you send forth to bleaching! 120

Page. Why, this passes, Master Ford. You are not to go loose any longer; you must be pinion'd.

Evans. Why, this is lunatics! This is mad as a mad dog! 125

Shal. Indeed, Master Ford, this is not well, indeed.

Ford. So say I too, sir.

[Re-enter MISTRESS FORD.]

Come hither, Mistress Ford; Mistress Ford, the honest woman, the modest wife, the virtuous creature, that hath the jealous fool to her husband! I suspect without cause, mistress, do I? 135

Mrs. Ford. Heaven be my witness you do, if you suspect me in any dishonesty. 140

Ford. Well said, brazen-face! hold it out.
Come forth, sirrah!

[Pulling clothes out of the basket.]

Mrs. Ford. Are you not ashame'd? Let the clothes alone. 145

Ford. I shall find you anon.

Evans. 'Tis unreasonable! Will you take up your wife's clothes? Come away.

Ford. Empty the basket, I say!

Mrs. Ford. Why, man, why? 150

Ford. Master Page, as I am a man, there was one convey'd out of my house yesterday in this basket. Why may not he be there again? In my house I am sure he is. My intelligence is true; my jealousy is reasonable. Pluck me out all the linen. 156

Mrs. Ford. If you find a man there, he shall die a flea's death.

Shal. By my fidelity, this is not well, Master Ford; this wrongs you. 161

Evans. Master Ford, you must pray, and not follow the imaginations of your own heart. This is jealousy.

Ford. Well, he's not here I seek for. 165

Page. No, nor nowhere else but in your brain.

Ford. Help to search my house this one time. If I find not what I seek, show no colour for my extremity, let me forever be your table-sport. Let them say of me, "As jealous as Ford, that search'd a hollow walnut for his [170] wife's leman." Satisfy me once more; once more search with me.

Mrs. Ford. What, ho, Mistress Page! come you and the old woman down; my husband will come into the chamber. 176

Ford. Old woman! What old woman's that?

Mrs. Ford. Why, it is my maid's aunt of Brainford. 179

Ford. A witch, a quean, an old cozening quean! Have I not forbid her my house? She comes of errands, does she? We are simple men; we do not know what's brought to pass under the profession of fortune-telling. She works by charms, by spells, by the figure; and such daubery as this is beyond our element; we know nothing. Come down, you witch, you hag, you; come down, I say! 185

Mrs. Ford. Nay, good, sweet husband! Good gentlemen, let him not strike the old woman. 190

Re-enter FALSTAFF disguised like an old woman, and MISTRESS PAGE with him.

Mrs. Page. Come, Mother Prat; come, give me your hand.

Ford. I'll prat her. Out of my door, you witch, you hag, you baggage, you polecat, you ronyon! out, out! I'll conjure you, I'll [195] fortune-tell you!

[Ford beats him, and he runs away.]

Mrs. Page. Are you not ashame'd? I think you have kill'd the poor woman.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, he will do it. 'Tis a goodly credit for you. 200

Ford. Hang her, witch!

Evans. By yea and no, I think the 'oman is a witch indeed. I like not when a 'oman has a great peard. I spy a great peard under his muffler. 205

Ford. Will you follow, gentlemen? I beseech you, follow; see but the issue of my jealousy. If I cry out thus upon no trail, never trust me when I open again.

Page. Let's obey his humour a little further. Come, gentlemen. 211

[Exeunt Ford, Page, Shal., Caius, and Evans.]

Mrs. Page. Trust me, he beat him most pitifully.

Mrs. Ford. Nay, by the mass, that he did not; he beat him most unpitifully, methought.

Mrs. Page. I'll have the cudgel hallow'd [216] and hung o'er the altar. It hath done meritorious service.

Mrs. Ford. What think you? May we, with the warrant of womanhood and the witness of a good conscience, pursue him with any further revenge? 223

Mrs. Page. The spirit of wantonness is, sure, scar'd out of him. If the devil have him not in fee-simple, with fine and recovery, he will never, I think, in the way of waste, attempt us again. 227

Mrs. Ford. Shall we tell our husbands how we have serv'd him? 229

Mrs. Page. Yes, by all means; if it be but to scrape the figures out of your husband's brains. If they can find in their hearts the poor unvirtuous fat knight shall be any further afflicted, we two will still be the ministers. 234

Mrs. Ford. I'll warrant they'll have him publicly sham'd; and methinks there would be no period to the jest, should he not be publicly sham'd.

Mrs. Page. Come, to the forge with it then; shape it. I would not have things cool. 240

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [A room in the Garter Inn.]

Enter HOST and BARDOLPH.

Bard. Sir, the German desires to have three of your horses. The Duke himself will be tomorrow at court, and they are going to meet him. 4

Host. What duke should that be comes so secretly? I hear not of him in the court. Let me speak with the gentlemen. They speak English? 5

Bard. Ay, sir; I'll call them to you. 9

Host. They shall have my horses; but I'll make them pay, I'll sauce them. They have had my houses a week at command. I have turn'd away my other guests. They must come off; I'll sauce them. Come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [A room in Ford's house.]

Enter PAGE, FORD, MISTRESS PAGE, MISTRESS FORD, and SIR HUGH EVANS.

Evans. 'Tis one of the best discretions of a 'oman as ever I did look upon.

Page. And did he send you both these letters at an instant?

Mrs. Page. Within a quarter of an hour.

Ford. Pardon me, wife. Henceforth do what thou wilt.

I rather will suspect the sun with cold
Than thee with wantonness. Now doth thy honour stand,

In him that was of late an heretic,
As firm as faith.

Page. 'Tis well, 'tis well; no more.
Be not as extreme in submission
As in offence.

But let our plot go forward. Let our wives
Yet once again, to make us public sport,
Appoint a meeting with this old fat fellow,
Where we may take him and disgrace him for it.

Ford. There is no better way than that they spoke of.

Page. How? To send him word they'll meet him in the park at midnight? Fie, fie! he'll never come.

Evans. You say he has been thrown in the rivers and has been grievously peaten as an old 'oman. Methinks there should be terrors in him that he should not come; methinks his flesh is punish'd; he shall have no desires.

Page. So think I too.

Mrs. Ford. Devise but how you'll use him when he comes,

And let us two devise to bring him thither.

Mrs. Page. There is an old tale goes that Herne the hunter,

Sometime a keeper here in Windsor forest,
Doth all the winter-time, at still midnight,
Walk round about an oak, with great ragged horns;

And there he blasts the tree, and takes the cattle,
And makes milch-kine yield blood, and shakes a chain

In a most hideous and dreadful manner.
You have heard of such a spirit, and well you know

The superstitious idle-headed old
Receiv'd and did deliver to our age
This tale of Herne the hunter for a truth.

Page. Why, yet there want not many that do fear

In deep of night to walk by this Herne's oak.
But what of this?

Mrs. Ford. Marry, this is our device;
That Falstaff at that oak shall meet with us
[Disguis'd like Herne, with huge horns on his head].

Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'll come;

And in this shape when you have brought him thither,

What shall be done with him? What is your plot?

Mrs. Page. That likewise have we thought upon, and thus:

Nan Page my daughter and my little son
And three or four more of their growth we'll dress

Like urchins, -oupes, and fairies, green and white,

With rounds of waxen tapers on their heads,
And rattles in their hands. Upon a sudden,
As Falstaff, she, and I are newly met,
Let them from forth a sawpit rush at once
With some diffused song. Upon their sight,
We two in great amazement will fly.

Then let them all encircle him about
And, fairy-like, to pinch the unclean knight,
And ask him why, that hour of fairy revel,
In their so sacred paths he dares to tread
In shape profane.

[Mrs. Ford. And till he tell the truth,
Let the supposed fairies pinch him sound
And burn him with their tapers.

Mrs. Page. The truth being known,
We'll all present ourselves, dis-horn the spirit,
And mock him home to Windsor.

Ford. The children must be practis'd well to this, or they'll ne'er do 't.

Evans. I will teach the children their behaviours; and I will be like a jack-an-apes also, to burn the knight with my taber.

Ford. That will be excellent. I'll go and buy them vizards.

Mrs. Page. My Nan shall be the queen of all the fairies,

Finely attired in a robe of white.

Page. That silk will I go buy. [Aside. And in that time

Shall Master Slender steal my Nan away
And marry her at Eton. Go send to Falstaff straight.

Ford. Nay, I'll to him again in name of Brook.

He'll tell me all his purpose. Sure, he'll come.

Mrs. Page. Fear not you that. Go get us properties

And tripping for our fairies.

Evans. Let us about it. It is admirable pleasures and fery honest knaveries.

[Exeunt Page, Ford, and Evans.]

Mrs. Page. Go, Mistress Ford,
Send Quickly to Sir John, to know his mind.

[Exit Mrs. Ford.]

I'll to the doctor; he hath my good will,
And none but he, to marry with Nan Page.

That Slender, though well landed, is an idiot;
And he my husband best of all affects.

The doctor is well money'd, and his friends
Potent at court. He, none but he, shall have her,

Though twenty thousand worthier come to crave her.

SCENE V. [A room in the Garter Inn.]

Enter Host and SIMPLE.

Host. What wouldst thou have, boor? What, thick-skin? Speak, breathe, discuss; brief, short, quick, snap.

Sim. Marry, sir, I come to speak with Sir John Falstaff from Master Slender.

Host. There's his chamber, his house, his castle, his standing-bed and truckle-bed; 'tis painted about with the story of the Prodigal, fresh and new. Go knock and call; he'll speak like an Anthropophaginian unto thee. Knock, I say. 11

Sim. There's an old woman, a fat woman, gone up into his chamber. I'll be so bold as stay, sir, till she come down. I come to speak with her, indeed. 15

Host. Ha! a fat woman? The knight may be robb'd. I'll call. Bully knight! bully Sir John! speak from thy lungs military. Art thou there? It is thine host, thine Ephesian, calls.

Fal. [Above,] How now, mine host? 20

Host. Here's a Bohemian-Tartar carries the coming down of thy fat woman. Let her descend, bully, let her descend; my chambers are honourable. Fie! privacy? fie!

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. There was, mine host, an old fat woman even now with me; but she's gone. 25

Sim. Pray you, sir, was 't not the wise woman of Brainford?

Fal. Ay, marry, was it, mussel-shell. What would you with her? 30

Sim. My master, sir, my Master Slender, sent to her, seeing her go thorough the streets, to know, sir, whether one Nym, sir, that beguil'd him of a chain, had the chain or no.

Fal. I spake with the old woman about it. 35

Sim. And what says she, I pray, sir?

Fal. Marry, she says that the very same man that beguil'd Master Slender of his chain cozen'd him of it. 39

Sim. I would I could have spoken with the woman herself. I had other things to have spoken with her too from him.

Fal. What are they? Let us know.

Host. Ay, come; quick.

Sim. I may not conceal them, sir. 45

Host. Conceal them, or thou diest.

Sim. Why, sir, they were nothing but about Mistress Anne Page; to know if it were my master's fortune to have her or no.

Fal. 'T is, 't is his fortune. 50

Sim. What, sir?

Fal. To have her, or no. Go; say the woman told me so.

Sim. May I be bold to say so, sir?

Fal. Ay, sir; like who more bold? 55

Sim. I thank your worship. I shall make my master glad with these tidings. [Exit.]

Host. Thou art clerkly, thou art clerkly, Sir John. Was there a wise woman with thee? 59

Fal. Ay, that there was, mine host; one that hath taught me more wit than ever I learn'd before in my life; and I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning.

Enter BARDOLPH.

Bard. Out, alas, sir! cozenage, mere cozenage.

Host. Where be my horses? Speak well of them, varletto. 65

Bard. Run away with the cozeners; for so soon as I came beyond Eton, they threw me off from behind one of them, in a slough of mire;

and set spurs and away, like three German devils, three Doctor Faustuses. 74

Host. They are gone but to meet the Duke, villain; do not say they be fled. Germans are honest men.

Enter SIR HUGH EVANS.

Evans. Where is mine host? 75

Host. What is the matter, sir?

Evans. Have a care of your entertainments. There is a friend of mine come to town, tells me there is three cozen-germans that has cozen'd all the hosts of Readins, of Maidenhead, of Colebrook, of horses and money. I tell 80 you for good will, look you. You are wise and full of gibes and vlouting-stocks, and 't is not convenient you should be cozened. Fare you well. [Exit.]

Enter DOCTOR CAIUS.

Caius. Vere is mine host de Jarteer? 85

Host. Here, Master Doctor, in perplexity and doubtful dilemma.

Caius. I cannot tell vat is dat; but it is tell-a me dat you make grand preparation for a duke de Jamany. By my trot, dere is no duke that de court is know to come. I tell you for good will; adieu. [Exit.] 91

Host. Hue and cry, villain, go! Assist me, knight. I am undone! Fly, run, hue and cry, villain! I am undone! 94

[Exit Host [and Bard.]]

Fal. I would all the world might be cozen'd; for I have been cozen'd and beaten too. If it should come to the ear of the court, how I have been transformed and how my transformation hath been wash'd and cudgell'd, they would melt me out of my fat drop by drop, and liquor fishermen's boots with me. I 100 warrant they would whip me with their fine wits till I were as crestfallen as a dri'd pear. I never prosper'd since I forswore myself at primero. Well, if my wind were but long enough [to say my prayers,] I would repent. 105

Enter MISTRESS QUICKLY.

Now, whence come you?

Quick. From the two parties, forsooth.

Fal. The devil take one party and his dam the other! and so they shall be both bestowed. I have suffer'd more for their sakes, more than the villanous inconstancy of man's disposition is able to bear. 110

Quick. And have not they suffer'd? Yes, I warrant; speciously one of them. Mistress Ford, good heart, is beaten black and blue, that you cannot see a white spot about her. 115

Fal. What tellst thou me of black and blue? I was beaten myself into all the colours of the rainbow; and I was like to be apprehended for the witch of Brainford. But that my admirable dexterity of wit, my counter- 120 feiting the action of an old woman, deliver'd me, the knave constable had set me i' the stocks, i' the common stocks, for a witch. 124

Quick. Sir, let me speak with you in your chamber. You shall hear how things go, and,

I warrant, to your content. Here is a letter will say somewhat. Good hearts, what ado here is to bring you together! Sure, one of you does not serve heaven well, that you are so cross'd.

Fal. Come up into my chamber. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. [Another room in the Garter Inn.]

Enter FENTON and HOST.

Host. Master Fenton, talk not to me; my mind is heavy. I will give over all.

Fent. Yet hear me speak. Assist me in my purpose,

And, as I am a gentleman, I'll give thee A hundred pound in gold more than your loss.

Host. I will hear you, Master Fenton; and I will at the least keep your counsel.

Fent. From time to time I have acquainted you

With the dear love I bear to fair Anne Page; Who mutually hath answer'd my affection,

So far forth as herself might be her chooser, Even to my wish. I have a letter from her Of such contents as you will wonder at; The mirth whereof so larded with my matter,

That neither singly can be manifested, Without the show of both. Fat Falstaff Hath a great scene. The image of the jest I'll show you here at large. Hark, good mine host.

To-night at Herne's oak, just 'twixt twelve and one,

Must my sweet Nan present the Fairy Queen; The purpose why, is here; in which disguise, While other jests are something rank on foot, Her father hath commanded her to slip Away with Slender and with him at Eton

Immediately to marry. She hath consented. Now, sir,

Her mother, ever strong against that match And firm for Doctor Caius, hath appointed That he shall likewise shuffle her away

While other sports are tasking of their minds, And at the deanery, where a priest attends,

Straight marry her. To this her mother's plot She seemingly obedient likewise hath Made promise to the doctor. Now, thus it rests:

Her father means she shall be all in white, And in that habit, when Slender sees his time

To take her by the hand and bid her go, She shall go with him. Her mother hath intended,

The better to denote her to the doctor, For they must all be mask'd and vizarded, That quaint in green she shall be loose enrob'd, With ribands pendent, flaring 'bout her head; And when the doctor spies his vantage ripe, To pinch her by the hand, and, on that token, The maid hath given consent to go with him.

Host. Which means she to deceive, father or mother?

Fent. Both, my good host, to go along with me.

And here it rests, that you 'll procure the vicar To stay for me at church 'twixt twelve and one,

And, in the lawful name of marrying, To give our hearts united ceremony.

Host. Well, husband your device; I'll to the vicar.

Bring you the maid, you shall not lack a priest.

Fent. So shall I evermore be bound to thee;

Besides, I'll make a present recompense.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V

SCENE I. [A room in the Garter Inn.]

Enter FALSTAFF and MISTRESS QUICKLY.

Fal. Prithee, no more prattling; go. I'll hold. This is the third time; I hope good luck lies in odd numbers. Away! go. They say there is divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance, or death. Away!

Quick. I'll provide you a chain; and I'll do what I can to get you a pair of horns.

Fal. Away, I say; time wears. Hold up your head, and mince.

[Exit Mrs. Quickly.]

[Enter FORD.]

How now, Master Brook! Master Brook, the matter will be known to-night, or never. Be you in the park about midnight, at Herne's oak, and you shall see wonders.

Ford. Went you not to her yesterday, sir, as you told me you had appointed?

Fal. I went to her, Master Brook, as you see, like a poor old man; but I came from her, Master Brook, like a poor old woman. That same knave Ford, her husband, hath the finest mad devil of jealousy in him, Master Brook, that ever govern'd frenzy. I will tell you. He beat me grievously, in the shape of a woman; for in the shape of man, Master Brook, I fear not Goliath with a weaver's beam; because I know also life is a shuttle. I am in haste; go along with me. I'll tell you all, Master Brook. Since I pluck'd geese, play'd truant and whipp'd top, I knew not what 'twas to be beaten till lately. Follow me. I'll tell you strange things of this knave Ford, on whom to-night I will be revenged, and I will deliver his wife into your hand. Follow. Strange things in hand, Master Brook! Follow.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [Windsor Park.]

Enter PAGE, SHALLOW, and SLENDER.

Page. Come, come; we'll couch 't the castle-ditch till we see the light of our fairies. Remember, son Slender, my daughter.

Slen. Ay, forsooth; I have spoke with her and we have a nay-word how to know one another. I come to her in white, and cry "mum"; she cries "budget"; and by that we know one another.

Shal. That's good too; but what needs either your "mum" or her "budget"? The white will decipher her well enough. It hath struck ten o'clock.

Page. The night is dark; light and spirits will become it well. Heaven prosper our sport! No man means evil but the devil, and we shall know him by his horns. Let's away; follow me. [Exeunt. 16]

SCENE III. [A street leading to the Park.]

Enter MISTRESS PAGE, MISTRESS FORD, and DOCTOR CAIUS.

Mrs. Page. Master Doctor, my daughter is in green. When you see your time, take her by the hand, away with her to the deanery, and dispatch it quickly. Go before into the park; we two must go together.

Caius. I know vat I have to do. Adien.

Mrs. Page. Fare you well, sir. [Exit Caius.]
My husband will not rejoice so much at the abuse of Falstaff as he will chafe at the doctor's marrying my daughter. But 'tis no matter; better a little chiding than a great deal of heart-break.

Mrs. Ford. Where is Nan now and her troop of fairies, and the Welsh devil Hugh?

Mrs. Page. They are all couch'd in a pit hard by Herne's oak, with obscur'd lights; which, at the very instant of Falstaff's and our meeting, they will at once display to the night.

Mrs. Ford. That cannot choose but amaze him.

Mrs. Page. If he be not amaz'd, he will be mock'd; if he be amaz'd, he will every way be mock'd.

Mrs. Ford. We'll betray him finely.

Mrs. Page. Against such lewdsters and their lechery

Those that betray them do no treachery.

Mrs. Ford. The hour draws on. To the oak, to the oak! [Exeunt. 26]

SCENE IV. [Windsor Park.]

Enter SIR HUGH EVANS [disguised], and [others as] Fairies.

Evans. Trib, trib, fairies; come; and remember your parts. Be bold, I pray you. Follow me into the pit, and when I give the watch-words, do as I bid you. Come, come; trib, trib. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. [Another part of the Park.]

Enter FALSTAFF with a buck's head upon him.

Fal. The Windsor bell hath struck twelve; the minute draws on. Now, the hot-blooded gods assist me! Remember, Jove, thou wast a bull for thy Europa; love set on thy horns. O powerful love! that, in some respects, makes a beast a man, in some other, a man a beast. You were also, Jupiter, a swan for the love of Leda. O omnipotent Love! how near the god drew to the complexion of a goose! A fault done first in the form of a beast. O Jove, a beastly fault! And then another fault in the semblance of a fowl; think on't, Jove; a foul fault! When gods have hot backs, what shall poor men do? For me, I am here a Windsor stag; and the fattest, I think, i' the forest. Send me a cool rut-time, Jove, or who can blame me to piss my tallow? Who comes here? My doe?

Enter MISTRESS FORD and MISTRESS PAGE.

Mrs. Ford. Sir John! art thou there, my deer? my male deer?

Fal. My doe with the black scut! Let the sky rain potatoes; let it thunder to the tune of "Green Sleeves," hail kissing-comfits and snow eringoes; let there come a tempest of provocation. I will shelter me here.

Mrs. Ford. Mistress Page is come with me, sweetheart.

Fal. Divide me like a brib'd buck, each a haunch. I will keep my sides to myself, my shoulders for the fellow of this walk, and my horns I bequeath your husbands. Am I a woodman, ha? Speak I like Herne the hunter? Why, now is Cupid a child of conscience; he makes restitution. As I am a true spirit, welcome! [Noise within.]

Mrs. Page. Alas, what noise?

Mrs. Ford. Heaven forgive our sins!

Fal. What should this be?

Mrs. Ford. } Away, away! [They run off.]

Mrs. Page. }
Fal. I think the devil will not have me damn'd, lest the oil that's in me should set hell on fire; he would never else cross me thus.

Enter SIR HUGH EVANS, like a Satyr, and boys dressed like Fairies [Pistol, as Hobgoblin]; MISTRESS QUICKLY, like the Queen of Fairies; they sing a song about him and afterward speak.

Quick. Fairies, black, grey, green, and white, You moonshine revellers, and shades of night, You orphan heirs of fixed destiny, Attend your office and your quality. Crier Hobgoblin, make the fairy oyes.

Pist. Elves, list your names. Silence, you airy toys!

Cricketer, to Windsor chimneys shalt thou leap, Where fires thou find'st unrak'd and hearth unswapt,

There pinch the maids as blue as bilberry;

Our radiant queen hates sluts and sluttish. Fal. They are fairies; he that speaks to them shall die.

I'll wink and couch; no man their works must eye.

Evans. Where's Bead? Go you, and where you find a maid

That, ere she sleep, has thrice her prayers said, Rein up the organs of her fantasy; Sleep she as sound as careless infancy.

But those as sleep and think not on their sins, Pinch them, arms, legs, backs, shoulders, sides, and shins.

Quick. About, about; Search Windsor Castle, elves, within and out. Strew good luck, ouphes, on every sacred room, That it may stand till the perpetual doom,

In state as wholesome as in state 't is fit,
 Worthy the owner, and the owner it.
 The several chairs of order look you scour 65
 With juice of balm and every precious flower.
 Each fair instalment, coat, and several crest,
 With loyal blazon, evermore be blest!
 And nightly, meadow-fairies, look you sing,
 Like to the Garter's compass, in a ring. 70
 The expressure that it bears, green let it be,
 More fertile-fresh than all the field to see;
 And "Honi soit qui mal y pense" write
 In emerald tufts, flowers purple, blue, and white;
 Like sapphire, pearl, and rich embroidery, 75
 Buckled below fair knighthood's bending knee.
 Fairies use flowers for their charactery.
 Away; disperse! but till 't is one o'clock,
 Our dance of custom round about the oak
 Of Herne the hunter, let us not forget. 80

Evans. Pray you, look hand in hand; yourselves in order set;

And twenty glow-worms shall our lanterns be,
 To guide our measure round about the tree.
 But, stay; I smell a man of middle-earth.

Fal. Heavens defend me from that Welsh 85 fairy, lest he transform me to a piece of cheese!

Pist. Vile worm, thou wast o'erlook'd even in thy birth.

Quick. With trial-fire touch me his finger-end.
 If he be chaste, the flame will back descend
 And turn him to no pain; but if he start, 90
 It is the flesh of a corrupted heart.

Pist. A trial, come.

Evans. Come, will this wood take fire?
 [They put the tapers to his fingers, and he starts.

Fal. Oh, Oh, Oh!

Quick. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in desire!
 About him, fairies; sing a scornful rhyme; 95
 And, as you trip, still pinch him to your time.

THE SONG.

Fie on sinful fantasy!
 Fie on lust and luxury!
 Lust is but a bloody fire,
 Kindled with unchaste desire, 100
 Fed in heart, whose flames aspire
 As thoughts do blow them, higher and higher.
 Pinch him, fairies, mutually!
 Pinch him for his villainy!
 Pinch him, and burn him, and turn him about, 105
 Till candles and starlight and moonshine be out.

Here they pinch FALSTAFF and sing about him.
DOCTOR CAIUS comes one way, and steals away a boy in green; SLENDER another way, and takes a boy in white; and FENTON comes, and steals ANNE PAGE. A noise of hunting is made within. All the Fairies run away. FALSTAFF pulls off his buck's head, and rises up.

Enter PAGE, FORD, MISTRESS PAGE, MISTRESS
 FORD, and SHALLOW.

Page. Nay, do not fly; I think we have watch'd you now.

Will none but Herne the hunter serve your turn?

Mrs. Page. I pray you, come, hold up the jest no higher.

Now, good Sir John, how like you Windsor wives? 110

See you these, husband? Do not these fairy oaks

Become the forest better than the town?

Ford. Now, sir, who's a cuckold now? Master Brook, Falstaff's a knave, a cuckoldly knave; here are his horns, Master Brook; and,
 Master Brook, he hath enjoyed nothing of 115
 Ford's but his buck-basket, his cudgel, and twenty pounds of money, which must be paid to Master Brook. His horses are arrested for it, Master Brook.

Mrs. Ford. Sir John, we have had ill luck; 120 we could never meet. I will never take you for my love again; but I will always count you my deer.

Fal. I do begin to perceive that I am made
 an ass. 125

Ford. Ay, and an ox too; both the proofs are extant.

Fal. And these are not fairies? I was three or four times in the thought they were not fairies; and yet the guiltiness of my mind, the sudden surprise of my powers, drove the 130 grossness of the popery into a receiv'd belief, in despite of the teeth of all rhyme and reason, that they were fairies. See now how wit may be made a Jack-a-Lent, when 't is upon ill employment! 135

Evans. Sir John Falstaff, serve Got, and leave your desires, and fairies will not pinse
 you.

Ford. Well said, fairy Hugh.

Evans. And leave your jealousies too, I pray you. 140

Ford. I will never mistrust my wife again, till thou art able to woo her in good English.

Fal. Have I laid my brain in the sun and drier'd it, that it wants matter to prevent so gross o'erreaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welsh goat too? Shall I have a coxcomb 145 of frieze? 'T is time I were chok'd with a piece of toasted cheese.

Evans. Seese is not good to give putter; your belly is all putter. 149

Fal. "Seese" and "putter"! Have I liv'd to stand at the taunt of one that makes fritters of English? This is enough to be the decay of lust and late-walking through the realm.

Mrs. Page. Why, Sir John, do you think, though we would have thrust virtue out of our hearts by the head and shoulders, and 155 have given ourselves without scruple to hell, that ever the devil could have made you our delight?

Ford. What, a hodge-pudding? A bag of flax?

Mrs. Page. A puff'd man? 160
Page. Old, cold, wither'd, and of intolerable entrails?

Ford. And one that is as slanderous as Satan?

Page. And as poor as Job?

Ford. And as wicked as his wife? 165

Evans. And given to fornications, and to taverns, and sack, and wine, and metheglins, and to drinkings, and swearings and starings, pribles and prabbles? ¹⁸⁰

Fal. Well, I am your theme; you have the start of me. I am dejected; I am not able to answer the Welsh flannel. Ignorance itself is a plummet o'er me. Use me as you will.

Ford. Marry, sir, we'll bring you to Windsor, to one Master Brook, that you have cozen'd of money, to whom you should have been a pan-¹⁷⁶ der. Over and above that you have suffer'd, I think to repay that money will be a biting affliction.

Page. Yet be cheerful, knight. Thou shalt eat a posset to-night at my house; where I will desire thee to laugh at my wife, that ¹⁸⁰ now laughs at thee. Tell her Master Slender hath married her daughter.

Mrs. Page. [Aside.] Doctors doubt that. If Anne Page be my daughter, she is, by this, Doctor Caius' wife. ¹⁸⁶

Enter SLENDER.

Slen. Whoa, ho! ho, father Page!

Page. Son; how now! how now, son! have you dispatch'd? ¹⁸⁹

Slen. Dispatch'd! I'll make the best in Gloucestershire know on't. Would I were hang'd, la, else!

Page. Of what, son?

Slen. I came yonder at Eton to marry Mistress Anne Page, and she's a great lubberly boy. If it had not been i' the church, I ¹⁹⁶ would have swing'd him, or he should have swing'd me. If I did not think it had been Anne Page, would I might never stir!—and 't is a postmaster's boy.

Page. Upon my life, then, you took the wrong. ²⁰¹

Slen. What need you tell me that? I think so, when I took a boy for a girl. If I had been married to him, for all he was in woman's apparel, I would not have had him. ²⁰⁵

Page. Why, this is your own folly. Did not I tell you how you should know my daughter by her garments?

Slen. I went to her in white, and cried "mum," and she cri'd "budget," as Anne and I had appointed; and yet it was not ²¹⁰ Anne, but a postmaster's boy.

Mrs. Page. Good George, be not angry. I knew of your purpose; turn'd my daughter into green; and, indeed, she is now with the Doctor at the deanery, and there married. ²¹⁶

Enter CAIUS.

Caius. Vere is Mistress Page? By gar, I am cozened. I ha' married oon garsoon, a boy; oon pesant, by gar, a boy; it is not Anne Page. By gar, I am cozened. ²²⁰

Mrs. Page. Why, did you take her in green?

Caius. Ay, by gar, and 't is a boy. By gar, I'll raise all Windsor. [Exit.]

Ford. This is strange. Who hath got the right Anne? ²²⁵

Page. My heart misgives me. Here comes Master Fenton.

Enter FENTON and ANNE PAGE.

How now, Master Fenton!

Anne. Pardon, good father! good my mother, pardon!

Page. Now, mistress, how chance you went not with Master Slender? ²³¹

Mrs. Page. Why went you not with Master Doctor, maid?

Fent. You do amaze her. Hear the truth of it. You would have married her most shamefully, Where there was no proportion held in love, ²³⁵ The truth is, she and I, long since contracted, Are now so sure that nothing can dissolve us. The offence is holy that she hath committed; And this deceit loses the name of craft, Of disobedience, or unduteous title, ²⁴⁰ Since therein she doth evitate and shun A thousand irreligious cursed hours,

Which forced marriage would have brought upon her.

Ford. Stand not amaz'd; here is no remedy. In love the heavens themselves do guide the state; ²⁴⁵

Money buys lands, and wives are sold by fate.

Fal. I am glad, though you have ta'en a special stand to strike at me, that your arrow hath glanc'd.

Page. Well, what remedy? Fenton, heaven give thee joy!

What cannot be eschew'd must be embrac'd. ²⁵⁰

Fal. When night-dogs run, all sorts of deer are chas'd.

Mrs. Page. Well, I will muse no further. Master Fenton,

Heaven give you many, many merry days! Good husband, let us every one go home, ²⁵⁵

And laugh this sport o'er by a country fire; Sir John and all.

Ford. Let it be so. Sir John, To Master Brook you yet shall hold your word, For he to-night shall lie with Mistress Ford. [Exeunt.]

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING

MUCH ADO About Nothing was entered in the Stationers' Register on August 4 and again on August 24, 1600, and the quarto edition of the play appeared in the same year. Unless this comedy be regarded as the Love's Labour's Won of Palladis Tamia, it is not mentioned in Meres's list, and so probably did not exist in 1598. The title-page of the Quarto states that it had been already "sundry times publicly acted," so that 1599, the date most generally assigned, is not likely to be more than a year wrong either way.

The text of the First Folio was taken from a copy of the Quarto, which, judging from some changes in the stage directions, seems to have been used as a prompter's copy. The present text is based on the Quarto, with some few readings from the Folio and later editions.

The story of Hero and Claudio is derived from the twentieth Novel of Bandello, though it is by no means clear that Shakespeare had direct access to this, especially since there is no trace of an English translation. In Bandello the scene is laid in Messina at the close of a successful war; Don Pedro of Arragon appears as King Piero d' Aragona, and Leonato as Lionato de' Lionati; and the thread of the story is the same as in Shakespeare with these main exceptions: the villain is a disappointed lover of Hero's; there is no Margaret, the deceiving of the bridegroom, Timbreo, being accomplished merely by his being led to see a man enter a window in the heroine's home; the scene in the church, where Claudio casts off Hero, is lacking, the Italian lover sending a friend to the father to announce the breaking off of the match; Timbreo repents of his own accord of his hasty inference; and the dénouement is brought about by the remorse of the villain. Thus in Shakespeare's main plot the character and motive of Don John are quite different, the deceiving of Claudio is made more plausible, and the humors of Dogberry and Verges are introduced to undo the tangle. The French version of Bandello by Belleforest supplies nothing that is found in the English but lacking in the Italian, and there is no evidence of Shakespeare's having used the translation any more than the original. But a probable source for the scene at Hero's window has been found in the story of Ariodante and Ginevra in the fifth book of Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, translated into English in 1591 by Sir John Harington, who tells us that the incident had been stated to be historical. Further, Spenser narrated it in The Faerie Queene (book II, canto iv, stanza 17), omitting, however, the window as the scene of the deception; two other English renderings of the episode are recorded; and, finally, a play on the subject was acted before Queen Elizabeth in 1582. There is, therefore, no difficulty in supposing Shakespeare to have borrowed this detail.

Bandello's story forms the basis of several German and Dutch plays also, only one of which, Jacob Ayer's Die Schoene Phaenicia, need be mentioned here. This version has come through Belleforest and probably other intermediaries, and varies from both Bandello and Shakespeare in that the deception of the hero is accomplished by a man dressed to personate the heroine. It has been attempted, but without complete success, to show that both Ayer's play and Much ADO come from a lost English play. The presence of a humorous underplot in both, upon which stress has been laid, is deprived of significance by the marked dissimilarity of these plots and their characters.

The plot in which Beatrice and Benedick are the chief actors has not so far been found elsewhere. The similarity of their mutual relation to that of Rosaline and Biron in Love's Labour's Lost shows that Shakespeare had long had their particular kind of comedy in mind, and he may have invented the underplot to give them scope and to lighten the somewhat sombre story of Hero. On the other hand, it is quite possible that their prototypes may have already appeared in some play now lost, which Shakespeare recast in the present comedy. Traces of such a play have been evident to some scholars in the presence of Hero's mother, Innogen, in two stage directions, and in hints of a previous love affair between Beatrice and Benedick. Moreover, a play called "Benedicke and Betteris" is recorded as having been acted at the Princess Elizabeth's wedding in 1613, though Much ADO also occurs in the list, and no other play was given twice on that occasion. But these indications afford at most no more than a presumption in favor of the theory of an older play.

ACT I

SCENE I. [Before Leonato's house.]

Enter LEONATO, HERO, and BEATRICE, with a MESSENGER.

Leon. I learn in this letter that Don Pedro of Arragon comes this night to Messina.

Mess. He is very near by this. He was not three leagues off when I left him.

Leon. How many gentlemen have you lost in this action?

Mess. But few of any sort, and none of name.

Leon. A victory is twice itself when the achiever brings home full numbers. I find here that Don Pedro hath bestowed much honour on a young Florentine called Claudio.

Mess. Much deserv'd on his part and equally rememb'rd by Don Pedro. He hath borne himself beyond the promise of his age, doing, in the figure of a lamb, the feats of a lion. He hath indeed better bett'rd expectation than you must expect of me to tell you how.

Leon. He hath an uncle here in Messina will be very much glad of it.

Mess. I have already delivered him letters, and there appears much joy in him; even so much that joy could not show itself modest enough without a badge of bitterness.

Leon. Did he break out into tears?

Mess. In great measure.

Leon. A kind overflow of kindness. There are no faces truer than those that are so wash'd. How much better is it to weep at joy than to joy at weeping!

Beat. I pray you, is Signior Mountanto return'd from the wars or no?

Mess. I know none of that name, lady. There was none such in the army of any sort.

Leon. What is he that you ask for, niece?

Hero. My cousin means Signior Benedick of Padua.

Mess. O, he's return'd; and as pleasant as ever he was.

Beat. He set up his bills here in Messina and challeng'd Cupid at the flight; and my uncle's fool, reading the challenge, subscrib'd for Cupid, and challeng'd him at the bird-bolt. I pray you, how many hath he kill'd and eaten in these wars? But how many hath he kill'd? for indeed I promised to eat all of his killing.

Leon. Faith, niece, you tax Signior Benedick too much; but he'll be meet with you, I doubt it not.

Mess. He hath done good service, lady, in these wars.

Beat. You had musty victual, and he hath help to eat it. He is a very valiant trencherman; he hath an excellent stomach.

Mess. And a good soldier too, lady.

Beat. And a good soldier to a lady. But what is he to a lord?

Mess. A lord to a lord, a man to a man; stuff'd with all honourable virtues.

Beat. It is so, indeed; he is no less than a stuff'd man. But for the stuffing,—well, we are all mortal.

Leon. You must not, sir, mistake my niece. There is a kind of merry war betwixt Signior Benedick and her. They never meet but there's a skirmish of wit between them.

Beat. Alas! he gets nothing by that. In our last conflict four of his five wits went halting off, and now is the whole man govern'd with one; so that if he have wit enough to keep himself warm, let him bear it for a difference between himself and his horse; for it is all the wealth that he hath left, to be known a reasonable creature. Who is his companion now? He hath every month a new sworn brother.

Mess. Is't possible?

Beat. Very easily possible. He wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat; it ever changes with the next block.

Mess. I see, lady, the gentleman is not in your books.

Beat. No; an he were, I would burn my study. But, I pray you, who is his companion? Is there no young squarer now that will make a voyage with him to the devil?

Mess. He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio. 85

Beat. O Lord, he will hang upon him like a disease. He is sooner caught than the pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God help the noble Claudio! If he have caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand pounds ere 'a be cur'd.

Mess. I will hold friends with you, lady.

Beat. Do, good friend.

Leon. You will never run mad, niece.

Beat. No, not till a hot January.

Mess. Don Pedro is approach'd. 95

Enter DON PEDRO, CLAUDIO, BENEDICK, BALTHASAR, and JOHN the Bastard.

D. Pedro. Good Signior Leonato, are you come to meet your trouble? The fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

Leon. Never came trouble to my house in the likeness of your Grace, for trouble being gone, comfort should remain; but when you [100] depart from me, sorrow abides and happiness takes his leave.

D. Pedro. You embrace your charge too willingly. I think this is your daughter.

Leon. Her mother hath many times told me so. 105

Bene. Were you in doubt, sir, that you ask'd her?

Leon. Signior Benedick, no; for then were you a child. 109

D. Pedro. You have it full, Benedick. We may guess by this what you are, being a man. Truly, the lady fathers herself. Be happy, lady; for you are like an honourable father.

Bene. If Signior Leonato be her father, she would not have his head on her shoulders for all Messina, as like him as she is. 116

Beat. I wonder that you will still be talking, Signior Benedick. Nobody marks you.

Bene. What, my dear Lady Disdain! are you yet living? 120

Beat. Is it possible disdain should die while she hath such meet food to feed it as Signior Benedick? Courtesy itself must convert to disdain, if you come in her presence. 124

Bene. Then is courtesy a turncoat. But it is certain I am loved of all ladies, only you excepted; and I would I could find in my heart that I had not a hard heart, for, truly, I love none.

Beat. A dear happiness to women; they would else have been troubled with a pernicious suitor. I thank God and my cold blood, I [130] am of your humour for that. I had rather hear my dog bark at a crow than a man swear he loves me.

Bene. God keep your ladyship still in that mind! So some gentleman or other shall scape a predestinate scratch'd face. 136

Beat. Scratching could not make it worse, an 't were such a face as yours were.

Bene. Well, you are a rare parrot-teacher.

Beat. A bird of my tongue is better than a beast of yours. 141

Bene. I would my horse had the speed of your tongue, and so good a continuer. But keep your way, i' God's name; I have done.

Beat. You always end with a jade's trick; I know you of old. 146

D. Pedro. That is the sum of all, Leonato. Signior Claudio and Signior Benedick, my dear friend Leonato hath invited you all. I tell him we shall stay here at the least a month; and he heartily prays some occasion may detain [150] us longer. I dare swear he is no hypocrite, but prays from his heart.

Leon. If you swear, my lord, you shall not be forsown. [To Don John.] Let me bid you [155] welcome, my lord. Being reconciled to the Prince your brother, I owe you all duty.

D. John. I thank you. I am not of many words, but I thank you.

Leon. Please it your Grace lead on? 160

D. Pedro. Your hand, Leonato; we will go together. [Exit all except Benedick and Claudio.]

Claud. Benedick, didst thou note the daughter of Signior Leonato?

Bene. I noted her not; but I look'd on her. 165

Claud. Is she not a modest young lady?

Bene. Do you question me, as an honest man should do, for my simple true judgement; or would you have me speak after my custom, as being a professed tyrant to their sex? 170

Claud. No; I pray thee speak in sober judgement.

Bene. Why, i' faith, methinks she 's too low for a high praise, too brown for a fair praise and too little for a great praise; only this [175] commendation I can afford her, that were she other than she is, she were unhandsome; and being no other but as she is, I do not like her.

Claud. Thou thinkest I am in sport. I pray thee tell me truly how thou lik'st her. 180

Bene. Would you buy her, that you inquire after her?

Claud. Can the world buy such a jewel?

Bene. Yea, and a case to put it into. But speak you this with a sad brow, or do you play the flouting Jack, to tell us Cupid is a [185] good hare-finder and Vulcan a rare carpenter? Come, in what key shall a man take you, to go in the song?

Claud. In mine eye she is the sweetest lady that ever I look'd on. 190

Bene. I can see yet without spectacles and I see no such matter. There 's her cousin, an she were not possess'd with a fury, exceeds her as much in beauty as the first of May doth the last of December. But I hope you have no intent to turn husband, have you? 195

Claud. I would scarce trust myself, though I had sworn the contrary, if Hero would be my wife.

Bene. Is 't come to this? In faith, hath not the world one man but he will wear his cap with suspicion? Shall I never see a bachelor [200] of threescore again? Go to, i' faith, an thou wilt needs thrust thy neck into a yoke, wear the print of it, and sigh away Sundays. Look! Don Pedro is returned to seek you. 205

Re-enter DON PEDRO.

D. Pedro. What secret hath held you here, that you followed not to Leonato's?

Bene. I would your Grace would constrain me to tell.

D. Pedro. I charge thee on thy allegiance. 210

Bene. You hear, Count Claudio. I can be secret as a dumb man; I would have you think so; but, on my allegiance, mark you this, on my allegiance. He is in love. With who? Now that is your Grace's part. Mark how short his answer is: — With Hero, Leonato's short daughter. 215

Claud. If this were so, so were it utt' red.

Bene. Like the old tale, my lord: "It is not so, nor 't was not so, but, indeed, God forbid it should be so." 220

Claud. If my passion change not shortly, God forbid it should be otherwise.

D. Pedro. Amen, if you love her; for the lady is very well worthy.

Claud. You speak this to fetch me in, my lord. 225

D. Pedro. By my troth, I speak my thought.

Claud. And, in faith, my lord, I spoke mine.

Bene. And, by my two faiths and troths, my lord, I spoke mine.

Claud. That I love her, I feel. 230

D. Pedro. That she is worthy, I know.

Bene. That I neither feel how she should be loved nor know how she should be worthy, is the opinion that fire cannot melt out of me. I will die in it at the stake. 235

D. Pedro. Thou wast ever an obstinate heretic in the despite of beauty.

Claud. And never could maintain his part but in the force of his will. 239

Bene. That a woman conceived me, I thank her; that she brought me up, I likewise give her most humble thanks; but that I will have a recheat winded in my forehead, or hang my bugle in an invisible baldrick, all women shall pardon me. Because I will not do them the wrong to mistrust any, I will do myself the [245] right to trust none; and the fine is, for the which I may go the finer, I will live a bachelor.

D. Pedro. I shall see thee, ere I die, look pale with love. 250

Bene. With anger, with sickness, or with hunger, my lord, not with love. Prove that ever I lose more blood with love than I will get again with drinking, pick out mine eyes with a ballad-maker's pen and hang me up at the door of a brothel-house for the sign of blind Cupid. 255

D. Pedro. Well, if ever thou dost fall from this faith, thou wilt prove a notable argument.

Bene. If I do, hang me in a bottle like a cat and shoot at me; and he that hits me, let him be clapp'd on the shoulder, and called Adam. 261

D. Pedro. Well, as time shall try.

"In time the savage bull doth bear the yoke."

Bene. The savage bull may; but if ever the sensible Benedick bear it, pluck off the bull's [265] horns and set them in my forehead; and let me be vilely painted, and in such great letters as they write "Here is good horse to hire," let them signify under my sign, "Here you may see Benedick the married man." 270

Claud. If this should ever happen, thou wouldst be horn-mad.

D. Pedro. Nay, if Cupid have not spent all his quiver in Venice, thou wilt quake for this shortly.

Bene. I look for an earthquake too, then. 275

D. Pedro. Well, you will temporize with the hours. In the meantime, good Signior Benedick, repair to Leonato's; commend me to him, and tell him I will not fail him at supper; for indeed he hath made great preparation. 280

Bene. I have almost matter enough in me for such an embassage; and so I commit you —

Claud. To the tuition of God. From my house, if I had it, —

D. Pedro. The sixth of July. Your loving friend, Benedick. 289

Bene. Nay, mock not, mock not. The body of your discourse is sometime guarded with fragments, and the guards are but slightly basted on neither. Ere you flout old ends any further, examine your conscience; and so I leave you. [Exit.] 291

Claud. My liege, your Highness now may do me good.

D. Pedro. My love is thine to teach; teach it but how,

And thou shalt see how apt it is to learn

Any hard lesson that may do thee good. 295

Claud. Hath Leonato any son, my lord?

D. Pedro. No child but Hero; she's his only heir.

Dost thou affect her, Claudio?

Claud. O, my lord, When you went onward on this ended action, I look'd upon her with a soldier's eye, 300 That lik'd, but had a rougher task in hand Than to drive liking to the name of love.

But now I am return'd and that war-thoughts Have left their places vacant, in their rooms Come thronging soft and delicate desires, 305 All prompting me how fair young Hero is, Saying, I lik'd her ere I went to wars.

D. Pedro. Thou wilt be like a lover presently And tire the hearer with a book of words.

If thou dost love fair Hero, cherish it, 310 And I will break with her and with her father And thou shalt have her. Was't not to this end That thou began'st to twist so fine a story?

Claud. How sweetly you do minister to love, That know love's grief by his complexion! 315 But lest my liking might too sudden seem, I would have sav'd it with a longer treatise.

D. Pedro. What need the bridge much broader than the flood?

The fairest grant is the necessity.

Look, what will serve is fit: 't is once, thou lovest, 320

And I will fit thee with the remedy.

I know we shall have revelling to-night.

I will assume thy part in some disguise

And tell fair Hero I am Claudio,

And in her bosom I'll unclasp my heart ³²⁵
 And take her hearing prisoner with the force
 And strong encounter of my amorous tale;
 Then after to her father will I break;
 And the conclusion is, she shall be thine.
 In practice let us put it presently. [Exeunt. ³³⁰

[SCENE II. A room in Leonato's house.]

Enter LEONATO and ANTONIO, meeting.

Leon. How now, brother! Where is my cousin, your son? Hath he provided this music?

Ant. He is very busy about it. But, brother, I can tell you strange news that you yet dreamt not of. ⁵

Leon. Are they good?

Ant. As the event stamps them; but they have a good cover, they show well outward. The Prince and Count Claudio, walking in a thick-pleached alley in mine orchard, were ¹⁰ thus much overheard by a man of mine. The Prince discovered to Claudio that he loved my niece your daughter and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance; and if he found her accordant, he meant to take the present time by the top and instantly break with you of it. ¹⁵

Leon. Hath the fellow any wit that told you this?

Ant. A good sharp fellow. I will send for him; and question him yourself. ²⁰

Leon. No, no; we will hold it as a dream till it appear itself; but I will acquaint my daughter withal, that she may be the better prepared for an answer, if peradventure this be true. Go you and tell her of it. [Several persons cross ²⁵ the stage.] Cousins, you know what you have to do. O, I cry you mercy, friend; go you with me, and I will use your skill. Good cousin, have a care this busy time. [Exeunt.

[SCENE III. The same.]

Enter JOHN the Bastard and CONRADE.

Con. What the good-year, my lord! Why are you thus out of measure sad?

D. John. There is no measure in the occasion that breeds; therefore the sadness is without limit. ⁵

Con. You should hear reason.

D. John. And when I have heard it, what blessing brings it?

Con. If not a present remedy, at least a patient sufferance. ¹⁰

D. John. I wonder that thou, being, as thou say'st thou art, born under Saturn, goest about to apply a moral medicine to a mortifying mischief. I cannot hide what I am. I must be sad when I have cause, and smile at no man's jests; eat when I have stomach, and wait ¹⁵ for no man's leisure; sleep when I am drowsy, and tend on no man's business; laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour. ²⁰

Con. Yea, but you must not make the full show of this till you may do it without controlment. You have of late stood out against your brother, and he hath ta'en you newly into his grace; where it is impossible you should take true root but by the fair weather that you make yourself. It is needful that you frame ²⁵ the season for your own harvest.

D. John. I had rather be a canker in a hedge than a rose in his grace, and it better fits my blood to be disdain'd of all than to fashion a ³⁰ carriage to rob love from any. In this, though I cannot be said to be a flattering honest man, it must not be denied but I am a plain-dealing villain. I am trusted with a muzzle and enfranchis'd with a clog; therefore I have decreed ³⁵ not to sing in my cage. If I had my mouth, I would bite; if I had my liberty, I would do my liking. In the meantime let me be that I am and seek not to alter me.

Con. Can you make no use of your discontent? ⁴⁰

D. John. I make all use of it, for I use it only. Who comes here?

Enter BORACHIO.

What news, Borachio?

Bora. I came yonder from a great supper. The Prince your brother is royally entertained by Leonato; and I can give you intelligence of an intended marriage. ⁴⁷

D. John. Will it serve for any model to build mischief on? What is he for a fool that betroths himself to quietness? ⁵⁰

Bora. Marry, it is your brother's right hand.

D. John. Who? The most exquisite Claudio?

Bora. Even he.

D. John. A proper squire! And who, and who? Which way looks he? ⁵⁵

Bora. Marry, one Hero, the daughter and heir of Leonato.

D. John. A very forward March-chick! How came you to this? ⁶⁰

Bora. Being entertain'd for a perfumer, as I was smoking a musty room, comes me the Prince and Claudio, hand in hand, in sad conference. I whipt me behind the arras, and there heard it agreed upon that the Prince should woo Hero for himself, and having obtain'd her, give her to Count Claudio. ⁶⁵

D. John. Come, come, let us thither; this may prove food to my displeasure. That young start-up hath all the glory of my overthrow. If I can cross him any way, I bless myself every way. You are both sure, and will assist me? ⁷⁰

Con. To the death, my lord.

D. John. Let us to the great supper; their cheer is the greater that I am subdued. Would the cook were o' my mind! Shall we go prove what's to be done? ⁷⁵

Bora. We'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.

ACT II

[SCENE I. A hall in Leonato's house.]

Enter LEONATO, ANTONIO, HERO, BEATRICE, and a kinsman.

Leon. Was not Count John here at supper?

Ant. I saw him not.

Beat. How tartly that gentleman looks! I never can see him but I am heart-burn'd an hour after.

Hero. He is of a very melancholy disposition.

Beat. Were an excellent man that were made just in the midway between him and Benedick. The one is too like an image and says nothing, and the other too like my lady's eldest son, evermore tattling.

Leon. Then half Signior Benedick's tongue in Count John's mouth, and half Count John's melancholy in Signior Benedick's face, —

Beat. With a good leg and a good foot, uncle, and money enough in his purse, such a man would win any woman in the world, if 'a could get her good-will.

Leon. By my troth, niece, thou wilt never get thee a husband, if thou be so shrewd of thy tongue.

Ant. In faith, she's too curst.

Beat. Too curst is more than curst. I shall lessen God's sending that way; for it is said, "God sends a curst cow short horns;" but to a cow too curst he sends none.

Leon. So, by being too curst, God will send you no horns.

Beat. Just, if he send me no husband; for the which blessing I am at him upon my knees every morning and evening. Lord, I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face! I had rather lie in the woollen.

Leon. You may light on a husband that hath no beard.

Beat. What should I do with him? Dress him in my apparel and make him my waiting-gentlewoman? He that hath a beard is more than a youth, and he that is more than a youth is not for me, and he that is less than a man, I am not for him; therefore I will even take sixpence in earnest of the bear-ard, and lead his apes into hell.

Leon. Well, then, go you into hell?

Beat. No, but to the gate; and there will the devil meet me, like an old cuckold, with horns on his head, and say, "Get you to heaven, Beatrice, get you to heaven; here's no place for you maids;" so deliver I up my apes, and away to Saint Peter for the heavens. He shows me where the bachelors sit, and there live we as merry as the day is long.

Ant. [To Hero.] Well, niece, I trust you will be rul'd by your father.

Beat. Yes, faith; it is my cousin's duty to make curtsy and say, "Father, as it please you." But yet for all that, cousin, let him be a handsome fellow, or else make another curtsy and say, "Father, as it please me."

Leon. Well, niece, I hope to see you one day fitted with a husband.

Beat. Not till God make men of some other metal than earth. Would it not grieve a woman to be overmaster'd with a piece of valiant dust? to make an account of her life to a clod of wayward marl? No, uncle, I'll none. Adam's sons are my brethern; and, truly, I hold it a sin to match in my kindred.

Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you. If the Prince do solicit you in that kind, you know your answer.

Beat. The fault will be in the music, cousin, if you be not woo'd in good time. If the Prince be too important, tell him there is measure in every thing and so dance out the answer. For, hear me, Hero: wooing, wedding, and repenting, is as a Scotch jig, a measure, and a cinque pace; the first suit is hot and hasty, like a Scotch jig, and full as fantastical; the wedding, mannerly-modest, as a measure, full of state and anticentry; and then comes repentance and, with his bad legs, falls into the cinque pace faster and faster, till he sink into his grave.

Leon. Cousin, you apprehend passing shrewdly.

Beat. I have a good eye, uncle; I can see a church by daylight.

Leon. The revellers are entering, brother; make good room. — [All put on their masks.]

Enter DON PEDRO, CLAUDIO, BENEDICK, BALTHASAR, DON JOHN [BORACHIO, MARGARET, URSULA, and others, masked], with a drum.

D. Pedro. Lady, will you walk about with your friend?

Hero. So you walk softly and look sweetly and say nothing, I am yours for the walk; and especially when I walk away.

D. Pedro. With me in your company?

Hero. I may say so when I please.

D. Pedro. And when please you to say so?

Hero. When I like your favour; for God defend the lute should be like the case!

D. Pedro. My visor is Philemon's roof; within the house is Jove.

Hero. Why, then, your visor should be thatch'd.

D. Pedro. Speak low, if you speak love.

[Drawing her aside.]

Balth. Well, I would you did like me.

Marg. So would not I, for your own sake; for I have many ill qualities.

Balth. Which is one?

Marg. I say my prayers aloud.

Balth. I love you the better; the hearers may cry, Amen.

Marg. God match me with a good dancer!

Balth. Amen.

Marg. And God keep him out of my sight when the dance is done! Answer, clerk.

Balth. No more words; the clerk is answered.

Urs. I know you well enough; you are Signior Antonio.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. I know you by the wagging of your head.

Ant. To tell you true, I counterfeit him.

Urs. You could never do him so ill-well, unless you were the very man. Here's his dry hand up and down. You are he, you are he.

Ant. At a word, I am not.

Urs. Come, come, do you think I do not know you by your excellent wit? Can virtue hide itself? Go to, mum, you are he. Graces will appear, and there's an end.

Beat. Will you not tell me who told you so?

Bene. No, you shall pardon me. 151

Beat. Nor will you not tell me who you are?

Bene. Not now.

Beat. That I was disdainful, and that I had my good wit out of the "Hundred Merry Tales":—well, this was Signior Benedick that said so. 150

Bene. What's he?

Beat. I am sure you know him well enough.

Bene. Not I, believe me.

Beat. Did he never make you laugh? 140

Bene. I pray you, what is he?

Beat. Why, he is the Prince's jester, a very dull fool; only his gift is in devising impossible slanders. None but libertines delight in him, and the commendation is not in his wit but in his villainy; for he both pleases men and [145] angers them, and then they laugh at him and beat him. I am sure he is in the fleet; I would he had boarded me.

Bene. When I know the gentleman, I'll tell him what you say. 151

Beat. Do, do; he'll but break a comparison or two on me; which, peradventure not mark'd or not laugh'd at, strikes him into melancholy; and then there's a partridge wing saved, for the fool will eat no supper that night. [155] [Music.] We must follow the leaders.

Bene. In every good thing.

Beat. Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning. 160

[Dance. [Then] exeunt [all except Don John, Borachio, and Claudio].

D. John. Sure my brother is amorous on Hero and hath withdrawn her father to break with him about it. The ladies follow her and but one visor remains.

Bora. And that is Claudio. I know him by his bearing. 160

D. John. Are not you Signior Benedick?

Claud. You know me well; I am he.

D. John. Signior, you are very near my brother in his love. He is enamour'd on Hero. I pray you, dissuade him from her; she is [171] no equal for his birth. You may do the part of an honest man in it.

Claud. How know you he loves her?

D. John. I heard him swear his affection. 175

Bora. So did I too; and he swore he would marry her to-night.

D. John. Come, let us to the banquet.

[Exeunt Don John and Borachio.]

Claud. Thus answer I in name of Benedick, But hear these ill news with the ears of Claudio. 180

'Tis certain so; the Prince woos for himself.

Friendship is constant in all other things

Save in the office and affairs of love;

Therefore all hearts in love use their own tongues.

Let every eye negotiate for itself 185

And trust no agent; for beauty is a witch Against whose charms faith melteth into blood. This is an accident of hourly proof.

Which I mistrusted not. Farewell, therefore, Hero!

Re-enter BENEDICK.

Bene. Count Claudio? 190

Claud. Yea, the same.

Bene. Come, will you go with me?

Claud. Whither?

Bene. Even to the next willow, about your own business, county. What fashion will you wear the garland of? About your neck, [195] like an usurer's chain, or under your arm, like a lieutenant's scarf? You must wear it one way, for the Prince hath got your Hero.

Claud. I wish him joy of her. 200

Bene. Why, that's spoken like an honest drovier; so they sell bullocks. But did you think the Prince would have served you thus?

Claud. I pray you, leave me. 204

Bene. Ho! now you strike like the blind man. 'Twas the boy that stole your meat, and you'll beat the post.

Claud. If it will not be, I'll leave you. [Exit.]

Bene. Alas, poor hurt fowl! now will he creep into sedges. But that my Lady Beatrice should know me, and not know me! The [210] Prince's fool! Ha? It may be I go under that title because I am merry. Yea, but so I am apt to do myself wrong. I am not so reputed. It is the base, though bitter, disposition of Beatrice that puts the world into her person, and so [215] gives me out. Well, I'll be revenged as I may.

Re-enter DON PEDRO.

D. Pedro. Now, signior, where's the count? Did you see him? 219

Bene. Troth, my lord, I have played the part of Lady Fame. I found him here as melancholy as a lodge in a warren. I told him, and I think I told him true, that your Grace had got the good will of this young lady; and I off'erd him my company to a willow-tree, either to make him a garland, as being forsaken, or [225] to bind him up a rod, as being worthy to be whipp'd.

D. Pedro. To be whipp'd! What's his fault?

Bene. The flat transgression of a school-boy, who, being overjoyed with finding a birds' nest, shows it his companion, and he steals it. 231

D. Pedro. Wilt thou make a trust a transgression? The transgression is in the stealer.

Bene. Yet it had not been amiss the rod had been made, and the garland too; for the garland he might have worn himself, and the [235] rod he might have bestowed on you, who, as I take it, have stolen his birds' nest.

D. Pedro. I will but teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner. 240

Bene. If their singing answer your saying, by my faith, you say honestly.

D. Pedro. The Lady Beatrice hath a quarrel to you. The gentleman that danc'd with her told her she is much wrong'd by you. 245

Bene. O, she misus'd me past the endurance of a block! An oak but with one green leaf on it would have answered her. My very visor began to assume life and scold with her. She told me, not thinking I had been myself, that I was the Prince's jester, that I was duller ²⁵⁰ than a great thaw; huddling jest upon jest with such impossible conveyance upon me that I stood like a man at a mark, with a whole army shooting at me. She speaks poniards, and every word stabs. If her breath were as terrible as her terminations, there were no living near her; she would infect to the north star. I would not marry her, though she were endowed with all that Adam had left him before he transgress'd. She would have made Hercules have turn'd spit, yea, and have cleft his club to make the fire too. Come, talk not of her; you shall find her the infernal Ate in good apparel. I would to God some scholar would conjure her; for certainly while she is here, a man may live as quiet in hell as in ²⁵⁵ a sanctuary; and people sin upon purpose, because they would go thither; so, indeed, all disquiet, horror, and perturbation follows her.

Enter CLAUDIO, BEATRICE, HERO, and LEONATO.

D. Pedro. Look, here she comes. ²⁷⁰

Bene. Will your Grace command me any service to the world's end? I will go on the slightest errand now to the Antipodes that you can devise to send me on; I will fetch you a tooth-picker now from the furthest inch of Asia, bring you the length of Prester John's foot, ²⁷⁵ fetch you a hair off the great Cham's beard, do you any embassy to the Pigmies, rather than hold three words' conference with this harpy. You have no employment for me? ²⁸⁰

D. Pedro. None, but to desire your good company.

Bene. O God, sir, here's a dish I love not. I cannot endure my Lady Tongue. [Exit.]

D. Pedro. Come, lady, come; you have lost the heart of Signior Benedick. ²⁸⁵

Beat. Indeed, my lord, he lent it me awhile; and I gave him use for it, a double heart for his single one. Marry, once before he won it of me with false dice, therefore your Grace may well say I have lost it. ²⁹¹

D. Pedro. You have put him down, lady, you have put him down.

Beat. So I would not he should do me, my lord, lest I should prove the mother of fools. I have brought Count Claudio, whom you sent me to seek. ²⁹⁷

D. Pedro. Why, how now, count! wherefore are you sad?

Claud. Not sad, my lord. ³⁰⁰

D. Pedro. How then? Sick?

Claud. Neither, my lord.

Beat. The count is neither sad, nor sick, nor merry, nor well; but civil count, civil as an orange, and something of that jealous complexion. ³⁰⁶

D. Pedro. I' faith, lady, I think your blazon to be true; though, I'll be sworn, if he be so, his conceit is false. Here, Claudio, I have wooed in thy name, and fair Hero is won. I have broke with her father, and his good will obtained. Name the day of marriage, and God give thee joy! ³¹³

Leon. Count, take of me my daughter, and with her my fortunes. His Grace hath made the match, and all grace say Amen to it. ³¹⁵

Beat. Speak, count, 'tis your cue.

Claud. Silence is the perfectest herald of joy; I were but little happy, if I could say how much. Lady, as you are mine, I am yours. I give away myself for you and dote upon the exchange. ³²⁰

Beat. Speak, cousin; or, if you cannot, stop his mouth with a kiss, and let not him speak neither.

D. Pedro. In faith, lady, you have a merry heart. ³²⁵

Beat. Yea, my lord; I thank it, poor fool, it keeps on the windy side of care. My cousin tells him in his ear that he is in her heart.

Claud. And so she doth, cousin. ³²⁹

Beat. Good Lord, for alliance! Thus goes every one to the world but I, and I am sunburnt. I may sit in a corner and cry "Heigh-ho for a husband!"

D. Pedro. Lady Beatrice, I will get you one.

Beat. I would rather have one of your father's getting. Hath your Grace ne'er a ³³⁵ brother like you? Your father got excellent husbands, if a maid could come by them.

D. Pedro. Will you have me, lady?

Beat. No, my lord, unless I might have ³⁴⁰ another for working-days. Your Grace is too costly to wear every day. But, I beseech your Grace, pardon me; I was born to speak all mirth and no matter. ³⁴⁴

D. Pedro. Your silence most offends me, and to be merry best becomes you; for, out o' question, you were born in a merry hour.

Beat. No, sure, my lord, my mother cried; but then there was a star danc'd, and under that was I born. Cousins, God give you joy! ³⁵⁰

Leon. Niece, will you look to those things I told you of?

Beat. I cry you mercy, uncle. By your Grace's pardon. [Exit.]

D. Pedro. By my troth, a pleasant-spirited lady. ³⁵⁶

Leon. There's little of the melancholy element in her, my lord. She is never sad but when she sleeps, and not ever sad then; for I have heard my daughter say, she hath often dreamt of unhappiness and wak'd herself with laughing. ³⁶¹

D. Pedro. She cannot endure to hear tell of a husband.

Leon. O, by no means; she mocks all her wooers out of suit. ³⁶⁵

D. Pedro. She were an excellent wife for Benedick.

Leon. O Lord, my lord, if they were but a week married, they would talk themselves mad.

D. Pedro. County Claudio, when mean you to go to church? ³⁷¹

Claud. To-morrow, my lord. Time goes on crutches till love have all his rites.

Leon. Not till Monday, my dear son, which is hence a just seven-night; and a time too brief, too, to have all things answer my mind. ³⁷⁸

D. Pedro. Come, you shake the head at so long a breathing; but, I warrant thee, Claudio, the time shall not go dully by us. I will in the interim undertake one of Hercules' labours; ^[380] which is, to bring Signior Benedick and the Lady Beatrice into a mountain of affection the one with the other. I would fain have it a match, and I doubt not but to fashion it, if you three will but minister such assistance as I shall give you direction. ³⁸⁶

Leon. My lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights' watchings.

Claud. And I, my lord.

D. Pedro. And you too, gentle Hero?

Hero. I will do any modest office, my lord, to help my cousin to a good husband. ³⁹¹

D. Pedro. And Benedick is not the unhopefullest husband that I know. Thus far can I praise him: he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirm'd honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cousin, that she ^[395] shall fall in love with Benedick; and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedick that, in despite of his quick wit and his queasy stomach, he shall fall in love with Beatrice. If we can do this, Cupid is no longer an archer. ^[400] His glory shall be ours, for we are the only love-gods. Go in with me, and I will tell you my drift. ^[Exitunt.]

[SCENE II. The same.]

Enter [DON] JOHN and BORACHIO.

D. John. It is so; the Count Claudio shall marry the daughter of Leonato.

Bora. Yea, my lord; but I can cross it.

D. John. Any bar, any cross, any impediment will be medicinable to me. I am sick in dis- ^[5] pleasure to him, and whatsoever comes athwart his affection ranges evenly with mine. How canst thou cross this marriage?

Bora. Not honestly, my lord; but so covertly that no dishonesty shall appear in me. ¹⁰

D. John. Show me briefly how.

Bora. I think I told your lordship a year since, how much I am in the favour of Margaret, the waiting gentlewoman to Hero.

D. John. I remember. ¹⁵

Bora. I can, at any unseasonable instant of the night, appoint her to look out at her lady's chamber-window.

D. John. What life is in that, to be the death of this marriage? ²⁰

Bora. The poison of that lies in you to temper. Go you to the Prince your brother; spare not to tell him that he hath wronged his honour in marrying the renowned Claudio—whose estimation do you mightily hold up—to a contaminated stale, such a one as Hero. ²⁵

D. John. What proof shall I make of that?

Bora. Proof enough to misuse the Prince, to vex Claudio, to undo Hero, and kill Leonato. Look you for any other issue? ³⁰

D. John. Only to despise them, I will endeavour anything.

Bora. Go, then; find me a meet hour to draw Don Pedro and the Count Claudio alone; tell them that you know that Hero loves me; intend a kind of zeal both to the Prince and ^[35] Claudio, as,—in love of your brother's honour, who hath made this match, and his friend's reputation, who is thus like to be cozen'd with the semblance of a maid,—that you have discover'd thus. They will scarcely believe ^[40] this without trial. Offer them instances; which shall bear no less likelihood than to see me at her chamber-window, hear me call Margaret Hero, hear Margaret term me Claudio; and bring them to see this the very night before ^[45] the intended wedding,—for in the meantime I will so fashion the matter that Hero shall be absent,—and there shall appear such seeming truth of Hero's disloyalty, that jealousy shall be call'd assurance and all the preparation overthrown. ⁵¹

D. John. Grow this to what adverse issue it can, I will put it in practice. Be cunning in the working this, and thy fee is a thousand ducats.

Bora. Be you constant in the accusation, and my cunning shall not shame me. ⁵⁶

D. John. I will presently go learn their day of marriage. ^[Exitunt.]

[SCENE III. Leonato's orchard.]

Enter BENEDICK alone.

Bene. Boy!

[Enter BOY.]

Boy. Signior?

Bene. In my chamber-window lies a book; bring it hither to me in the orchard.

Boy. I am here already, sir. ^[Exit.]

Bene. I know that; but I would have thee hence, and here again. I do much wonder that one man, seeing how much another man is a fool when he dedicates his behaviours to love, will, after he hath laugh'd at such shallow ^[10] follies in others, become the argument of his own scorn by falling in love; and such a man is Claudio. I have known when there was no music with him but the drum and the fife; and now had he rather hear the tabor and the pipe. I have known when he would have ^[15] walk'd ten mile a-foot to see a good armour; and now will he lie ten nights awake, carving the fashion of a new doublet. He was wont to speak plain and to the purpose, like an honest man and a soldier; and now is he turn'd ^[20] orthography; his words are a very fantastical banquet, just so many strange dishes. May I be so converted and see with these eyes? I cannot tell; I think not. I will not be sworn but love may transform me to an oyster; but I'll ^[25] take my oath on it, till he have made an oyster of me, he shall never make me such a fool. One woman is fair, yet I am well; another is wise, yet I am well; another virtuous, yet I am well; but till all graces be in one woman, ^[30] one woman shall not come in my grace. Rich she shall be, that's certain; wise, or I'll none; virtuous, or I'll never cheapen her; fair, or I'll never look on her; mild, or come not near me; noble, or not I for an angel; of good discourse, an excellent musician, and her hair shall be of what colour it please God. Ha! the Prince and Monsieur Love! I will hide me in the arbour. [Withdraws.]

Enter DON PEDRO, CLAUDIO, and LEONATO.
Music [within].

D. Pedro. Come, shall we hear this music?

Claud. Yea, my good lord. How still the evening is, 40

As hush'd on purpose to grace harmony!

D. Pedro. See you where Benedick hath hid himself?

Claud. O, very well, my lord. The music ended,

We'll fit the kid-fox with a pennyworth.

Enter BALTHASAR with music.

D. Pedro. Come, Balthasar, we'll hear that song again. 45

Balth. O, good my lord, tax not so bad a voice

To slander music any more than once.

D. Pedro. It is the witness still of excellency To put a strange face on his own perfection.

I pray thee, sing, and let me woo no more. 50

Balth. Because you talk of wooing, I will sing;

Since want a wooer doth commence his suit

To her he thinks not worthy, yet he woos,

Yet will he swear he loves.

D. Pedro. Now, pray thee, come; 55

Or, if thou wilt hold longer argument,

Do it in notes.

Balth. Note this before my notes;

There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

D. Pedro. Why, these are very crotchets that he speaks;

Note, notes, forsooth, and nothing. [Air.]

Bene. Now, divine air! now is his soul 60 ravish'd! Is it not strange that sheeps' guts should hale souls out of men's bodies? Well, a horn for my money, when all's done.

THE SONG.

[Balth.] Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more, 65

Men were deceivers ever,

One foot in sea and one on shore,

To one thing constant never.

Then sigh not so, but let them go,

And be you blithe and bonny,

Converting all your sounds of woe 70

Into Hey nonny nonny.

Sing no more ditties, sing no moe,

Of dumps so dull and heavy;

The fraud of men was ever so, 75

Since summer first was leafy.

Then sigh not so, etc.

D. Pedro. By my troth, a good song.

Balth. And an ill singer, my lord.

D. Pedro. Ha, no, no, faith; thou sing'st well enough for a shift. 80

Bene. An he had been a dog that should have howl'd thus, they would have hang'd him; and I pray God his bad voice bode no mischief. I had as lief have heard the night-raven, come what plague could have come after it. 85

D. Pedro. Yea, marry; dost thou hear, Balthasar? I pray thee, get us some excellent music; for to-morrow night we would have it at the Lady Hero's chamber-window.

Balth. The best I can, my lord. 90

[Exit Balthasar.]

D. Pedro. Do so; farewell. Come hither, Leonato. What was it you told me of to-day, that your niece Beatrice was in love with Signior Benedick?

Claud. [Aside.] O, ay, stalk on, stalk on; the fowl sits. — I did never think that lady 95 would have loved any man.

Leon. No, nor I neither; but most wonderful that she should so dote on Signior Benedick, whom she hath in all outward behaviours seemed ever to abhor. 101

Bene. Is't possible? Sits the wind in that corner?

Leon. By my troth, my lord, I cannot tell what to think of it but that she loves him with an enraged affection. It is past the infinite 105 of thought.

D. Pedro. May be she doth but counterfeit.

Claud. Faith, like enough.

Leon. O God, counterfeit! There was never counterfeit of passion came so near the life of passion as she discovers it. 111

D. Pedro. Why, what effects of passion shows she?

Claud. Bait the hook well; this fish will bite.

Leon. What effects, my lord? She will sit 115 you, — you heard my daughter tell you how.

Claud. She did, indeed.

D. Pedro. How, how, I pray you? You amaze me; I would have thought her spirit had been invincible against all assaults of affection. 120

Leon. I would have sworn it had, my lord; especially against Benedick.

Bene. I should think this a gull, but that the white-bearded fellow speaks it. Knavery cannot, sure, hide himself in such reverence. 125

Claud. [Aside.] He hath ta'en the infection. Hold it up.

D. Pedro. Hath she made her affection known to Benedick?

Leon. No; and swears she never will. That's her torment. 130

Claud. 'Tis true, indeed; so your daughter says. "Shall I," says she, "that have so oft encount'ed him with scorn, write to him that I love him?" 135

Leon. This says she now when she is beginning to write to him; for she'll be up twenty times a night, and there will she sit in her smock till she have writ a sheet of paper. My daughter tells us all. 139

Claud. Now you talk of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty jest your daughter told us of.

Leon. O, when she had writ it and was reading it over, she found Benedick and Beatrice between the sheet?

Claud. That. 145

Leon. O, she tore the letter into a thousand halpence; railed at herself, that she should be so immodest to write to one that she knew would flout her. "I measure him," says she, "by my own spirit; if I should flout him, if he writ to me; yea, though I love him, I should." 151

Claud. Then down upon her knees she falls, weeps, sobs, beats her heart, tears her hair, prays, curses; "O sweet Benedick! God give me patience!" 155

Leon. She doth indeed, my daughter says so; and the ecstasy hath so much overborne her that my daughter is sometime afraid she will do a desperate outrage to herself. It is very true.

D. Pedro. It were good that Benedick knew of it by some other, if she will not discover it. 161

Claud. To what end? He would make but a sport of it and torment the poor lady worse.

D. Pedro. An he should, it were an alms to hang him. She's an excellent sweet lady; and, out of all suspicion, she is virtuous. 166

Claud. And she is exceeding wise.

D. Pedro. In every thing but in loving Benedick.

Leon. O, my lord, wisdom and blood combating in so tender a body, we have ten proofs to one that blood hath the victory. I am sorry for her, as I have just cause, being her uncle and her guardian. 174

D. Pedro. I would she had bestowed this dotage on me; I would have daff'd all other respects and made her half myself. I pray you, tell Benedick of it, and hear what 'a will say.

Leon. Were it good, think you? 179

Claud. Hero thinks surely she will die; for she says she will die, if he love her not, and she will die, ere she make her love known, and she will die, if he woo her, rather than she will bate one breath of her accustomed crossness. 184

D. Pedro. She doth well. If she should make tender of her love, 't is very possible he'll scorn it; for the man, as you know all, hath a contemptible spirit.

Claud. He is a very proper man.

D. Pedro. He hath indeed a good outward happiness. 191

Claud. Before God! and, in my mind, very wise.

D. Pedro. He doth indeed show some sparks that are like wit.

Claud. And I take him to be valiant. 195

D. Pedro. As Hector, I assure you; and in the managing of quarrels you may say he is wise, for either he avoids them with great discretion, or undertakes them with a most Christian-like fear. 200

Leon. If he do fear God, 'a must necessarily keep peace. If he break the peace, he ought to enter into a quarrel with fear and trembling.

D. Pedro. And so will he do; for the man doth fear God, howsoever it seems not in him by some large jests he will make. Well, [206] I am sorry for your niece. Shall we go seek Benedick, and tell him of her love?

Claud. Never tell him, my lord. Let her wear it out with good counsel. 210

Leon. Nay, that's impossible; she may wear her heart out first.

D. Pedro. Well, we will hear further of it by your daughter. Let it cool the while. I love Benedick well; and I could wish he would [215] modestly examine himself, to see how much he is unworthy so good a lady.

Leon. My lord, will you walk? Dinner is ready.

Claud. [Aside.] If he do not dote on her upon this, I will never trust my expectation. 220

D. Pedro. [Aside.] Let there be the same net spread for her; and that must your daughter and her gentlewomen carry. The sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of another's dotage, and no such matter; that's the scene that I would see, which will be merely [225] a dumb-show. Let us send her to call him in to dinner. [Exeunt Don Pedro, Claudio, and Leonato].

Bene. [Coming forward.] This can be no trick; the conference was sadly borne. They have the truth of this from Hero. They seem to pity the lady; it seems her affections [230] have their full bent. Love me! why, it must be requited. I hear how I am censur'd. They say I will bear myself proudly, if I perceive the love come from her; they say too that she will rather die than give any sign of affection. [235] I did never think to marry. I must not seem proud. Happy are they that hear their detractions and can put them to mending. They say the lady is fair; 't is a truth, I can bear them witness; and virtuous; 't is so, I cannot re- [240] prove it; and wise, but for loving me; by my troth, it is no addition to her wit, nor no great argument of her folly, for I will be horribly in love with her. I may chance have some odd quirks and remnants of wit broken on me, because I have rail'd so long against marriage; [245] but doth not the appetite alter? A man loves the meat in his youth that he cannot endure in his age. Shall quips and sentences and these paper bullets of the brain awe a man from the career of his humour? No, the world must [250] be peopled. When I said I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till I were married. Here comes Beatrice. By this day! she's a fair lady. I do spy some marks of love in her. 255

Enter BEATRICE.

Beat. Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner.

Bene. Fair Beatrice, I thank you for your pains.

Beat. I took no more pains for those thanks than you take pains to thank me. If it had been painful, I would not have come. 261

Bene. You take pleasure then in the message?

Beat. Yea, just so much as you may take upon a knife's point and choke a daw withal. You have no stomach, signior? Fare you well.

Bene. Ha! "Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner;" there's a double meaning in that. "I took no more pains for those thanks than you took pains to thank me;" that's as much as to say, "Any pains that I take for you is as easy as thanks." [270] If I do not take pity of her, I am a villain; if I do not love her, I am a Jew. I will go get her picture. [Exit.]

ACT III

[SCENE I. Leonato's garden.]

Enter HERO and two Gentlewomen, MARGARET and URSULA.

Hero. Good Margaret, run thee to the parlour.

There shalt thou find my cousin Beatrice Proposing with the Prince and Claudio. Whisper her ear and tell her, I and Ursula Walk in the orchard and our whole discourse

Is all of her. Say that thou overheard'st us, And bid her steal into the peached bower, Where honeysuckles, ripened by the sun, Forbid the sun to enter, like favourites Made proud by princes, that advance their pride

Against that power that bred it. There will she hide her,

To listen our propose. This is thy office; Bear thee well in it and leave us alone.

Marg. I'll make her come, I warrant you, presently. [Exit.]

Hero. Now, Ursula, when Beatrice doth come,

As we do trace this alley up and down, Our talk must only be of Benedick.

When I do name him, let it be thy part To praise him more than ever man did merit.

My talk to thee must be how Benedick Is sick in love with Beatrice. Of this matter

Is little Cupid's crafty arrow made, That only wounds by hearsay. Now begin;

For look where Beatrice, like a lapwing, runs

Close by the ground, to hear our conference. 25

Enter BEATRICE [behind].

Urs. The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish

Cut with her golden oars the silver stream, And greedily devour the treacherous bait.

So angle we for Beatrice, who even now Is couched in the woodbine coverture.

Fear you not my part of the dialogue. 30

Hero. Then go we near her, that her ear lose nothing

Of the false sweet bait that we lay for it. [Approaching the bower.]

No, truly, Ursula, she is too disdainful.

I know her spirits are as coy and wild As haggards of the rock. 35

Urs. But are you sure That Benedick loves Beatrice so entirely?

Hero. So says the Prince and my new-troth'd lord.

Urs. And did they bid you tell her of it, madam?

Hero. They did entreat me to acquaint her of it; 40

But I persuaded them, if they lov'd Benedick, To wish him wrestle with affection, And never to let Beatrice know of it.

Urs. Why did you so? Doth not the gentleman

Deserve as full as fortunate a bed As ever Beatrice shall couch upon? 45

Hero. O god of love! I know he doth deserve As much as may be yielded to a man;

But Nature never fram'd a woman's heart Of prouder stuff than that of Beatrice. 50

Disdain and scorn ride sparkling in her eyes, Misprising what they look on, and her wit

Values itself so highly that to her All matter else seems weak. She cannot love,

Nor take no shape nor project of affection, 55 She is so self-endear'd.

Urs. Sure, I think so; And therefore certainly it were not good

She knew his love, lest she'll make sport at it. Hero. Why, you speak truth. I never yet saw man, How wise, how noble, young, how rarely featur'd, 60 But she would spell him backward. If fair-fac'd,

She would swear the gentleman should be her sister;

If black, why, Nature, drawing of an antic, Made a foul blot; if tall, a lance ill-headed;

If low, an agate very vilely cut; 65 If speaking, why, a vane blown with all winds;

If silent, why, a block moved with none. So turns she every man the wrong side out,

And never gives to truth and virtue that Which simpleness and merit purchaseth. 70

Urs. Sure, sure, such carping is not commendable.

Hero. No, not to be so odd and from all fashions

As Beatrice is, cannot be commendable. But who dare tell her so? If I should speak,

She would mock me into air; O, she would laugh me 75

Out of myself, press me to death with wit. Therefore let Benedick, like cover'd fire, Consume away in sighs, waste inwardly. It were a better death than die with mocks,

Which is as bad as die with tickling. 80

Urs. Yet tell her of it; hear what she will say.

Hero. No; rather I will go to Benedick And counsel him to fight against his passion;

And, truly, I'll devise some honest slanders To stain my cousin with. One doth not know 85

How much an ill word may empoison liking. Urs. O, do not do your cousin such a wrong.

She cannot be so much without true judgement —

Having so swift and excellent a wit
As she is priz'd to have — as to refuse 90
So rare a gentleman as Signior Benedick.

Hero. He is the only man of Italy,
Always excepted my dear Claudio.

Urs. I pray you, be not angry with me,
madam,

Speaking my fancy; Signior Benedick, 95
For shape, for bearing, argument, and valour,
Goes foremost in report through Italy.

Hero. Indeed, he hath an excellent good
name.

Urs. His excellence did earn it, ere he had
it.

When are you married, madam? 100

Hero. Why, every day, to-morrow. Come, go in;

I'll show thee some attires, and have thy counsel

Which is the best to furnish me to-morrow.

Urs. [Aside.] She's lim'd, I warrant you.
We have caught her, madam.

Hero. [Aside.] If it proves so, then loving goes by haps. 105

Some Cupid kills with arrows, some with traps.
[Exeunt Hero and Ursula.]

Beat. [Coming forward.] What fire is in mine ears? Can this be true?

Stand I condemn'd for pride and scorn so much?

Contempt, farewell! and maiden pride, adieu!
No glory lives behind the back of such. 110

And, Benedick, love on; I will requite thee,
Taming my wild heart to thy loving hand.

If thou dost love, my kindness shall incite
thee

To bind our loves up in a holy band;
For others say thou dost deserve, and I 115
Believe it better than reportingly. [Exit.]

[SCENE II. A room in Leonato's house.]

Enter DON PEDRO, CLAUDIO, BENEDICK, and LEONATO.

D. Pedro. I do but stay till your marriage be consummate, and then go I toward Arragon.

Claud. I'll bring you thither, my lord, if you'll vouchsafe me.

D. Pedro. Nay, that would be as great a soil [5 in the new gloss of your marriage as to show a child his new coat and forbid him to wear it.
I will only be bold with Benedick for his company;
for, from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot, he is all mirth. He hath twice or thrice cut Cupid's bowstring, and the little [11
hangman dare not shoot at him. He hath a heart as sound as a bell and his tongue is the clapper, for what his heart thinks his tongue speaks.

Bene. Gallants, I am not as I have been. 15

Leon. So say I; methinks you are sadder.

Claud. I hope he be in love.

D. Pedro. Hang him, truant! There's no true drop of blood in him, to be truly touch'd with love. If he be sad, he wants money. 20

Bene. I have the toothache.

D. Pedro. Draw it.

Bene. Hang it!

Claud. You must hang it first, and draw it afterwards. 25

D. Pedro. What! sigh for the toothache?

Leon. Where is but a humour or a worm.

Bene. Well, every one can master a grief but he that has it.

Claud. Yet say I, he is in love. 30

D. Pedro. There is no appearance of fancy in him, unless it be a fancy that he hath to strange disguises; as, to be a Dutchman today, a Frenchman to-morrow, or in the shape of two countries at once, as a German from the waist downward, all slops, and a Spaniard [35 from the hip upward, no doublet. Unless he have a fancy to this foolery, as it appears he hath, he is no fool for fancy, as you would have it appear he is. 39

Claud. If he be not in love with some woman, there is no believing old signs. 'A brushes his hat o' mornings; what should that bode?

D. Pedro. Hath any man seen him at the barber's?

Claud. No, but the barber's man hath been [45 seen with him, and the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis-balls.

Leon. Indeed, he looks younger than he did,
by the loss of a beard.

D. Pedro. Nay, 'a rubs himself with civet.
Can you smell him out by that? 51

Claud. That's as much as to say, the sweet youth's in love.

D. Pedro. The greatest note of it is his melancholy. 55

Claud. And when was he wont to wash his face?

D. Pedro. Yea, or to paint himself? For the which, I hear what they say of him. 59

Claud. Nay, but his jesting spirit; which is now crept into a lute-string and now govern'd by stops.

D. Pedro. Indeed, that tells a heavy tale for him. Conclude, conclude he is in love.

Claud. Nay, but I know who loves him. 65

D. Pedro. That would I know too. I warrant, one that knows him not.

Claud. Yes, and his ill conditions; and, in despite of all, dies for him.

D. Pedro. She shall be buried with her face upwards. 71

Bene. Yet is this no charm for the toothache. Old signior, walk aside with me; I have studied eight or nine wise words to speak to you, which these hobby-horses must not hear. 75

[Exeunt Benedick and Leonato.]

D. Pedro. For my life, to break with him about Beatrice.

Claud. 'Tis even so. Hero and Margaret have by this played their parts with Beatrice;
and then the two bears will not bite one another when they meet. 81

Enter JOHN the Bastard.

D. John. My lord and brother, God save you!

D. Pedro. Good den, brother.

D. John. If your leisure serv'd, I would speak with you. 85

D. Pedro. In private?

D. John. If it please you; yet Count Claudio may hear, for what I would speak of concerns him.

D. Pedro. What's the matter? 90

D. John. [To Claudio.] Means your lordship to be married to-morrow?

D. Pedro. You know he does.

D. John. I know not that, when he knows what I know. 95

Claud. If there be any impediment, I pray you discover it.

D. John. You may think I love you not; let that appear hereafter, and aim better at me by that I now will manifest. For my brother, I [100] think he holds you well, and in dearthness of heart hath help to effect your ensuing marriage;—surely suit ill spent and labour ill bestowed.

D. Pedro. Why, what's the matter?

D. John. I came hither to tell you; and, [105] circumstances short'ned, for she has been too long a talking of, the lady is disloyal.

Claud. Who? Hero?

D. John. Even she; Leonato's Hero, your Hero, every man's Hero. 110

Claud. Disloyal?

D. John. The word is too good to paint out her wickedness. I could say she were worse; think you of a worse title, and I will fit her to it. Wonder not till further warrant. Go but with me to-night; you shall see her chamber-window ent'red, even the night before her wedding-day. If you love her then, to-morrow wed her; but it would better fit your honour to change your mind.

Claud. May this be so? 120

D. Pedro. I will not think it.

D. John. If you dare not trust that you see, confess not that you know. If you will follow me, I will show you enough; and when you have seen more and heard more, proceed accordingly. 125

Claud. If I see any thing to-night why I should not marry her to-morrow, in the congregation, where I should wed, there will I shame her.

D. Pedro. And, as I wooed for thee to obtain her, I will join with thee to disgrace her. 130

D. John. I will disparage her no farther till you are my witnesses. Bear it coldly but till midnight, and let the issue show itself.

D. Pedro. O day untowardly turned!

Claud. O mischief strangely thwarting! 135

D. John. O plague right well prevented! So will you say when you have seen the sequel.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. A street.]

Enter DOGBERRY and his companion [VERGES] with the WATCH.

Dog. Are you good men and true?

Verg. Yea, or else it were pity but they should suffer salvation, body and soul.

Dog. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should have any allegiance in them, being chosen for the Prince's watch. 6

Verg. Well, give them their charge, neighbour Dogberry.

Dog. First, who think you the most desartless man to be constable? 10

1. Watch. Hugh Oatcake, sir, or George Seacole; for they can write and read.

Dog. Come hither, neighbour Seacole. God hath bless'd you with a good name. To be a well-favoured man is the gift of fortune, but to write and read comes by nature. 16

2. Watch. Both which, master constable,—

Dog. You have: I knew it would be your answer. Well, for your favour, sir, why, give God thanks, and make no boast of it; and for your writing and reading, let that appear when there is no need of such vanity. You are thought here to be the most senseless and fit man for the constable of the watch; therefore bear you the lantern. This is your charge: you shall comprehend all vagrom [20] men; you are to bid any man stand, in the Prince's name.

2. Watch. How if 'a will not stand?

Dog. Why, then, take no note of him, but let him go; and presently call the rest of the watch together, and thank God you are rid of a knave. 31

Verg. If he will not stand when he is bidden, he is none of the Prince's subjects.

Dog. True, and they are to meddle with none but the Prince's subjects. You shall also [35] make no noise in the streets; for for the watch to babble and to talk is most tolerable and not to be endured.

[2.] Watch. We will rather sleep than talk; we know what belongs to a watch. 40

Dog. Why, you speak like an ancient and most quiet watchman, for I cannot see how sleeping should offend; only, have a care that your bills be not stolen. Well, you are to call at all the ale-houses, and bid those that are drunk get them to bed. 46

[2.] Watch. How if they will not?

Dog. Why, then, let them alone till they are sober. If they make you not then the better answer, you may say they are not the men you took them for. 51

[2.] Watch. Well, sir.

Dog. If you meet a thief, you may suspect him, by virtue of your office, to be no true man; and, for such kind of men, the less you meddle or make with them, why, the more is for your honesty. 56

[2.] Watch. If we know him to be a thief, shall we not lay hands on him?

Dog. Truly, by your office, you may; but I think they that touch pitch will be defil'd. The most peaceable way for you, if you do [60] take a thief, is to let him show himself what he is and steal out of your company.

Verg. You have been always called a merciful man, partner.

Dog. Truly, I would not hang a dog by my will, much more a man who hath any honesty in him.

Verg. If you hear a child cry in the night, you must call to the nurse and bid her still it. 70

[2.] Watch. How if the nurse be asleep and will not hear us?

Dog. Why, then, depart in peace, and let the child wake her with crying; for the ewe that will not hear her lamb when it baes will never answer a calf when he bleats. 76

Verg. 'Tis very true.

Dog. This is the end of the charge: you, constable, are to present the Prince's own person. If you meet the Prince in the night, you may stay him. 81

Verg. Nay, by 'r lady, that I think 'a cannot.

Dog. Five shillings to one on't, with any man that knows the statutes, he may stay him; marry, not without the Prince be willing; [85] for, indeed, the watch ought to offend no man, and it is an offence to stay a man against his will.

Verg. By 'r lady, I think it be so. 89

Dog. Ha, ah ha! Well, masters, good night. An there be any matter of weight chances, call up me. Keep your fellows' counsels and your own, and good night. Come, neighbour.

[2.] Watch. Well, masters, we hear our charge. Let us go sit here upon the church-bench till two, and then all to bed. 96

Dog. One word more, honest neighbours. I pray you, watch about Signior Leonato's door; for the wedding being there to-morrow, there is a great coil to-night. Adieu! Be vigilant, I beseech you. 101

[Exeunt [Dogberry and Verges].]

Enter BORACHIO and CONRADE.

Bora. What, Conrade!

Watch. [Aside.] Peace! stir not.

Bora. Conrade, I say!

Con. Here, man; I am at thy elbow. 105

Bora. Mass, and my elbow itch'd; I thought there would a scab follow.

Con. I will owe thee an answer for that; and now forward with thy tale.

Bora. Stand thee close, then, under this [110] pent-house, for it drizzles rain; and I will, like a true drunkard, utter all to thee.

Watch. [Aside.] Some treason, masters; yet stand close.

Bora. Therefore know I have earned of Don John a thousand ducats. 116

Con. Is it possible that any villainy should be so dear?

Bora. Thou shouldst rather ask if it were possible any villainy should be so rich; for when rich villains have need of poor ones, poor ones may make what price they will. 122

Con. I wonder at it.

Bora. That shows thou art unconfirm'd. Thou knowest that the fashion of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloak, is nothing to a man. 126

Con. Yes, it is apparel.

Bora. I mean, the fashion.

Con. Yes, the fashion is the fashion. 129

Bora. Tush! I may as well say the fool's the fool. But seest thou not what a deformed thief this fashion is?

Watch. [Aside.] I know that Deformed; 'a has been a vile thief this seven years. 'A goes up and down like a gentleman. I remember his name. 136

Bora. Didst thou not hear somebody?

Con. No; 't was the vane on the house.

Bora. Seest thou not, I say, what a deformed thief this fashion is, how giddily 'a turns about all the hot bloods between fourteen and [141] five-and-thirty, sometimes fashioning them like Pharaoh's soldiers in the reechy painting, sometime like god Bel's priests in the old church-window, sometime like the shaven Hercules in the smirch'd worm-eaten tapestry, where [145] his codpiece seems as massy as his club?

Con. All this I see; and I see that the fashion wears out more apparel than the man. But art not thou thyself giddy with the fashion too, that thou hast shifted out of thy tale into telling me of the fashion? 152

Bora. Not so, neither; but know that I have to-night wooed Margaret, the Lady Hero's gentlewoman, by the name of Hero. She leans me out at her mistress' chamber-window, bids [155] me a thousand times good night,—I tell this tale vilely:—I should first tell thee how the Prince, Claudio, and my master, planted and placed and possessed by my master Don John, saw afar off in the orchard this amiable encounter. 161

Con. And thought they Margaret was Hero?

Bora. Two of them did, the Prince and Claudio; but the devil my master knew she was Margaret; and partly by his oaths, [165] which first possess'd them, partly by the dark night, which did deceive them, but chiefly by my villainy, which did confirm any slander that Don John had made, away went Claudio enraged; swore he would meet her, as he was [170] appointed, next morning at the temple, and there, before the whole congregation, shame her with what he saw o'er night, and send her home again without a husband. 175

1. Watch. We charge you, in the Prince's name, stand!

2. Watch. Call up the right master constable. We have here recovered the most dangerous piece of lechery that ever was known in the commonwealth. 181

1. Watch. And one Deformed is one of them. I know him; 'a wears a lock.

Con. Masters, masters, —

2. Watch. You'll be made bring Deformed forth, I warrant you. 186

Con. Masters, —

[1. Watch.] Never speak. We charge you let us obey you to go with us.

Bora. We are like to prove a goodly commodity, being taken up of these men's bills. 191

Con. A commodity in question, I warrant you. Come, we'll obey you. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. Hero's apartment.]Enter HERO, MARGARET, and URSULA.Hero. Good Ursula, wake my cousin Beatrice, and desire her to rise.Urs. I will, lady.Hero. And bid her come hither.Urs. Well.Marg. Troth, I think your other rabato were better.Hero. No, pray thee, good Meg, I'll wear this.Marg. By my troth, 's not so good; and I warrant your cousin will say so.Hero. My cousin 's a fool, and thou art another. I'll wear none but this.Marg. I like the new tire within excellently, if the hair were a thought browner; and your gown 's a most rare fashion, i' faith. I saw the Duchess of Milan's gown that they praise so.Hero. O, that exceeds, they say.Marg. By my troth, 's but a night-gown in respect of yours: cloth o' gold, and cuts, and lac'd with silver, set with pearls, down sleeves, side sleeves, and skirts, round underborne with a bluish tinsel; but for a fine, quaint, graceful, and excellent fashion, yours is worth ten on 't.Hero. God give me joy to wear it! for my heart is exceeding heavy.Marg. 'T will be heavier soon by the weight of a man.Hero. Fie upon thee! art not asham'd?Marg. Of what, lady? Of speaking honourably? Is not marriage honourable in a beggar? Is not your lord honourable without marriage? I think you would have me say, "saving your reverence, a husband." An bad thinking do not wrest true speaking, I'll offend nobody. Is there any harm in "the heavier for a husband"? None, I think, an it be the right husband and the right wife; otherwise 't is light, and not heavy. Ask my Lady Beatrice else; here she comes.Enter BEATRICE.Hero. Good morrow, coz.Beat. Good morrow, sweet Hero.Hero. Why, how now? Do you speak in the sick tune?Beat. I am out of all other tune, methinks.Marg. Clap 's into "Light o' love"; that goes without a burden. Do you sing it, and I'll dance it.Beat. Ye light o' love with your heels! Then, if your husband have stables enough, you'll see he shall lack no barns.Marg. O illegitimate construction! I scorn that with my heels.Beat. 'T is almost five o'clock, cousin; 't is time you were ready. By my troth, I am exceeding ill. Heigh-ho!Marg. For a hawk, a horse, or a husband?Beat. For the letter that begins them all, H.Marg. Well, an you be not turn'd Turk, there 's no more sailing by the star.Beat. What means the fool, trow?Marg. Nothing I; but God send every one their heart's desire!Hero. These gloves the count sent me; they are an excellent perfume.Beat. I am stuff'd, cousin; I cannot smell.Marg. A maid, and stuff'd! There 's goodly catching of cold.Beat. O, God help me! God help me! How long have you profess'd apprehension?Marg. Ever since you left it. Doth not my wit become me rarely?Beat. It is not seen enough, you should wear it in your cap. By my troth, I am sick.Marg. Get you some of this distill'd Carduus Benedictus, and lay it to your heart. It is the only thing for a qualm.Hero. There thou prick'st her with a thistle.Beat. Benedictus! why Benedictus? You have some moral in this Benedictus.Marg. Moral! no, by my troth, I have no moral meaning; I meant, plain holy-thistle. You may think perchance that I think you are in love. Nay, by 'r lady, I am not such a fool to think what I list, nor I list not to think what I can, nor indeed I cannot think, if I would think my heart out of thinking, that you are in love or that you will be in love or that you can be in love. Yet Benedick was such another, and now is he become a man. He swore he would never marry, and yet now, in despite of his heart, he eats his meat without grudging; and how you may be converted, I know not, but methinks you look with your eyes as other women do.Beat. What pace is this that thy tongue keeps?Marg. Not a false gallop.Re-enter URSULA.Urs. Madam, withdraw; the Prince, the count, Signior Benedick, Don John, and all the gallants of the town, are come to fetch you to church.Hero. Help to dress me, good coz, good Meg, good Ursula.[SCENE V. Another room in Leonato's house.]Enter LEONATO, with the Constable [DOGBERRY] and the Headborough [VERGES].Leon. What would you with me, honest neighbour?Dog. Marry, sir, I would have some confidence with you that discerns you nearly.Leon. Brief, I pray you; for you see it is a busy time with me.Dog. Marry, this it is, sir.Verg. Yes, in truth it is, sir.Leon. What is it, my good friends?Dog. Goodman Verges, sir, speaks a little off the matter; an old man, sir, and his wits are not so blunt as, God help, I would desire they were; but, in faith, honest as the skin between his brows.Verg. Yes, I thank God I am as honest as any man living that is an old man and no honestest than I.

Dog. Comparisons are odorous. Palabras, neighbour Verges.

Leon. Neighbours, you are tedious. 20

Dog. It pleases your worship to say so, but we are the poor Duke's officers; but truly, for mine own part, if I were as tedious as a king, I could find in my heart to bestow it all of your worship. 25

Leon. All thy tediousness on me, ah?

Dog. Yea, an't were a thousand pound more than 't is; for I hear as good exclamation on your worship as of any man in the city; and though I be but a poor man, I am glad to hear it.

Verg. And so am I. 31

Leon. I would fain know what you have to say.

Verg. Marry, sir, our watch to-night, excepting your worship's presence, ha' ta'en a couple of as arrant knaves as any in Messina. 35

Dog. A good old man, sir; he will be talking: as they say, When the age is in, the wit is out. God help us! It is a world to see. Well said, i' faith, neighbour Verges. Well, God's a good man; an two men ride of a horse, one must ride behind. An honest soul, i' faith, sir; by 40 my troth he is, as ever broke bread; but God is to be worshipp'd; all men are not alike; alas, good neighbour!

Leon. Indeed, neighbour, he comes too short of you. 46

Dog. Gifts that God gives.

Leon. I must leave you.

Dog. One word, sir. Our watch, sir, have indeed comprehended two aspiring persons, and we would have them this morning examined before your worship. 53

Leon. Take their examination yourself and bring it me. I am now in great haste, as it may appear unto you. 55

Dog. It shall be suffigance.

Leon. Drink some wine ere you go. Fare you well.

[Enter a MESSENGER.]

Mess. My lord, they stay for you to give your daughter to her husband. 60

Leon. I'll wait upon them; I am ready.

[Exit Leonato and Messenger.]

Dog. Go, good partner, go, get you to Francis Seacole; bid him bring his pen and inkhorn to the gaol. We are now to examination these men.

Verg. And we must do it wisely. 65

Dog. We will spare for no wit, I warrant you. Here's that shall drive some of them to a non-come; only get the learned writer to set down our excommunication, and meet me at the gaol. 70

[Exit.]

ACT IV

[SCENE I. A church.]

Enter DON PEDRO, [JOHN the] Bastard, LEONATO, FRIAR FRANCIS, CLAUDIO, BENEDICK, HERO, BEATRICE [and attendants].

Leon. Come, Friar Francis, be brief; only to the plain form of marriage, and you shall recollect their particular duties afterwards.

Friar. You come hither, my lord, to marry this lady. 5

Claud. No.

Leon. To be married to her. Friar, you come to marry her.

Friar. Lady, you come hither to be married to this count. 10

Hero. I do.

Friar. If either of you know any inward impediment why you should not be conjoined, I charge you, on your souls, to utter it.

Claud. Know you any, Hero? 15

Hero. None, my lord.

Friar. Know you any, count?

Leon. I dare make his answer, none.

Claud. O, what men dare do! What men may do! What men daily do, not knowing what they do! 21

Bene. How now! interjections? Why, then, some be of laughing, as, ah, ha, he!

Claud. Stand thee by, friar. Father, by your leave.

Will you with free and unconstrained soul 25
Give me this maid, your daughter?

Leon. As freely, son, as God did give her me. whose worth

May counterpoise this rich and precious gift? 30
D. Pedro. Nothing, unless you render her again.

Claud. Sweet Prince, you learn me noble thankfulness.

There, Leonato, take her back again.
Give not this rotten orange to your friend;
She's but the sign and semblance of her honour.

Behold how like a maid she blushes here! 35
O, what authority and show of truth

Can cunning sin cover itself withal!
Comes not that blood as modest evidence

To witness simple virtue? Would you not 40
swear,

All you that see her, that she were a maid, 40
By these exterior shows? But she is none.

She knows the heat of a luxurious bed;
Her blush is guiltiness, not modesty.

Leon. What do you mean, my lord?

Claud. Not to be married;

Not to knit my soul to an approved wanton. 45

Leon. Dear my lord, if you, in your own proof,

Have vanquish'd the resistance of her youth,
And made defeat of her virginity, —

Claud. I know what you would say. If I have known her,

You will say she did embrace me as a husband, 50

And so extenuate the 'forehand sin.

No, Leonato,
I never tempted her with word too large;

But, as a brother to his sister, show'd
Bashful sincerity and comely love. 55

Hero. And seem'd I ever otherwise to you?

Claud. Out on thee! Seeming! I will write against it:

You seem to me as Dian in her orb,
As chaste as is the bud ere it be blown;

But you are more intemperate in your blood 60

Than Venns, or those pamp' red animals
That rage in savage sensuality.

Hero. Is my lord well, that he doth speak so wide?

Leon. Sweet Prince, why speak not you?

D. Pedro. What should I speak?

I stand dishonour'd, that have gone about
To link my dear friend to a common stale.

Leon. Are these things spoken, or do I but dream?

D. John. Sir, they are spoken, and these things are true.

Bene. This looks not like a nuptial.

Hero. True! O God!

Claud. Leonato, stand I here?

Is this the Prince? Is this the Prince's brother?

Is this face Hero's? Are our eyes our own?

Leon. All this is so; but what of this, my lord?

Claud. Let me but move one question to your daughter;

And, by that fatherly and kindly power
That you have in her, bid her answer truly.

Leon. I charge thee do so, as thou art my child.

Hero. O, God defend me! how am I beset!
What kind of catechising call you this?

Claud. To make you answer truly to your name.

Hero. Is it not Hero? Who can blot that name

With any just reproach?

Claud. Marry, that can Hero;
Hero itself can blot out Hero's virtue.

What man was he talk'd with you yesterday

Out at your window betwixt twelve and one?
Now, if you are a maid, answer to this.

Hero. I talk'd with no man at that hour, my lord.

D. Pedro. Why, then are you no maiden.
Leonato,

I am sorry you must hear. Upon mine honour,
Myself, my brother, and this griev'd count

Did see her, hear her, at that hour last night
Talk with a ruffian at her chamber-window;

Who hath indeed, most like a liberal villain,
Confess'd the vile encounters they have had

A thousand times in secret.

D. John. Fie, fie! they are not to be named,
my lord,

Not to be spoke of;
There is not chastity enough in language

Without offence to utter them. Thus, pretty lady,

I am sorry for thy much misgovernment.

Claud. O Hero, what a Hero hadst thou been,

If half thy outward graces had been plac'd
About thy thoughts and counsels of thy heart!

But fare thee well, most foul, most fair! Farewell,

Thou pure impiety and impious purity!
For thee I'll lock up all the gates of love,

And on my eyelids shall conjecture hang,
To turn all beauty into thoughts of harm,
And never shall it more be gracious.

Leon. Hath no man's dagger here a point for me?

[Hero swoons.]

Beat. Why, how now, cousin! wherefore sink you down?

D. John. Come, let us go. These things, come thus to light,

Smother her spirits up.

[Exeunt Don Pedro, Don John, and Claudio.]

Bene. How doth the lady?

Beat. Dead, I think. Help, uncle! Hero! why, Hero! Uncle! Signior Benedick!

Friar!

Leon. O Fate! take not away thy heavy hand.
Death is the fairest cover for her shame

That may be wish'd for.

Beat. How now, cousin Hero!

Friar. Have comfort, lady.

Leon. Dost thou look up?

Friar. Yea, wherefore should she not?

Leon. Wherefore! Why, doth not every earthly thing

Cry shame upon her? Could she here deny
The story that is printed in her blood?

Do not live, Hero; do not ope thine eyes;
For, did I think thou wouldst not quickly die,

Thought I thy spirits were stronger than thy shames,

Myself would, on the rearward of reproaches,
Strike at thy life. Grief'd I, I had but one?

Chid I for that at frugal nature's frame?
O, one too much by thee! Why had I one?

Why ever wast thou lovely in my eyes?
Why had I not with charitable hand

Took up a beggar's issue at my gates,
Who smirched thus and mir'd with infamy,

I might have said "No part of it is mine.
This shame derives itself from unknown loins?"

But mine, and mine I lov'd, and mine I prais'd,
And mine that I was proud on, mine so much

That I myself was to myself not mine,
Valuing of her, — why, she, O, she is fallen

Into a pit of ink, that the wide sea
Hath drops too few to wash her clean again,

And salt too little which may season give
To her foul-tainted flesh!

Bene. Sir, sir, be patient.
For my part, I am so attir'd in wonder,

I know not what to say.

Beat. O, on my soul, my cousin is belied!

Bene. Lady, were you her bedfellow last night?

Beat. No, truly not; although, until last night,

I have this twelvemonth been her bedfellow.

Leon. Confirm'd, confirm'd! O, that is stronger made

Which was before barr'd up with ribs of iron!
Would the two princes lie, and Claudio lie,

Who lov'd her so, that, speaking of her foulness,
Wash'd it with tears? Hence from her! Let her die.

Friar. Hear me a little;
For I have only been silent so long
And given way unto this course of fortune,
By noting of the lady. I have mark'd

A thousand blushing apparitions
To start into her face, a thousand innocent shames

In angel whiteness beat away those blushes ;
And in her eye there hath appear'd a fire
To burn the errors that these princes hold 165
Against her maiden truth. Call me a fool ;
Trust not my reading nor my observations,
Which with experimental seal doth warrant
The tenour of my book ; trust not my age,
My reverence, calling, nor divinity, 170
If this sweet lady lie not guiltless here
Under some biting error.

Leon. Friar, it cannot be.
Thou seest that all the grace that she hath left
Is that she will not add to her damnation
A sin of perjury ; she not denies it. 175
Why seek'st thou then to cover with excuse
That which appears in proper nakedness ?

Friar. Lady, what man is he you are accus'd of ?

Hero. They know that do accuse me ; I know
none.

If I know more of any man alive 180
Than that which maiden modesty doth warrant,
Let all my sins lack mercy ! O my father,
Prove you that any man with me convers'd
At hours unmeet, or that I yesternight Maintain'd the change of words with any creature, 185

Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death !

Friar. There is some strange misprision in the princes.

Bene. Two of them have the very bent of
honour ;

And if their wisdoms be misled in this,
The practice of it lives in John the Bastard, 190
Whose spirits toil in frame of villainies.

Leon. I know not. If they speak but truth
of her,

These hands shall tear her ; if they wrong her
honour,

The proudest of them shall well hear of it.
Time hath not yet so dried this blood of
mine, 195

Nor age so eat up my invention,
Nor fortune made such havoc of my means,
Nor my bad life reft me so much of friends,
But they shall find, awak'd in such a kind,
Both strength of limb and policy of mind, 200
Ability in means and choice of friends,
To quit me of them thoroughly.

Friar. Pause awhile,
And let my counsel sway you in this case.
Your daughter here the princes left for dead.
Let her awhile be secretly kept in, 205
And publish it that she is dead indeed.
Maintain a mourning ostentation
And on your family's old monument
Hang mournful epitaphs, and do all rites
That appertain unto a burial. 210

Leon. What shall become of this ? What will this do ?

Friar. Marry, this well carried shall on her behalf

Change slander to remorse ; that is some good.
But not for that dream I on this strange course,

But on this travail look for greater birth. 215
She dying, as it must be so maintain'd,
Upon the instant that she was accus'd,
Shall be lamented, pitied, and excus'd
Of every hearer ; for it so falls out
That what we have we prize not to the worth 220
Whiles we enjoy it, but being lack'd and lost,
Why, then we rack the value ; then we find
The virtue that possession would not show us Whiles it was ours. So will it fare with Claudio.

When he shall hear she died upon his words, 225
The idea of her life shall sweetly creep
Into his study of imagination,
And every lovely organ of her life
Shall come apparell'd in more precious habit,
More moving-delicate and full of life, 230
Into the eye and prospect of his soul,
Than when she liv'd indeed. Then shall he mourn,

If ever love had interest in his liver,
And wish he had not so accused her,
No, though he thought his accusation true. 235
Let this be so, and doubt not but success
Will fashion the event in better shape
Than I can lay it down in likelihood.
But if all aim but this be levell'd false,
The supposition of the lady's death 240
Will quench the wonder of her infamy.
And if it sort not well, you may conceal her,
As best befits her wounded reputation,
In some reclusive and religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongues, minds, and injuries. 245

Bene. Signior Leonato, let the friar advise
you ;

And though you know my inwardness and love
Is very much unto the Prince and Claudio,
Yet, by mine honour, I will deal in this
As secretly and justly as your soul 250
Should with your body.

Leon. Being that I flow in grief,
The smallest twine may lead me.

Friar. 'T is well consented ; presently away,
For to strange sores strangely they strain the cure.

Come, lady, die to live. This wedding-day 255
Perhaps is but prolong'd ; have patience and endure.

[Exeunt [all but Benedick and Beatrice].]

Bene. Lady Beatrice, have you wept all this while ?

Beat. Yea, and I will weep a while longer.

Bene. I will not desire that.

Beat. You have no reason ; I do it freely. 260

Bene. Surely I do believe your fair cousin is wrong'd.

Beat. Ah, how much might the man deserve of me that would right her !

Bene. Is there any way to show such friendship ?

Beat. A very even way, but no such friend. 265

Bene. May a man do it ?

Beat. It is a man's office, but not yours.

Bene. I do love nothing in the world so well as you. Is not that strange ? 270

Beat. As strange as the thing I know not. It were as possible for me to say I lov'd nothing so well as you: but believe me not; and yet I lie not. I confess nothing, nor I deny nothing. I am sorry for my cousin. 275

Bene. By my sword, Beatrice, thou lov'st me.

Beat. Do not swear, and eat it.

Bene. I will swear by it that you love me; and I will make him eat it that says I love not you.

Beat. Will you not eat your word? 280

Bene. With no sauce that can be devised to it. I protest I love thee.

Beat. Why, then, God forgive me!

Bene. What offence, sweet Beatrice?

Beat. You have stay'd me in a happy hour. I was about to protest I loved you. 285

Bene. And do it with all thy heart.

Beat. I love you with so much of my heart that none is left to protest.

Bene. Come, bid me do any thing for thee. 290

Beat. Kill Claudio.

Bene. Ha! not for the wide world.

Beat. You kill me to deny it. Farewell.

Bene. Tarry, sweet Beatrice.

Beat. I am gone, though I am here. There is no love in you. Nay, I pray you, let me go. 295

Bene. Beatrice,—

Beat. In faith, I will go.

Bene. We'll be friends first.

Beat. You dare easier be friends with me than fight with mine enemy. 301

Bene. Is Claudio thine enemy?

Beat. Is 'a not approv'd in the height a villain, that hath slandered, scorned, dishonour'd my kinswoman? O that I were a man! What, bear her in hand until they come to take [305 hands; and then, with public accusation, un-cover'd slander, unmitigated rancour, — O God, that I were a man! I would eat his heart in the market-place.

Bene. Hear me, Beatrice,— 310

Beat. Talk with a man out at a window! A proper saying!

Bene. Nay, but, Beatrice,—

Beat. Sweet Hero! She is wrong'd, she is slander'd, she is undone. 315

Bene. Beat—

Beat. Princes and counties! Surely, a princely testimony, a goodly count, Count Comfert; a sweet gallant, surely! O that I were a man for his sake! or that I had any friend would be a man for my sake! But manhood is melted [320 into courtesies, valour into compliment, and men are only turned into tongue, and trim ones too. He is now as valiant as Hercules that only tells a lie and swears it. I cannot be a man with wishing, therefore I will die a woman with [325 grieving.

Bene. Tarry, good Beatrice. By this hand, I love thee.

Beat. Use it for my love some other way than swearing by it. 330

Bene. Think you in your soul the Count Claudio hath wrong'd Hero?

Beat. Yea, as sure as I have a thought or a soul. 335

Bene. Enough, I am engag'd; I will challenge him. I will kiss your hand, and so I leave you. By this hand, Claudio shall render me a dear account. As you hear of me, so think of me. Go, comfort your cousin. I must say she is dead; and so, farewell. [Exeunt.] 340

[SCENE II. A prison.]

Enter the Constables [DOGBERRY, VERGES, and SEXTON] in gowns [and the WATCH, with CONRADE] and BORACHIO.

Dog. Is our whole dissembly appear'd?

Verg. O, a stool and a cushion for the sexton.

Ser. Which be the malefactors?

Dog. Marry, that am I and my partner.

Verg. Nay, that's certain; we have the [5 exhibition to examine.

Ser. But which are the offenders that are to be examined? Let them come before master constable.

Dog. Yea, marry, let them come before me. What is your name, friend? 15

Bora. Borachio.

Dog. Pray, write down, Borachio. Yours, sirrah?

Con. I am a gentleman, sir, and my name is Conrade. 16

Dog. Write down, master gentleman Conrade. Masters, do you serve God?

Con. { Yea, sir, we hope.

Dog. Write down, that they hope they serve God; and write God first; for God defend [21 but God should go before such villains! Masters, it is proved already that you are little better than false knaves; and it will go near to be thought so shortly. How answer you for yourselves? 25

Con. Marry, sir, we say we are none.

Dog. A marvellous witty fellow, I assure you; but I will go about with him. Come you hither, sirrah; a word in your ear, sir. I say to you, it is thought you are false knaves. 30

Bora. Sir, I say to you we are none.

Dog. Well, stand aside. 'Fore God, they are both in a tale. Have you writ down, that they are none? 34

Ser. Master constable, you go not the way to examine. You must call forth the watch that are their accusers.

Dog. Yea, marry, that's the eftest way. Let the watch come forth. Masters, I charge you, in the Prince's name, accuse these men. 40

1. Watch. This man said, sir, that Don John, the Prince's brother, was a villain.

Dog. Write down Prince John a villain. Why, this is flat perjury, to call a prince's brother villain.

Bora. Master constable,— 45

Dog. Pray thee, fellow, peace. I do not like thy look, I promise thee.

Ser. What heard you him say else?

2. Watch. Marry, that he had received a thousand ducats of Don John for accusing the Lady Hero wrongfully. 51

Dog. Flat burglary as ever was committed.

Verg. Yea, by mass, that it is.

Sex. What else, fellow?

1. Watch. And that Count Claudio did [55 mean, upon his words, to disgrace Hero before the whole assembly, and not marry her.

Dog. O villain! thou wilt be condemn'd into everlasting redemption for this.

Sex. What else? 60

1. Watch. This is all.

Sex. And this is more, masters, than you can deny. Prince John is this morning secretly stolen away. Hero was in this manner accus'd, in this very manner refus'd, and upon the grief of this suddenly died. Master con- [65 stable, let these men be bound, and brought to Leonato's. I will go before and show him their examination. [Exit.]

Dog. Come, let them be opinion'd.

Verg. Let them be in the hands— 70

[Con.] Off, coxcomb!

Dog. God, God's my life, where's the sexton?
Let him write down the Prince's officer cox-comb. Come, bind them. Thou naughty var-let!

Con. Away! you are an ass, you are an
ass. 75

Dog. Dost thou not suspect my place? Dost thou not suspect my years? O that he were here to write me down an ass! But, masters, remember that I am an ass; though it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an ass. No, thou villain, thou art full of piety, [80 as shall be prov'd upon thee by good witness. I am a wise fellow, and, which is more, an officer, and, which is more, a householder, and, which is more, as pretty a piece of flesh as any is in Messina, and one that knows the law, go to; [85 and a rich fellow enough, go to; and a fellow that hath had losses, and one that hath two gowns and every thing handsome about him.
Bring him away. O that I had been writ down an ass! [Exeunt. 90

ACT V

[SCENE I. Before Leonato's house.]

Enter LEONATO and ANTONIO.

Ant. If you go on thus, you will kill yourself;
And 't is not wisdom thus to second grief
Against yourself.

Leon. I pray thee, cease thy counsel,
Which falls into mine ears as profitless
As water in a sieve. Give not me counsel; 5
Nor let no comforter delight mine ear
But such a one whose wrongs do suit with mine.
Bring me a father that so lov'd his child,
Whose joy of her is overwhelm'd like mine,
And bid him speak of patience; 10 Measure his woe the length and breadth of
mine,

And let it answer every strain for strain,
As thus for thus, and such a grief for such,
In every lineament, branch, shape, and form;
If such a one will smile and stroke his beard, 15
Bid sorrow wag, cry "hem!" when he should groan,

Patch grief with proverbs, make misfortune drunk

With candle-wasters, bring him yet to me,
And I of him will gather patience.

But there is no such man; for, brother, men 30
Can counsel and speak comfort to that grief
Which they themselves not feel; but, tasting it,
Their counsel turns to passion, which before

Would give preceptual medicine to rage,
Fetter strong madness in a silken thread, 35

Charm ache with air and agony with words.
No, no; 't is all men's office to speak patience

To those that wring under the load of sorrow,
But no man's virtue nor sufficiency

To be so moral when he shall endure 30
The like himself. Therefore give me no counsel;
My griefs cry louder than advertisement.

Ant. Therein do men from children nothing differ.

Leon. I pray thee, peace. I will be flesh and blood;

For there was never yet philosopher 35
That could endure the toothache patiently,
However they have writ the style of gods

And made a push at chance and sufferance.
Ant. Yet bend not all the harm upon yourself;

Make those that do offend you suffer too. 40
Leon. There thou speak'st reason. Nay, I will do so.

My soul doth tell me Hero is belied;
And that shall Claudio know; so shall the Prince

And all of them that thus dishonour her.

Enter DON PEDRO and CLAUDIO.

Ant. Here comes the Prince and Claudio hastily. 45

D. Pedro. Good den, good den.
Claud. Good day to both of you.

Leon. Hear you, my lords,—
D. Pedro. We have some haste, Leonato.

Leon. Some haste, my lord! Well, fare you well, my lord.

Are you so hasty now? Well, all is one.

D. Pedro. Nay, do not quarrel with us, good old man. 50

Ant. If he could right himself with quarrelling,

Some of us would lie low.

Claud. Who wrongs him?

Leon. Marry, thou dost wrong me; thou dis-sembler, thou,—

Nay, never lay thy hand upon thy sword;
I fear thee not.

Claud. Marry, beshrew my hand, 55
If it should give your age such cause of fear.

In faith, my hand meant nothing to my sword.
Leon. Tush, tush, man; never fleer and jest at me.

I speak not like a dotard nor a fool,
As under privilege of age to brag 60

What I have done being young, or what would do

Were I not old. Know, Claudio, to thy head, Thou hast so wrong'd mine innocent child and
me

That I am fore'd to lay my reverence by
And, with grey hairs and bruise of many days, 65
Do challenge thee to trial of a man.

I say thou hast belied mine innocent child!
Thy slander hath gone through and through her
heart,

And she lies buried with her ancestors,
O, in a tomb where never scandal slept, 70
Save this of hers, fram'd by thy villainy!

Claud. My villainy?

Leon. Thine, Claudio; thine, I say.

D. Pedro. You say not right, old man.

Leon. My lord, my lord,
I'll prove it on his body, if he dare,
Despite his nice fence and his active practice, 75
His May of youth and bloom of lusthood.

Claud. Away! I will not have to do with
you.

Leon. Canst thou so daff me? Thou hast kill'd my child.

If thou kill'st me, boy, thou shalt kill a man.

Ant. He shall kill two of us, and men indeed.
But that's no matter; let him kill one first. 81
Win me and wear me; let him answer me.

Come, follow me, boy; come, sir boy, come, follow me.

Sir boy, I'll whip you from your foining fence;
Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will. 85

Leon. Brother,—

Ant. Content yourself. God knows I lov'd
my niece;

And she is dead, slander'd to death by villains,
That dare as well answer a man indeed
As I dare take a serpent by the tongue. 90

Boys, apes, braggarts, Jacks, milksops!

Leon. Brother Antony,—

Ant. Hold you content. What, man! I know them, yea,

And what they weigh, even to the utmost scruple,—

Scambling, out-facing, fashion-monging boys,
That lie and cog and flout, deprave and slander, 95

Go anticly and show outward hideousness,
And speak off half a dozen dangerous words,
How they might hurt their enemies, if they durst;

And this is all.

Leon. But, brother Antony,—

Ant. Come, 't is no matter.
Do not you meddle; let me deal in this. 101

D. Pedro. Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience.

My heart is sorry for your daughter's death;
But, on my honour, she was charg'd with
nothing

But what was true and very full of proof. 105

Leon. My lord, my lord,—

D. Pedro. I will not hear you.

Leon. No? Come, brother, away! I will be heard.

Ant. And shall, or some of us will smart for
it. [Exeunt Leonato and Antonio.

Enter BENEDICK.

D. Pedro. See, see; here comes the man we went to seek. 110

Claud. Now, signior, what news?

Bene. Good day, my lord.

D. Pedro. Welcome, signior. You are almost come to part almost a fray. 114

Claud. We had like to have had our two noses snapp'd off with two old men without teeth.

D. Pedro. Leonato and his brother. What think'st thou? Had we fought, I doubt we should have been too young for them.

Bene. In a false quarrel there is no true val-
our. I came to seek you both. 121

Claud. We have been up and down to seek thee; for we are high-proof melancholy and would fain have it beaten away. Wilt thou use thy wit?

Bene. It is in my scabbard; shall I draw
it? 125

D. Pedro. Dost thou wear thy wit by thy side?

Claud. Never any did so, though very many have been beside their wit. I will bid thee draw, as we do the minstrels; draw, to pleasure
us.

D. Pedro. As I am an honest man, he looks pale. Art thou sick, or angry? 131

Claud. What, courage, man! What though care kill'd a cat, thou hast mettle enough in thee to kill care.

Bene. Sir, I shall meet your wit in the carreer, an you charge it against me. I pray you choose another subject. 137

Claud. Nay, then, give him another staff.
This last was broke across.

D. Pedro. By this light, he changes more and more. I think he be angry indeed. 141

Claud. If he be, he knows how to turn his girdle.

Bene. Shall I speak a word in your ear?

Claud. God bless me from a challenge! 144

Bene. [Aside to Claudio.] You are a villain! I jest not. I will make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare. Do me right, or I will protest your cowardice. You have kill'd a sweet lady, and her death shall fall heavy on you. Let me hear from you. 151

Claud. Well, I will meet you, so I may have good cheer.

D. Pedro. What, a feast, a feast? 154

Claud. I' faith, I thank him. He hath bid me to a calf's head and a capon; the which if I do not carve most curiously, say my knife's naught. Shall I not find a woodcock too?

Bene. Sir, your wit ambles well; it goes easily. 159

D. Pedro. I'll tell thee how Beatrice prais'd thy wit the other day. I said, thou hadst a fine wit. "True," said she, "a fine little one." "No," said I, "a great wit."
"Right," says she, "a great gross one."
"Nay," said I, "a good wit." "Just," said she, "it hurts nobody." "Nay," said I, "the gentleman is wise." "Certain," said she, "a wise gentleman." "Nay," said I, "he hath the tongues." "That I believe," said she, "for he swore a thing to me on Monday night, which he forswore on Tuesday morning. There's a double tongue; there's two tongues." Thus [170] did she, an hour together, trans-shape thy particular virtues; yet at last she concluded with a sigh, thou wast the properest man in Italy.

Claud. For the which she wept heartily and said she ead'd not. 175

D. Pedro. Yea, that she did; but yet, for all that, an if she did not hate him deadly, she would love him dearly. The old man's daughter told us all. 180

Claud. All, all; and, moreover, God saw him when he was hid in the garden.

D. Pedro. But when shall we set the savage bull's horns on the sensible Benedick's head?

Claud. Yea, and text underneath, "Here dwells Benedick the married man?" 185

Bene. Fare you well, boy; you know my mind. I will leave you now to your gossip-like humour. You break jests as braggarts do their blades, which, God be thanked, hurt not. My [190] lord, for your many courtesies I thank you. I must discontinue your company. Your brother the bastard is fled from Messina. You have among you kill'd a sweet and innocent lady. For my Lord Lackbeard there, he and I shall meet; and, till then, peace be with him. [195] [Exit.]

D. Pedro. He is in earnest.

Claud. In most profound earnest; and, I'll warrant you, for the love of Beatrice.

D. Pedro. And hath challeng'd thee? 200

Claud. Most sincerely.

D. Pedro. What a pretty thing man is when he goes in his doublet and hose and leaves off his wit! 204

Enter Constables [DOGBERRY, VERGES, and the Watch, with] CONRADE and BORACHIO.

Claud. He is then a giant to an ape; but then is an ape a doctor to such a man.

D. Pedro. But, soft you, let me be. Pluck up, my heart, and be sad. Did he not say, my brother was fled? 209

Dog. Come you, sir. If justice cannot tame you, she shall ne'er weigh more reasons in her balance. Nay, an you be a cursing hypocrite once, you must be look'd to.

D. Pedro. How now? Two of my brother's men bound! Borachio one! 215

Claud. Hearken after their offence, my lord.

D. Pedro. Officers, what offence have these men done? 218

Dog. Marry, sir, they have committed false report; moreover, they have spoken untruths; secondarily, they are slanders; sixth and lastly, they have belied a lady; thirdly, they have verified unjust things; and, to conclude, they are lying knaves. 224

D. Pedro. First, I ask thee what they have done; thirdly, I ask thee what's their offence; sixth and lastly, why they are committed; and, to conclude, what you lay to their charge.

Claud. Rightly reasoned, and in his own division; and, by my troth, there's one meaning well suited. 231

D. Pedro. Who have you offended, masters, that you are thus bound to your answer? This learned constable is too cunning to be understood. What's your offence? 235

Bora. Sweet Prince, let me go no farther to mine answer. Do you hear me, and let this count kill me. I have deceived even your very eyes. What your wisdoms could not discover, these shallow fools have brought to light, who in the night overheard me confessing to this [240] man how Don John your brother incensed me to slander the Lady Hero, how you were brought into the orchard and saw me court Margaret in Hero's garments, how you disgrac'd her, when you should marry her. My villainy [245] they have upon record; which I had rather seal with my death than repeat over to my shame. The lady is dead upon mine and my master's false accusation; and, briefly, I desire nothing but the reward of a villain. 251

D. Pedro. Runs not this speech like iron through your blood?

Claud. I have drunk poison whiles he utter'd it.

D. Pedro. But did my brother set thee on to this?

Bora. Yea, and paid me richly for the practice of it. 255

D. Pedro. He is compos'd and fram'd of treachery,

And fed he is upon this villainy.

Claud. Sweet Hero! now thy image doth appear

In the rare semblance that I lov'd it first. 260

Dog. Come, bring away the plaintiffs. By this time our sexton hath reformed Signior Leonato of the matter; and, masters, do not forget to specify, when time and place shall serve, that I am an ass. 265

Verg. Here, here comes master Signior Leonato, and the sexton too.

Re-enter LEONATO and ANTONIO, with the Sexton.

Leon. Which is the villain? Let me see his eyes,

That, when I note another man like him, 270 I may avoid him. Which of these is he?

Bora. If you would know your wronger, look on me.

Leon. Art thou the slave that with thy breath hast kill'd

Mine innocent child?

Bora. Yea, even I alone.

Leon. No, not so, villain; thou beliest thyself. 275

Here stand a pair of honourable men,

A third is fled, that had a hand in it.

I thank you, princes, for my daughter's death. Record it with your high and worthy deeds.

'T was bravely done, if you bethink you of it. 280

Claud. I know not how to pray your patience;

Yet I must speak. Choose your revenge yourself;

Impose me to what penance your invention

Can lay upon my sin; yet sinn'd I not
But in mistaking.

D. Pedro. By my soul, nor I; 285
And yet, to satisfy this good old man,
I would bend under any heavy weight
That he'll enjoin me to.

Leon. I cannot bid you bid my daughter
live, —

That were impossible; but, I pray you both, 290
Possess the people in Messina here
How innocent she died; and if your love
Can labour ought in sad invention,
Hang her an epitaph upon her tomb
And sing it to her bones, sing it to-night. 295
To-morrow morning come you to my house,
And since you could not be my son-in-law,
Be yet my nephew. My brother hath a
daughter,

Almost the copy of my child that's dead,
And she alone is heir to both of us. 300
Give her the right you should have given her cousin,

And so dies my revenge.

Claud. O noble sir,
Your over-kindness doth wring tears from
me!

I do embrace your offer; and dispose
For henceforth of poor Claudio. 305

Leon. To-morrow then I will expect your coming;

To-night I take my leave. This naughty man
Shall face to face be brought to Margaret,
Who I believe was pack'd in all this wrong,
Hir'd to it by your brother.

Bora. No, by my soul, she was not,
Nor knew not what she did when she spoke to
me, 311

But always hath been just and virtuous
In any thing that I do know by her.

Dog. Moreover, sir, which indeed is not under white and black, this plaintiff here, the offender, did call me ass. I beseech you, let it 315 be rememb'rd in his punishment. And also, the watch heard them talk of one Deformed. They say he wears a key in his ear and a lock hanging by it, and borrows money in God's name, the which he hath used so long and never paid 320 that now men grow hard-hearted and will lend nothing for God's sake. Pray you, examine him upon that point.

Leon. I thank thee for thy care and honest
pains. 324

Dog. Your worship speaks like a most thankful and reverend youth, and I praise God for
you.

Leon. There's for thy pains.

Dog. God save the foundation!

Leon. Go, I discharge thee of thy prisoner, and I thank thee. 330

Dog. I leave an arrant knave with your worship; which I beseech your worship to correct yourself, for the example of others. God keep your worship! I wish your worship well. God restore you to health! I humbly give you leave to depart; and if a merry meeting may be 335 wish'd, God prohibit it! Come, neighbour.

[Exeunt [Dogberry and Verges].]

Leon. Until to-morrow morning, lords, fare-
well.

Ant. Farewell, my lords. We look for you to-morrow.

D. Pedro. We will not fail.

Claud. To-night I'll mourn with Hero.

Leon. [To the Watch.] Bring you these fellows on. We'll talk with Margaret, 341
How her acquaintance grew with this lewd fellow. [Exeunt [severally].]

[SCENE II. Leonato's garden.]

Enter BENEDICK and MARGARET [meeting].

Bene. Pray thee, sweet Mistress Margaret, deserve well at my hands by helping me to the speech of Beatrice.

Marg. Will you then write me a sonnet in praise of my beauty? 5

Bene. In so high a style, Margaret, that no man living shall come over it; for, in most comely truth, thou deservest it.

Marg. To have no man come over me! Why, shall I always keep below stairs? 10

Bene. Thy wit is as quick as the greyhound's mouth; it catches.

Marg. And yours as blunt as the fencer's foils, which hit, but hurt not. 14

Bene. A most manly wit, Margaret; it will not hurt a woman. And so, I pray thee, call Beatrice; I give thee the bucklers.

Marg. Give us the swords; we have bucklers of our own. 19

Bene. If you use them, Margaret, you must put in the pikes with a vice; and they are dangerous weapons for maids.

Marg. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who
I think hath legs. [Exit Margaret.]

Bene. And therefore will come. 25

[Sings.] The god of love,

That sits above,

And knows me, and knows me,

How pitiful I deserve, — 29

I mean in singing; but in loving, Leander the good swimmer, Troilus the first employer of panders, and a whole bookful of these quondam carpet-mongers, whose names yet run smoothly in the even road of a blank verse, why, they were never so truly turn'd over and over as my poor self in love. Marry, I cannot show it in 35 rhyme. I have tried. I can find out no rhyme to "lady" but "baby," an innocent rhyme; for
"scorn," "horn," a hard rhyme; for "school,"
"fool," a babbling rhyme; very ominous endings. No, I was not born under a rhyming planet, nor I cannot woo in festival terms. 41

Enter BEATRICE.

Sweet Beatrice, wouldst thou come when I call'd thee?

Beat. Yea, signior, and depart when you bid
me.

Bene. O, stay but till then! 45

Beat. "Then" is spoken; fare you well now. And yet, ere I go, let me go with that I came for; which is, with knowing what hath pass'd between you and Claudio.

Bene. Only foul words; and thereupon I will kiss thee. 51

Beat. Foul words is but foul wind, and foul wind is but foul breath, and foul breath is noise; therefore I will depart unkiss'd.

Bene. Thou hast frighted the word out of his right sense, so forcible is thy wit. But I 55 must tell thee plainly, Claudio undergoes my challenge; and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward. And, I pray thee now, tell me for which of my bad parts didst thou first fall in love with me? 61

Beat. For them all together, which maintained so politic a state of evil that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them. But for which of my good parts did you first suffer love for me? 66

Bene. Suffer love! a good epithet! I do suffer love indeed, for I love thee against my will.

Beat. In spite of your heart, I think; alas, poor heart! If you spite it for my sake, I will spite it for yours; for I will never love that which my friend hates. 73

Bene. Thou and I are too wise to woo peaceably.

Beat. It appears not in this confession. There's not one wise man among twenty that will praise himself. 77

Bene. An old, an old instance, Beatrice, that liv'd in the time of good neighbours. If a man do not erect in this age his own tomb ere he dies, he shall live no longer in monument than the bell rings and the widow weeps. 82

Beat. And how long is that, think you?

Bene. Question. Why, an hour in clamour and a quarter in rheum; therefore is it most expedient for the wise, if Don Worm, his 85 conscience, find no impediment to the contrary, to be the trumpet of his own virtues, as I am to myself. So much for praising myself, who, I myself will bear witness, is praiseworthy. And now tell me, how doth your cousin? 91

Beat. Very ill.

Bene. And how do you?

Beat. Very ill too.

Bene. Serve God, love me, and mend. There will I leave you too, for here comes one in haste. 96

Enter URSULA.

Urs. Madam, you must come to your uncle. Yonder's old coil at home. It is proved my Lady Hero hath been falsely accus'd, the Prince and Claudio mightily abus'd; and Don John is the author of all, who is fled and gone. Will you come presently? 102

Beat. Will you go hear this news, signior?

Bene. I will live in thy heart, die in thy lap, and be buried in thy eyes; and moreover I will go with thee to thy uncle's. [Exeunt. 106]

[SCENE III. A church.]

Enter DON PEDRO, CLAUDIO, and three or four with tapers.

Claud. Is this the monument of Leonato?

A Lord. It is, my lord.
Claud. [Reading out of a scroll.]

EPITAPH.

"Done to death by slanderous tongues

Was the Hero that here lies.

Death, in guerdon of her wrongs, 5

Gives her fame which never dies.

So the life that died with shame

Lives in death with glorious fame."

Hang thou there upon the tomb,

Praising her when I am dumb. 10

Now, music, sound, and sing your solemn hymn.

SONG.

"Pardon, goddess of the night,

Those that slew thy virgin knight;

For the which, with songs of woe,

Round about her tomb they go. 15

Midnight, assist our moan;

Help us to sigh and groan,

Heavily, heavily.

Graves, yawn and yield your dead,

Till death be uttered, 20

Heavily, heavily."

[Claud.] Now, unto thy bones good night!

Yearly will I do this rite.

D. Pedro. Good morrow, masters; put your torches out.

The wolves have prey'd; and look, the gentle day,

Bereaves the wheels of Phoebus, round about

Dapples the drowsy east with spots of grey.

Thanks to you all, and leave us. Fare you well.

Claud. Good morrow, masters. Each his several way.

D. Pedro. Come, let us hence, and put on other weeds; 30

And then to Leonato's we will go.

Claud. And Hymen now with luckier issue speed's

Than this for whom we rend'red up this woe. [Exeunt. 35]

[SCENE IV. A room in Leonato's house.]

Enter LEONATO, old man [ANTONIO], BENEDICK, [BEATRICE] MARGARET, URSULA, FRIAR FRANCIS, and HERO.

Friar. Did I not tell you she was innocent?

Leon. So are the Prince and Claudio, who accus'd her

Upon the error that you heard debated.

But Margaret was in some fault for this,

Although against her will, as it appears 5 In the true course of all the question.

Ant. Well, I am glad that all things sort so well.

Bene. And so am I, being else by faith enforced

To call young Claudio to a reckoning for it.

Leon. Well, daughter, and you gentlewomen all, 10

Withdraw into a chamber by yourselves,
And when I send for you, come hither mask'd.
The Prince and Claudio promis'd by this hour
To visit me. You know your office, brother.
You must be father to your brother's daughter,
And give her to young Claudio.

[Exeunt Ladies.]

Ant. Which I will do with confirm'd countenance.

Bene. Friar, I must entreat your pains, I think.

Friar. To do what, signior?

Bene. To bind me, or undo me; one of them.

Signior Leonato, truth it is, good signior,
Your niece regards me with an eye of favour.

Leon. That eye my daughter lent her; 'tis most true.

Bene. And I do with an eye of love requite her.

Leon. The sight whereof I think you had from me,
From Claudio, and the Prince. But what's your will?

Bene. Your answer, sir, is enigmatical;
But, for my will, my will is your good will
May stand with ours, this day to be conjoin'd
In the state of honourable marriage;
In which, good friar, I shall desire your help.

Leon. My heart is with your liking.
Friar. And my help.

Here comes the Prince and Claudio.

Enter DON PEDRO and CLAUDIO, and two or three other.

D. Pedro. Good morrow to this fair assembly.

Leon. Good morrow, Prince; good morrow, Claudio;

We here attend you. Are you yet determin'd
To-day to marry with my brother's daughter?

Claudio. I'll hold my mind, were she an Ethiop.

Leon. Call her forth, brother; here's the friar ready.

[Exit Antonio.]

D. Pedro. Good morrow, Benedick. Why, what's the matter,

That you have such a February face,
So full of frost, of storm and cloudiness?

Claudio. I think he thinks upon the savage bull.

Tush, fear not, man; we'll tip thy horns with gold

And all Europa shall rejoice at thee,
As once Europa did at lusty Jove,

When he would play the noble beast in love.

Bene. Bull Jove, sir, had an amiable low;
And some such strange bull leap'd your father's cow,

And got a calf in that same noble feat
Much like to you, for you have just his bleat.

Re-enter ANTONIO, with the LADIES [masked].

Claudio. For this I owe you: here comes other reckonings.

Which is the lady I must seize upon?

Ant. This same is she, and I do give you her.
Claudio. Why, then she's mine. Sweet, let me see your face.

Leon. No, that you shall not, till you take her hand

Before this friar and swear to marry her.

Claudio. Give me your hand. Before this holy friar

I am your husband, if you like of me.

Hero. And when I liv'd, I was your other wife;

[Unmasking.]

And when you lov'd, you were my other husband.

Claudio. Another Hero!

Hero.

Nothing certainer.

One Hero died defil'd, but I do live;

And surely as I live, I am a maid.

D. Pedro. The former Hero! Hero that is dead!

Leon. She died, my lord, but whiles her slander liv'd.

Friar. All this amazement can I qualify;

When after that the holy rites are ended,

I'll tell you largely of fair Hero's death.

Meantime let wonder seem familiar,

And to the chapel let us presently.

Bene. Soft and fair, friar. Which is Beatrice?

Beat. [Unmasking.] I answer to that name. What is your will?

Bene. Do not you love me?

Beat. Why, no; no more than reason.

Bene. Why, then your uncle and the Prince and Claudio

Have been deceived. They swore you did.

Beat. Do not you love me?

Bene. Troth, no; no more than reason.

Beat. Why, then my cousin, Margaret, and Ursula

Are much deceiv'd, for they did swear you did.

Bene. They swore that you were almost sick for me.

Beat. They swore that you were well-nigh dead for me.

Bene. 'Tis no such matter. Then you do not love me?

Beat. No, truly, but in friendly recompense.

Leon. Come, cousin, I am sure you love the gentleman.

Claudio. And I'll be sworn upon't that he loves her;

For here's a paper written in his hand,

A halting sonnet of his own pure brain,

Fashion'd to Beatrice.

Hero.

And here's another

Write in my cousin's hand, stolen from her pocket,

Containing her affection unto Benedick.

Bene. A miracle! Here's our own hands against our hearts. Come, I will have thee;

but, by this light, I take thee for pity.

Beat. I would not deny you; but, by this good day, I yield upon great persuasion; and partly to save your life, for I was told you were in a consumption.

[Bene.] Peace! I will stop your mouth.

[Kissing her.]

D. Pedro. How dost thou, Benedick, the married man? 100

Bene. I'll tell thee what, Prince; a college of wit-crackers cannot flout me out of my humour. Dost thou think I care for a satire or an epigram? No; if a man will be beaten with brains, 'a shall wear nothing handsome about him. In brief, since I do purpose to marry, [105] I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it; and therefore never flout at me for what I have said against it, for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion. For thy part, Claudio, I did think to have [110] beaten thee; but in that thou art like to be my kinsman, live unbruised and love my cousin.

Claud. I had well hop'd thou wouldst have denied Beatrice, that I might have cudgell'd thee out of thy single life, to make [115] thee a double-dealer; which, out of question, thou wilt be, if my cousin do not look exceeding narrowly to thee.

Bene. Come, come, we are friends. Let's have a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our own hearts and our wives' heels. 121

Leon. We'll have dancing afterward.

Bene. First, of my word; therefore play, music. Prince, thou art sad; get thee a wife, get thee a wife. There is no staff more reverend than one tipp'd with horn. 125

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. My lord, your brother John is taken in flight,

And brought with armed men back to Messina.

Bene. Think not on him till to-morrow. I'll devise thee brave punishments for him. Strike up, pipers. [Dance. [Exeunt.] 131]

AS YOU LIKE IT

THE earliest reference to the comedy of As You Like It is found in an entry in the Stationers' Register, under the date of August 4, 1600. How much earlier the play was composed is uncertain, but no modern critic of authority places it earlier than 1598. The reference in III. v. 81, 82 to Marlowe's Hero and Leander (pub. 1598) has been taken as fixing the earlier limit, but the possibility of Shakespeare's having known the "dead shepherd's" poem in manuscript somewhat weakens the argument from this passage. The same limit, however, is suggested by the absence of the title from the list in Meres's Palladis Tamia. The evidence from metre, too, indicates 1599-1600 as a probable date, and, with slight variations, there is a general agreement in this.

Although the play was entered in the Stationers' Register in 1600, it does not seem to have been actually published before it appeared in the First Folio. From this edition the present text is taken, with a few modifications drawn chiefly from the later Folios and the emendations of modern editors.

"Stories which relate the fate of a younger brother who is deprived of his inheritance by the jealousy of a senior brother, and who nevertheless achieves great prosperity, are as old as the time of Joseph." (Skeat.) To this class belongs an anonymous Middle English poem, found in several MSS. of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, into which it has been inserted with the title, The Coke's Tale of Gamelyn. The poem is not by Chaucer, nor has it any relation to his fragmentary Cook's Tale, save in name. On the basis of this poem, Thomas Lodge composed a novel called Rosalynde, Euphuus' Golden Legacie (1590), adding the female characters, and the love stories of Orlando and Silvius. Whether these are due to his own invention, or are drawn from some other source, is unknown. This novel Shakespeare in turn dramatized in As You Like It. It does not appear that Shakespeare knew the Tale of Gamelyn.

Lodge's romance is a euphuistic pastoral, and, in turning it into a play, Shakespeare dropped the euphuism, but retained many of the pastoral characteristics. In retaining these, he was following not only his source, but the example of other dramatists who had recently scored successes with pastorals on the stage. The more conventional pastoral features to be detected in As You Like It are these: the shepherds and foresters, both those who are actual rustics and those who are courtiers living in retirement; the love-sick shepherd and obdurate shepherdess; the girl in the dress of a boy; the hanging or carving of verses on trees; the hunting scene and song; the figure of Hymen; and the suggested landscape of woodland, sheep-cote, and pasture. The forest life of the banished Duke, also, and his attitude towards adversity have been thought to show the influence of contemporary plays on Robin Hood.

The length of time covered by the action is much shorter in the play than in the novel. Shakespeare summarizes the whole first section of Rosalynde in Orlando's opening speech, and, greatly to the advantage of the hero's refinement, cuts out a number of rowdy incidents between his wrestling and his setting out. The wrestling, indeed, is a survival of the merely muscular hero of the Tale of Gamelyn. Oliver's change of heart, which is used by Shakespeare to reflect credit on Orlando, is in Lodge due to the elder brother's meditations in prison. In Rosalynde, the restoration of the Duke is brought about by the overthrow and death of the usurper in battle, in contrast with the dramatist's milder device of conversion, which, however unpalatable, suits better the mood of the play. The chief characters are all raised to a much higher spiritual level by Shakespeare, finer motives are introduced, Rosalind is given a sense of humor, and Phebe and Silvius are made much less the conventional figures of the artificial pastoral. The characters of Jaques, Touchstone, Audrey, William, Dennis, Le Beau, Amiens, the First Lord, and Sir Oliver Martext are all added, and with them the distinctive atmosphere of the play, its philosophy, its humor, its lyric beauty, and its landscape.

ACT I

SCENE I. [Orchard of Oliver's house.]

Enter ORLANDO and ADAM.

Orl. As I remember, Adam, it was upon this fashion: bequeathed me by will but poor a thousand crowns, and, as thou sayest, charged my brother, on his blessing, to breed me well; and there begins my sadness. My brother Jaques he keeps at school, and report speaks [5 goldenly of his profit. For my part, he keeps me rustically at home, or, to speak more properly, stays me here at home unkept; for call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth, that differs not from the stalling of an ox? [10 His horses are bred better; for, besides that they are fair with their feeding, they are taught their manage, and to that end riders dearly hir'd; but I, his brother, gain nothing under him but growth; for the which his animals on [15 his dunghills are as much bound to him as I. Besides this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, the something that nature gave me his countenance seems to take from me. He lets me feed with his hinds, bars me the place of a [20 brother, and, as much as in him lies, mines my gentility with my education. This is it, Adam, that grieves me; and the spirit of my father, which I think is within me, begins to mutiny against this servitude. I will no longer endure it, though yet I know no wise remedy how to avoid it. 27

Enter OLIVER.

Adam. Yonder comes my master, your brother.

Orl. Go apart, Adam, and thou shalt hear how he will shake me up. 30

Ol. Now, sir! what make you here?

Orl. Nothing. I am not taught to make any thing.

Ol. What mar you then, sir? 34

Orl. Marry, sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poor unworthy brother of yours, with idleness.

Ol. Marry, sir, be better employed, and be naught awhile. 39

Orl. Shall I keep your hogs and eat husks with them? What prodigal portion have I spent, that I should come to such penury?

Ol. Know you where you are, sir?

Orl. O, sir, very well; here in your orchard.

Ol. Know you before whom, sir? 45

Orl. Ay, better than him I am before knows me. I know you are my eldest brother; and, in the gentle condition of blood, you should so know me. The courtesy of nations allows you my better, in that you are the first-born; but the same tradition takes not away my blood, [50 were there twenty brothers betwixt us. I have as much of my father in me as you; albeit, I confess, your coming before me is nearer to his reverence.

Ol. What, boy! 55

Orl. Come, come, elder brother, you are too young in this.

Ol. Wilt thou lay hands on me, villain?

Orl. I am no villain; I am the youngest son of Sir Roland de Boys. He was my father, and he is thrice a villain that says such a fa- [60 ther begot villains. Wert thou not my brother, I would not take this hand from thy throat till this other had pull'd out thy tongue for saying so. Thou hast rail'd on thyself. 65

Adam. Sweet masters, be patient; for your father's remembrance, be at accord.

Ol. Let me go, I say.

Orl. I will not, till I please. You shall hear me. My father charg'd you in his will to give [70 me good education. You have train'd me like a peasant, obscuring and hiding from me all gentleman-like qualities. The spirit of my father grows strong in me, and I will no longer endure it; therefore allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or give me the [75 poor allottery my father left me by testament. With that I will go buy my fortunes. — 78

Oli. And what wilt thou do? Beg, when that is spent? Well, sir, get you in. I will not long be troubled with you; you shall have some part of your will. I pray you, leave me.

Orl. I will no further offend you than becomes me for my good.

Oli. Get you with him, you old dog. 85

Adam. Is "old dog" my reward? Most true, I have lost my teeth in your service. God be with my old master! He would not have spoke such a word. 89

[Exeunt Orlando and Adam.]

Oli. Is it even so? Begin you to grow upon me? I will physic your rankness, and yet give no thousand crowns neither. Holla, Dennis!

Enter DENNIS.

Den. Calls your worship?

Oli. Was not Charles, the Duke's wrestler, here to speak with me? 95

Den. So please you, he is here at the door and importunes access to you.

Oli. Call him in. [Exit Dennis.] 'T will be a good way; and to-morrow the wrestling is.

Enter CHARLES.

Cha. Good morrow to your worship. 100

Oli. Good Monsieur Charles, what's the new news at the new court?

Cha. There's no news at the court, sir, but the old news: that is, the old Duke is banished by his younger brother the new Duke; and three or four loving lords have put themselves into voluntary exile with him, whose lands and revenues enrich the new Duke; therefore he gives them good leave to wander.

Oli. Can you tell if Rosalind, the Duke's daughter, be banished with her father? 111

Cha. O, no; for the Duke's daughter, her cousin, so loves her, being ever from their cradles bred together, that she would have followed her exile, or have died to stay behind her. She is at the court, and no less beloved of her uncle than his own daughter; and never two ladies loved as they do.

Oli. Where will the old Duke live? 119

Cha. They say he is already in the forest of Arden, and a many merry men with him; and there they live like the old Robin Hood of England. They say many young gentlemen flock to him every day, and fleet the time carelessly, as they did in the golden world. 125

Oli. What, you wrestle to-morrow before the new Duke?

Cha. Marry, do I, sir; and I came to acquaint you with a matter. I am given, sir, secretly to understand that your younger brother, Orlando, hath a disposition to come in [130] disguis'd against me to try a fall. To-morrow, sir, I wrestle for my credit; and he that escapes me without some broken limb shall acquit him well. Your brother is but young and tender; and, for your love, I would be loath [135] to foil him, as I must, for my own honour, if he come in; therefore, out of my love to you, I came hither to acquaint you withal, that either you might stay him from his intendment, or brook such disgrace well as he shall run [140] into, in that it is a thing of his own search, and altogether against my will.

Oli. Charles, I thank thee for thy love to me, which thou shalt find I will most kindly requite. I had myself notice of my brother's purpose herein, and have by underhand means [145] laboured to dissuade him from it, but he is resolute. I'll tell thee, Charles, it is the stubbornest young fellow of France; full of ambition, an envious emulator of every man's good parts, a secret and villanous contriver against [150] me his natural brother; therefore use thy discretion. I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger. And thou wert best look to 't; for if thou dost him any slight disgrace, or if he do not mightily grace himself on [155] thee, he will practise against thee by poison, entrap thee by some treacherous device, and never leave thee till he hath ta'en thy life by some indirect means or other; for, I assure thee, and almost with tears I speak it, there is not one [160] so young and so villanous this day living. I speak but brotherly of him; but should I anatomize him to thee as he is, I must blush and weep, and thou must look pale and wonder. 164

Cha. I am heartily glad I came hither to you. If he come to-morrow, I'll give him his payment. If ever he go alone again, I'll never wrestle for prize more. And so, God keep your worship!

[Exit.]

Oli. Farewell, good Charles. 169
Now will I stir this gamester. I hope I shall see an end of him; for my soul, yet I know not why, hates nothing more than he. Yet he's gentle; never school'd, and yet learned; full of noble device; of all sorts enchantingly beloved; and indeed so much in the heart of the world, and especially of my own people, who best [175] know him, that I am altogether misprised. But it shall not be so long; this wrestler shall clear all. Nothing remains but that I kindle the boy thither, which now I'll go about. [Exit. 180

SCENE II. [Lawn before the Duke's palace.]

Enter ROSALIND and CELIA.

Celi. I pray thee, Rosalind, sweet my coz, be merry.

Ros. Dear Celia, I show more mirth than I am mistress of; and would you yet I were merrier? Unless you could teach me to forget a [5] banished father, you must not learn me how to remember any extraordinary pleasure.

Celi. Herein I see thou lov'st me not with the full weight that I love thee. If my uncle, thy banished father, had banished thy uncle, the Duke my father, so thou hadst been still [10] with me, I could have taught my love to take thy father for mine. So wouldst thou, if the truth of thy love to me were so righteously temper'd as mine is to thee. 15

Ros. Well, I will forget the condition of my estate, to rejoice in yours.

Celi. You know my father hath no child but I, nor none is like to have; and, truly, when he dies, thou shalt be his heir; for what he hath taken away from thy father perforce, I²⁰ will render thee again in affection. By mine honour, I will; and when I break that oath, let me turn monster. Therefore, my sweet Rose, my dear Rose, be merry.

Ros. From henceforth I will, coz, and devise sports. Let me see; what think you of falling in love?

Cel. Marry, I prithee, do, to make sport withal. But love no man in good earnest, nor no further in sport neither than with safety³⁰ of a pure blush thou mayst in honour come off again.

Ros. What shall be our sport, then?

Cel. Let us sit and mock the good housewife Fortune from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be bestowed equally.

Ros. I would we could do so; for her benefits are mightily misplaced, and the bountiful blind woman doth most mistake in her gifts to women.

Cel. 'Tis true; for those that she makes fair she scarce makes honest, and those that she makes honest she makes very ill-favourably.

Ros. Nay, now thou goest from Fortune's office to Nature's. Fortune reigns in gifts of the world, not in the lineaments of Nature.

Enter Clown [TOUCHSTONE].

Cel. No? When Nature hath made a fair creature, may she not by Fortune fall into the fire? Though Nature hath given us wit to flout at Fortune, hath not Fortune sent in this fool to cut off the argument?

Ros. Indeed, there is Fortune too hard for Nature, when Fortune makes Nature's natural the cutter-off of Nature's wit.

Cel. Peradventure this is not Fortune's work neither, but Nature's; who, perceiving our natural wits too dull to reason of such god-desses, hath sent this natural for our whetstone; for always the dulness of the fool is the whetstone of the wits. How now, wit! whither wander you?

Touch. Mistress, you must come away to your father.

Cel. Were you made the messenger?

Touch. No, by mine honour, but I was bid to come for you.

Ros. Where learned you that oath, fool?

Touch. Of a certain knight that swore by his honour they were good pancakes, and swore by his honour the mustard was naught. Now I'll stand to it, the pancakes were naught and the mustard was good, and yet was not the knight forsworn.

Cel. How prove you that, in the great heap of your knowledge?

Ros. Ay, marry, now unmuzzle your wisdom.

Touch. Stand you both forth now. Stroke your chins, and swear by your beards that I am a knave.

Cel. By our beards, if we had them, thou art.

Touch. By my knavery, if I had it, then I were. But if you swear by that that is not, you are not forsworn. No more was this knight, swearing by his honour, for he never had any; or if he had, he had sworn it away before ever he saw those pancakes or that mustard.

Cel. Prithee, who is 't that thou meanest?

Touch. One that old Frederick, your father, loves.

Cel. My father's love is enough to honour him. Enough! speak no more of him. You'll be whipp'd for taxation one of these days.

Touch. The more pity, that fools may not speak wisely what wise men do foolishly.

Cel. By my troth, thou sayest true; for since the little wit that fools have was silenced, the little foolery that wise men have makes a great show. Here comes Monsieur the Beau.

Enter LE BEAU.

Ros. With his mouth full of news.

Cel. Which he will put on us, as pigeons feed their young.

Ros. Then shall we be news-cramm'd.

Cel. All the better; we shall be the more marketable. Bon jour, Monsieur Le Beau. What's the news?

Le Beau. Fair princess, you have lost much good sport.

Cel. Sport! Of what colour?

Le Beau. What colour, madam? How shall I answer you?

Ros. As wit and fortune will.

Touch. Or as the Destinies decrees.

Cel. Well said. That was laid on with a trowel.

Touch. Nay, if I keep not my rank, —

Ros. Thou losest thy old smell.

Le Beau. You amaze me, ladies. I would [us have told you of good wrestling, which you have lost the sight of.

Ros. Yet tell us the manner of the wrestling.

Le Beau. I will tell you the beginning; and, if it please your ladyships, you may see the end. For the best is yet to do; and here, where you are, they are coming to perform it.

Cel. Well, the beginning, that is dead and buried.

Le Beau. There comes an old man and his three sons, —

Cel. I could match this beginning with an old tale.

Le Beau. Three proper young men, of excellent growth and presence.

Ros. With bills on their necks, "Be it known unto all men by these presents,"

Le Beau. The eldest of the three wrestled with Charles, the Duke's wrestler; which Charles in a moment threw him, and broke three of his ribs, that there is little hope of [us life in him. So he serv'd the second, and so the third. Yonder they lie; the poor old man, their father, making such pitiful dole over them that all the beholders take his part with weeping.

Ros. Alas!

Touch. But what is the sport, monsieur, that the ladies have lost?

Le Beau. Why, this that I speak of.

Touch. Thus men may grow wiser every day. It is the first time that ever I heard breaking of ribs was sport for ladies. 147

Cel. Or I, I promise thee.

Ros. But is there any else longs to see this broken music in his sides? Is there yet another dotes upon rib-breaking? Shall we see this wrestling, cousin? 153

Le Beau. You must, if you stay here; for here is the place appointed for the wrestling, and they are ready to perform it. 155

Cel. Yonder, sure, they are coming. Let us now stay and see it.

Flourish. Enter DUKE [FREDERICK], Lords, ORLANDO, CHARLES, and Attendants.

Duke F. Come on. Since the youth will not be entreated, his own peril on his forwardness.

Ros. Is yonder the man? 160

Le Beau. Even he, madam.

Cel. Alas, he is too young! Yet he looks successfully.

Duke F. How now, daughter and cousin! Are you crept hither to see the wrestling? 165

Ros. Ay, my liege, so please you give us leave.

Duke F. You will take little delight in it, I can tell you, there is such odds in the man. In pity of the challenger's youth I would fain [170] dissuade him, but he will not be entreated. Speak to him, ladies; see if you can move him.

Cel. Call him hither, good Monsieur Le Beau.

Duke F. Do so; I'll not be by. 174

Le Beau. Monsieur the challenger, the princess calls for you.

Orl. I attend them with all respect and duty.

Charles the wrestler? 179

Orl. No, fair princess; he is the general challenger. I come but in, as others do, to try with him the strength of my youth.

Cel. Young gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your years. You have seen cruel proof of this man's strength. If you saw yourself with your eyes, or knew yourself with your [185] judgement, the fear of your adventure would counsel you to a more equal enterprise. We pray you, for your own sake, to embrace your own safety, and give over this attempt. 190

Ros. Do, young sir; your reputation shall not therefore be misprised. We will make it our suit to the Duke that the wrestling might not go forward. 194

Orl. I beseech you, punish me not with your hard thoughts, wherein I confess me much guilty, to deny so fair and excellent ladies any thing. But let your fair eyes and gentle wishes go with me to my trial; wherein if I be foil'd, there is but one sham'd that was never gracious; if kill'd, but one dead that is willing [200] to be so. I shall do my friends no wrong, for I have none to lament me; the world no injury, for in it I have nothing. Only in the world I fill up a place, which may be better supplied when I have made it empty. 205

Ros. The little strength that I have, I would it were with you.

Cel. And mine, to eke out hers.

Ros. Fare you well! Pray heaven I be deceiv'd in you! 210

Cel. Your heart's desires be with you!

Cha. Come, where is this young gallant that is so desirous to lie with his mother earth?

Orl. Ready, sir; but his will hath in it a more modest working. 215

Duke F. You shall try but one fall.

Cha. No, I warrant your Grace, you shall not entreat him to a second, that have so mightily persuaded him from a first. 219

Orl. You mean to mock me after; you should not have mock'd me before. But come your ways.

Ros. Now Hercules be thy speed, young man!

Cel. I would I were invisible, to catch the strong fellow by the leg. [They wrestle. 225

Ros. O excellent young man!

Cel. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eye I can tell who should down. [Shout. [Charles is thrown.]

Duke F. No more, no more.

Orl. Yes, I beseech your Grace. I am not yet well breath'd. 230

Duke F. How dost thou, Charles?

Le Beau. He cannot speak, my lord.

Duke F. Bear him away. What is thy name, young man?

Orl. Orlando, my liege; the youngest son of Sir Roland de Boys. 235

Duke F. I would thou hadst been son to some man else.

The world esteem'd thy father honourable, But I did find him still mine enemy.

Thou shouldst have better pleas'd me with this deed,

Hadst thou descended from another house. 240 But fare thee well; thou art a gallant youth.

I would thou hadst told me of another father. [Exeunt Duke [Fred., train, and Le Beau].

Cel. Were I my father, coz, would I do this?

Orl. I am more proud to be Sir Roland's son, His youngest son, — and would not change that calling, 245

To be adopted heir to Frederick.

Ros. My father lov'd Sir Roland as his soul, And all the world was of my father's mind.

Had I before known this young man his son, I should have given him tears unto entreaties, 250 Ere he should thus have ventur'd.

Cel. Gentle cousin, Let us go thank him and encourage him.

My father's rough and envious disposition Sticks me at heart. Sir, you have well deserv'd.

If you do keep your promises in love 255 But justly, as you have exceeded all promise, Your mistress shall be happy.

Ros. Gentleman, [Giving him a chain from her neck.]

Wear this for me, one out of suits with fortune, That could give more, but that her hand lacks means.

Shall we go, coz?

Cel. Ay. Fare you well, fair gentleman.

Orl. Can I not say, I thank you? My better parts
Are all thrown down, and that which here stands up

Is but a quintain, a mere lifeless block.

Ros. He calls us back. My pride fell with my fortunes;
I'll ask him what he would. Did you call,
sir?

Sir, you have wrestled well, and overthrown
More than your enemies.

Cel. Will you go, coz?

Ros. Have with you. Fare you well.

[Exeunt [Rosalind and Celia].]

Orl. What passion hangs these weights upon my tongue?

I cannot speak to her, yet she urg'd conference.

Re-enter LE BEAU.

O poor Orlando, thou art overthrown!

Or Charles or something weaker masters thee.

Le Beau. Good sir; I do in friendship counsel
you

To leave this place. Albeit you have deserv'd
High commendation, true applause, and love,
Yet such is now the Duke's condition,
That he misconstrues all that you have done.
The Duke is humorous: — what he is, indeed,
More suits you to conceive than I to speak of.

Orl. I thank you, sir; and, pray you, tell me
this:

Which of the two was daughter of the Duke,
That here was at the wrestling?

Le Beau. Neither his daughter, if we judge
by manners;

But yet, indeed, the taller is his daughter.
The other is daughter to the banish'd Duke,
And here detain'd by her usurping uncle
To keep his daughter company; whose loves
Are dearer than the natural bond of sisters.

But I can tell you that of late this Duke
Hath ta'en displeasure 'gainst his gentle niece,
Grounded upon no other argument

But that the people praise her for her virtues,
And pity her for her good father's sake;

And, on my life, his malice 'gainst the lady
Will suddenly break forth. Sir, fare you
well.

Hereafter, in a better world than this,
I shall desire more love and knowledge of you.

Orl. I rest much bounden to you; fare you
well.

[Exit Le Beau.]
Thus must I from the smoke into the smother,
From tyrant Duke unto a tyrant brother.
But heavenly Rosalind!

SCENE III. [A room in the palace.]

Enter CELIA and ROSALIND.

Cel. Why, cousin! why, Rosalind! Cupid have mercy! not a word?

Ros. Not one to throw at a dog.

Cel. No, thy words are too precious to be cast away upon curs; throw some of them at me. Come, lame me with reasons.

Ros. Then there were two cousins laid up, when the one should be lam'd with reasons and the other mad without any.

Cel. But is all this for your father?

Ros. No, some of it is for my child's father.
O, how full of briers is this working-day world!

Cel. They are but burs, cousin, thrown upon thee in holiday foolery. If we walk not in the trodden paths, our very petticoats will catch
them.

Ros. I could shake them off my coat. These burs are in my heart.

Cel. Hem them away.

Ros. I would try, if I could cry hem and have him.

Cel. Come, come, wrestle with thy affections.

Ros. O, they take the part of a better wrestler than myself!

Cel. O, a good wish upon you! you will try in time, in despite of a fall. But, turning these jests out of service, let us talk in good earnest. Is it possible, on such a sudden you should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir Roland's youngest son?

Ros. The Duke my father lov'd his father dearly.

Cel. Doth it therefore ensue that you should love his son dearly? By this kind of chase,
I should hate him, for my father hated his father dearly; yet I hate not Orlando.

Ros. No, faith, hate him not, for my sake.

Cel. Why should I not? Doth he not deserve
well?

Enter DUKE FREDERICK, with Lords.

Ros. Let me love him for that, and do you love him because I do. Look, here comes the Duke.

Cel. With his eyes full of anger.

Duke F. Mistress, dispatch you with your safest haste,

And get you from our court.

Ros. Me, uncle?

Duke F. You, cousin.

Within these ten days if that thou be'st found
So near our public court as twenty miles,
Thou diest for it.

Ros. I do beseech your Grace,
Let me the knowledge of my fault bear with
me.

If with myself I hold intelligence,
Or have acquaintance with mine own desires;
If that I do not dream, or be not frantic, —
As I do trust I am not — then, dear uncle,
Never so much as in a thought unborn
Did I offend your Highness.

Duke F. Thus do all traitors.
If their purgation did consist in words,
They are as innocent as grace itself.
Let it suffice thee that I trust thee not.

Ros. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a traitor.

Tell me whereon the likelihoods depends.

Duke F. Thou art thy father's daughter;
there's enough.

Ros. So was I when your Highness took his dukedom.

So was I when your Highness banish'd him.

Treason is not inherited, my lord;
Or, if we did derive it from our friends,
What 's that to me? My father was no traitor. 65
Then, good my liege, mistake me not so much
To think my poverty is treacherous.

Cel. Dear sovereign, hear me speak.

Duke F. Ay, Celia; we stay'd her for your sake,

Else had she with her father rang'd along. 70

Cel. I did not then entreat to have her stay;
It was your pleasure and your own remorse.

I was too young that time to value her,
But now I know her. If she be a traitor,

Why so am I. We still have slept together, 75
Rose at an instant, learn'd, play'd, eat together;
And wheresoe'er we went, like Juno's swans,

Still we went coupled and inseparable.

Duke F. She is too subtle for thee; and her smoothness,

Her very silence, and her patience 80
Speak to the people, and they pity her.

Thou art a fool. She robs thee of thy name,
And thou wilt show more bright and seem more virtuous

When she is gone. Then open not thy lips.
Firm and irrevocable is my doom. 85

Which I have pass'd upon her; she is banish'd.
Cel. Pronounce that sentence then on me,

my liege;

I cannot live out of her company.

Duke F. You are a fool. You, niece, provide yourself.

If you outstay the time, upon mine honour, 90
And in the greatness of my word, you die.

[Exeunt Duke Frederick and Lords.]

Cel. O my poor Rosalind, whither wilt thou go?

Wilt thou change fathers? I will give thee mine.

I charge thee, be not thou more griev'd than I am.

Ros. I have more cause.

Cel. Thou hast not, cousin;
Prithae, be cheerful. Know'st thou not, the

Duke
Hath banish'd me, his daughter?

Ros. That he hath not.

Cel. No, hath not? Rosalind lacks then the love

Which teacheth thee that thou and I am one.
Shall we be sund' red? Shall we part, sweet girl? 100

No; let my father seek another heir.
Therefore devise with me how we may fly,

Whither to go and what to bear with us;
And do not seek to take your change upon you,

To bear your griefs yourself, and leave me out; 105

For, by this heaven, now at our sorrows pale,
Say what thou canst, I'll go along with thee.

Ros. Why, whither shall we go?

Cel. To seek my uncle in the forest of Arden.

Ros. Alas, what danger will it be to us, 110
Maids as we are, to travel forth so far!

Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold.

Cel. I'll put myself in poor and mean attire,

And with a kind of umber smirch my face.
The like do you. So shall we pass along 115
And never stir assailants.

Ros. Were it not better,
Because that I am more than common tall,

That I did suit me all points like a man?
A gallant curtle-axe upon my thigh, 119

A boar-spear in my hand; and—in my heart
Lie there what hidden woman's fear there

will—
We'll have a swashing and a martial outside,

As many other mannish cowards have
That do outface it with their semblances.

Cel. What shall I call thee when thou art a man? 125

Ros. I'll have no worse a name than Jove's own page,

And therefore look you call me Ganymede.
But what will you be call'd?

Cel. Something that hath a reference to my state;

No longer Celia, but Aliena. 130

Ros. But, cousin, what if we assay'd to steal
The clownish fool out of your father's court?

Would he not be a comfort to our travel?

Cel. He'll go along o'er the wide world with me.

Leave me alone to woo him. Let's away, 135
And get our jewels and our wealth together,

Devise the fittest time and safest way
To hide us from pursuit that will be made

After my flight. Now go we in content
To liberty and not to banishment. [Exeunt. 140

ACT II

SCENE I. [The Forest of Arden.]

Enter DUKE SENIOR, AMIENS, and two or three LORDS, like foresters.

Duke S. Now, my co-mates and brothers in exile,

Hath not old custom made this life more sweet Than that of painted pomp? Are not these woods

More free from peril than the envious court?

Here feel we not the penalty of Adam, 5
The seasons' difference, as the icy fang

And churlish chiding of the winter's wind,
Which, when it bites and blows upon my body,

Even till I shrink with cold, I smile and say,
"This is no flattery: these are counsellors 10

That feelingly persuade me what I am."
Sweet are the uses of adversity,

Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head;

And this our life, exempt from public haunt, 15
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,

Sermons in stones, and good in every thing.

Ami. I would not change it. Happy is your Grace,

That can translate the stubbornness of fortune

Into so quiet and so sweet a style. 20

Duke S. Come, shall we go and kill us venison?

And yet it irks me the poor dappled fools,
Being native burghers of this desert city,
Should in their own confines with forked heads
Have their round haunches gor'd.

1. Lord. Indeed, my lord,
The melancholy Jaques grieves at that;
And, in that kind, swears you do more usurp
Than doth your brother that hath banish'd you.
To-day my Lord of Amiens and myself
Did steal behind him as he lay along
Under an oak whose antique root peeps out
Upon the brook that brawls along this wood;
To the which place a poor sequest' red stag,
That from the hunter's aim had ta'en a hurt,
Did come to languish; and indeed, my lord,
The wretched animal heav'd forth such groans,
That their discharge did stretch his leathern coat

Almost to bursting, and the big round tears
Cours'd one another down his innocent nose
In piteous chase; and thus the hairy fool,
Much marked of the melancholy Jaques,
Stood on the extremest verge of the swift brook,

Augmenting it with tears.

Duke S. But what said Jaques?
Did he not moralize this spectacle?

1. Lord. O, yes, into a thousand smiles.
First, for his weeping into the needless stream:
"Poor deer," quoth he, "thou mak'st a testament

As windings do, giving thy sum of more
To that which had too much." Then, being there alone,

Left and abandoned of his velvet friends,
"Tis right," quoth he; "thus misery doth part
The flux of company." Anon a careless herd,
Full of the pasture, jumps along by him
And never stays to greet him. "Ay," quoth
Jaques,

"Sweep on, you fat and greasy citizens.
'Tis just the fashion. Wherefore do you look Upon that poor and broken bankrupt there?"
Thus most invectively he pierceth through
The body of the country, city, court,
Yea, and of this our life; swearing that we
Are mere usurpers, tyrants, and what's worse,
To fright the animals and to kill them up
In their assign'd and native dwelling-place.

Duke S. And did you leave him in this contemplation?

2. Lord. We did, my lord, weeping and commenting
Upon the sobbing deer.

Duke S. Show me the place.
I love to cope him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter.

1. Lord. I'll bring you to him straight.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [A room in the palace.]

Enter DUKE FREDERICK, with LORDS.

Duke F. Can it be possible that no man saw
them?

It cannot be. Some villains of my court
Are of consent and sufferance in this.

1. Lord. I cannot hear of any that did see her.
The ladies, her attendants of her chamber,
Saw her a-bed, and in the morning early
They found the bed untreasur'd of their mistress.

2. Lord. My lord, the roynish clown, at whom so oft

Your Grace was wont to laugh, is also missing.
Hisperia, the princess' gentlewoman,
Confesses that she secretly o'erheard
Your daughter and her cousin much commend
The parts and graces of the wrestler
That did but lately foil the sinewy Charles;
And she believes, wherever they are gone,
That youth is surely in their company.

Duke F. Send to his brother. Fetch that gallant hither.

If he be absent, bring his brother to me;
I'll make him find him. Do this suddenly,
And let not search and inquisition quail
To bring again these foolish runaways.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [Before Oliver's house.]

Enter ORLANDO and ADAM, meeting.

Orl. Who's there?

Adam. What, my young master? O my gentle master!

O my sweet master! O you memory
Of old Sir Roland! Why, what make you
here?

Why are you virtuous? Why do people love
you?

And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant?

Why would you be so fond to overcome
The bonny priser of the humorous Duke?
Your praise is come too swiftly home before
you.

Know you not, master, to some kind of men
Their graces serve them but as enemies?
No more do yours. Your virtues, gentle master,

Are sanctified and holy traitors to you.
O, what a world is this, when what is comely
Envenoms him that bears it!

Orl. Why, what's the matter?

Adam. O unhappy youth!
Come not within these doors! Within this roof

The enemy of all your graces lives.
Your brother—no, no brother; yet the son—
Yet not the son, I will not call him son,
Of him I was about to call his father,— Hath heard your praises, and this night he means

To burn the lodging where you use to lie
And you within it. If he fail of that,
He will have other means to cut you off.
I overheard him and his practices.
This is no place; this house is but a butchery.
Abhor it, fear it, do not enter it.

Orl. Why, whither, Adam, wouldst thou have me go?

Adam. No matter whither, so you come not here. 30

Orl. What, wouldst thou have me go and beg my food?

Or with a base and boisterous sword enforce
A thievish living on the common road?

This I must do, or know not what to do;

Yet this I will not do, do how I can. 35

I rather will subject me to the malice

Of a diverted blood and bloody brother.

Adam. But do not so. I have five hundred crowns,

The thrifty hire I saved under your father,

Which I did store to be my foster-nurse 40

When service should in my old limbs lie lame,

And unregarded age in corners thrown.

Take that, and He that doth the ravens feed,

Yea, providently caters for the sparrow,

Be comfort to my age! Here is the gold. 45

All this I give you. Let me be your servant.

Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty;

For in my youth I never did apply

Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood,

Nor did not with unbashful forehead woo 50

The means of weakness and debility;

Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,

Frosty, but kindly. Let me go with you;

I'll do the service of a younger man

In all your business and necessities. 55

Orl. O good old man, how well in thee appears

The constant service of the antique world,

When service sweat for duty, not for me!

Thou art not for the fashion of these times,

Where none will sweat but for promotion, 60

And having that do choke their service up

Even with the having. It is not so with thee.

But, poor old man, thou prun'st a rotten tree,

That cannot so much as a blossom yield 65

In lieu of all thy pains and husbandry.

But come thy ways; we'll go along together,

And ere we have thy youthful wages spent,

We'll light upon some settled low content.

Adam. Master, go on, and I will follow thee

To the last gasp, with truth and loyalty. 70

From seventeen years till now almost fourscore

Here lived I, but now live here no more.

At seventeen years many their fortunes seek,

But at fourscore it is too late a week;

Yet fortune cannot recompense me better 75

Than to die well and not my master's debtor.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [The Forest of Arden.]

Enter ROSALIND for Ganymede, CELIA for Aliena, and Clown, alias TOUCHSTONE.

Ros. O Jupiter, how weary are my spirits!

Touch. I care not for my spirits, if my legs were not weary.

Ros. I could find in my heart to disgrace my man's apparel and to cry like a woman; but I must comfort the weaker vessel, as doublet [s and hose ought to show itself courageous to petticoat; therefore, courage, good Aliena.

Cel. I pray you, bear with me; I cannot go no further. 10

Touch. For my part, I had rather bear with you than bear you. Yet I should bear no cross if I did bear you, for I think you have no money in your purse.

Ros. Well, this is the forest of Arden. 15

Touch. Ay, now am I in Arden, the more fool I. When I was at home, I was in a better place; but travellers must be content.

Enter CORIN and SILVIUS.

Ros. Ay, be so, good Touchstone. Look you, who comes here; a young man and an old in solemn talk. 21

Cor. That is the way to make her scorn you still.

Sil. O Corin, that thou knew'st how I do love her!

Cor. I partly guess; for I have lov'd ere
now.

Sil. No, Corin, being old, thou canst not guess. 25

Though in thy youth thou wast as true a lover

As ever sigh'd upon a midnight pillow.

But if thy love were ever like to mine,—

As sure I think did never man love so—

How many actions most ridiculous 30

Hast thou been drawn to by thy fantasy?

Cor. Into a thousand that I have forgotten.

Sil. O, thou didst then ne'er love so heartily!

If thou rememb'rest not the slightest folly

That ever love did make thee run into, 35

Thou hast not lov'd;

Or if thou hast not sat as I do now,

Wearing thy hearer in thy mistress' praise,

Thou hast not lov'd;

Or if thou hast not broke from company 40

Abruptly, as my passion now makes me,

Thou hast not lov'd.

O Phoebe, Phoebe, Phoebe! [Exit.]

Ros. Alas, poor shepherd! searching of thy wound,

I have by hard adventure found mine own. 45

Touch. And I mine. I remember, when I was in love I broke my sword upon a stone, and bid him take that for coming a-night to

Jane Smile; and I remember the kissing of her batlet and the cow's dugs that her pretty chopt hands had milk'd; and I remember the woo- 50

ing of a peacock instead of her; from whom I took two cods and, giving her them again, said with weeping tears, "Wear these for my sake."

We that are true lovers run into strange capers;

but as all is mortal in nature, so is all nature

in love mortal in folly. 57

Ros. Thou speakest wiser than thou art ware of.

Touch. Nay, I shall ne'er be ware of mine own wit till I break my shins against it. 60

Ros. Jove, Jove! this shepherd's passion

Is much upon my fashion.

Touch. And mine; but it grows something stale with me.

Cel. I pray you, one of you question yond

man
If he for gold will give us any food. 65

I faint almost to death.

Touch. Holla, you clown!

Ros. Peace, fool; he's not thy kinsman.

Cor. Who calls?

Touch. Your betters, sir.

Cor. Else are they very wretched.

Ros. Peace, I say. Good even to you, friend.

Cor. And to you, gentle sir, and to you all.

Ros. I prithee, shepherd, if that love or gold

Can in this desert place buy entertainment,

Bring us where we may rest ourselves and feed.

Here's a young maid with travel much oppressed

And faints for succour.

Cor. Fair sir, I pity her, 75

And wish, for her sake more than for mine own,

My fortunes were more able to relieve her;

But I am shepherd to another man,

And do not shear the fleeces that I graze.

My master is of churlish disposition, 80

And little reckes to find the way to heaven

By doing deeds of hospitality.

Besides, his cote, his flocks, and bounds of feed

Are now on sale, and at our sheep-cote now,

By reason of his absence, there is nothing 85

That you will feed on; but what is, come see,

And in my voice most welcome shall you be.

Ros. What is he that shall buy his flock and pasture?

Cor. That young swain that you saw here but erewhile,

That little cares for buying any thing. 90

Ros. I pray thee, if it stand with honesty,

Buy thou the cottage, pasture, and the flock,

And thou shalt have to pay for it of us.

Cel. And we will mend thy wages. I like this place,

And willingly could waste my time in it. 95

Cor. Assuredly the thing is to be sold.

Go with me. If you like upon report

The soil, the profit, and this kind of life,

I will your very faithful feeder be,

And buy it with your gold right suddenly. 100

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. [The forest.]

Enter AMIENS, JAUQUES, and others.

SONG.

[Ami.] Under the greenwood tree

Who loves to lie with me,

And turn his merry note

Unto the sweet bird's throat,

Come hither, come hither, come hither! 5

Here shall he see

No enemy

But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. More, more, I prithee, more.

Ami. It will make you melancholy, Monsieur Jaques. 11

Jaq. I thank it. More, I prithee, more. I can suck melancholy out of a song, as a weasel sucks eggs. More, I prithee, more.

Ami. My voice is ragged. I know I cannot please you. 16

Jaq. I do not desire you to please me; I do desire you to sing. Come, more; another stanza. Call you 'em stanzas?

Ami. What you will, Monsieur Jaques. 20

Jaq. Nay, I care not for their names; they owe me nothing. Will you sing?

Ami. More at your request than to please myself. 24

Jaq. Well then, if ever I thank any man, I'll thank you; but that they call compliment is like the encounter of two dog-apes; and when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I have given him a penny and he renders me the beggarly thanks. Come, sing; and you that will not, hold your tongues. 31

Ami. Well, I'll end the song. Sirs, cover the while; the Duke will drink under this tree. He hath been all this day to look you.

Jaq. And I have been all this day to avoid 35 him. He is too disputable for my company. I think of as many matters as he; but I give heaven thanks, and make no boast of them. Come, warble, come.

SONG.

[All together here.]

Who doth ambition shun, 40

And loves to live i' the sun,

Seeking the food he eats,

And pleased with what he gets,

Come hither, come hither, come hither!

Here shall he see 45

No enemy

But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. I'll give you a verse to this note, that I made yesterday in despite of my invention.

Ami. And I'll sing it. 50

Jaq. Thus it goes:—

If it do come to pass

That any man turn ass,

Leaving his wealth and ease

A stubborn will to please, 55

Ducdame, ducdame, ducdame!

Here shall he see

Gross fools as he,

As if he will come to me.

Ami. What's that "ducdame"? 60

Jaq. 'Tis a Greek invocation, to call fools into a circle. I'll go sleep, if I can; if I cannot, I'll rail against all the first-born of Egypt.

Ami. And I'll go seek the Duke; his banquet is prepared. [Exeunt. 65

SCENE VI. [The forest.]

Enter ORLANDO and ADAM.

Adam. Dear master, I can go no further. O, I die for food! Here lie I down, and measure out my grave. Farewell, kind master.

Orl. Why, how now, Adam! no greater heart in thee? Live a little; comfort a little; cheer 5 thyself a little. If this uncouth forest yield any thing savage, I will either be food for it or bring it for food to thee. Thy conceit is nearer death than thy powers. For my sake be comfortable; hold death awhile at the arm's end. I will here be with thee presently; and if I 10 bring thee not something to eat, I will give thee leave to die; but if thou diest before I come, thou art a mocker of my labour. Well said! thou look'st cheerly, and I'll be with thee quickly. Yet thou liest in the bleak air. ¹⁵ Come, I will bear thee to some shelter; and thou shalt not die for lack of a dinner if there live any thing in this desert. Cheerly, good Adam! [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. [The forest.]

[A table set out.] Enter DUKE senior, [AMIENS] and LORDS, like outlaws.

Duke S. I think he be transform'd into a beast,

For I can no where find him like a man.

1. Lord. My lord, he is but even now gone hence.

Here was he merry, hearing of a song.

Duke S. If he, compact of jars, grow musical, ⁵

We shall have shortly discord in the spheres.

Go, seek him; tell him I would speak with him.

Enter JAQUES.

1. Lord. He saves my labour by his own approach.

Duke S. Why, how now, monsieur! what a life is this,

That your poor friends must woo your company? What, you look merrily! ¹¹

Jaq. A fool, a fool! I met a fool i' the forest, A motley fool. A miserable fool!

As I do live by food, I met a fool;

Who laid him down and bask'd him in the sun, ¹⁵

And rail'd on Lady Fortune in good terms, In good set terms, and yet a motley fool.

"Good morrow, fool," quoth I. "No, sir," quoth he,

"Call me not fool till heaven hath sent me fortune."

And then he drew a dial from his poke, ²⁰

And, looking on it with lack-lustre eye, Says very wisely, "It is ten o'clock.

Thus we may see," quoth he, "how the world wags.

"Tis but an hour ago since it was nine; And after one hour more 't will be eleven; ²⁵

And so, from hour to hour, we ripe and ripe, And then, from hour to hour, we rot and rot;

And thereby hangs a tale." When I did hear The motley fool thus moral on the time,

My lungs began to crow like chanticleer, ³⁰

That fools should be so deep-contemplative; And I did laugh sans intermission

An hour by his dial. O noble fool!

A worthy fool! Motley's the only wear, ³⁵

Duke S. What fool is this?

Jaq. O worthy fool! One that hath been a courtier,

And says, if ladies be but young and fair, They have the gift to know it; and in his brain,

Which is as dry as the remainder biscuit

After a voyage, he hath strange places cramm'd With observation, the which he vents ⁴¹

In mangled forms. O that I were a fool! I am ambitious for a motley coat.

Duke S. Thou shalt have one.

Jaq. It is my only suit; — Provided that you weed your better judgements

Of all opinion that grows rank in them ⁴⁶

That I am wise. I must have liberty Withal, as large a charter as the wind,

To blow on whom I please; for so fools have; And they that are most galled with my folly, ⁵⁰

They must most laugh. And why, sir, must they so?

The "why" is plain as way to parish church. He that a fool doth very wisely hit

Doth very foolishly, although he smart, [Not to] seem senseless of the bob; if not, ⁵⁵

The wise man's folly is anatomiz'd Even by the squandering glances of the fool.

Invest me in my motley. Give me leave To speak my mind, and I will through and through Cleanse the foul body of the infected world, ⁶⁰ If they will patiently receive my medicine.

Duke S. Fie on thee! I can tell what thou wouldst do.

Jaq. What, for a counter, would I do but good?

Duke S. Most mischievous foul sin, in chiding sin.

For thou thyself hast been a libertine, ⁶⁵ As sensual as the brutish sting itself;

And all the embossed sores and headed evils, That thou with license of free foot hast caught,

Wouldst thou dorgorge into the general world. Jaq. Why, who cries out on pride, ⁷⁰

That can therein tax any private party? Doth it not flow as hugely as the sea,

Till that the wearer's very means do ebb? What woman in the city do I name,

When that I say the city-woman bears ⁷⁵ The cost of princes on unworthy shoulders?

Who can come in and say that I mean her, When such a one as she such is her neighbour?

Or what is he of basest function, That says his bravery is not on my cost, ⁸⁰

Thinking that I mean him, but therein suits His folly to the mettle of my speech?

There then; how then? what then? Let me see wherein

My tongue hath wrong'd him. If it do him right,

Then he hath wrong'd himself. If he be free, ⁸⁵ Why then my taxing like a wild-goose flies, Unclaim'd of any man. But who comes here?

Enter ORLANDO [with his sword drawn].

Orl. Forbear, and eat no more.

Jaq. Why, I have eat none yet.

Orl. Nor shalt not, till necessity be serv'd.

Jaq. Of what kind should this cock come of? ⁹⁰

Duke S. Art thou thus bolden'd, man, by thy distress?

Or else a rude despiser of good manners, That in civility thou seem'st so empty?

Orl. You touch'd my vein at first. The thorny point

Of bare distress hath ta'en from me the show⁹⁵
Of smooth civility. Yet am I inland bred
And know some nurture. But forbear, I say.
He dies that touches any of this fruit
Till I and my affairs are answered.

Jag. An you will not be answer'd with reason,
I must die.¹⁰¹

Duke S. What would you have? Your gentleness shall force,
More than your force move us to gentleness.

Orl. I almost die for food; and let me have it.

Duke S. Sit down and feed, and welcome to our table.¹⁰⁵

Orl. Speak you so gently? Pardon me, I pray you.

I thought that all things had been savage here,
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of stern commandment. But whate'er you are

That in this desert inaccessible¹¹⁰

Under the shade of melancholy boughs
Lose and neglect the creeping hours of time;
If ever you have look'd on better days,
If ever been where bells have knoll'd to church,

If ever sat at any good man's feast,¹¹⁵
If ever from your eyelids wip'd a tear
And know what 't is to pity and be pitied,
Let gentleness my strong enforcement be;
In the which hope I blush, and hide my sword.

Duke S. True is it that we have seen better days,¹²⁰

And have with holy bell been knoll'd to church,
And sat at good men's feasts, and wip'd our eyes

Of drops that sacred pity hath engend'red;
And therefore sit you down in gentleness
And take upon command what help we have¹²⁵

That to your wanting may be minist'red.

Orl. Then but forbear your food a little while,

Whiles, like a doe, I go to find my fawn
And give it food. There is an old poor man,
Who after me hath many a weary step¹³⁰
Limp'd in pure love. Till he be first suffic'd, Oppress'd with two weak evils, age and hunger,

I will not touch a bit.

Duke S. Go find him out,
And we will nothing waste till you return.

Orl. I thank ye; and be blest for your good comfort!^{[Exit.] 135}

Duke S. Thou seest we are not all alone unhappy.

This wide and universal theatre
Presents more woeful pageants than the scene
Wherein we play in.

Jag. All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players.¹⁴⁰
They have their exits and their entrances,
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.¹⁴⁴
Then the whining school-boy, with his satchel

And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school. And then the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow. Then a soldier, Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard,¹⁵⁰

Jealous in honour, sudden, and quick in quarrel,

Seeking the bubble reputation Even in the cannon's mouth. And then the justice,

In fair round belly with good capon lin'd,
With eyes severe and beard of formal cut,¹⁵⁵

Full of wise saws and modern instances;
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon,

With spectacles on nose and pouch on side,¹⁶⁰
His youthful hose, well sav'd, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,

Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness and mere oblivion,¹⁶⁵
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans every thing.

Re-enter ORLANDO, with ADAM.

Duke S. Welcome. Set down your venerable burden,
And let him feed.

Orl. I thank you most for him.
Adam. So had you need;

I scarce can speak to thank you for myself.¹⁷⁰
Duke S. Welcome; fall to, I will not trouble you

As yet, to question you about your fortunes.
Give us some music; and, good cousin, sing.

SONG.

[Ami.] Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
Thou art not so unkind¹⁷⁵
As man's ingratitude;
Thy tooth is not so keen,
Because thou art not seen,
Although thy breath be rude.

Heigh-ho! sing, heigh-ho! unto the green holly.¹⁸⁰

Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere folly.

Then, heigh-ho, the holly!
This life is most jolly.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
That dost not bite so nigh¹⁸⁵
As benefits forgot;
Though thou the waters warp,
Thy sting is not so sharp
As friend rememb'red not.

Heigh-ho! sing, etc.¹⁹⁰

Duke S. If that you were the good Sir Roland's son,
As you have whisper'd faithfully you were,
And as mine eye doth his effigies witness
Most truly limn'd and living in your face,
Be truly welcome hither. I am the Duke¹⁹⁵

That lov'd your father. The residue of your fortune,
Go to my cave and tell me. Good old man,
Thou art right welcome as thy master is.
Support him by the arm. Give me your hand,
And let me all your fortunes understand. ²⁰⁰

[Exeunt.]

ACT III

SCENE I. [A room in the palace.]

Enter DUKE [FREDERICK], OLIVER, and Lords.

Duke F. Not see him since? Sir, sir, that cannot be.

But were I not the better part made mercy,
I should not seek an absent argument
Of my revenge, thou present. But look to it.
Find out thy brother, wheresoe'er he is. ⁵
Seek him with candle! Bring him dead or living

Within this twelvemonth, or turn thou no more
To seek a living in our territory.
Thy lands and all things that thou dost call thine

Worth seizure do we seize into our hands, ¹⁰
Till thou canst quit thee by thy brother's mouth
Of what we think against thee.

Oli. O that your Highness knew my heart in this!

I never lov'd my brother in my life.

Duke F. More villain thou. Well, push him out of doors; ¹⁵

And let my officers of such a nature
Make an extent upon his house and lands.
Do this expediently and turn him going. ²⁰

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [The forest.]

Enter ORLANDO [with a paper].

Orl. Hang there, my verse, in witness of my love;

And thou, thrice-crowned queen of night,
survey

With thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphere above,

Thy huntress' name that my full life doth sway.

O Rosalind! these trees shall be my books, ⁵
And in their barks my thoughts I'll character;

That every eye which in this forest looks Shall see thy virtue witness'd every where.

Run, run, Orlando; carve on every tree
The fair, the chaste, and unexpressive she. ¹⁰

[Exit.]

Enter CORIN and Clown [TOUCHSTONE].

Cor. And how like you this shepherd's life,
Master Touchstone?

Touch. Truly, shepherd, in respect of itself, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a shepherd's life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it very well; but in respect ¹⁵ that it is private, it is a very vile life. Now, in respect it is in the fields, it pleaseth me well; but in respect it is not in the court, it is tedious. As it is a spare life, look you, it fits my humour well; but as there is no more plenty ²⁰ in it, it goes much against my stomach. Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd?

Cor. No more but that I know the more one sickens the worse at ease he is; and that he that wants money, means, and content is ²⁵ without three good friends; that the property of rain is to wet and fire to burn; that good pasture makes fat sheep, and that a great cause of the night is lack of the sun; that he that hath learned no wit by nature nor art may ³⁰ complain of good breeding or comes of a very dull kindred.

Touch. Such a one is a natural philosopher. Wast ever in court, shepherd?

Cor. No, truly. ³⁵

Touch. Then thou art damn'd.

Cor. Nay, I hope.

Touch. Truly, thou art damn'd, like an ill-roasted egg all on one side. ⁴⁰

Cor. For not being at court? Your reason.

Touch. Why, if thou never wast at court, thou never saw'st good manners; if thou never saw'st good manners, then thy manners must be wicked; and wickedness is sin, and sin is damnation. Thou art in a parlous state, shepherd. ⁴⁵

Cor. Not a whit, Touchstone. Those that are good manners at the court are as ridiculous in the country as the behaviour of the country is most mockable at the court. You told me you salute not at the court but you kiss your hands. That courtesy would be uncleanly if courtiers were shepherds. ⁵⁰

Touch. Instance, briefly; come, instance.

Cor. Why, we are still handling our ewes, and their fells, you know, are greasy. ⁵⁵

Touch. Why, do not your courtier's hands sweat? And is not the grease of a mutton as wholesome as the sweat of a man? Shallow, shallow. A better instance, I say; come.

Cor. Besides, our hands are hard. ⁶⁰

Touch. Your lips will feel them the sooner. Shallow again. A more sounder instance, come.

Cor. And they are often tarr'd over with the surgery of our sheep; and would you have us kiss tar? The courtier's hands are perfum'd with civet. ⁶⁵

Touch. Most shallow man! thou worm's-meat, in respect of a good piece of flesh indeed! Learn of the wise, and perpend. Civet is of a baser birth than tar, the very uncleanly flux of a cat. Mend the instance, shepherd. ⁷⁰

Cor. You have too courtly a wit for me. I'll rest.

Touch. Wilt thou rest damn'd? God help thee, shallow man! God make incision in thee! Thou art raw. ⁷⁵

Cor. Sir, I am a true labourer. I earn that I eat, get that I wear, owe no man hate, envy no man's happiness, glad of other men's good, content with my harm, and the greatest of my pride is to see my ewes graze and my lambs suck. ⁸⁰

Touch. That is another simple sin in you, to bring the ewes and the rams together, and to offer to get your living by the copulation of cattle; to be bawd to a bell-wether, and to betray a she-lamb of a twelvemonth to a crooked-pated, old, cuckoldly ram, out of all reasonable match. If thou beest not damn'd for this, the devil himself will have no shepherds. I cannot see else how thou shouldst scape.

Cora. Here comes young Master Ganymede, my new mistress's brother.

Enter ROSALIND [with a paper, reading].

Ros. From the east to western Ind,
No jewel is like Rosalind.
Her worth, being mounted on the wind,
Through all the world bears Rosalind.
All the pictures fairest lin'd
Are but black to Rosalind.
Let no face be kept in mind
But the fair of Rosalind.

Touch. I'll rhyme you so eight years together, dinners and suppers and sleeping-hours excepted. It is the right butter-women's rank to market.

Ros. Out, fool!

Touch. For a taste:—

If a hart do lack a hind,
Let him seek out Rosalind.
If the cat will after kind,
So be sure will Rosalind.
Wint' red garments must be lin'd,
So must slender Rosalind.
They that reap must sheaf and bind,
Then to cart with Rosalind.
Sweetest nut hath sourest rind,
Such a nut is Rosalind.
He that sweetest rose will find,
Must find love's prick and Rosalind.

This is the very false gallop of verses. Why do you infect yourself with them?

Ros. Peace, you dull fool! I found them on a tree.

Touch. Truly, the tree yields bad fruit.

Ros. I'll graff it with you, and then I shall graff it with a medlar. Then it will be the earliest fruit i' the country; for you'll be rotten ere you be half ripe, and that's the right virtue of the medlar.

Touch. You have said; but whether wisely or no, let the forest judge.

Enter CELIA, with a writing.

Ros. Peace!

Here comes my sister, reading; stand aside.

Cel. [Reads.] Why should this a desert be?

For it is unpeopled? No!

Tongues I'll hang on every tree,

That shall civil sayings show:

Some, how brief the life of man

Runs his erring pilgrimage,

That the stretching of a span

Buckles in his sum of age;

Some, of violated vows

'Twixt the souls of friend and friend;

But upon the fairest boughs,

Or at every sentence end,
Will I Rosalinda write,

Teaching all that read to know
The quintessence of every sprite
Heaven would in little show.

Therefore Heaven Nature charg'd

That one body should be fill'd

With all graces wide-enlarg'd.

Nature presently distill'd

Helen's cheek, but not her heart,

Cleopatra's majesty,

Atalanta's better part,

Sad Lucretia's modesty.

Thus Rosalind of many parts

By heavenly synod was devis'd;

Of many faces, eyes, and hearts,

To have the touches dearest priz'd.

Heaven would that she these gifts should have,

And I to live and die her slave.

Ros. O most gentle pulpit! what tedious homily of love have you wearied your parishioners withal, and never cri'd "Have patience, good people!"

Cel. How now! Back, friends! Shepherd, go off a little. Go with him, sirrah.

Touch. Come, shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat; though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage.

[Exeunt [Corin and Touchstone].]

Cel. Didst thou hear these verses?

Ros. O, yes, I heard them all, and more, too; for some of them had in them more feet than the verses would bear.

Cel. That's no matter. The feet might bear the verses.

Ros. Ay, but the feet were lame and could not bear themselves without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

Cel. But didst thou hear without wondering how thy name should be hang'd and carved upon these trees?

Ros. I was seven of the nine days out of the wonder before you came; for look here what I found on a palm tree. I was never so berhym'd since Pythagoras' time, that I was an Irish rat, which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Trow you who hath done this?

Ros. Is it a man?

Cel. And a chain, that you once wore, about his neck. Change you colour?

Ros. I prithee, who?

Cel. O Lord, Lord! it is a hard matter for friends to meet; but mountains may be removed with earthquakes and so encounter.

Ros. Nay, but who is it?

Cel. Is it possible?

Ros. Nay, I prithee now with most petitionary vehemence, tell me who it is.

Cel. O wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful! and yet again wonderful, and after that, out of all whooping!

Ros. Good my complexion! dost thou think, though I am caparison'd like a man, I have a doublet and hose in my disposition? One inch of delay more is a South-sea of discovery. I prithee, tell me who is it quickly, and speak apace. I would thou couldst stammer, that thou might'st pour this conceal'd man out of thy mouth, as wine comes out of a narrow-³¹⁰ mouth'd bottle, either too much at once, or none at all. I prithee, take the cork out of thy mouth that I may drink thy tidings..

Cel. So you may put a man in your belly. ³¹⁵

Ros. Is he of God's making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard. ³¹⁹

Ros. Why, God will send more, if the man will be thankful. Let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando, that tripp'd up the wrestler's heels and your heart both in an instant. ³²⁵

Ros. Nay, but the devil take mocking. Speak sad brow and true maid.

Cel. I faith, coz, 'tis he.

Ros. Orlando?

Cel. Orlando. ³³⁰

Ros. Alas the day! what shall I do with my doublet and hose? What did he when thou saw'st him? What said he? How look'd he? Wherein went he? What makes he here? Did he ask for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee? And when shalt thou ³³⁵ see him again? Answer me in one word.

Cel. You must borrow me Gargantua's mouth first. 'Tis a word too great for any mouth of this age's size. To say ay and no to these particulars is more than to answer in a catechism. ³⁴¹

Ros. But doth he know that I am in this forest and in man's apparel? Looks he as freshly as he did the day he wrestled?

Cel. It is as easy to count atomies as to resolve the propositions of a lover. But take ³⁴⁵ a taste of my finding him, and relish it with good observance. I found him under a tree, like a dropp'd acorn.

Ros. It may well be called Jove's tree, when it drops forth such fruit. ³⁵⁰

Cel. Give me audience, good madam.

Ros. Proceed.

Cel. There lay he, stretch'd along, like a wounded knight.

Ros. Though it be pity to see such a sight, it well becomes the ground. ³⁵⁵

Cel. Cry "holla" to thy tongue, I prithee; it curvets unseasonably. He was furnish'd like a hunter.

Ros. O, ominous! he comes to kill my heart. ³⁶⁰

Cel. I would sing my song without a burden. Thou bring'st me out of tune.

Ros. Do you not know I am a woman? When I think, I must speak. Sweet, say on. ³⁶⁴

Enter ORLANDO and JAKUES.

Cel. You bring me out. Soft! comes he not here?

Ros. 'Tis he. Slink by, and note him.

Jaq. I thank you for your company; but, good faith, I had as lief have been myself alone. ³⁷⁰

Orl. And so had I; but yet, for fashion sake, I thank you too for your society.

Jaq. God buy you; let's meet as little as we can. ³⁷⁴

Orl. I do desire we may be better strangers.

Jaq. I pray you, mar no more trees with writing love-songs in their barks.

Orl. I pray you, mar no moe of my verses with reading them ill-favouredly.

Jaq. Rosalind is your love's name? ³⁸⁰

Orl. Yes, just.

Jaq. I do not like her name.

Orl. There was no thought of pleasing you when she was christen'd.

Jaq. What stature is she of? ³⁸⁵

Orl. Just as high as my heart.

Jaq. You are full of pretty answers. Have you not been acquainted with goldsmiths' wives, and conn'd them out of rings?

Orl. Not so; but I answer you right painted cloth, from whence you have studied your questions.

Jaq. You have a nimble wit. I think 'twas made of Atalanta's heels. Will you sit down with me? and we two will rail against our mistress the world, and all our misery. ³⁹⁵

Orl. I will chide no breather in the world but myself, against whom I know most faults.

Jaq. The worst fault you have is to be in love. ⁴⁰⁰

Orl. 'Tis a fault I will not change for your best virtue. I am weary of you.

Jaq. By my troth, I was seeking for a fool when I found you.

Orl. He is drown'd in the brook. Look but in, and you shall see him. ⁴⁰⁵

Jaq. There I shall see mine own figure.

Orl. Which I take to be either a fool or a cipher.

Jaq. I'll tarry no longer with you. Farewell, good Signior Love. ⁴¹⁰

Orl. I am glad of your departure. Adieu, good Monsieur Melancholy. [Exit Jaques.]

Ros. [Aside to Celia.] I will speak to him like a saucy lackey, and under that habit play the knave with him. Do you hear, forester? ⁴¹⁵

Orl. Very well. What would you?

Ros. I pray you, what is 't o'clock?

Orl. You should ask me what time o' day. There's no clock in the forest. ⁴²⁰

Ros. Then there is no true lover in the forest; else sighing every minute and groaning every hour would detect the lazy foot of Time as well as a clock.

Orl. And why not the swift foot of Time? Had not that been as proper? ⁴²⁵

Ros. By no means, sir. Time travels in divers paces with divers persons. I'll tell you who Time ambles withal, who Time trots withal, who Time gallops withal, and who he stands still withal. ⁴³⁰

Orl. I prithee, who doth he trot withal?

Ros. Marry, he trots hard with a young maid between the contract of her marriage and the day it is solemniz'd. If the interim be but a se'nnight, Time's pace is so hard that it seems the length of seven year. ⁴³⁵

Orl. Who ambles Time withal?

Ros. With a priest that lacks Latin, and a rich man that hath not the gout; for the one sleeps easily because he cannot study, and the other lives merrily because he feels no pain; the one lacking the burden of lean and wasteful learning, the other knowing no burden of heavy tedious penury. These Time ambles withal.

Orl. Who doth he gallop withal?

Ros. With a thief to the gallows; for though he go as softly as foot can fall, he thinks himself too soon there.

Orl. Who stays it still withal?

Ros. With lawyers in the vacation; for they sleep between term and term, and then they perceive not how Time moves.

Orl. Where dwell you, pretty youth?

Ros. With this shepherdess, my sister; here in the skirts of the forest, like fringe upon a petticoat.

Orl. Are you native of this place?

Ros. As the cony that you see dwell where she is kindled.

Orl. Your accent is something finer than you could purchase in so removed a dwelling.

Ros. I have been told so of many; but indeed an old religious uncle of mine taught me to speak, who was in his youth an inland man; one that knew courtship too well, for there he fell in love. I have heard him read many lectures against it, and I thank God I am not a woman, to be touch'd with so many giddy offences as he hath generally tax'd their whole sex withal.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principal evils that he laid to the charge of women?

Ros. There were none principal; they were all like one another as half-pence are, every one fault seeming monstrous till his fellow-fault came to match it.

Orl. I prithee, recount some of them.

Ros. No, I will not cast away my physic but on those that are sick. There is a man haunts the forest, that abuses our young plants with carving Rosalind on their barks; hangs odes upon hawthorns and elegies on brambles; all, forsooth, deifying the name of Rosalind. If I could meet that fancy-monger, I would give him some good counsel, for he seems to have the quotidian of love upon him.

Orl. I am he that is so love-shak'd. I pray you, tell me your remedy.

Ros. There is none of my uncle's marks upon you. He taught me how to know a man in love, in which cage of rushes I am sure you are not prisoner.

Orl. What were his marks?

Ros. A lean cheek, which you have not; a blue eye and sunken, which you have not; an unquestionable spirit, which you have not; a beard neglected, which you have not; but I pardon you for that, forsother your having in beard is a younger brother's revenue. Then your hose should be ungarter'd, your bonnet unbanded, your sleeve unbutton'd, your shoe untied, and every thing about you demonstrat- ing a careless desolation. But you are no such man; you are rather point-device in your accoutrements, as loving yourself than seeming the lover of any other.

Orl. Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe I love.

Ros. Me believe it! you may as soon make her that you love believe it; which, I warrant, she is apter to do than to confess she does. That is one of the points in the which women still give the lie to their consciences. But, in good sooth, are you he that hangs the verses on the trees, wherein Rosalind is so admired?

Orl. I swear to thee, youth, by the white hand of Rosalind, I am that he, that unfortunate he.

Ros. But are you so much in love as your rhymes speak?

Orl. Neither rhyme nor reason can express how much.

Ros. Love is merely a madness, and, I tell you, deserves as well a dark house and a whip as madmen do; and the reason why they are not so punish'd and cured is, that the lunacy is so ordinary that the whippers are in love too. Yet I profess curing it by counsel.

Orl. Did you ever cure any so?

Ros. Yes, one, and in this manner. He was to imagine me his love, his mistress, and I set him every day to woo me; at which time would I, being but a moonish youth, grieve, be effeminate, changeable, longing and liking, proud, fantastical, apish, shallow, inconstant, full of tears, full of smiles; for every passion something and for no passion truly any thing, as boys and women are for the most part cattle of this colour; would now like him, now loathe him; then entertain him, then forswear him; now weep for him, then spit at him; that I drave my suitor from his mad humour of love to a living humour of madness; which was, to forswear the full stream of the world and to live in a nook, merely monastic. And thus I cur'd him; and this way will I take upon me to wash your liver as clean as a sound sheep's heart, that there shall not be one spot of love in't.

Orl. I would not be cured, youth.

Ros. I would cure you, if you would but call me Rosalind and come every day to my cote and woo me.

Orl. Now, by the faith of my love, I will. Tell me where it is.

Ros. Go with me to it and I'll show it you; and by the way you shall tell me where in the forest you live. Will you go?

Orl. With all my heart, good youth.

Ros. Nay, you must call me Rosalind. Come, sister, will you go?

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [The forest.]

Enter Clown [TOUCHSTONE] and AUDREY;
[JAQUES behind].

Touch. Come apace, good Audrey. I will fetch up your goats, Audrey. And how, Audrey, am I the man yet? Doth my simple feature content you?

Aud. Your features! Lord warrant us! what features?

Touch. I am here with thee and thy goats, as the most capricious poet, honest Ovid, was among the Goths.

Jag. [Aside.] O knowledge ill-inhabited, worse than Jove in a thatch'd house!

Touch. When a man's verses cannot be understood, nor a man's good wit seconded with the forward child, understanding, it strikes a man more dead than a great reckoning in a little room. Truly, I would the gods had made thee poetical.

Aud. I do not know what "poetical" is. Is it honest in deed and word? Is it a true thing?

Touch. No, truly; for the truest poetry is the most feigning; and lovers are given to poetry, and what they swear in poetry may be said as lovers they do feign.

Aud. Do you wish then that the gods had made me poetical?

Touch. I do, truly; for thou swearest to me thou art honest. Now, if thou wert a poet, I might have some hope thou didst feign.

Aud. Would you not have me honest?

Touch. No, truly, unless thou wert hard-favour'd; for honesty coupled to beauty is to have honey a sauce to sugar.

Jag. [Aside.] A material fool!

Aud. Well, I am not fair; and therefore I pray the gods make me honest.

Touch. Truly, and to cast away honesty upon a foul slut were to put good meat into an unclean dish.

Aud. I am not a slut, though I thank the gods I am foul.

Touch. Well, praised be the gods for thy foulness! Sluttishness may come hereafter. But be it as it may be, I will marry thee, and to that end I have been with Sir Oliver Martext, the vicar of the next village, who hath promis'd to meet me in this place of the forest and to couple us.

Jag. [Aside.] I would fain see this meeting.

Aud. Well, the gods give us joy!

Touch. Amen. A man may, if he were of a fearful heart, stagger in this attempt; for here we have no temple but the wood, no assembly [50] but horn-beasts. But what though? Courage! As horns are odious, they are necessary. It is said, "Many a man knows no end of his goods." Right; many a man has good horns, and knows no end of them. Well, that is the dowry of his wife; 'tis none of his own getting. [55] Horns?—even so. Poor men alone? No, no; the noblest deer hath them as huge as the rascal. Is the single man therefore blessed? No: as a wall'd town is more worthier than a village, so is the forehead of a married man [60] more honourable than the bare brow of a bachelor; and by how much defence is better than no skill, by so much is a horn more precious than to want.

Enter SIR OLIVER MARTEXT.

Here comes Sir Oliver. Sir Oliver Martext, [64] you are well met. Will you dispatch us here under this tree, or shall we go with you to your chapel?

Sir Oli. Is there none here to give the woman?

Touch. I will not take her on gift of any man.

Sir Oli. Truly, she must be given, or the marriage is not lawful.

Jag. Proceed, proceed. I'll give her.

Touch. Good even, good Master What-ye-call't; how do you, sir? You are very well met. God 'ild you for your last company. I [75] am very glad to see you. Even a toy in hand here, sir. Nay, pray be cover'd.

Jag. Will you be married, motley?

Touch. As the ox hath his bow, sir, the horse his curb, and the falcon her bells, so man hath his desires; and as pigeons bill, so wedlock would be nibbling.

Jag. And will you, being a man of your breeding, be married under a bush like a beggar? Get you to church, and have a good priest that can tell you what marriage is. This fellow will but join you together as they join wainscot; then one of you will prove a shrunk panel, and like green timber warp, warp.

Touch. [Aside.] I am not in the mind but I were better to be married of him than of another; for he is not like to marry me well; and not being well married, it will be a good excuse for me hereafter to leave my wife.

Jag. Go thou with me, and let me counsel thee.

Touch. Come, sweet Audrey; We must be married, or we must live in bawdry.

Farewell, good Master Oliver: not,—

O sweet Oliver,

O brave Oliver,

Leave me not behind thee;

but,—

Wind away,

Begone, I say,

I will not to wedding with thee.

[Exeunt Jaques, Touchstone, and Audrey.]

Sir Oli. 'Tis no matter. Ne'er a fantastical knave of them all shall flout me out of my calling. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. [The forest.]

Enter ROSALIND and CELIA.

Ros. Never talk to me; I will weep.

Cel. Do, I prithee; but yet have the grace to consider that tears do not become a man.

Ros. But have I not cause to weep?

Cel. As good cause as one would desire; therefore weep.

Ros. His very hair is of the dissembling colour.

Cel. Something browner than Judas's. Marry, his kisses are Judas's own children.

Ros. I' faith, his hair is of a good colour.

Cel. An excellent colour. Your chestnut was ever the only colour.

Ros. And his kissing is as full of sanctity as the touch of holy bread.

Cel. He hath bought a pair of cast lips of Diana. A nun of winter's sisterhood kisses not more religiously. The very ice of chastity is in them.

Ros. But why did he swear he would come this morning, and comes not? ²¹

Cel. Nay, certainly, there is no truth in him.

Ros. Do you think so?

Cel. Yes; I think he is not a pick-purse nor a horse-stealer; but for his verity in love, I do think him as concave as a covered goblet or a worm-eaten nut. ²⁷

Ros. Not true in love?

Cel. Yes, when he is in; but I think he is not in.

Ros. You have heard him swear downright he was. ³³

Cel. "Was" is not "is." Besides, the oath of a lover is no stronger than the word of a tapster; they are both the confirmer of false reckonings. He attends here in the forest on the Duke your father. ³⁷

Ros. I met the Duke yesterday and had much question with him. He asked me of what parentage I was. I told him, of as good as he; so he laugh'd and let me go. But what talk we of fathers, when there is such a man as Orlando? ⁴³

Cel. O, that's a brave man! He writes brave verses, speaks brave words, swears brave oaths and breaks them bravely, quite traverse, athwart the heart of his lover; as a puisny ⁴⁵ tilter, that spurs his horse but on one side, breaks his staff like a noble goose. But all's brave that youth mounts and folly guides. Who comes here?

Enter CORIN.

Cor. Mistress and master, you have oft inquired ⁵⁰

After the shepherd that complain'd of love,
Who you saw sitting by me on the turf,
Praising the proud disdainful shepherdess
That was his mistress.

Cel. Well, and what of him?

Cor. If you will see a pageant truly play'd, ⁵⁵
Between the pale complexion of true love
And the red glow of scorn and proud disdain,
Go hence a little and I shall conduct you,
If you will mark it.

Ros. O, come, let us remove;
The sight of lovers feedeth those in love. ⁶⁰
Bring us to this sight, and you shall say
I'll prove a busy actor in their play. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. [Another part of the forest.]

Enter SILVIUS and PHEBE.

Sil. Sweet Phebe, do not scorn me; do not, Phebe.

Say that you love me not, but say not so
In bitterness. The common executioner, Whose heart the accustom'd sight of death makes hard,

Falls not the axe upon the humbled neck ⁵
But first begs pardon. Will you sterner be
Than he that dies and lives by bloody drops?

Enter ROSALIND, CELIA, and CORIN [behind].

Phe. I would not be thy executioner.

I fly thee, for I would not injure thee.

Thou tell'st me there is murder in mine eye: ¹⁰

'Tis pretty, sure, and very probable,
That eyes, that are the frail'st and softest
things,

Who shut their coward gates on atomies,
Should be call'd tyrants, butchers, murderers!
Now I do frown on thee with all my heart; ¹⁵
And if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill
thee.

Now counterfeit to swoon; why, now fall down;
Or if thou canst not, O, for shame, for shame,
Lie not, to say mine eyes are murderers!
Now show the wound mine eye hath made in thee. ²⁰

Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remains
Some scar of it; lean but upon a rush,
The cicatrice and capable impressure
Thy palm some moment keeps; but now mine
eyes,

Which I have darted at thee, hurt thee not, ²⁵
Nor, I am sure, there is no force in eyes
That can do hurt.

Sil. O dear Phebe,
If ever—as that ever may be near—

You meet in some fresh cheek the power of fancy,

Then shall you know the wounds invisible ³⁰
That love's keen arrows make.

Phe. But till that time
Come not thou near me; and when that time comes,

Afflict me with thy mocks, pity me not,
As till that time I shall not pity thee.

Ros. And why, I pray you? Who might be your mother, ³⁵

That you insult, exult, and all at once,
Over the wretched? What though you have no beauty,—

As, by my faith, I see no more in you
Than without candle may go dark to bed—
Must you be therefore proud and pitiless? ⁴⁰ Why, what means this? Why do you look on
me?

I see no more in you than in the ordinary
Of nature's sale-work. 'Od's my little life,
I think she means to tangle my eyes too!

No, faith, proud mistress, hope not after it. ⁴⁵
'Tis not your inky brows, your black silk hair,
Your bugle eyeballs, nor your cheek of cream

That can entame my spirits to your worship.
You foolish shepherd, wherefore do you follow
her,

Like foggy south, puffing with wind and rain? ⁵⁰

You are a thousand times a properer man
Than she a woman. 'Tis such fools as you

That makes the world full of ill-favour'd children.

'Tis not her glass, but you, that flatters her;
And out of you she sees herself more proper ⁵⁵

Than any of her lineaments can show her.

But, mistress, know yourself. Down on your knees,

And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man's love;

For I must tell you friendly in your ear,
Sell when you can; you are not for all markets.

Cry the man mercy; love him; take his offer.
Foul is most foul, being foul to be a scoffer.
So take her to thee, shepherd. Fare you well.

Phe. Sweet youth, I pray you, chide a year together.

I had rather hear you chide than this man woo.

Ros. He's fallen in love with your foulness, and she'll fall in love with my anger. If it be so, as fast as she answers thee with frowning looks, I'll sauce her with bitter words. Why look you so upon me?

Phe. For no ill will I bear you.

Ros. I pray you, do not fall in love with me,

For I am falsest than vows made in wine.

Besides, I like you not. If you will know my house,

'T is at the tuft of olives here hard by.

Will you go, sister? Shepherd, ply her hard.

Come, sister. Shepherdess, look on him better,
And be not proud. Though all the world could see,

None could be so abus'd in sight as he.

Come, to our flock.

[Exeunt Rosalind, Celia, and Corin.]

Phe. Dead shepherd, now I find thy saw of might,

"Who ever loved that loved not at first sight?"

Sil. Sweet Phebe, —

Phe. Ha, what say'st thou, Silvius?

Sil. Sweet Phebe, pity me.

Phe. Why, I am sorry for thee, gentle Silvius.

Sil. Wherever sorrow is, relief would be.

If you do sorrow at my grief in love,

By giving love, your sorrow and my grief

Were both extermin'd.

Phe. Thou hast my love. Is not that neighbourly?

Sil. I would have you.

Phe. Why, that were covetousness.

Silvius, the time was that I hated thee,

And yet it is not that I bear thee love;

But since that thou canst talk of love so well,

Thy company, which erst was irksome to me,

I will endure, and I'll employ thee too.

But do not look for further recompense

Than thine own gladness that thou art employ'd.

Sil. So holy and so perfect is my love,

And I in such a poverty of grace,

That I shall think it a most plenteous crop

To glean the broken ears after the man

That the main harvest reaps. Loose now and then

A scatt'rd smile, and that I'll live upon.

Phe. Know'st thou the youth that spoke to me erewhile?

Sil. Not very well, but I have met him oft;

And he hath bought the cottage and the bounds

That the old carlot once was master of.

Phe. Think not I love him, though I ask for him;

'T is but a peevish boy; yet he talks well.

But what care I for words? Yet words do well

When he that speaks them pleases those that hear.

It is a pretty youth; not very pretty;

But, sure, he's proud, and yet his pride becomes him.

He'll make a proper man. The best thing in him

Is his complexion; and faster than his tongue

Did make offence his eye did heal it up.

He is not very tall; yet for his years he's tall.

His leg is but so so; and yet 't is well.

There was a pretty redness in his lip,

A little ripier and more lusty red

Than that mix'd in his cheek; 't was just the difference

Betwixt the constant red and mingled damask.

There be some women, Silvius, had they mark'd him

In parcels as I did, would have gone near

To fall in love with him; but, for my part,

I love him not nor hate him not; and yet

I have more cause to hate him than to love him,

For what had he to do to chide at me?

He said mine eyes were black and my hair black;

And, now I am rememb'rd, scorn'd at me.

I marvel why I answer'd not again.

But that's all one; omittance is no quittance.

I'll write to him a very taunting letter,

And thou shalt bear it; wilt thou, Silvius?

Sil. Phebe, with all my heart.

Phe. I'll write it straight;

The matter's in my head and in my heart.

I will be bitter with him and passing short.

Go with me, Silvius. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV

SCENE I. [The forest.]

Enter ROSALIND, CELIA, and JAKES.

Jag. I prithee, pretty youth, let me be better acquainted with thee.

Ros. They say you are a melancholy fellow.

Jag. I am so; I do love it better than laughing.

Ros. Those that are in extremity of either are abominable fellows, and betray themselves to every modern censure worse than drunkards.

Jag. Why, 't is good to be sad and say nothing.

Ros. Why then, 't is good to be a post.

Jag. I have neither the scholar's melancholy, which is emulation; nor the musician's, which is fantastical; nor the courtier's, which is proud; nor the soldier's, which is ambitious; nor the lawyer's, which is politic; nor the regard for human nature

lady's, which is nice; nor the lover's, which is all these: but it is a melancholy of mine own, ¹⁵ compounded of many simples, extracted from many objects; and indeed the sundry contemplation of my travels, in which my often rumination wraps me in a most humorous sadness — ²⁰

Ros. A traveller! By my faith, you have great reason to be sad. I fear you have sold your own lands to see other men's; then, to have seen much, and to have nothing, is to have rich eyes and poor hands. ²⁵

Jaq. Yes, I have gained my experience.

Enter ORLANDO.

Ros. And your experience makes you sad. I had rather have a fool to make me merry than experience to make me sad; and to travel for it too!

Orl. Good-day and happiness, dear Rosalind!

Jaq. Nay, then, God buy you, an you talk in blank verse. [Exit.

Ros. Farewell, Monsieur Traveller. Look you lip and wear strange suits, disable all the benefits of your own country, be out of love with your nativity, and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are, or I will scarce think you have swam in a gondola. Why, how now, Orlando! Where have you been all this while? You a lover! An you serve me such another trick, never come in my sight more. ⁴¹

Orl. My fair Rosalind, I come within an hour of my promise.

Ros. Break an hour's promise in love! He that will divide a minute into a thousand parts, and break but a part of the thousandth part of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be said of him that Cupid hath clapp'd him o' the shoulder, but I'll warrant him heart-whole.

Orl. Pardon me, dear Rosalind. ⁵⁰

Ros. Nay, an you be so tardy, come no more in my sight. I had as lief be woo'd of a snail.

Orl. Of a snail?

Ros. Ay, of a snail; for though he comes slowly, he carries his house on his head; a better jointure, I think, than you make a woman. Besides, he brings his destiny with him. ⁵⁷

Orl. What's that?

Ros. Why, horns, which such as you are fain to be beholding to your wives for. But he comes armed in his fortune and prevents the slander of his wife. ⁵⁹

Orl. Virtue is no horn-maker; and my Rosalind is virtuous.

Ros. And I am your Rosalind.

Cel. It pleases him to call you so; but he hath a Rosalind of a better leer than you. ⁶⁷

Ros. Come, woo me, woo me; for now I am in a holiday humour and like enough to consent. What would you say to me now, an I were your very very Rosalind? ⁷¹

Orl. I would kiss before I spoke.

Ros. Nay, you were better speak first; and when you were gravell'd for lack of matter, you might take occasion to kiss. Very good orators, when they are out, they will spit; and for lovers lacking — God warn us! — matter, the cleanliest shift is to kiss.

Orl. How if the kiss be deny'd?

Ros. Then she puts you to entreaty and there begins new matter. ⁸¹

Orl. Who could be out, being before his beloved mistress?

Ros. Marry, that should you if I were your mistress, or I should think my honesty ranker than my wit. ⁸⁶

Orl. What, of my suit?

Ros. Not out of your apparel, and yet out of your suit. Am not I your Rosalind?

Orl. I take some joy to say you are, because I would be talking of her. ⁹¹

Ros. Well, in her person, I say I will not have you.

Orl. Then in mine own person I die.

Ros. No, faith, die by attorney. The poor world is almost six thousand years old, and in all this time there was not any man died in his own person, videlicet, in a love-cause. Troilus had his brains dash'd out with a Grecian club; yet he did what he could to die before, and he is one of the patterns of love. Leander, he would have liv'd many a fair year though Hero had turn'd nun, if it had not been for a hot mid-summer night; for, good youth, he went but forth to wash him in the Hellespont and being taken with the cramp was drown'd; and the foolish chroniclers of that age found it was — Hero of Sestos. But these are all lies. Men have died from time to time and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalind of this mind; for, I protest, her frown might kill me. ¹¹⁴

Ros. By this hand, it will not kill a fly. But come, now I will be your Rosalind in a more coming-on disposition; and ask me what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then love me, Rosalind. ¹¹⁵

Ros. Yes, faith, will I, Fridays and Saturdays and all.

Orl. And wilt thou have me?

Ros. Ay, and twenty such.

Orl. What sayest thou?

Ros. Are you not good?

Orl. I hope so.

Ros. Why then, can one desire too much of a good thing? Come, sister, you shall be the priest and marry us. Give me your hand, Orlando. What do you say, sister? ¹²⁶

Orl. Pray thee, marry us.

Cel. I cannot say the words.

Ros. You must begin, "Will you, Orlando, —"

Cel. Go to. Will you, Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind?

Orl. I will. ¹³¹

Ros. Ay, but when?

Orl. Why now; as fast as she can marry us.

Ros. Then you must say, "I take thee, Rosalind, for wife." 136

Orl. I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Ros. I might ask you for your commission; but I do take thee, Orlando, for my husband. There's a girl goes before the priest; and certainly a woman's thought runs before her actions. 141

Orl. So do all thoughts; they are wing'd.

Ros. Now tell me how long you would have her after you have possess'd her.

Orl. For ever and a day. 146

Ros. Say "a day," without the "ever."

No, no, Orlando. Men are April when they woo, December when they wed; maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives. I will be more jealous of thee than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen, more clamorous than a parrot against rain, more new-fangled than an ape, more giddy in my desires than a monkey. I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the fountain, and I will do that when you are dispos'd to be merry. I will laugh like a hyen, and that when thou art inclin'd to sleep. 156

Orl. But will my Rosalind do so?

Ros. By my life, she will do as I do.

Orl. O, but she is wise. 160

Ros. Or else she could not have the wit to do this. The wiser, the waywarder. Make the doors upon a woman's wit and it will out at the casement; shut that and 'twill out at the key-hole; stop that, 'twill fly with the smoke out at the chimney. 166

Orl. A man that had a wife with such a wit, he might say, "Wit, whither wilt?"

Ros. Nay, you might keep that check for it, till you met your wife's wit going to your neighbour's bed. 171

Orl. And what wit could wit have to excuse that?

Ros. Marry, to say she came to seek you there. You shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue. O, that woman that cannot make her fault her husband's occasion, let her never nurse her child herself, for she will breed it like a fool!

Orl. For these two hours, Rosalind, I will leave thee. 181

Ros. Alas, dear love, I cannot lack thee two hours!

Orl. I must attend the Duke at dinner. By two o'clock I will be with thee again. 186

Ros. Ay, go your ways, go your ways; I knew what you would prove. My friends told me as much, and I thought no less. That flattering tongue of yours won me. 'Tis but one cast away, and so, come, death! Two o'clock is your hour? 190

Orl. Ay, sweet Rosalind.

Ros. By my troth, and in good earnest, and so God mend me, and by all pretty oaths that are not dangerous, if you break one jot of your promise or come one minute behind your hour, I will think you the most pathological break-promise, and the most hollow lover, and the most unworthy of her you call Rosalind, that may be chosen out of the gross band of the unfaithful; therefore beware my censure and keep your promise. 300

Orl. With no less religion than if thou wert indeed my Rosalind; so adieu.

Ros. Well, Time is the old justice that examines all such offenders, and let Time try. Adieu. [Exit Orlando]. 306

Cel. You have simply misus'd our sex in your love-prate. We must have your doubt let and hose pluck'd over your head, and show the world what the bird hath done to her own nest.

Ros. O coz, coz, coz, my pretty little coz, that thou didst know how many fathom deep I am in love! But it cannot be sounded. My affection hath an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal.

Cel. Or rather, bottomless; that as fast as you pour affection in, it runs out. 315

Ros. No, that same wicked bastard of Venus that was begot of thought, conceiv'd of spleen, and born of madness, that blind rascally boy that abuses every one's eyes because his own are out, let him be judge how deep I am in love. I'll tell thee, Aliena, I cannot be out of the sight of Orlando. I'll go find a shadow and sigh till he come.

Cel. And I'll sleep.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [The forest.]

Enter JACQUES, LORDS, and FORESTERS.

Jaq. Which is he that killed the deer?

A Lord. Sir, it was I.

Jaq. Let's present him to the Duke, like a Roman conqueror; and it would do well to set the deer's horns upon his head, for a branch of victory. Have you no song, forester, for this purpose? 7

[I.] For. Yes, sir.

Jaq. Sing it. 'Tis no matter how it be in tune, so it make noise enough. 10

SONG.

[Music.]

[I.] For. What shall he have that killed the deer?

His leather skin and horns to wear.

Then sing him home.

[The rest shall bear this burden.]

Take thou no scorn to wear the horn;

It was a crest ere thou wast born; 15

Thy father's father wore it,

And thy father bore it.

The horn, the horn, the lusty horn

Is not a thing to laugh to scorn.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [The forest.]

Enter ROSALIND and CELIA.

Ros. How say you now? Is it not past two o'clock? And here much Orlando!

Cel. I warrant you, with pure love and troubled brain, (Enter SILVIUS) he hath ta'en his bow and arrows and is gone forth—to sleep. Look, who comes here.

Sil. My errand is to you, fair youth;
My gentle Phebe bid me give you this.
I know not the contents; but, as I guess
By the stern brow and waspish action
Which she did use as she was writing of it, 10
It bears an angry tenour. Pardon me,
I am but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter

And play the swaggerer. Bear this, bear all.
She says I am not fair, that I lack manners. 15
She calls me proud, and that she could not love me,

Were man as rare as phoenix. 'Od's my will!
Her love is not the hare that I do hunt.

Why writes she so to me? Well, shepherd,
well,

This is a letter of your own device. 20

Sil. No, I protest, I know not the contents.
Phebe did write it.

Ros. Come, come, you are a fool,
And turn'd into the extremity of love.

I saw her hand; she has a leathern hand,
A freestone-coloured hand. I verily did think 25
That her old gloves were on, but 'twas her hands;

She has a huswife's hand; but that's no matter.

I say she never did invent this letter.
This is a man's invention and his hand.

Sil. Sure, it is hers. 30

Ros. Why, 'tis a boisterous and a cruel style,

A style for challengers. Why, she defies me,
Like Turk to Christian. Women's gentle brain
Could not drop forth such giant-rude invention,
Such Ethiopie words, blacker in their effect 35
Than in their countenance. Will you hear the letter?

Sil. So please you, for I never heard it yet;
Yet heard too much of Phebe's cruelty.

Ros. She Phebes me. Mark how the tyrant writes.

[Reads.]
"Art thou god to shepherd turn'd, 40
That a maiden's heart hath burn'd?"

Can a woman rail thus?

Sil. Call you this railing?

Ros. [Reads.]
"Why, thy godhead laid apart,

Warr'st thou with a woman's heart?" 45
Did you ever hear such railing?

"Whiles the eye of man did woo me,
That could do no vengeance to me."

Meaning me a beast.

"If the scorn of your bright eyne
Have power to raise such love in mine,

Alack, in me what strange effect
Would they work in mild aspect!

Whiles you chid me, I did love;
How then might your prayers move! 50
He that brings this love to thee

Little knows this love in me;
And by him seal up thy mind,

Whether that thy youth and kind
Will the faithful offer take 55
Of me and all that I can make;

Or else by him my love deny,
And then I'll study how to die."

Sil. Call you this chiding?

Cel. Alas, poor shepherd! 65

Ros. Do you pity him? No, he deserves no pity. Wilt thou love such a woman? What, to make thee an instrument and play false strains upon thee! Not to be endur'd! Well, go your way to her—for I see love hath made thee a tame snake—and say this to her: that if 70 she love me, I charge her to love thee; if she will not, I will never have her unless thou entreat for her. If you be a true lover, hence, and not a word; for here comes more company.

[Exit Silvius. 75]

Enter OLIVER.

Oli. Good morrow, fair ones. Pray you, if you know,

Where in the purlieus of this forest stands
A sheep-cote fenc'd about with olive-trees?

Cel. West of this place, down in the neighbour bottom.

The rank of osiers by the murmuring stream 80
Left on your right hand brings you to the place.

But at this hour the house doth keep itself;
There's none within.

Oli. If that an eye may profit by a tongue,
Then should I know you by description; 85
Such garments and such years. "The boy is fair,

Of female favour, and bestows himself
Like a ripe sister; the woman low,
And browner than her brother." Are not you
The owner of the house I did enquire for? 90

Cel. It is no boast, being ask'd, to say we are.

Oli. Orlando doth commend him to you both,
And to that youth he calls his Rosalind

He sends this bloody napkin. Are you he?

Ros. I am. What must we understand by this? 95

Oli. Some of my shame, if you will know of me

What man I am, and how, and why, and where
This handkercher was stain'd.

Cel. I pray you, tell it.

Oli. When last the young Orlando parted from you

He left a promise to return again 100
Within an hour; and pacing through the forest,

Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancy,
Lo, what befell! He threw his eye aside,

And mark what object did present itself.
Under an old oak, whose boughs were moss'd 105
with age

And high top bald with dry antiquity,
A wretched ragged man, o'ergrown with hair,

Lay sleeping on his back. About his neck
A green and gilded snake had wreath'd it self,

Who with her head nimble in threats approach'd 110

The opening of his mouth; but suddenly,
Seeing Orlando, it unlink'd it self,

And with indented glides did slip away
Into a bush; under which bush's shade

A lioness, with udders all drawn dry, ¹¹⁸
Lay couching, head on ground, with catlike watch,

When that the sleeping man should stir; for
'tis

The royal disposition of that beast
To prey on nothing that doth seem as dead.
This seen, Orlando did approach the man ¹²⁰
And found it was his brother, his elder brother.

Cel. O, I have heard him speak of that same brother;

And he did render him the most unnatural
That liv'd amongst men.

Oli. And well he might so do,
For well I know he was unnatural. ¹²⁵

Ros. But, to Orlando. Did he leave him
there,

Food to the suck'd and hungry lioness?

Oli. Twice did he turn his back and pur-pos'd so;

But kindness, nobler ever than revenge,
And nature, stronger than his just occasion, ¹³⁰

Made him give battle to the lioness,
Who quickly fell before him; in which hurtling

From miserable slumber I awaked.

Cel. Are you his brother?

Ros. Was 't you he rescu'd?
Cel. Was 't you that did so oft contrive to kill him? ¹³⁵

Oli. 'Twas I; but 'tis not I. I do not
shame

To tell you what I was, since my conversion
So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.

Ros. But, for the bloody napkin?

Oli. By and by.
When from the first to last betwixt us two ¹⁴⁰

Tears our recumtments had most kindly bath'd,

As how I came into that desert place, —
In brief, he led me to the gentle Duke,

Who gave me fresh array and entertainment,
Committing me unto my brother's love; ¹⁴⁵

Who led me instantly unto his cave,
There stripp'd himself, and here upon his arm

The lioness had torn some flesh away,
Which all this while had bled; and now he fainted

And cri'd, in fainting, upon Rosalind. ¹⁵⁰
Brief, I recover'd him, bound up his wound;

And, after some small space, being strong at
heart,

He sent me hither, stranger as I am,
To tell this story, that you might excuse

His broken promise, and to give this napkin,
Dyed in his blood, unto the shepherd youth ¹⁵⁵

That he in sport doth call his Rosalind.
[Rosalind swoons.]

Cel. Why, how now, Ganymede! sweet Ganymede!

Oli. Many will swoon when they do look on
blood.

Cel. There is more in it. Cousin Ganymede!
Oli. Look, he recovers. ¹⁶¹

Ros. I would I were at home.
Cel. We'll lead you thither.

I pray you, will you take him by the arm?

Oli. Be of good cheer, youth. You a man!
You lack a man's heart. ¹⁶⁵

Ros. I do so, I confess it. Ah, sirrah, a body would think this was well counterfeit! I pray you, tell your brother how well I counter-feited. Heigh-ho! ¹⁶⁹

Oli. This was not counterfeit. There is too great testimony in your complexion that it was a passion of earnest.

Ros. Counterfeit, I assure you.
Oli. Well then, take a good heart and counterfeit to be a man. ¹⁷⁵

Ros. So I do. But, i' faith, I should have been a woman by right.

Cel. Come, you look paler and paler. Pray you, draw homewards. Good sir, go with us.

Oli. That will I, for I must bear answer back

How you excuse my brother, Rosalind. ¹⁸¹

Ros. I shall devise something; but, I pray you, commend my counterfeiting to him. Will you go? [Exeunt.]

ACT V

SCENE I. [The forest.]

Enter Clown [TOUCHSTONE] and AUDREY.

Touch. We shall find a time, Audrey; patience, gentle Audrey.

Aud. Faith, the priest was good enough, for all the old gentleman's saying. ⁴

Touch. A most wicked Sir Oliver, Audrey, a most vile Martext. But, Audrey, there is a youth here in the forest lays claim to you.

Aud. Ay, I know who 'tis; he hath no interest in me in the world. Here comes the man you mean. ¹⁰

Enter WILLIAM.

Touch. It is meat and drink to me to see a clown. By my troth, we that have good wits have much to answer for; we shall be flouting;

we cannot hold.

Will. Good even, Audrey. ¹⁵

Aud. God ye good even, William.

Will. And good even to you, sir.

Touch. Good even, gentle friend. Cover thy head, cover thy head; nay, prithee, be cover'd.

How old are you, friend? ²⁰

Will. Five and twenty, sir.

Touch. A ripe age. Is thy name William?

Will. William, sir.

Touch. A fair name. Was 't born i' the forest here? ²⁵

Will. Ay, sir, I thank God.

Touch. "Thank God" — a good answer.
Art rich?

Will. Faith, sir, so so.

Touch. "So so" is good, very good, very excellent good; and yet it is not; it is but so so.

Art thou wise? ³¹

Will. Ay, sir, I have a pretty wit.

Touch. Why, thou say'st well. I do now remember a saying, "The fool doth think he is wise, but the wise man knows himself to [be a fool." The heathen philosopher, when he had a desire to eat a grape, would open his lips when he put it into his mouth; meaning thereby that grapes were made to eat and lips to open. You do love this maid? ⁴⁰

Will. I do, sir.

Touch. Give me your hand. Art thou learned?

Will. No, sir.

Touch. Then learn this of me: to have, is to have; for it is a figure in rhetoric that drink, ⁴⁵ being pour'd out of a cup into a glass, by filling the one doth empty the other. For all your writers do consent that ipse is he: now, you are not ipse, for I am he.

Will. Which he, sir? ⁵⁰

Touch. He, sir, that must marry this woman. Therefore, you clown, abandon—which is in the vulgar leave—the society—which in the boorish is company—of this female—which in the common is woman; which together is, abandon the society of this female; or, ⁵⁵ clown, thou perishest; or, to thy better understanding, diest; or, to wit, I kill thee, make thee away, translate thy life into death, thy liberty into bondage. I will deal in poison with thee, or in bastinado, or in steel. I will bandy ⁶⁰ with thee in faction; I will o'er-run thee with policy; I will kill thee a hundred and fifty ways: therefore tremble, and depart.

Aud. Do, good William.

Will. God rest you merry, sir. [Exit. ⁶⁵

Enter CORIN.

Cor. Our master and mistress seeks you. Come, away, away!

Touch. Trip, Audrey! trip, Audrey! I attend, I attend. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. [The forest.]

Enter ORLANDO and OLIVER.

Orl. Is't possible that on so little acquaintance you should like her? That but seeing you should love her? And loving woo? And, wooing, she should grant? And will you persevere to enjoy her? ⁵

Ol. Neither call the giddiness of it in question, the poverty of her, the small acquaintance, my sudden wooing, nor [her] sudden consenting; but say with me, I love Aliena; say with her that she loves me; consent with both that we may enjoy each other. It shall ¹⁰ be to your good; for my father's house and all the revenue that was old Sir Roland's will I estate upon you, and here live and die a shepherd. ¹⁴

Enter ROSALIND.

Orl. You have my consent. Let your wedding be to-morrow; thither will I invite the Duke and all's contented followers. Go you and prepare Aliena; for look you, here comes my Rosalind.

Ros. God save you, brother. ²⁰

Ol. And you, fair sister. [Exit.]

Ros. O, my dear Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee wear thy heart in a scarf!

Orl. It is my arm.

Ros. I thought thy heart had been wounded with the claws of a lion. ²⁴

Orl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to swoon when he show'd me your handkercher? ³⁰

Orl. Ay, and greater wonders than that.

Ros. O, I know where you are. Nay, 'tis true. There was never any thing so sudden but the fight of two rams, and Caesar's thrasonical brag of "I came, saw, and overcame." For your brother and my sister no sooner met but ³⁵ they look'd; no sooner look'd but they lov'd; no sooner lov'd but they sigh'd; no sooner sigh'd but they ask'd one another the reason; no sooner knew the reason but they sought the remedy; and in these degrees have they ⁴⁰ made a pair of stairs to marriage which they will climb incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage. They are in the very wrath of love and they will together. Clubs cannot part them. ⁴⁵

Orl. They shall be married to-morrow, and I will bid the Duke to the nuptial. But, O, how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes! By so much the more shall I to-morrow be at the height of heart-heaviness, by how much I shall think my brother happy in having what he wishes for. ⁵⁵

Ros. Why then, to-morrow I cannot serve your turn for Rosalind?

Orl. I can live no longer by thinking. ⁶⁰

Ros. I will weary you, then, no longer with idle talking. Know of me, then, for now I speak to some purpose, that I know you are a gentleman of good conceit. I speak not this that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge, inasmuch I say I know you are; ⁶⁵ neither do I labour for a greater esteem than may in some little measure draw a belief from you, to do yourself good and not to grace me. Believe then, if you please, that I can do strange things. I have, since I was three year old, ⁷⁰ convers'd with a magician, most profound in his art and yet not damnable. If you do love Rosalind so near the heart as your gesture cries it out, when your brother marries Aliena, shall you marry her. I know into what straits of ⁷⁵ fortune she is driven; and it is not impossible to me, if it appear not inconvenient to you, to set her before your eyes to-morrow, human as she is, and without any danger.

Orl. Speakest thou in sober meanings?

Ros. By my life, I do; which I tender dearly, though I say I am a magician. Therefore, put you in your best array; bid your friends; for if you will be married to-morrow, you shall; and to Rosalind, if you will. ⁸¹

Enter SILVIUS and PHEBE.

Look, here comes a lover of mine and a lover of hers.

Phe. Youth, you have done me much ungentleness,

To show the letter that I writ to you.

Ros. I care not if I have. It is my study
To seem despitful and ungentle to you. 85

You are there followed by a faithful shepherd;
Look upon him, love him. He worships you.

Phe. Good shepherd, tell this youth what
'tis to love.

Sil. It is to be all made of sighs and tears; 90
And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganymede.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of faith and service; 95
And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganymede.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of fantasy. 100
All made of passion, and all made of wishes;

All adoration, duty, and observance,
All humbleness, all patience, and impatience,

All purity, all trial, all observance;
And so am I for Phebe. 105

Phe. And so am I for Ganymede.

Orl. And so am I for Rosalind.

Ros. And so am I for no woman.

Phe. If this be so, why blame you me to love you? 110

Sil. If this be so, why blame you me to love
you?

Orl. If this be so, why blame you me to love
you?

Ros. Why do you speak too, "Why blame you me to love you?" 115

Orl. To her that is not here, nor doth not hear.

Ros. Pray you, no more of this; 'tis like the howling of Irish wolves against the moon.

[To Sil.] I will help you, if I can. [To Phe.]
I would love you, if I could. To-morrow 120 meet me all together. [To Phe.] I will marry you, if ever I marry woman, and I'll be married to-morrow. [To Orl.] I will satisfy you, if ever I satisfi'd man, and you shall be married to-morrow. [To Sil.] I will content 125 you, if what pleases you contents you, and you shall be married to-morrow. [To Orl.] As you love Rosalind, meet. [To Sil.] As you love Phebe, meet. And as I love no woman, I'll meet. So, fare you well. I have left you commands. 131

Sil. I'll not fail, if I live.

Phe. Nor I.

Orl. Nor I.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [The forest.]

Enter Clown [TOUCHSTONE] and AUDREY.

Touch. To-morrow is the joyful day, Audrey; to-morrow will we be married.

Aud. I do desire it with all my heart; and I hope it is no dishonest desire to desire to be a woman of the world. Here come two of the banish'd Duke's pages. 6

Enter two PAGES.

1. Page. Well met, honest gentlemen.

Touch. By my troth, well met. Come, sit, sit, and a song. 9

2. Page. We are for you. Sit i' the middle.

1. Page. Shall we clap into 't roundly, without hawking or spitting or saying we are hoarse, which are the only prologues to a bad
voice? 14

2. Page. I' faith, i' faith; and both in a tune, like two gipsies on a horse.

SONG.

It was a lover and his lass,

With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,

That o'er the green corn-field did pass

In the spring time, the only pretty ring time,

When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding; 21

Sweet lovers love the spring.

Between the acres of the rye,

With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,

These pretty country folks would lie, 25

In spring time, &c.

This carol they began that hour,

With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,

How that a life was but a flower

In spring time, &c. 30

And therefore take the present time,

With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino;

For love is crowned with the prime

In spring time, &c. 34

Touch. Truly, young gentlemen, though there was no great matter in the ditty, yet the note was very untunable.

1. Page. You are deceiv'd, sir. We kept time, we lost not our time. 39

Touch. By my troth, yes; I count it but time lost to hear such a foolish song. God buy you—and God mend your voices! Come, Audrey. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [The forest.]

Enter DUKE senior, AMIENS, JAQUES, OR-LANDO, OLIVER, and CELIA.

Duke S. Dost thou believe, Orlando, that the boy

Can do all this that he hath promised?

Orl. I sometimes do believe, and sometimes do not;

As those that fear they hope, and know they
fear.

Enter ROSALIND, SILVIUS, and PHEBE.

Ros. Patience once more, whiles our compact is urg'd. 4

You say, if I bring in your Rosalind,

You will bestow her on Orlando here?

Duke S. That would I, had I kingdoms to give with her.

Ros. And you say, you will have her, when I bring her.

Orl. That would I, were I of all kingdoms
king. 10

Ros. You say, you'll marry me, if I be will-
ing?

Phe. That will I, should I die the hour after.

Ros. But if you do refuse to marry me,
You'll give yourself to this most faithful shepherd?

Phe. So is the bargain. 15

Ros. You say, that you'll have Phebe, if she will?

Sil. Though to have her and death were both one thing.

Ros. I have promis'd to make all this matter even.

Keep you your word, O Duke, to give your daughter;

You yours, Orlando, to receive his daughter;

Keep your word, Phebe, that you'll marry me, Or else, refusing me, to wed this shepherd;

Keep your word, Silvius, that you'll marry her, If she refuse me; and from hence I go,

To make these doubts all even. 25

[Exeunt Rosalind and Celia.]

Duke S. I do remember in this shepherd boy Some lively touches of my daughter's favour.

Orl. My lord, the first time that I ever saw him

Methought he was a brother to your daughter.

But, my good lord, this boy is forest-born, 30

And hath been tutor'd in the rudiments Of many desperate studies by his uncle,

Whom he reports to be a great magician, Obscured in the circle of this forest. 34

Enter Clown [TOUCHSTONE] and AUDREY.

Jaq. There is, sure, another flood toward, and these couples are coming to the ark. Here comes a pair of very strange beasts, which in all tongues are called fools.

Touch. Salutation and greeting to you all! 38

Jaq. Good my lord, bid him welcome. This is the motley-minded gentleman that I have so often met in the forest. He hath been a courtier, he swears. 43

Touch. If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation. I have trod a measure; I have flatt'ed a lady; I have been politic with my friend, smooth with mine enemy; I have undone three tailors; I have had four quarrels, and like to have fought one. 49

Jaq. And how was that ta'en up?

Touch. Faith, we met, and found the quarrel was upon the seventh cause.

Jaq. How seventh cause? Good my lord, like this fellow.

Duke S. I like him very well. 55

Touch. God 'ild you, sir; I desire you of the like. I press in here, sir, amongst the rest of the country copulatives, to swear and to forswear, according as marriage binds and blood breaks. A poor virgin, sir, an ill-favour'd thing, sir, but mine own. A poor humour of mine, 60 sir, to take that that no man else will. Rich honesty dwells like a miser, sir, in a poor house, as your pearl in your foul oyster.

Duke S. By my faith, he is very swift and sententious. 65

Touch. According to the fool's bolt, sir, and such dulcet diseases.

Jaq. But, for the seventh cause, — how did you find the quarrel on the seventh cause? 70

Touch. Upon a lie seven times removed, — bear your body more seeming, Audrey, — as thus, sir. I did dislike the cut of a certain courtier's beard. He sent me word, if I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the mind it was: this is call'd the Retort Courteous. 75 If I sent him word again "it was not well cut," he would send me word, he cut it to please himself: this is call'd the Quip Modest. If again "it was not well cut," he disabled my judgement: this is called the Reply Churlish. 80 If again "it was not well cut," he would answer, I spake not true: this is called the Reproof Valiant. If again "it was not well cut," he would say, I lie: this is call'd the Counter-check Quarrelsome: and so to Lie Circumstantial and the Lie Direct. 86

Jaq. And how oft did you say his beard was not well cut?

Touch. I durst go no further than the Lie Circumstantial, nor he durst not give me the Lie Direct; and so we measur'd swords and parted. 91

Jaq. Can you nominate in order now the degrees of the lie?

Touch. O sir, we quarrel in print, by the book, as you have books for good manners. 95 I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort Courteous; the second, the Quip Modest; the third, the Reply Churlish; the fourth, the Reproof Valiant; the fifth, the Counter-check Quarrelsome; the sixth, the Lie with Circumstance; the seventh, the Lie Direct. 100 All these you may avoid but the Lie Direct; and you may avoid that too, with an If. I knew when seven justices could not take up a quarrel, but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an If, as, "If 105 you said so, then I said so"; and they shook hands and swore brothers. Your If is the only peace-maker; much virtue in If.

Jaq. Is not this a rare fellow, my lord? He's as good at any thing, and yet a fool. 110

Duke S. He uses his folly like a stalking-horse and under the presentation of that he shoots his wit.

Enter HYMEN, ROSALIND, and CELIA.

[Still Music.]

Hym. Then is there mirth in heaven,
When earthly things made even 115

Atone together.

Good Duke, receive thy daughter.

Hymen from heaven brought her,

Yea, brought her hither,

That thou mightst join her hand with his
Whose heart within his bosom is. 121

Ros. [To the Duke.] To you I give myself, for I am yours.

[To Orl.] To you I give myself, for I am yours.

Duke S. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.

Orl. If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind. 125

Phe. If sight and shape be true,
Why then, my love adieu!

Ros. I'll have no father, if you be not he;
I'll have no husband, if you be not he;
Nor ne'er wed woman, if you be not she. 130

Hym. Peace, ho! I bar confusion.
'Tis I must make conclusion
Of these most strange events.
Here's eight that must take hands
To join in Hymen's bands, 135
If truth holds true contents.
You and you no cross shall part;
You and you are heart in heart;
You to his love must accord,
Or have a woman to your lord; 140
You and you are sure together,
As the winter to foul weather.
Whiles a wedlock-hymn we sing,
Feed yourselves with questioning;
That reason wonder may diminish, 145
How thus we met, and these things finish.

SONG.

Wedding is great Juno's crown
O blessed bond of board and bed!
'Tis Hymen peoples every town;
High wedlock then be honoured. 150
Honour, high honour, and renown,
To Hymen, god of every town!

Duke S. O my dear niece, welcome thou art
to me!
Even daughter, welcome in no less degree. 154
Phe. I will not eat my word, now thou art
mine;
Thy faith my fancy to thee doth combine.

Enter Second Brother [JAQUES DE BOYS].

Jaq. de B. Let me have audience for a word or two.

I am the second son of old Sir Roland,
That bring these tidings to this fair assembly.
Duke Frederick, hearing how that every
day 160

Men of great worth resorted to this forest, Address'd a mighty power, which were on
foot,

In his own conduct, purposely to take
His brother here and put him to the sword;
And to the skirts of this wild wood he came, 165
Where meeting with an old religious man,
After some question with him, was converted
Both from his enterprise and from the world;
His crown bequeathing to his banish'd brother,
And all their lands restor'd to them again 170
That were with him exil'd. 'This to be true,
I do engage my life.

Duke S. Welcome, young man;
Thou offer'st fairly to thy brothers' wedding:
To one his lands withheld; and to the other
A land itself at large, a potent dukedom. 175
First, in this forest let us do those ends
That here were well begun and well begot;
And after, every of this happy number,
That have endur'd shrewd days and nights
with us,

Shall share the good of our returned fortune, 180
According to the measure of their states.
Meantime, forget this new-fallen dignity,
And fall into our rustic revelry.
Play, music! And you, brides and bridegrooms
all,

With measure heap'd in joy, to the measures fall. 185

Jaq. Sir, by your patience. If I heard you rightly,

The Duke hath put on a religious life
And thrown into neglect the pompous court?

Jaq. de B. He hath.

Jaq. To him will I. Out of these convertites
There is much matter to be heard and learn'd. 191

[To Duke S.] You to your former honour I bequeath;

Your patience and your virtue well deserves it:
[To Ori.] You to a love, that your true faith
doth merit:

[To Oli.] You to your land, and love, and great allies: 195

[To Sil.] You to a long and well-deserved
bed:

[To Touch.] And you to wrangling; for thy loving voyage

Is but for two months victual'd. So, to your pleasures;

I am for other than for dancing measures.

Duke S. Stay, Jaques, stay. 200

Jaq. To see no pastime I. What you would have

I'll stay to know at your abandon'd cave. [Exit.]

Duke S. Proceed, proceed. We will begin these rites,

As we do trust they'll end, in true delights.
[A dance.] Exeunt.

[EPILOGUE]

Ros. It is not the fashion to see the lady the epilogue, but it is no more unhandsome than to see the lord the prologue. If it be true that good wine needs no bush, 'tis true that a good play needs no epilogue; yet to good wine they do use good bushes, and good plays prove the better by the help of good epilogues. What a case am I in then, that am neither a good epilogue, nor cannot insinuate with you in the behalf of a good play! I am not furnish'd like a beggar, therefore to beg will not become me. 10
My way is to conjure you, and I'll begin with the women. I charge you, O women, for the love you bear to men, to like as much of this play as please you; and I charge you, O men, for the love you bear to women,—as I per- 15
ceive by your smirking, none of you hates them—that between you and the women the play may please. If I were a woman I would kiss as many of you as had beards that pleas'd me, complexions that lik'd me, and breaths 20 that I defid' not; and, I am sure, as many as have good beards or good faces or sweet breaths will, for my kind offer, when I make curtsy, bid me farewell. [Exit.]

TWELFTH NIGHT, OR WHAT YOU WILL

UNDER the date of February 2, 160½, the Diary of John Manningham contains an entry recording the performance in the Hall of the Middle Temple, in which he was a student, of a play called Twelfth Night, or What You Will, which he describes in terms that identify it as Shakespeare's. This fixes a later limit for the date of composition. An earlier limit has not yet been certainly fixed. The title does not occur in Meres's list, so that it is most probably later than 1598. The reference to the "new map with the augmentation of the Indies" (III. ii. 85) is not quite definite enough to enable us to accept with assurance the results of attempts to identify it with a map published in 1599-1600. The evidence from the publication in collections of some of the songs in the play is weakened by the possibility of the songs' having been popularly known before they were printed. But neither in these hints, nor in the metre, is there any hindrance to our regarding the most generally accepted date, 1601, as the true one.

No printed edition seems to have appeared before the First Folio in 1623, and on this the present text is based.

The problem of the exact source of the main plot involves at least five plays and three novels. Of these, two Italian plays with the same name, Gl' Inganni, may be set aside at once, since neither contains the central situation of Olivia's love for Cesario. In 1531 there was produced at Siena the comedy of Gl' Ingannati, containing the substance of the plot of Twelfth Night; and a Latin translation of this was acted at Queens' College, Cambridge, in 1590 and 1598, but remained unprinted. The 28th Novella of Bandello (1554), later translated into French by Belleforest, has essentially the same plot. Belleforest's is probably the source of an English version, Apolonius and Silla, published in 1581 in Barnabe Riche his Farewell to Military Profession. Shakespeare's plot is on the whole closer to this than to any of the others. In 1608, English comedians acted at Graz a play, extant in a German print of 1677, called Tugend- und Liebesstreit. This comedy is manifestly closely related to Riche's story, and it is plausibly conjectured that it goes back to a lost English play founded on Riche, which may also have been the direct original of Twelfth Night. But in any case it is more than likely that Shakespeare knew Riche's book at first hand; for in the story Of Two Brethren and their Wives, contained in the same volume, an episode occurs which is the only source so far suggested for the pretended lunacy of Malvolio.

Assuming that Shakespeare's main source was Apolonius and Silla, or a play founded on it, we may note that he omits a long introduction telling of Silla's love for the Duke before her arrival at his court and her adventures in search of him; and this omission not only makes the action more compact, but also makes possible a finer conception of the heroine. The relations of Olivia and Sebastian are also much more delicately treated in the play, and the action is again condensed in the final scene. In Riche, the brother leaves the city after having been entertained by Julina (Olivia); gossip about Julina and Silla reaches the Duke, who has Silla thrown into a dungeon; Julina goes to the Duke to plead for Silla, who is sent for, denies any love-compact with Julina, and, under threat of death, reveals her identity. Julina retires in perplexity, and the Duke marries Silla. The rumor of the marriage brings the brother back to the city, where he confesses his former visit, and marries Julina. This scattering conclusion is in strong contrast to the concentration of Shakespeare's dénouement.

Shakespeare's treatment of Olivia's love for Cesario is much fuller than Riche's, and seems to show a reminiscence of a situation in Montemayor's Diana, from which he had previously drawn materials for The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

In characterization even more is due to the dramatist than in construction. The main persons are entirely re-created, and the sentimentalism of the Duke, as well as the appealing union of pathos and arch humor which makes the charm of Viola, is altogether the conception of Shakespeare. Apart from the hint mentioned above for the madness of Malvolio, the underplot, with the characters of Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, Maria, Malvolio, Fabian, and Feste, seems to be entirely original.

Remembered to what she wants Viola gets what she had no credit.

ACT I

SCENE I. [A room in the Duke's palace.]

Enter ORSINO, Duke of Illyria, CURIO, and other Lords [Musicians attending].

Duke. If music be the food of love, play on !
Give me excess of it, that, surfeiting,
The appetite may sicken, and so die.
That strain again ! It had a dying fall.
O, it came o'er my ear like the sweet sound 5
That breathes upon a bank of violets,
Stealing and giving odour. Enough ! no more !
'Tis not so sweet now as it was before.
O spirit of love, how quick and fresh art thou,
That, notwithstanding thy capacity 10
Receiveth as the sea, nought enters there,
Of what validity and pitch soe'er,
But falls into abatement and low price
Even in a minute ! So full of shapes is fancy 15
That it alone is high fantastical.

Cur. Will you go hunt, my lord ?

Duke. What, Curio ?

Cur. The hart.

Duke. Why, so I do, the noblest that I have.
O, when mine eyes did see Olivia first,
Methought she purg'd the air of pestilence ! 20
That instant was I turn'd into a hart ;
And my desires, like fell and cruel hounds,
E'er since pursue me.

Enter VALENTINE.

How now ! what news from her ?

Val. So please my lord, I might not be admitted,

But from her handmaid do return this answer : 25

The element itself, till seven years' heat,
Shall not behold her face at ample view ;
But, like a cloistress, she will veiled walk,
And water once a day her chamber round

With eye-offending brine : all this to season 30
A brother's dead love, which she would keep fresh

And lasting in her sad remembrance.

Duke. O, she that hath a heart of that fine frame

To pay this debt of love but to a brother,
How will she love when the rich golden shaft 35
Hath kill'd the flock of all affections else
That live in her ; when liver, brain, and heart,
These sovereign thrones, are all suppli'd, and fill'd

Her sweet perfections with one self king !
Away before me to sweet beds of flowers ; 40
Love-thoughts lie rich when canopi'd with bowers.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [The sea-coast.]

Enter VIOLA, a CAPTAIN, and Sailors.

Vio. What country, friends, is this ?

Cap. This is Illyria, lady.

Vio. And what should I do in Illyria ?
My brother he is in Elysium.

Perchance he is not drown'd. What think you, sailors ? 5

Cap. It is perchance that you yourself were saved.

Vio. O my poor brother ! and so perchance may he be.

Cap. True, madam ; and, to comfort you with chance,

Assure yourself, after our ship did split,
When you and those poor number saved with
you 10

Hung on our driving boat, I saw your brother,
Most provident in peril, bind himself,
Courage and hope both teaching him the practice,

To a strong mast that liv'd upon the sea ;
Where, like Arion on the dolphin's back, 15

I saw him hold acquaintance with the waves
So long as I could see.

Vio. For saying so, there's gold.

Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope,
Whereto thy speech serves for authority, 20
The like of him. Know'st thou this country?

Cap. Ay, madam, well; for I was bred and born

Not three hours' travel from this very place.

Vio. Who governs here?

Cap. A noble duke, in nature as in name. 25

Vio. What is his name?

Cap. Orsino.

Vio. Orsino! I have heard my father name him.

He was a bachelor then.

Cap. And so is now, or was so very late; 30
For but a month ago I went from hence,
And then 'twas fresh in murmur—as, you know,

What great ones do the less will prattle of—
That he did seek the love of fair Olivia.

Vio. What's she?

Cap. A virtuous maid, the daughter of 35
a count

That died some twelvemonth since, then leaving her

In the protection of his son, her brother,
Who shortly also died; for whose dear love,
They say, she hath abjur'd the company 40
And sight of men.

Vio. O that I serv'd that lady,
And might not be delivered to the world,
Till I had made mine own occasion mellow,
What my estate is!

Cap. That were hard to compass,
Because she will admit no kind of suit, 45
No, not the Duke's.

Vio. There is a fair behaviour in thee, captain;

And though that nature with a beauteous wall
Doth oft close in pollution, yet of thee

I will believe thou hast a mind that suits 50

With this thy fair and outward character

I prithee, and I'll pay thee bounteously,

Conceal me what I am, and be my aid

For such disguise as haply shall become

The form of my intent. I'll serve this duke. 55

Thou shalt present me as an eunuch to him.

It may be worth thy pains, for I can sing

And speak to him in many sorts of music

That will allow me very worth his service.

What else may hap, to time I will commit, 60

Only shape thou thy silence to my wit.

Cap. Be you his eunuch, and your mute I'll be.

When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not see.

Vio. I thank thee. Lead me on. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [A room in Olivia's house.]

Enter SIR TOBY BELCH AND MARIA.

Sir To. What a plague means my niece, to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure care's an enemy to life.

Mar. By my troth, Sir Toby, you must come in earlier o' nights. Your cousin, my lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.

Sir To. Why, let her except before excepted.

Mar. Ay, but you must confine yourself within the modest limits of order. 9

Sir To. Confine! I'll confine myself no finer than I am. These clothes are good enough to drink in, and so be these boots too; an they be not, let them hang themselves in their own straps. 13

Mar. That quaffing and drinking will undo you. I heard my lady talk of it yesterday, and of a foolish knight that you brought in one night here to be her wooer. 17

Sir To. Who? Sir Andrew Aguecheek?

Mar. Ay, he.

Sir To. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria. 20

Mar. What's that to the purpose?

Sir To. Why, he has three thousand ducats a year.

Mar. Ay, but he'll have but a year in all these ducats. He's a very fool and a prodigal. 25

Sir To. Fie, that you'll say so! He plays o' the viol-de-gamboys, and speaks three or four languages word for word without book, and hath all the good gifts of nature. 29

Mar. He hath indeed, almost natural; for besides that he's a fool, he's a great quarreller; and but that he hath the gift of a coward to allay the gust he hath in quarrelling, 'tis thought among the prudent he would quickly have the gift of a grave. 35

Sir To. By this hand, they are scoundrels and substractors that say so of him. Who are they?

Mar. They that add, moreover, he's drunk nightly in your company. 39

Sir To. With drinking healths to my niece. I'll drink to her as long as there is a passage in my throat and drink in Illyria. He's a coward and a coxstrill that will not drink to my niece till his brains turn o' the toe like a parish-top. What, wench! Castiliano vulgo! for here comes Sir Andrew Agueface. 46

Enter SIR ANDREW AGUECHECK.

Sir And. Sir Toby Belch! How now, Sir Toby Belch!

Sir To. Sweet Sir Andrew!

Sir And. Bless you, fair shrew. 50

Mar. And you too, sir.

Sir To. Accost, Sir Andrew, accost.

Sir And. What's that?

Sir To. My niece's chambermaid.

Sir And. Good Mistress Accost, I desire better acquaintance. 56

Mar. My name is Mary, sir.

Sir And. Good Mistress Mary Accost,—

Sir To. You mistake, knight. "Accost" is front her, board her, woo her, assail her. 60

Sir And. By my troth, I would not undertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of "accost"?

Mar. Fare you well, gentlemen.

Sir To. An thou let part so, Sir Andrew, would thou mightst never draw sword again. 66

Sir And. An you part so, mistress, I would I might never draw sword again. Fair lady, do you think you have fools in hand?

Mar. Sir, I have not you by the hand.

Sir And. Marry, but you shall have; and here's my hand.

Mar. Now, sir, "thought is free," I pray you, bring your hand to the buttery-bar and let it drink.

Sir And. Wherefore, sweetheart? What's your metaphor?

Mar. It's dry, sir.

Sir And. Why, I think so. I am not such an ass but I can keep my hand dry. But what's your jest?

Mar. A dry jest, sir.

Sir And. Are you full of them?

Mar. Ay, sir, I have them at my fingers' ends. Marry, now I let go your hand, I am barren.

Sir To. O knight, thou lack'st a cup of canary. When did I see thee so put down?

Sir And. Never in your life, I think, unless you see canary put me down. Methinks sometimes I have no more wit than a Christian or an ordinary man has; but I am a great eater of beef and I believe that does harm to my wit.

Sir To. No question.

Sir And. An I thought that, I'd forswear it. I'll ride home to-morrow, Sir Toby.

Sir To. Pourquoi, my dear knight?

Sir And. What is "pourquoi?" Do or not do? I would I had bestowed that time in the tongues that I have in fencing, dancing, and bear-baiting. O, had I but followed the arts!

Sir To. Then hadst thou had an excellent head of hair.

Sir And. Why, would that have mended my hair?

Sir To. Past question; for thou seest it will not curl by nature.

Sir And. But it becomes me well enough, does't not?

Sir To. Excellent; it hangs like flax on a distaff, and I hope to see a housewife take thee between her legs, and spin it off.

Sir And. Faith, I'll home to-morrow, Sir Toby. Your niece will not be seen, or if she be, it's four to one she'll none of me. The Count himself here hard by woos her.

Sir To. She'll none o' the Count. She'll not match above her degree, neither in estate, years, nor wit; I have heard her swear 't. Tut, there's life in 't, man.

Sir And. I'll stay a month longer. I am a fellow o' the strangest mind i' the world; I delight in masques and revels sometimes altogether.

Sir To. Art thou good at these kickshawses, knight?

Sir And. As any man in Illyria, whatsoever he be, under the degree of my betters; and yet I will not compare with an old man.

Sir To. What is thy excellence in a galliard, knight?

Sir And. Faith, I can cut a caper.

Sir To. And I can cut the mutton to 't.
Sir And. And I think I have the back-trick simply as strong as any man in Illyria.

Sir To. Wherefore are these things hid? Wherefore have these gifts a curtain before 'em? Are they like to take dust, like Mistress Mall's picture? Why dost thou not go to [the church in a galliard and come home in a coranto? My very walk should be a jig. I would not so much as make water but in a sink-a-pace. What dost thou mean? Is it a world to hide virtues in? I did think, by the excellent constitution of thy leg, it was form'd under the star of a galliard.

Sir And. Ay, 'tis strong, and it does indifferent well in a damn'd colour'd stock. Shall we set about some revels?

Sir To. What shall we do else? Were we not born under Taurus?

Sir And. Taurus! That's sides and heart.

Sir To. No, sir, it is legs and thighs. Let me see thee caper. Ha! Higher! Ha, ha! Excellent!

SCENE IV. [A room in the Duke's palace.]

Enter VALENTINE, and VIOLA in man's attire.

Val. If the Duke continue these favours towards you, Cesario, you are like to be much advanc'd. He hath known you but three days, and already you are no stranger.

Vio. You either fear his humour or my negligence, that you call in question the continuance of his love. Is he inconstant, sir, in his favours?

Val. No, believe me.

Enter DUKE, CURIO, and Attendants.

Vio. I thank you. Here comes the Count.

Duke. Who saw Cesario, ho?

Vio. On your attendance, my lord; here.

Duke. Stand you a while aloof. Cesario, Thou know'st no less but all. I have unclasp'd To thee the book even of my secret soul; Therefore, good youth, address thy gait unto her.

Be not deny'd access, stand at her doors, And tell them, there thy fixed foot shall grow Till thou have audience.

Vio. Sure, my noble lord, If she be so abandon'd to her sorrow As it is spoke, she never will admit me.

Duke. Be clamorous and leap all civil bounds Rather than make unprofitable return.

Vio. Say I do speak with her, my lord, what then?

Duke. O, then unfold the passion of my love, Surprise her with discourse of my dear faith. It shall become thee well to act my woes.

She will attend it better in thy youth Than in a nuncio's of more grave aspect.

Vio. I think not so, my lord.

Duke. Dear lad, believe it; For they shall yet belie thy happy years, That say thou art a man. Diana's lip Is not more smooth and rubious; thy small pipe

Is as the maiden's organ, shrill and sound;
And all is semblative a woman's part.
I know thy constellation is right apt
For this affair. Some four or five attend him,—
All, if you will; for I myself am best
When least in company. Prosper well in this,
And thou shalt live as freely as thy lord,
To call his fortunes thine.

Vio. I'll do my best.
To woo your lady, — [aside] yet, a barful strife!
Whoe'er I woo, myself would be his wife.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. [A room in Olivia's house.]

Enter MARIA and CLOWN.

Mar. Nay, either tell me where thou hast been, or I will not open my lips so wide as a bristle may enter, in way of thy excuse. My lady will hang thee for thy absence.

Clo. Let her hang me! He that is well hang'd in this world needs to fear no colours.

Mar. Make that good.

Clo. He shall see none to fear.

Mar. A good lenten answer. I can tell thee where that saying was born, of "I fear no colours."

Clo. Where, good Mistress Mary?

Mar. In the wars; and that may you be bold to say in your foolery.

Clo. Well, God give them wisdom that have it; and those that are fools, let them use their talents.

Mar. Yet you will be hang'd for being so long absent; or, to be turn'd away, is not that as good as a hanging to you?

Clo. Many a good hanging prevents a bad marriage; and, for turning away, let summer bear it out.

Mar. You are resolute, then?

Clo. Not so, neither; but I am resolv'd on two points.

Mar. That if one break, the other will hold; or, if both break, your gaskins fall.

Clo. Apt, in good faith; very apt. Well, go thy way. If Sir Toby would leave drinking, thou wert as witty a piece of Eve's flesh as any in Illyria.

Mar. Peace, you rogue, no more o' that. Here comes my lady. Make your excuse wisely, you were best.

[Exit.]

Enter LADY OLIVIA [and retinue] with MALVOLIO.

Clo. Wit, an't be thy will, put me into good fooling! Those wits, that think they have thee, do very oft prove fools; and I, that am sure I lack thee, may pass for a wise man; for what says Quinapalus? "Better a witty fool than a foolish wit." — God bless thee, lady!

Oli. Take the fool away.

Clo. Do you not hear, fellows? Take away the lady.

Oli. Go to, you're a dry fool, I'll no more of you; besides, you grow dishonest.

Clo. Two faults, madonna, that drink and good counsel will amend; for give the dry fool drink, then is the fool not dry: bid the dishonest man mend himself; if he mend, he is no longer dishonest; if he cannot, let the botcher mend him. Any thing that's mended is but patch'd; virtue that transgresses is but patch'd with sin, and sin that amends is but patch'd with virtue. If that this simple syllogism will serve, so; if it will not, what remedy? As there is no true cuckold but calamity, so beauty's a flower. The lady bade take away the fool; therefore, I say again, take her away.

Oli. Sir, I bade them take away you.

Clo. Misprision in the highest degree! Lady, "cucullus non facit monachum"; that's as much to say as I wear not motley in my brain. Good madonna, give me leave to prove you a fool.

Oli. Can you do it?

Clo. Dexteriously, good madonna.

Oli. Make your proof.

Clo. I must catechise you for it, madonna. Good my mouse of virtue, answer me.

Oli. Well, sir, for want of other idleness, I'll bide your proof.

Clo. Good madonna, why mournest thou?

Oli. Good fool, for my brother's death.

Clo. I think his soul is in hell, madonna.

Oli. I know his soul is in heaven, fool.

Clo. The more fool, madonna, to mourn for your brother's soul being in heaven. Take away the fool, gentlemen.

Oli. What think you of this fool, Malvolio? Doth he not mend?

Mal. Yes, and shall do till the pangs of death shake him. Infirmary, that decays the wise, doth ever make the better fool.

Clo. God send you, sir, a speedy infirmity, for the better increasing your folly! Sir Toby will be sworn that I am no fox, but he will not pass his word for twopence that you are no fool.

Oli. How say you to that, Malvolio?

Mal. I marvel your ladyship takes delight in such a barren rascal. I saw him put down the other day with an ordinary fool that has no more brain than a stone. Look you now, he's out of his guard already. Unless you laugh and minister occasion to him, he is gagg'd. I protest, I take these wise men, that crow so at these set kind of fools, no better than the fools' zanies.

Oli. O, you are sick of self-love, Malvolio, and taste with a distemper'd appetite. To be generous, guiltless, and of free disposition, is to take those things for bird-bolts that you deem cannon-bullets. There is no slander in an allow'd fool, though he do nothing but rail; nor no railing in a known discreet man, though he do nothing but reprove.

Clo. Now Mercury endure thee with leasing, for thou speak'st well of fools!

Re-enter MARIA.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate a young gentleman much desires to speak with you.

Oli. From the Count Orsino, is it?

Mar. I know not, madam. 'Tis a fair young man, and well attended. ¹¹¹

Oli. Who of my people hold him in delay?

Mar. Sir Toby, madam, your kinsman.

Oli. Fetch him off, I pray you. He speaks nothing but madman; fie on him! [Exit ¹¹⁵ Maria.] Go you, Malvolio; if it be a suit from the Count, I am sick, or not at home, — what you will, to dismiss it. (Exit Malvolio.) Now you see, sir, how your fooling grows old, and people dislike it.

Clo. Thou hast spoke for us, madonna, as if thy eldest son should be a fool; whose ¹²⁰ skull Jove cram with brains! for — here he comes —

Enter SIR TOBY.

one of thy kin has a most weak pia mater.

Oli. By mine honour, half drunk. What is he at the gate, cousin? ¹²⁵

Sir To. A gentleman.

Oli. A gentleman! What gentleman?

Sir To. 'Tis a gentleman here — a plague o' these pickle-herring! How now, sot!

Clo. Good Sir Toby!

Oli. Cousin, cousin, how have you come so early by this lethargy? ¹³⁰

Sir To. Lechery! I defy lechery. There's one at the gate.

Oli. Ay, marry, what is he? ¹³⁵

Sir To. Let him be the devil, an he will, I care not; give me faith, say I. Well, it's all one. [Exit.]

Oli. What's a drunken man like, fool?

Clo. Like a drown'd man, a fool, and a madman. One draught above heat makes him a fool, the second mads him, and a third ¹⁴⁰ drowns him.

Oli. Go thou and seek the crowner and let him sit o' my coz, for he's in the third degree of drink, he's drown'd. Go, look after him.

Clo. He is but mad yet, madonna; and the fool shall look to the madman. [Exit.] ¹⁴⁵

Re-enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. Madam, yond young fellow swears he will speak with you. I told him you were sick. He takes on him to understand so much, and therefore comes to speak with you. I told him you were asleep. He seems to have a fore- ¹⁵⁰ knowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speak with you. What is to be said to him, lady? He's fortified against any denial.

Oli. Tell him he shall not speak with me. ¹⁵⁵

Mal. Has been told so; and he says, he'll stand at your door like a sheriff's post, and be the supporter to a bench, but he'll speak with you.

Oli. What kind o' man is he?

Mal. Why, of mankind. ¹⁶⁰

Oli. What manner of man?

Mal. Of very ill manner. He'll speak with you, will you or no.

Oli. Of what personage and years is he? ¹⁶⁴

Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy; as a squash is before

'tis a peasecod, or a codling when 'tis almost an apple. 'Tis with him in standing water, between boy and man. He is very well-favour'd and he speaks very shrewishly. One would think his mother's milk were scarce out of him. ¹⁷¹

Oli. Let him approach. Call in my gentlewoman.

Mal. Gentlewoman, my lady calls. [Exit.]

Re-enter MARIA.

Oli. Give me my veil. Come, throw it o'er my face. ¹⁷⁵

We'll once more hear Orsino's embassy.

Enter VIOLA [and Attendants].

Vio. The honourable lady of the house, which is she?

Oli. Speak to me; I shall answer for her. Your will? ¹⁸⁰

Vio. Most radiant, exquisite, and unmatchable beauty, — I pray you, tell me if this be the lady of the house, for I never saw her. I would be loath to cast away my speech, for besides that it is excellently well penn'd, I have taken great pains to con it. Good beauties, let me ¹⁸⁵ sustain no scorn. I am very comptible, even to the least sinister usage.

Oli. Whence came you, sir? ¹⁹⁰

Vio. I can say little more than I have studied, and that question's out of my part. Good gentle one, give me modest assurance if you be the lady of the house, that I may proceed in my speech.

Oli. Are you a comedian? ¹⁹⁴

Vio. No, my profound heart; and yet, by the very fangs of malice I swear, I am not that I play. Are you the lady of the house?

Oli. If I do not usurp myself, I am.

Vio. Most certain, if you are she, you do usurp yourself; for what is yours to bestow is not yours to reserve. But this is from my ²⁰⁰ commission. I will on with my speech in your praise, and then show you the heart of my message.

Oli. Come to what is important in 't. I forgive you the praise. ²⁰⁵

Vio. Alas, I took great pains to study it, and 'tis poetical.

Oli. It is the more like to be feigned. I pray you, keep it in. I heard you were saucy at my gates, and allow'd your approach rather to ²¹⁰ wonder at you than to hear you. If you be not mad, be gone. If you have reason, be brief. 'Tis not that time of moon with me to make one in so skipping a dialogue.

Mar. Will you hoist sail, sir? Here lies your way. ²¹⁶

Vio. No, good swabber, I am to hull here a little longer. Some mollification for your giant, sweet lady. Tell me your mind. I am a messenger. ²²⁰

Oli. Sure, you have some hideous matter to deliver, when the courtesy of it is so fearful. Speak your office.

Vio. It alone concerns your ear. I bring no overture of war, no taxation of homage. I held the olive in my hand. My words are as full of peace as matter.

Oli. Yet you began rudely. What are you? What would you? 229

Vio. The rudeness that hath appear'd in me have I learn'd from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as maidenhead; to your ears, divinity, to any other's, profanation. 234

Oli. Give us the place alone; we will hear this divinity. [Exeunt Maria and Attendants.] Now, sir, what is your text?

Vio. Most sweet lady, —

Oli. A comfortable doctrine, and much may be said of it. Where lies your text? 240

Vio. In Orsino's bosom.

Oli. In his bosom! In what chapter of his bosom?

Vio. To answer by the method, in the first of his heart. 245

Oli. O, I have read it; it is heresy. Have you no more to say?

Vio. Good madam, let me see your face.

Oli. Have you any commission from your lord to negotiate with my face? You are now out of your text, but we will draw the curtain and show you the picture. Look you, sir, such a one I was — this present. Is 't not well done? [Unveiling.] 250

Vio. Excellently done, if God did all.

Oli. 'Tis in grain, sir; 't will endure wind and weather. 255

Vio. 'Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and white

Nature's own sweet and cunning hand laid on. Lady, you are the cruell'st she alive, If you will lead these graces to the grave 260 And leave the world no copy.

Oli. O, sir, I will not be so hard-hearted; I will give out divers schedules of my beauty. It shall be inventoried, and every particle and utensil labell'd to my will: as, item, two lips, indifferent red; item, two grey eyes, with 265 lids to them; item, one neck, one chin, and so forth. Were you sent hither to praise me?

Vio. I see you what you are, you are too proud;

But, if you were the devil, you are fair. 270 My lord and master loves you. O, such love Could be but recompens'd, though you were crown'd

The nonpareil of beauty!

Oli. How does he love me?

Vio. With adorations, [with] fertile tears, With groans that thunder love, with sighs of fire. 275

Oli. Your lord does know my mind; I cannot love him.

Yet I suppose him virtuous, know him noble; Of great estate, of fresh and stainless youth, In voices well divulg'd, free, learn'd, and valiant,

And in dimension and the shape of nature 280 A gracious person. But yet I cannot love him. He might have took his answer long ago.

Vio. If I did love you in my master's flame, With such a suffering, such a deadly life,

In your denial I would find no sense, 285 I would not understand it.

Oli. Why, what would you?

Vio. Make me a willow cabin at your gate, And call upon my soul within the house; Write loyal cantons of contemned love And sing them loud even in the dead of night; 290

Halloo your name to the reverberate hills

And make the babbling gossip of the air

Cry out "Olivia!" O, you should not rest

Between the elements of air and earth,

But you should pity me!

Oli. You might do much. 295

What is your parentage?

Vio. Above my fortunes, yet my state is well.

I am a gentleman.

Oli. Get you to your lord.

I cannot love him. Let him send no more, —

Unless, perchance, you come to me again 300

To tell me how he takes it. Fare you well!

I thank you for your pains. Spend this for me.

Vio. I am no fee'd post, lady. Keep your purse.

My master, not myself, lacks recompense.

Love make his heart of flint that you shall love; 305

And let your fervour, like my master's, be Flac'd in contempt! Farewell, fair cruelty. [Exit.]

Oli. "What is your parentage?"

"Above my fortunes, yet my state is well.

I am a gentleman." I'll be sworn thou art. 310 Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and spirit

Do give thee five-fold blazon. Not too fast! Soft, soft!

Unless the master were the man. How now!

Even so quickly may one catch the plague?

Methinks I feel this youth's perfections 315 With an invisible and subtle stealth

To creep in at mine eyes. Well, let it be.

What ho, Malvolio!

Re-enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. Here, madam, at your service.

Oli. Run after that same peevish messenger,

The County's man. He left this ring behind him, 320

Would I or not. Tell him I'll none of it.

Desire him not to flatter with his lord,

Nor hold him up with hopes. I'm not for him.

If that the youth will come this way to-morrow,

I'll give him reasons for't. Hie thee, Malvolio. 325

Mal. Madam, I will. [Exit.]

Oli. I do I know not what, and fear to find Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind.

Fate, show thy force; ourselves we do not owe;

What is decreed must be, and be this so. 330 [Exit.]

ACT II

SCENE I. [The sea-coast.]

Enter ANTONIO and SEBASTIAN.

Ant. Will you stay no longer? Nor will you not that I go with you?

Seb. By your patience, no. My stars shine darkly over me. The malignancy of my fate might perhaps distemper yours, therefore I shall crave of you your leave that I may bear⁵ my evils alone. It were a bad recompense for your love, to lay any of them on you.

Ant. Let me yet know of you whither you are bound.¹⁰

Seb. No, sooth, sir. My determinate voyage is mere extravagancy. But I perceive in you so excellent a touch of modesty, that you will not extort from me what I am willing to keep in; therefore it charges me in manners the rather to express myself. You must know¹⁵ of me then, Antonio, my name is Sebastian, which I call'd Roderigo. My father was that Sebastian of Messaline, whom I know you have heard of. He left behind him myself and a sister, both born in an hour. If the heavens²⁰ had been pleas'd, would we had so ended! But you, sir, alter'd that; for some hour before you took me from the breach of the sea was my sister drown'd.

Ant. Alas the day!²⁵

Seb. A lady, sir, though it was said she much resembled me, was yet of many accounted beautiful; but, though I could not with such estimable wonder overfar believe that, yet thus far I will boldly publish her: she bore a mind that envy could not but call fair. She is³⁰ drown'd already, sir, with salt water, though I seem to drown her remembrance again with more.

Ant. Pardon me, sir, your bad entertainment.

Seb. O good Antonio, forgive me your trouble.³⁵

Ant. If you will not murder me for my love, let me be your servant.

Seb. If you will not undo what you have done, that is, kill him whom you have recover'd, desire it not. Fare ye well at once. My bosom is full of kindness, and I am yet⁴⁰ so near the manners of my mother, that upon the least occasion more mine eyes will tell tales of me. I am bound to the Count Orsino's court. Farewell. [Exit.]

Ant. The gentleness of all the gods go with thee!⁴⁵

I have many enemies in Orsino's court, Else would I very shortly see thee there. But, come what may, I do adore thee so, That danger shall seem sport, and I will go. [Exit.]

SCENE II. [A street.]

Enter VIOLA and MALVOLIO, at several doors.

Mal. Were you not even now with the Countess Olivia?

Viola. Even now, sir. On a moderate pace I have since arriv'd but hither.⁴

Mal. She returns this ring to you, sir. You might have saved me my pains, to have taken it away yourself. She adds, moreover, that you should put your lord into a desperate assurance she will none of him; and — one thing more — that you be never so hardy to come again in his affairs, unless it be to report your lord's¹⁰ taking of this. Receive it so.

Viola. She took the ring of me. I'll none of it.

Mal. Come, sir, you peevishly threw it to her; and her will is, it should be so return'd. If it be worth stooping for, there it lies in¹⁵ your eye; if not, be it his that finds it. [Exit.]

Viola. I left no ring with her. What means this lady?

Fortune forbid my outside have not charm'd her!

She made good view of me; indeed, so much,²⁰ That [sure] methought her eyes had lost her tongue,

For she did speak in starts distractedly.

She loves me, sure. The cunning of her passion Invites me in this churlish messenger.

None of my lord's ring! Why, he sent her none. I am the man! If it be so, as 'tis,²⁵

Poor lady, she were better love a dream.

Disguise, I see thou art a wickedness

Wherein the pregnant enemy does much.

How easy is it for the proper-false³⁰

In women's waxen hearts to set their forms!

Alas, our frailty is the cause, not we!

For such as we are made of, such we be.

How will this fadge? My master loves her dearly;

And I, poor monster, fond as much on him;³⁵

And she, mistaken, seems to dote on me.

What will become of this? As I am man,

My state is desperate for my master's love;

As I am woman, — now alas the day! —

What thriftless sighs shall poor Olivia breathe!

O time! thou must untangle this, not I.⁴¹

It is too hard a knot for me to untie! [Exit.]

SCENE III. [A room in Olivia's house.]

Enter SIR TOBY and SIR ANDREW.

Sir To. Approach, Sir Andrew. Not to be a-bed after midnight is to be up betimes; and "deliculu surgere," thou know'st, —

Sir And. Nay, by my troth, I know not; but I know, to be up late is to be up late.⁵

Sir To. A false conclusion. I hate it as an unfill'd can. To be up after midnight and to go to bed then, is early; so that to go to bed after midnight is to go to bed betimes. Does not our lives consist of the four elements?¹⁰

Sir And. Faith, so they say; but I think it rather consists of eating and drinking.

Sir To. Thou 'rt a scholar; let us therefore eat and drink. Marian, I say! a stoup of wine!

Enter CLOWN.

Sir And. Here comes the fool, i' faith.¹⁵

Clo. How now, my hearts! Did you never see the picture of "we three"?

Sir To. Welcome, ass. Now let's have a catch.

Sir And. By my troth, the fool has an excellent breast. I had rather than forty shillings I had such a leg, and so sweet a breath to sing, as the fool has. In sooth, thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spok'st of Picrogramitos, of the Vapians passing the equinoctial of Queubus. 'T was very good, i' faith. I sent thee sixpence for thy leman. Hadst it?

Clo. I did impeticoes thy gratillity; for Malvolio's nose is no whipstock. My lady has a white hand, and the Mermidons are no bottle-ale houses.

Sir And. Excellent! Why, this is the best fooling, when all is done. Now, a song.

Sir To. Come on; there is sixpence for you. Let's have a song.

Sir And. There's a testril of me too. If one knight give a —

Clo. Would you have a love-song, or a song of good life?

Sir To. A love-song, a love-song.

Sir And. Ay, ay. I care not for good life.

Clo. (Sings.)

O mistress mine, where are you roaming?

O, stay and hear, your true love's coming,

That can sing both high and low.

Trip no further, pretty sweeting;

Journeys end in lovers meeting,

Every wise man's son doth know.

Sir And. Excellent good, i' faith.

Sir To. Good, good.

Clo. (Sings.)

What is love? 'T is not hereafter.

Present mirth hath present laughter;

What's to come is still unsure.

In delay there lies no plenty;

Then come kiss me, sweet and twenty,

Youth's a stuff will not endure.

Sir And. A mellifluous voice, as I am true knight.

Sir To. A contagious breath.

Sir And. Very sweet and contagious, i' faith.

Sir To. To hear by the nose, it is dullest in contagion. But shall we make the welkin dance indeed? Shall we rouse the night-owl in a catch that will draw three souls out of one [weaver? Shall we do that?

Sir And. An you love me, let's do't. I am dog at a catch.

Clo. By'r lady, sir, and some dogs will catch well.

Sir And. Most certain. Let our catch be, "Thou knave."

Clo. "Hold thy peace, thou knave," knight? I shall be constrain'd in't to call thee knave, knight.

Sir And. 'T is not the first time I have constrained one to call me knave. Begin, fool. It begins, "Hold thy peace."

Clo. I shall never begin if I hold my peace.

Sir And. Good, i' faith. Come, begin.

(Catch sung.)

Enter MARIA.

Mar. What a caterwauling do you keep here! If my lady have not call'd up her steward Malvolio and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

Sir To. My lady's a Cataian, we are politicians, Malvolio's a Peg-a-Ramsey, and "Three merry men be we." Am not I consanguineous? Am I not of her blood? Tilly-vally. Lady! (Sings.) "There dwelt a man in Babylon, lady, lady!"

Clo. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

Sir And. Ay, he does well enough if he be dispos'd, and so do I too. He does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

Sir To. (Sings.) "O, the twelfth day of December," —

Mar. For the love o' God, peace!

Enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. My masters, are you mad, or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, but to gabble like tinkers at this time of night? Do ye make an alehouse of my lady's house, that ye squeak out your coziers' catches without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time in you?

Sir To. We did keep time, sir, in our catches. Sneek up!

Mal. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My lady bade me tell you that, though she harbours you as her kinsman, she's nothing alli'd to your disorders. If you can separate yourself and your misdemeanours, you are welcome to the house; if not, an it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.

Sir To. "Farewell, dear heart, since I must needs be gone."

Mar. Nay, good Sir Toby.

Clo. "His eyes do show his days are almost done."

Mal. Is't even so?

Sir To. "But I will never die."

Clo. Sir Toby, there you lie.

Mal. This is much credit to you.

Sir To. "Shall I bid him go?"

Clo. "What an if you do?"

Sir To. "Shall I bid him go, and spare not?"

Clo. "O no, no, no, no, you dare not."

Sir To. Out o' tune, sir! Ye lie. Art any more than a steward? Dost thou think, because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?

Clo. Yes, by Saint Anne, and ginger shall be hot i' the mouth too.

Sir To. Thou'rt i' the right. Go, sir, rub your chain with crumbs. A stoup of wine, Maria!

Mal. Mistress Mary, if you priz'd my lady's favour at anything more than con- tempt, you would not give means for this uncivil rule. She shall know of it, by this hand.

Mar. Go shake your ears.

[Exit.

134

Sir And. 'T were as good a deed as to drink when a man's a-hungry, to challenge him the field, and then to break promise with him and make a fool of him.

Sir To. Do't, knight. I'll write thee a challenge, or I'll deliver thy indignation to him by word of mouth. 141

Mar. Sweet Sir Toby, be patient for to-night. Since the youth of the Count's was to-day with my lady, she is much out of quiet. For Monsieur Malvolio, let me alone with him. If I do not gull him into a nayword, and make him a [145 common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lie straight in my bed. I know I can do it.

Sir To. Possess us, possess us. Tell us something of him. 150

Mar. Marry, sir, sometimes he is a kind of puritan.

Sir And. O, if I thought that, I'd beat him like a dog!

Sir To. What, for being a puritan? Thy exquisite reason, dear knight? 156

Sir And. I have no exquisite reason for't, but I have reason good enough.

Mar. The devil a puritan that he is, or anything constantly, but a time-pleaser; an affection'd ass, that cons state without book and utters it by great swarths; the best persuaded of himself, so cramm'd, as he thinks, with excellencies, that it is his grounds of faith that all that look on him love him; and on that vice in him will my revenge find notable cause to work. 166

Sir To. What wilt thou do?

Mar. I will drop in his way some obscure epistles of love; wherein, by the colour of his beard, the shape of his leg, the manner of his gait, the expresseure of his eye, forehead, [170 and complexion, he shall find himself most feelingly personated. I can write very like my lady your niece. On a forgotten matter we can hardly make distinction of our hands. 175

Sir To. Excellent! I smell a device.

Sir And. I have't in my nose too.

Sir To. He shall think, by the letters that thou wilt drop, that they come from my niece, and that she's in love with him. 180

Mar. My purpose is, indeed, a horse of that colour.

Sir And. And your horse now would make him an ass.

Mar. Ass, I doubt not. 185

Sir And. O, 't will be admirable!

Mar. Sport royal, I warrant you. I know my physick will work with him. I will plant you two, and let the fool make a third, where he shall find the letter. Observe his construction of it. For this night, to bed, and dream on [190 the event. Farewell. [Exit.]

Sir To. Good night, Penthésilæa.

Sir And. Before me, she's a good wench.

Sir To. She's a beagle, true-bred, and one that adores me. What o' that? 196

Sir And. I was ador'd once too.

Sir To. Let's to bed, knight. Thou hadst need send for more money.

Sir And. If I cannot recover your niece, I am a foul way out. 201

Sir To. Send for money, knight. If thou hast her not i' the end, call me cut.

Sir And. If I do not, never trust me, take it how you will. 205

Sir To. Come, come, I'll go burn some sack; 't is too late to go to bed now. Come, knight; come, knight. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. [A room in the Duke's palace.]

Enter DUKE, VIOLA, CURIO, and others.

Duke. Give me some music. Now, — good morrow, friends, —

Now, good Cesario, but that piece of song, That old and antique song we heard last night. Methought it did relieve my passion much, More than light airs and recollected terms 5 Of these most brisk and giddy-paced times. Come, but one verse.

Cur. He is not here, so please your lordship, that should sing it.

Duke. Who was it? 19

Cur. Feste, the jester, my lord; a fool that the lady Olivia's father took much delight in. He is about the house.

Duke. Seek him out, and play the tune the while. [Exit Curio.] Music plays.

Come hither, boy. If ever thou shalt love, 15 In the sweet pangs of it remember me;

For such as I am all true lovers are, Unstaid and skittish in all motions else, 20

Save in the constant image of the creature That is belov'd. How dost thou like this tune?

Viola. It gives a very echo to the seat 21 Where Love is thron'd.

Duke. Thou dost speak masterly. My life upon't, young though thou art, thine eye

Hath stay'd upon some favour that it loves. 25 Hath it not, boy?

Viola. A little, by your favour.

Duke. What kind of woman is't?

Viola. Of your complexion.

Duke. She is not worth thee, then. What years, i' faith?

Viola. About your years, my lord.

Duke. Too old, by heaven. Let still the woman take. 30

An elder than herself; so wears she to him, So sways she level in her husband's heart.

For, boy, however we do praise ourselves, Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm, 35

More longing, wavering, sooner lost and worn,

Than women's are.

Viola. I think it well, my lord.

Duke. Then let thy love be younger than thyself,

Or thy affection cannot hold the bent.

For women are as roses, whose fair flower Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour. 40

Viola. And so they are; alas, that they are so!

To die, even when they to perfection grow!

Re-enter CURIO and CLOWN.

Duke. O, fellow, come, the song we had last night.

Mark it, Cesario, it is old and plain.

The spinsters and the knitters in the sun 45

And the free maids that weave their thread with bones

Do use to chant it. It is silly sooth,

And dallies with the innocence of love,

Like the old age.

Clo. Are you ready, sir? 50

Duke. Ay; prithee, sing. [Music.]

SONG.

[Clo.] Come away, come away, death,

And in sad cypress let me be laid.

Fly away, fly away, breath;

I am slain by a fair cruel maid. 55

My shroud of white, stuck all with yew,

O, prepare it!

My part of death, no one so true

Did share it.

Not a flower, not a flower sweet,

On my black coffin let there be strown. 60

Not a friend, not a friend greet

My poor corpse, where my bones shall be thrown.

A thousand thousand sighs to save,

Lay me, O, where 65

Sad true lover never find my grave,

To weep there!

Duke. There's for thy pains.

Clo. No pains, sir; I take pleasure in singing, sir. 70

Duke. I'll pay thy pleasure then.

Clo. Truly, sir, and pleasure will be paid, one time or another.

Duke. Give me now leave to leave thee. 74

Clo. Now, the melancholy god protect thee, and the tailor make thy doublet of changeable taffeta, for thy mind is a very opal. I would have men of such constancy put to sea, that their business might be everything and their intent everywhere; for that's it that always makes a good voyage of nothing. Farewell. 81

[Exit.]

Duke. Let all the rest give place.

[Curio and Attendants retire.]

Once more, Cesario,

Get thee to yond same sovereign cruelty.

Tell her, my love, more noble than the world,

Prizes not quantity of dirty lands. 85

The parts that fortune hath bestow'd upon her,

Tell her, I hold as giddily as fortune;

But 't is that miracle and queen of gems

That nature pranks her in attracts my soul.

Vio. But if she cannot love you, sir? 90

Duke. I cannot be so answer'd.

Vio.

Sooth, but you must.

Say that some lady, as perhaps there is,

Hath for your love as great a pang of heart

As you have for Olivia. You cannot love her.

You tell her so. Must she not then be answer'd? 95

Duke. There is no woman's sides
Can bide the beating of so strong a passion
As love doth give my heart; no woman's heart
So big, to hold so much. They lack retention.
Alas, their love may be call'd appetite, 100
No motion of the liver, but the palate,
That suffer surfeit, cloyment, and revolt;
But mine is all as hungry as the sea,
And can digest as much. Make no compare
Between that love a woman can bear me 105
And that I owe Olivia.

Vio. Ay, but I know —

Duke. What dost thou know?

Vio. Too well what love women to men may owe.

In faith, they are as true of heart as we.

My father had a daughter lov'd a man, 110

As it might be, perhaps, were I a woman,

I should your lordship.

Duke. And what's her history?

Vio. A blank, my lord. She never told her love,

But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud,
Feed on her damask cheek. She pin'd in thought, 115

And with a green and yellow melancholy

She sat, like patience on a monument,

Smiling at grief. Was not this love indeed?

We men may say more, swear more; but indeed

Our shows are more than will, for still we prove 120

Much in our vows, but little in our love.

Duke. But died thy sister of her love, my boy?

Vio. I am all the daughters of my father's house,

And all the brothers too; — and yet I know not.

Sir, shall I to this lady?

Duke. Ay, that's the theme.

To her in haste. Give her this jewel. Say 125

My love can give no place, bide no deny.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. [Olivia's garden.]

Enter SIR TOBY, SIR ANDREW, and FABIAN.

Sir To. Come thy ways, Signior Fabian.

Fab. Nay, I'll come. If I lose a scruple of this sport, let me be boil'd to death with melancholy. 4

Sir To. Wouldst thou not be glad to have the niggardly rascally sheep-biter come by some notable shame?

Fab. I would exult, man. You know, he brought me out o' favour with my lady about a bear-baiting here. 10

Sir To. To anger him we'll have the bear again, and we will fool him black and blue. Shall we not, Sir Andrew?

Sir And. An we do not, it is pity of our lives. 15

Enter MARIA.

Sir To. Here comes the little villain. How now, my metal of India!

Mar. Get ye all three into the box-tree; Malvolio's coming down this walk. He has been yonder i' the sun practising behaviour to his own shadow this half hour. Observe him, [20 for the love of mockery, for I know this letter will make a contemplative idiot of him. Close, in the name of jesting! Lie thou there [throws down a letter], for here comes the trout that must be caught with tickling. [Exit. 25

Enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. 'Tis but fortune. All is fortune. Maria once told me she did affect me; and I have heard herself come thus near, that, should she fancy, it should be one of my complexion. Besides, she uses me with a more exalted re- [30 spect than any one else that follows her. What should I think on 't?

Sir To. Here's an overweening rogue! 34

Fab. O, peace! Contemplation makes a rare turkey-cock of him. How he jets under his advanc'd plumes!

Sir And. 'S light, I could so beat the rogue!

Sir To. Peace, I say.

Mal. To be Count Malvolio! 40

Sir To. Ah, rogue!

Sir And. Pistol him, pistol him.

Sir To. Peace, peace!

Mal. There is example for 't. The lady of the Strachy married the yeoman of the wardrobe. 45

Sir And. Fie on him, Jezebel!

Fab. O, peace! now he's deeply in. Look how imagination blows him.

Mal. Having been three months married to her, sitting in my state, — 50

Sir To. O, for a stone-bow, to hit him in the eye!

Mal. Calling my officers about me, in my branch'd velvet gown, having come from a day-bed, where I have left Olivia sleeping, — 55

Sir To. Fire and brimstone!

Fab. O, peace, peace!

Mal. And then to have the humour of state; and after a demure travel of regard, telling them I know my place as I would they should do theirs, to ask for my kinsman Toby, — 61

Sir To. Bolts and shackles!

Fab. O peace, peace, peace! Now, now.

Mal. Seven of my people, with an obedient start, make out for him. I frown the while, and perchance wind up my watch, or play [65 with my — some rich jewel. Toby approaches, curtsies there to me, —

Sir To. Shall this fellow live?

Fab. Though our silence be drawn from us with cars, yet peace. 71

Mal. I extend my hand to him thus, quenching my familiar smile with an austere regard of control, —

Sir To. And does not Toby take you a blow o' the lips then? 76

Mal. Saying, "Cousin Toby, my fortunes, having cast me on your niece, give me this prerogative of speech," —

Sir To. What, what? 80

Mal. "You must amend your drunkenness."

Sir To. Out, scab!

Fab. Nay, patience, or we break the sinews of our plot.

Mal. "Besides, you waste the treasure of your time with a foolish knight," — 86

Sir And. That's me, I warrant you.

Mal. "One Sir Andrew," —

Sir And. I knew 't was I; for many do call me fool. 90

Mal. What employment have we here?

[Taking up the letter.]

Fab. Now is the woodcock near the gin.

Sir To. O, peace, and the spirit of humours intimate reading aloud to him! 94

Mal. By my life, this is my lady's hand. These be her very C's, her U's, and her T's; and thus makes she her great P's. It is, in contempt of question, her hand.

Sir And. Her C's, her U's, and her T's: why that? 100

Mal. [Reads.] "To the unknown belov'd, this, and my good wishes": — her very phrases! By your leave, wax. Soft! And the impresseure her Lucrece, with which she uses to seal. 'Tis my lady. To whom should this be? 105

Fab. This wins him, liver and all.

Mal. [Reads.]

"Jove knows I love;

But who?

Lips, do not move;

No man must know," 110

"No man must know." What follows? The numbers alter'd! "No man must know!" If this should be thee, Malvolio?

Sir To. Marry, hang thee, brock!

Mal. [Reads.]

"I may command where I adore; 115

But silence, like a Lucrece knife,

With bloodless stroke my heart doth gore.

M, O, A, I, doth sway my life."

Fab. A fustian riddle!

Sir To. Excellent wench, say I. 120

Mal. "M, O, A, I, doth sway my life." Nay, but first, let me see, let me see, let me see.

Fab. What dish o' poison has she dress'd him!

Sir To. And with what wing the staniel checks at it! 125

Mal. "I may command where I adore."

Why, she may command me. I serve her. She is my lady. Why, this is evident to any formal capacity, there is no obstruction in this. And the end, — what should that alphabetical position portend? If I could make that [130 resemble something in me! — Softly! M, O, A, I, —

Sir To. O, ay, make up that. He is now at a cold scent.

Fab. Sowter will cry upon 't for all this, though it be as rank as a fox. 135

Mal. M, — Malvolio; M, — why, that begins my name.

Fab. Did not I say he would work it out? The cur is excellent at faults. 140 Mal. M, — but then there is no consonancy in the sequel. That suffers under probation. A should follow, but O does.

Fab. And O shall end, I hope.

Sir To. Ay, or I'll cudgel him, and make him cry O! 146

Mal. And then I comes behind.

Fab. Ay, an you had any eye behind you, you might see more detraction at your heels than fortunes before you. 150

Mal. M, O, A, I; this simulation is not as the former. And yet, to crush this a little, it would bow to me, for every one of these letters are in my name. Soft! here follows prose. 154

[Reads.] "If this fall into thy hand, resolve. In my stars I am above thee, but be not afraid of greatness. Some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon 'em. Thy Fates open their hands, let thy blood and spirit embrace them; and, to inure thyself to what thou art like 160 to be, cast thy humble slough and appear fresh. Be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants; let thy tongue tang arguments of state; put thyself into the trick of singularity: she thus advises thee that sighs for thee. Re- 165 member who commended thy yellow stockings, and wish'd to see thee ever cross-garter'd. I say, remember. Go to, thou art made, if thou desir'st to be so; if not, let me see thee a steward still, the fellow of servants, and not worthy to touch Fortune's fingers. Fare- 170 well. She that would alter services with thee, THE FORTUNATE UNHAPPY."

Daylight and champaign discovers not more. This is open. I will be proud, I will read po- 175 litic authors, I will baffle Sir Toby, I will wash off gross acquaintance, I will be point-device the very man. I do not now fool myself, to let imagination jade me; for every reason excites to this, that my lady loves me. She did commend my yellow stockings of late, she 180 did praise my leg being cross-garter'd; and in this she manifests herself to my love, and with a kind of injunction drives me to these habits of her liking. I thank my stars I am happy. I will be strange, stout, in yellow stockings, 185 and cross-garter'd, even with the swiftness of putting on. Jove and my stars be praised! Here is yet a postscript.

[Reads.] "Thou canst not choose but know who I am. If thou entertain'st my love, let it appear in thy smiling. Thy smiles become 190 thee well; therefore in my presence still smile, dear my sweet, I prithee."

Jove, I thank thee. I will smile; I will do everything that thou wilt have me. [Exit. 195

Fab. I will not give my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy.

Sir To. I could marry this wench for this device— 200

Sir And. So could I too.

Sir To. And ask no other dowry with her but such another jest.

Re-enter MARIA.

Sir And. Nor I neither.

Egb. Here comes my noble gull-catcher. 205

Sir To. Wilt thou set thy foot o' my neck?

Sir And. Or o' mine either?

Sir To. Shall I play my freedom at tray-trip, and become thy bond-slave?

Sir And. I' faith, or I either? 210

Sir To. Why, thou hast put him in such a dream, that when the image of it leaves him he must run mad.

Mar. Nay, but say true. Does it work upon him? 215

Sir To. Like aqua-vitæ with a midwife.

Mar. If you will then see the fruits of the sport, mark his first approach before my lady. He will come to her in yellow stockings, and 'tis a colour she abhors, and cross-garter'd, a fashion she detests; and he will smile upon 220 her, which will now be so unsuitable to her disposition, being addicted to a melancholy as she is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt. If you will see it, follow me. 225

Sir To. To the gates of Tartar, thou most excellent devil of wit!

Sir And. I'll make one too. [Exeunt.]

ACT III

SCENE I. [Olivia's garden.]

Enter VIOLA and CLOWN [with a tabor].

Vio. Save thee, friend, and thy music! Dost thou live by thy tabor?

Clo. No, sir, I live by the church.

Vio. Art thou a churchman?

Clo. No such matter, sir. I do live by the church; for I do live at my house, and my house doth stand by the church.

Vio. So thou mayst say, the king lies by a beggar, if a beggar dwells near him; or, the church stands by thy tabor, if thy tabor stand by the church. 15

Clo. You have said, sir. To see this age! A sentence is but a cheveril glove to a good wit. How quickly the wrong side may be turn'd outward! 20

Vio. Nay, that's certain. They that dally nicely with words may quickly make them wanton.

Clo. I would, therefore, my sister had had no name, sir. 20

Vio. Why, man?

Clo. Why, sir, her name's a word, and to dally with that word might make my sister wanton. But, indeed, words are very rascals since bonds disgrac'd them. 25

Vio. Thy reason, man?

Clo. Troth, sir, I can yield you none without words; and words are grown so false, I am loath to prove reason with them. 30

Vio. I warrant thou art a merry fellow and car'st for nothing.

Clo. Not so, sir, I do care for something; but in my conscience, sir, I do not care for you. If that be to care for nothing, sir, I would it would make you invisible. 35

Vio. Art not thou the Lady Olivia's fool?

Clo. No, indeed, sir; the Lady Olivia has no folly. She will keep no fool, sir, till she be married ; and fools are as like husbands as pilchards are to herrings, the husband's the bigger. I am indeed not her fool, but her corrupter of words. 41

Vio. I saw thee late at the Count Orsino's.

Clo. Foolery, sir, does walk about the orb like the sun, it shines everywhere. I would be sorry, sir, but the fool should be as oft with your master as with my mistress. I think I saw your wisdom there. 47

Vio. Nay, an thou pass upon me, I'll no more with thee. Hold, there's expenses for thee.

Clo. Now Jove, in his next commodity of hair, send thee a beard ! 51

Vio. By my troth, I'll tell thee, I am almost sick for one, —[aside] though I would not have it grow on my chin. Is thy lady within ?

Clo. Would not a pair of these have bred, sir ? 55

Vio. Yes, being kept together and put to use.

Clo. I would play Lord Pandarus of Phrygia, sir, to bring a Cressida to this Troilus.

Vio. I understand you, sir. 'Tis well begg'd. 60

Clo. The matter, I hope, is not great, sir, begging but a beggar. Cressida was a beggar. My lady is within, sir. I will construe to them whence you come. Who you are and what you would are out of my welkin — I might say "element," but the word is overworn. [Exit. 65

Vio. This fellow is wise enough to play the fool, And to do that well craves a kind of wit. He must observe their mood on whom he jests, The quality of persons, and the time, 70 And, like the haggard, check at every feather That comes before his eye. This is a practice As full of labour as a wise man's art ; For folly that he wisely shows is fit ; 74 But wise men, folly-fallen, quite taint their wit.

Enter SIR TOBY and SIR ANDREW.

Sir To. Save you, gentleman.

Vio. And you, sir.

Sir And. Dieu vous garde, monsieur.

Vio. Et vous aussi ; votre serviteur.

Sir And. I hope, sir, you are ; and I am yours. 81

Sir To. Will you encounter the house ? My niece is desirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.

Vio. I am bound to your niece, sir ; I mean, she is the list of my voyage. 85

Sir To. Taste your legs, sir ; put them to motion.

Vio. My legs do better understand me, sir, than I understand what you mean by bidding me taste my legs. 91

Sir To. I mean, to go, sir, to enter.

Vio. I will answer you with gait and entrance. But we are prevented.

Enter OLIVIA and Gentlewoman.

Most excellent accomplish'd lady, the heavens rain odours on you ! 95

Sir And. That youth's a rare courtier. "Rain odours ;" well.

Vio. My matter hath no voice, lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchsafed ear, 100
Sir And. "Odours," "pregnant," and "vouchsafed" ; I'll get 'em all three all ready.

Oli. Let the garden door be shut, and leave me to my hearing. [Exit all but Olivia and Viola.] Give me your hand, sir. 105

Vio. My duty, madam, and most humble service.

Oli. What is your name ?

Vio. Cesario is your servant's name, fair princess.

Oli. My servant, sir ! 'Twas never merry world

Since lowly feigning was call'd compliment. 110
You're servant to the Count Orsino, youth.

Vio. And he is yours, and his must needs be yours.

Your servant's servant is your servant, madam.

Oli. For him, I think not on him. For his thoughts,

Would they were blanks, rather than fill'd with me ! 115

Vio. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts

On his behalf.

Oli. O, by your leave, I pray you, I bade you never speak again of him ; But, would you undertake another suit, I had rather hear you to solicit that Than music from the spheres. 120

Vio. Dear lady, —
Oli. Give me leave, beseech you. I did send,

After the last enchantment you did here, A ring in chase of you ; so did I abuse

Myself, my servant, and, I fear me, you. 125
Under your hard construction must I sit,

To force that on you, in a shameful cunning, Which you knew none of yours. What might you know ?

Have you not set mine honour at the stake And baited it with all the unmuzzled thoughts

That tyrannous heart can think ? To one of your receiving 131

Enough is shown. A cypress, not a bosom, Hides my heart. So, let me hear you speak.

Vio. I pity you.

Oli. That's a degree to love.

Vio. No, not a grize ; for 'tis a vulgar proof, 135

That very oft we pity enemies.

Oli. Why, then, methinks 'tis time to smile again.

O world, how apt the poor are to be proud ! If one should be a prey, how much the better

To fall before the lion than the wolf ! 140

[Clock strikes.] The clock upbraids me with the waste of time. Be not afraid, good youth, I will not have you ;

And yet, when wit and youth is come to harvest,

Your wife is like to reap a proper man. There lies your way, due west. 145

Vio. Then westward-ho ! Grace and good disposition

Attend your ladyship !
You'll nothing, madam, to my lord by me ?

Oli. Stay!
I prithee, tell me what thou think'st of me. 150
Vio. That you do think you are not what you are.

Oli. If I think so, I think the same of you.
Vio. Then think you right. I am not what I am.

Oli. I would you were as I would have you be!

Vio. Would it be better, madam, than I am? I wish it might, for now I am your fool. 155

Oli. O, what a deal of scorn looks beautiful in the contempt and anger of his lip!
 A murderous guilt shows not itself more soon Than love that would seem hid. Love's night is noon. 160

Cesario, by the roses of the spring,
 By maidenhood, honour, truth, and everything,
 I love thee so, that, maugre all thy pride,
 Nor wit nor reason can my passion hide.
 Do not extort thy reasons from this clause, 165
 For that I woo, thou therefore hast no cause;
 But rather reason thus with reason fetter,
 Love sought is good, but given unsought is better.

Vio. By innocence I swear, and by my youth,
 I have one heart, one bosom, and one truth, 170
 And that no woman has; nor never none
 Shall mistress be of it, save I alone.
 And so adieu, good madam; nevermore
 Will I my master's tears to you deplore.

Oli. Yet come again; for thou perhaps mayst move 175
 That heart, which now abhors, to like his love.
 [Exit.]

SCENE II. [A room in Olivia's house.]

Enter SIR TOBY, SIR ANDREW, and FABIAN.

Sir And. No, faith, I'll not stay a jot longer.
Sir To. Thy reason, dear venom, give thy reason.

Fab. You must needs yield your reason, Sir Andrew. 5

Sir And. Marry, I saw your niece do more favours to the Count's serving-man than ever she bestow'd upon me. I saw 't in the orchard.

Sir To. Did she see thee the while, old boy? Tell me that. 10

Sir And. As plain as I see you now.

Fab. This was a great argument of love in her toward you.

Sir And. 'Slight, will you make an ass o' me?

Fab. I will prove it legitimate, sir, upon the oaths of judgement and reason. 15

Sir To. And they have been grand-jurymen since before Noah was a sailor.

Fab. She did show favour to the youth in your sight only to exasperate you, to awake your dormouse valour, to put fire in your heart, and brimstone in your liver. You should then have accosted her; and with some excellent jests, fire-new from the mint, you should have bang'd the youth into dumbness. This was look'd for at your hand, and this was balk'd. The double gilt of this opportunity you let time wash off, and you are now sailed into the north of my lady's opinion, where you will hang like an icicle on a Dutchman's beard, unless you do redeem it by some laudable attempt either of valour or policy. 21

Sir And. An't be any way, it must be with valour; for policy I hate. I had as lief be a Brownist as a politician.

Sir To. Why, then, build me thy fortunes upon the basis of valour. Challenge me the Count's youth to fight with him; hurt him in eleven places; my niece shall take note of it; and assure thyself, there is no love-broker in the world can more prevail in man's commendation with woman than report of valour. 25

Fab. There is no way but this, Sir Andrew.

Sir And. Will either of you bear me a challenge to him?

Sir To. Go, write it in a martial hand. Be as curs't and brief. It is no matter how witty, so it be eloquent and full of invention. Taunt him with the license of ink. If thou thou'st him some thrice, it shall not be amiss; and as many lies as will lie in thy sheet of paper, although the sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware in England, set 'em down. Go about it. Let there be gall enough in thy ink. Though thou write with a goose-pen, no matter. About it.

Sir And. Where shall I find you? 30

Sir To. We'll call thee at the cubiculo. Go.
 [Exit Sir Andrew.]

Fab. This is a dear manakin to you, Sir Toby.

Sir To. I have been dear to him, lad, some two thousand strong, or so.

Fab. We shall have a rare letter from him. But you'll not deliver 't? 35

Sir To. Never trust me, then; and by all means stir on the youth to an answer. I think oxen and wainropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew, if he were open'd, and you find so much blood in his liver as will clog the foot of a flea, I'll eat the rest of the anatomy. 40

Fab. And his opposite, the youth, bears in his visage no great presage of cruelty.

Enter MARIA.

Sir To. Look, where the youngest wren of mine comes. 45

Mar. If you desire the spleen, and will laugh yourselves into stitches, follow me. Yond gull Malvolio is turned heathen, a very renegade; for there is no Christian, that means to be saved by believing rightly, can ever believe such impossible passages of grossness. He's in yellow stockings. 50

Sir To. And cross-garter'd?

Mar. Most villainously; like a pedant that keeps a school i' the church. I have dogg'd him like his murderer. He does obey every point of the letter that I dropp'd to betray him. He does smile his face into more lines than is in the new map with the augmentation of the Indies. You have not seen such a thing as 't is. I can hardly forbear hurling things at him. I know my lady will strike him. If she do, he'll smile and take 't for a great favour. 55

Sir To. Come, bring us, bring us where he is. (Exeunt. 90)

SCENE III. [A street.]

Enter SEBASTIAN and ANTONIO.

Seb. I will not by my will have troubled you;

But, since you make your pleasure of your pains,
I will no further chide you.

Ant. I could not stay behind you. My desire,
More sharp than filed steel, did spur me forth, 5

And not all love to see you, though so much
As might have drawn one to a longer voyage,
But jealousy what might befall your travel,
Being skillless in these parts; which to a stranger,

Unguided and unfriended, often prove 10
Rough and un hospitable. My willing love,
The rather by these arguments of fear,
Set forth in your pursuit.

Seb. My kind Antonio,
I can no other answer make but thanks,
And thanks, and ever [thanks. Too] oft good turns 15

Are shuffl'd off with such uncurrent pay;
But, were my worth as is my conscience firm,
You should find better dealing. What's to do?
Shall we go see the reliques of this town?

Ant. To-morrow, sir. Best first go see your lodging. 20

Seb. I am not weary, and 't is long to night.
I pray you, let us satisfy our eyes
With the memorials and the things of fame
That do renown this city.

Ant. Would you 'd pardon me.
I do not without danger walk these streets. 25
Once, in a sea-fight, 'gainst the Count his galleys

I did some service; of such note indeed,
That were I ta'en here it would scarce be answer'd.

Seb. Belike you slew great number of his people?

Ant. The offence is not of such a bloody nature, 30

Albeit the quality of the time and quarrel
Might well have given us bloody argument.
It might have since been answer'd in repaying
What we took from them, which, for traffic's sake,

Most of our city did; only myself stood out, 35
For which, if I be lapsed in this place,
I shall pay dear.

Seb. Do not then walk too open.
Ant. It doth not fit me. Hold, sir, here 's my purse.

In the south suburbs, at the Elephant
Is best to lodge. I will bespeak our diet, 40
Whiles you beguile the time and feed your knowledge

With viewing of the town. There shall you have me.

Seb. Why I your purse?

Ant. Haply your eye shall light upon some toy

You have desire to purchase; and your store, 45
I think, is not for idle markets, sir.

Seb. I'll be your purse-bearer and leave you
For an hour.

Ant. To the Elephant.

Seb. I do remember. (Exeunt.)

SCENE IV. [Olivia's garden.]

Enter OLIVIA and MARIA.

Oli. [Aside.] I have sent after him; he says he'll come.

How shall I feast him? What bestow of him?
For youth is bought more oft than begg'd or borrow'd.

I speak too loud.
Where is Malvolio? He is sad and civil, 5
And suits well for a servant with my fortunes.
Where is Malvolio?

Mar. He's coming, madam, but in very strange manner. He is, sure, possess'd, madam.

Oli. Why, what's the matter? Does he rave? 10

Mar. No, madam, he does nothing but smile. Your ladyship were best to have some guard about you, if he come; for, sure, the man is tainted in 's wits.

Oli. Go call him hither.

Enter MALVOLIO.

I am as mad as he, 15
If sad and merry madness equal be.
How now, Malvolio!

Mal. Sweet lady, ho, ho.

Oli. Smil'st thou?

I sent for thee upon a sad occasion. 20

Mal. Sad, lady? I could be sad. This does make some obstruction in the blood, this cross-gartering; but what of that? If it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true sonnet is, "Please one, and please all." 25

Oli. Why, how dost thou, man? What is the matter with thee?

Mal. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legs. It did come to his hands, and commands must be executed. I think we do know the sweet Roman hand. 31

Oli. Wilt thou go to bed, Malvolio?

Mal. To bed! Ay, sweet heart, and I'll come to thee.

Oli. God comfort thee! Why dost thou smile so and kiss thy hand so oft? 36

Mar. How do you, Malvolio?

Mal. At your request! Yes. Nightingales answer daws.

Mar. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldness before my lady? 41

Mal. "Be not afraid of greatness:" 't was well writ.

Oli. What mean'st thou by that, Malvolio?

Mal. "Some are born great," — 45

Oli. Ha!

Mal. "Some achieve greatness," —

Oli. What say'st thou?

Mal. "And some have greatness thrust upon them." 50

Oli. Heaven restore thee!

Mal. "Remember who commended thy yellow stockings,"—

Oli. Thy yellow stockings!

Mal. "And wish'd to see thee cross-garter'd." 65

Oli. Cross-garter'd!

Mal. "Go to, thou art made, if thou desir'st to be so,"—

Oli. Am I made?

Mal. "If not, let me see thee a servant still." 70

Oli. Why, this is very midsummer madness.

Enter SERVANT.

Ser. Madam, the young gentleman of the Count Orsino's is return'd. I could hardly entreat him back. He attends your ladyship's pleasure. 65

Oli. I'll come to him. [Exit Servant.] Good Maria, let this fellow be look'd to. Where's my cousin Toby? Let some of my people have a special care of him. I would not have him miscarry for the half of my dowry. 70

[Exeunt [Olivia and Maria].]

Mal. O, ho! do you come near me now? No worse man than Sir Toby to look to me! This concurs directly with the letter. She sends him on purpose, that I may appear stubborn to him, for she incites me to that in the letter. "Cast thy humble slough," says she; "be 75 opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants; let thy tongue tang with arguments of state; put thyself into the trick of singularity;" and consequently sets down the manner how; as, a sad face, a reverend carriage, a slow tongue, 80 in the habit of some sir of note, and so forth. I have him'd her; but it is Jove's doing, and Jove make me thankful! And when she went away now, "Let this fellow be looked to"; "fellow!" not Malvolio, nor after my de- 85 gree, but "fellow." Why, everything adheres together, that no dram of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredulous or unsafe circumstance—What can be said? Nothing that can be—come between me and the full prospect of my hopes. Well, Jove, not 90 I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Re-enter MARIA, with SIR TOBY and FABIAN.

Sir To. Which way is he, in the name of sanctity? If all the devils of hell be drawn in little, and Legion himself possess'd him, yet I'll speak to him. 95

Fab. Here he is, here he is. How is 't with you, sir? How is 't with you, man?

Mal. Go off; I discard you. Let me enjoy my private. Go off. 100

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within him! Did not I tell you? Sir Toby, my lady prays you to have a care of him.

Mal. Ah, ha! Does she so? 104

Sir To. Go to, go to; peace, peace. We must deal gently with him. Let me alone. How do you, Malvolio? How is 't with you? What, man, defy the devil! Consider, he's an enemy to mankind.

Mal. Do you know what you say? 110

Mar. La you, an you speak ill of the devil, how he takes it at heart! Pray God he be not bewitch'd!

Fab. Carry his water to the wise woman. 114

Mar. Marry, and it shall be done to-morrow morning if I live. My lady would not lose him for more than I'll say.

Mal. How now, mistress!

Mar. O Lord! 119

Sir To. Prithee, hold thy peace; this is not the way. Do you not see you move him? Let me alone with him.

Fab. No way but gentleness; gently, gently. The fiend is rough, and will not be roughly us'd.

Sir To. Why, how now, my bawcock! How dost thou, chuck? 126

Mal. Sir!

Sir To. Ay, "Biddy, come with me." What, man, 'tis not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan. Hang him, foul collier! 130

Mar. Get him to say his prayers, good Sir Toby, get him to pray.

Mal. My prayers, minx!

Mar. No, I warrant you, he will not hear of godliness. 135

Mal. Go, hang yourselves all! You are idle shallow things; I am not of your element. You shall know more hereafter. [Exit.]

Sir To. Is 't possible?

Fab. If this were played upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction. 141

Sir To. His very genius hath taken the infection of the device, man.

Mar. Nay, pursue him now, lest the device take air and taint. 145

Fab. Why, we shall make him mad indeed.

Mar. The house will be the quieter.

Sir To. Come, we'll have him in a dark room and bound. My niece is already in the belief that he's mad. We may carry it thus, for our pleasure and his penance, till our 150 very pastime, tired out of breath, prompt us to have mercy on him; at which time we will bring the device to the bar and crown thee for a finder of madmen. But see, but see. 155

Enter SIR ANDREW.

Fab. More matter for a May morning.

Sir And. Here's the challenge, read it. I warrant there's vinegar and pepper in 't.

Fab. Is 't so saucy?

Sir And. Ay, is 't, I warrant him. Do but read. 161

Sir To. Give me. [Reads.] "Youth, whatsoever thou art, thou art but a scurvy fellow."

Fab. Good, and valiant. 164

Sir To. [Reads.] "Wonder not, nor admire not in thy mind, why I do call thee so, for I will show thee no reason for 't."

Fab. A good note. That keeps you from the blow of the law. 169

Sir To. [Reads.] "Thou com'st to the lady Olivia, and in my sight she uses thee kindly. But thou liest in thy throat; that is not the matter I challenge thee for."

Fab. Very brief, and to exceeding good sense — less.

Sir To. [Reads.] “I will waylay thee going home; where if it be thy chance to kill me,” —

Fab. Good.

Sir To. [Reads.] “Thou kill’st me like a rogue and a villain.”

Fab. Still you keep o’ the windy side of the law; good.

Sir To. [Reads.] “Fare thee well, and God have mercy upon one of our souls! He may have mercy upon mine; but my hope is better, and so look to thyself. Thy friend, as thou usest him, and thy sworn enemy,

ANDREW AGUECHECK.”

If this letter move him not, his legs cannot. I’ll give’t him.

Mar. You may have very fit occasion for’t. He is now in some commerce with my lady, and will by and by depart.

Sir To. Go, Sir Andrew, scout me for him at the corner of the orchard like a bum-bailly. So soon as ever thou seest him, draw; and, as thou draw’st, swear horrible; for it comes to pass off that a terrible oath, with a swaggering accent sharply twang’d off, gives manhood more approbation than ever proof itself would have earn’d him. Away!

Sir And. Nay, let me alone for swearing. [Exit.]

Sir To. Now will not I deliver his letter; for the behaviour of the young gentleman gives him out to be of good capacity and breeding; his employment between his lord and my niece confirms no less; therefore this letter, being so excellently ignorant, will breed no terror in the youth; he will find it comes from a clodpole. But, sir, I will deliver his challenge by word of mouth, set upon Aguecheck a notable report of valour, and drive the gentleman, as I know his youth will aptly receive it, into a most hideous opinion of his rage, skill, fury, and impetuosity. This will so fright them both that they will kill one another by the look, like cockatrices.

Re-enter OLIVIA with VIOLA.

Fab. Here he comes with your niece. Give them way till he take leave, and presently after him.

Sir To. I will meditate the while upon some horrid message for a challenge.

[Exeunt Sir Toby, Fabian, and Maria.]

Oli. I have said too much unto a heart of stone,

And laid mine honour too unchary on’t. There’s something in me that reproves my fault;

But such a headstrong potent fault it is, That it but mocks reproof.

Vio. With the same ’haviour that your passion bears

Goes on my master’s grief.

Oli. Here, wear this jewel for me, ’t is my picture.

Refuse it not; it hath no tongue to vex you;

And I beseech you come again to-morrow. What shall you ask of me that I’ll deny, That honour sav’d may upon asking give?

Vio. Nothing but this, — your true love for my master.

Oli. How with mine honour may I give him that

Which I have given to you?

Vio. I will acquit you.

Oli. Well, come again to-morrow. Fare thee well!

A fiend like thee might bear my soul to hell. [Exit.]

Re-enter SIR TOBY and FABIAN.

Sir To. Gentleman, God save thee!

Vio. And you, sir.

Sir To. That defence thou hast, betake thee to’t. Of what nature the wrongs are thou hast done him, I know not; but thy interceptor, full of despite, bloody as the hunter, attends thee at the orchard-end. Dismount thy tuck, be yare in thy preparation, for thy assailant is quick, skilful, and deadly.

Vio. You mistake, sir, I am sure. No man hath any quarrel to me. My remembrance is very free and clear from any image of offence done to any man.

Sir To. You’ll find it otherwise, I assure you; therefore, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your guard; for your opposite hath in him what youth, strength, skill, and wrath can furnish man withal.

Vio. I pray you, sir, what is he?

Sir To. He is knight, dubb’d with unhatch’d rapier and on carpet consideration; but he is a devil in private brawl. Souls and bodies hath he divorce’d three; and his incensement at this moment is so implacable, that satisfaction can be none but by pangs of death and sepulchre. Hob, nob, is his word; give’t or take’t.

Vio. I will return again into the house and desire some conduct of the lady. I am no fighter. I have heard of some kind of men that put quarrels purposely on others, to taste their valour. Belike this is a man of that quirk.

Sir To. Sir, no; his indignation derives itself out of a very competent injury; therefore, get you on and give him his desire. Back you shall not to the house, unless you undertake that with me which with as much safety you might answer him; therefore, on, or strip your sword stark naked; for meddle you must, that’s certain, or forswear to wear iron about you.

Vio. This is as uncivil as strange. I beseech you, do me this courteous office, as to know of the knight what my offence to him is. It is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.

Sir To. I will do so. Signor Fabian, stay you by this gentleman till my return. [Exit.]

Vio. Pray you, sir, do you know of this matter?

Fab. I know the knight is incens’d against you, even to a mortal arbitrement, but nothing of the circumstance more.

Vio. I beseech you, what manner of man is he? ²⁸⁹

Fab. Nothing of that wonderful promise, to read him by his form, as you are like to find him in the proof of his valour. He is, indeed, sir, the most skilful, bloody, and fatal opposite that you could possibly have found in any part of Illyria. Will you walk towards him? I will make your peace with him if I can. ²⁹⁶

Vio. I shall be much bound to you for't. I am one that had rather go with sir priest than sir knight. I care not who knows so much of my mettle. ^[Exeunt. 300]

Re-enter SIR TOBY, with SIR ANDREW.

Sir To. Why, man, he's a very devil; I have not seen such a frago. I had a pass with him, rapier, scabbard, and all, and he gives me the stuck in with such a mortal motion, that it is inevitable; and on the answer, he pays you as surely as your feet hits the ground they step ^[305] on. They say he has been fencer to the Sophy.

Sir And. Fox on't, I'll not meddle with him.

Sir To. Ay, but he will not now be pacified. Fabian can scarce hold him yonder. ³¹⁰

Sir And. Plague on't, an I thought he had been valiant and so cunning in fence, I'd have seen him dam'd ere I'd have challeng'd him. Let him let the matter slip, and I'll give him my horse, grey Capilet. ³¹⁵

Sir To. I'll make the motion. Stand here; make a good show on't. This shall end without the perdition of souls. ^[Aside.] Marry, I'll ride your horse as well as I ride you. ³¹⁹

Re-enter FABIAN and VIOLA.

^[To Fab.] I have his horse to take up the quarrel. I have persuaded him the youth's a devil.

Fab. He is as horribly conceited of him; and pants and looks pale, as if a bear were at his heels. ³²⁴

Sir To. ^[To Vio.] There's no remedy, sir; he will fight with you for's oath sake. Marry, he hath better bethought him of his quarrel, and he finds that now scarce to be worth talking of; therefore draw, for the supportance of his vow. He protests he will not hurt you. ³³⁰

Vio. ^[Aside.] Pray God defend me! A little thing would make me tell them how much I lack of a man.

Fab. Give ground, if you see him furious. ³³⁴

Sir To. Come, Sir Andrew, there's no remedy; the gentleman will, for his honour's sake, have one bout with you. He cannot by the duello avoid it; but he has promised me, as he is a gentleman and a soldier, he will not hurt you. Come on; to't. ³⁴⁰

Sir And. Pray God, he keep his oath!

Enter ANTONIO.

Vio. I do assure you, 'tis against my will.

^[They draw.]

Ant. Put up your sword. If this young gentleman

Have done offence, I take the fault on me; If you offend him, I for him defy you. ³⁴⁵

Sir To. You, sir! Why, what are you?

Ant. One, sir, that for his love dares yet do more Than you have heard him brag to you he will.

Sir To. Nay, if you be an undertaker, I am for you. ^[They draw. 350]

Enter OFFICERS.

Fab. O good Sir Toby, hold! Here come the officers.

Sir To. I'll be with you anon.

Vio. Pray, sir, put your sword up, if you please. ³⁵⁵

Sir And. Marry, will I, sir; and, for that I promis'd you, I'll be as good as my word. He will bear you easily and reins well.

1. Off. This is the man; do thy office.

2. Off. Antonio, I arrest thee at the suit of Count Orsino. ³⁶¹

Ant. You do mistake me, sir.

1. Off. No, sir, no jot. I know your favour well,

Though now you have no sea-cap on your head. Take him away; he knows I know him well. ³⁶⁵

Ant. I must obey. ^[To Vio.] This comes with seeking you.

But there's no remedy; I shall answer it.

What will you do, now my necessity Makes me to ask you for my purse? It grieves me

Much more for what I cannot do for you ³⁷⁰ Than what befalls myself. You stand amaz'd, But be of comfort.

2. Off. Come, sir, away.

Ant. I must entreat of you some of that money.

Vio. What money, sir? ³⁷⁵

For the fair kindness you have show'd me here, And, part, being prompted by your present trouble,

Out of my lean and low ability I'll lend you something. My having is not much.

I'll make division of my present with you. ³⁸⁰ Hold, there's half my coffer.

Ant. Will you deny me now?

Is't possible that my deserts to you Can lack persuasion? Do not tempt my misery,

Lest that it make me so unsound a man As to upbraid you with those kindnesses ³⁸⁵ That I have done for you.

Vio. I know of none, Nor know I you by voice or any feature.

I hate ingratitude more in a man Than lying, vainness, babbling, drunkenness,

Or any taint of vice whose strong corruption ³⁹⁰

Inhabits our frail blood.

Ant. O heavens themselves!

2. Off. Come, sir, I pray you, go.

Ant. Let me speak a little. This youth that you see here

I snatch'd one half out of the jaws of death, Reliev'd him with such sanctity of love, ³⁹⁵

And to his image, which methought did promise

Most venerable worth, did I devotion.

1. Off. What's that to us? The time goes by; away!

Ant. But, O, how vile an idol proves this god!

Thou hast, Sebastian, done good feature shame. In nature there's no blemish but the mind; 401
None can be call'd deform'd but the unkind.
Virtue is beauty, but the beauteous evil
Are empty trunks o'erflourish'd by the devil.

1. Off. The man grows mad; away with him!
Come, come, sir. 405

Ant. Lead me on. [Exit [with Officers].]

Vio. Methinks his words do from such passion fly,

That he believes himself; so do not I.
Prove true, imagination, O, prove true,
That I, dear brother, be now ta'en for you! 410

Sir To. Come hither, knight; come hither, Fabian; we'll whisper o'er a couplet or two of most sage saws.

Vio. He nam'd Sebastian. I my brother know

Yet living in my glass; even such and so 415
In favour was my brother, and he went
Still in this fashion, colour, ornament,
For him I imitate. O, if it prove, Tempests are kind and salt waves fresh in love. [Exit.]

Sir To. A very dishonest paltry boy, and [420 more a coward than a hare. His dishonesty appears in leaving his friend here in necessity and denying him; and, for his cowardship, ask Fabian.

Fab. A coward, a most devout coward, religious in it. 425

Sir And. 'Slid, I'll after him again and beat him.

Sir To. Do; cuff him soundly, but never draw thy sword.

Sir And. An I do not, — 430

Fab. Come, let's see the event.

Sir To. I dare lay any money 't will be nothing yet. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV

SCENE I. [Before Olivia's house.]

Enter SEBASTIAN and CLOWN.

Clo. Will you make me believe that I am not sent for you?

Seb. Go to, go to, thou art a foolish fellow; let me be clear of thee.

Clo. Well held out, i' faith! No, I do not [5 know you; nor I am not sent to you by my lady, to bid you come speak with her; nor your name is not Master Cesario; nor this is not my nose neither. Nothing that is so is so.

Seb. I prithee, vent thy folly somewhere else. Thou know'st not me. 11

Clo. Vent my folly! He has heard that word of some great man and now applies it to a fool. Vent my folly! I am afraid this great lubber, the world, will prove a cockney. I prithee now, unguard thy strangeness and tell me what I shall vent to my lady. Shall I vent to her that thou art coming? 18

Seb. I prithee, foolish Greek, depart from me.

There's money for thee. If you tarry longer, 20
I shall give worse payment.

Clo. By my troth, thou hast an open hand. These wise men that give fools money get themselves a good report—after fourteen years' purchase. 25

Enter SIR ANDREW, SIR TOBY, and FABIAN.

Sir And. Now, sir, have I met you again? There's for you.

Seb. Why, there's for thee, and there, and there. Are all the people mad?

Sir To. Hold, sir, or I'll throw your dagger o'er the house. 31

Clo. This will I tell my lady straight. I would not be in some of your coats for two pence. [Exit.]

Sir To. Come on, sir. Hold!

Sir And. Nay, let him alone. I'll go another way to work with him. I'll have an action of battery against him, if there be any law in Illyria. Though I struck him first, yet it's no matter for that.

Seb. Let go thy hand. 40

Sir To. Come, sir, I will not let you go. Come, my young soldier, pat up your iron; you are well flesh'd. Come on.

Seb. I will be free from thee. What wouldst thou now?

If thou dar'st tempt me further, draw thy sword. 44

Sir To. What, what? Nay, then I must have an ounce or two of this malapert blood from you.

Enter OLIVIA.

Oli. Hold, Toby! On thy life I charge thee, hold!

Sir To. Madam — 50

Oli. Will it be ever thus? Ungracious wretch,

Fit for the mountains and the barbarous caves,
Where manners ne'er were preach'd! Out of my sight!

Be not offended, dear Cesario.

Rudesby, be gone!

[Exeunt Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.]

I prithee, gentle friend,

Let thy fair wisdom, not thy passion, sway 54
In this uncivil and unjust extent

Against thy peace. Go with me to my house,
And hear thou there how many fruitless pranks

This ruffian hath botch'd up, that thou thereby 60

Mayst smile at this. Thou shalt not choose but go.

Do not deny. Beshrew his soul for me,
He started one poor heart of mine in thee.

Seb. What relish is in this? How runs the stream?

Or I am mad, or else this is a dream. 65

Let fancy still my sense in Lethe steep.

If it be thus to dream, still let me sleep!

Oli. Nay, come, I prithee. Would thou'dst be rul'd by me!

Seb. Madam, I will.

Oli. O, say so, and so be!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [Olivia's house.]

Enter MARIA and CLOWN.

Mar. Nay, I prithee, put on this gown and this beard. Make him believe thou art Sir Topas the curate. Do it quickly; I'll call Sir Toby the whilst.
[Exit.]

Clo. Well, I'll put it on, and I will dissemble myself in 't; and I would I were the first that ever dissembled in such a gown. I am not tall enough to become the function well, nor lean enough to be thought a good student; but to be said an honest man and a good house-keeper goes as fairly as to say a careful [10] man and a great scholar. The competitors enter.

Enter SIR TOBY [and MARIA].

Sir To. Jove bless thee, master Parson.

Clo. Bonos dies, Sir Toby: for, as the old hermit of Prague, that never saw pen and ink, very wittily said to a niece of King Gor- [15] boduc, "That that is"; so I, being master Parson, am master Parson; for, what is "that" but "that," and "is" but "is"?

Sir To. To him, Sir Topas. 20

Clo. What, ho, I say! Peace in this prison!
Sir To. The knave counterfeits well; a good knave.

Mal. [Within.] Who calls there?

Clo. Sir Topas the curate, who comes to visit Malvolio the lunatic. 25

Mal. Sir Topas, Sir Topas, good Sir Topas, go to my lady.

Clo. Out, hyperbolical fiend! How vexest thou this man! Talkest thou nothing but of ladies? 30

Sir To. Well said, master Parson.

Mal. Sir Topas, never was man thus wronged. Good Sir Topas, do not think I am mad. They have laid me here in hideous darkness. 34

Clo. Fie, thou dishonest Satan! I call thee by the most modest terms, for I am one of those gentle ones that will use the devil himself with courtesy. Say'st thou that house is dark?

Mal. As hell, Sir Topas. 39

Clo. Why, it hath bay windows transparent as barricadoes, and the clerestories toward the south north are as lustrous as ebony; and yet complainest thou of obstruction?

Mal. I am not mad, Sir Topas. I say to you, this house is dark. 45

Clo. Madman, thou errest. I say, there is no darkness but ignorance, in which thou art more puzzl'd than the Egyptians in their fog.

Mal. I say, this house is dark as ignorance, though ignorance were as dark as hell; and I [50] say, there was never man thus abus'd. I am no more mad than you are. Make the trial of it in any constant question.

Clo. What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning wild fowl? 55

Mal. That the soul of our grandam might haply inhabit a bird.

Clo. What think'st thou of his opinion?

Mal. I think nobly of the soul, and no way approve his opinion. 60

Clo. Fare thee well. Remain thou still in darkness. Thou shalt hold the opinion of Pythagoras ere I will allow of thy wits, and fear to kill a woodcock, lest thou dispossess the soul of thy grandam. Fare thee well. 65

Mal. Sir Topas, Sir Topas!

Sir To. My most exquisite Sir Topas!

Clo. Nay, I am for all waters.

Mar. Thou mightst have done this without thy beard and gown. He sees thee not. 70

Sir To. To him in thine own voice, and bring me word how thou find'st him. I would we were well rid of this knavery. If he may be conveniently deliver'd, I would he were, for I am now so far in offence with my niece that I cannot pursue with any safety this sport to [75] the upshot. Come by and by to my chamber.

[Exit [with Maria].]

Clo. [Singing.] "Hey, Robin, jolly Robin,
Tell me how thy lady does." 80

Mal. Fool!

Clo. "My lady is unkind, perdy."

Mal. Fool!

Clo. "Alas, why is she so?"

Mal. Fool, I say!

Clo. "She loves another" — Who calls, ha? 85

Mal. Good fool, as ever thou wilt deserve well at my hand, help me to a candle, and pen, ink, and paper. As I am a gentleman, I will live to be thankful to thee for 't.

Clo. Master Malvolio? 90

Mal. Ay, good fool.

Clo. Alas, sir, how fell you besides your five wits?

Mal. Fool, there was never man so notoriously abus'd. I am as well in my wits, fool, as thou art. 95

Clo. But as well? Then you are mad indeed, if you be no better in your wits than a fool.

Mal. They have here propertied me, keep me in darkness, send ministers to me, asses, and do all they can to face me out of my wits. 101

Clo. Advise you what you say; the minister is here. Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the heavens restore! Endeavour thyself to sleep, and leave thy vain bible babble. 105

Mal. Sir Topas!

Clo. Maintain no words with him, good fellow. Who, I, sir? Not I, sir. God buy you, good Sir Topas. Marry, amen. I will, sir, I will.

Mal. Fool, fool, fool, I say! 110

Clo. Alas, sir, be patient. What say you, sir? I am shent for speaking to you.

Mal. Good fool, help me to some light and some paper. I tell thee, I am as well in my wits as any man in Illyria. 115

Clo. Well-a-day that you were, sir!

Mal. By this hand, I am. Good fool, some ink, paper, and light; and convey what I will set down to my lady. It shall advantage thee more than ever the bearing of letter did. ¹³⁰

Clo. I will help you to 't. But tell me true, are you not mad indeed, or do you but counterfeit?

Mal. Believe me, I am not. I tell thee true.

Clo. Nay, I'll ne'er believe a madman till I see his brains. I will fetch you light and paper and ink. ¹²⁷

Mal. Fool, I'll requite it in the highest degree. I prithee, be gone.

Clo. [Singing.] I am gone, sir, ¹³⁰

And anon, sir,
I'll be with you again,
In a trice,
Like to the old Vice,
Your need to sustain; ¹³⁵

Who, with dagger of lath,
In his rage and his wrath,
Cries, ah, ha! to the devil,
Like a mad lad,
Pare thy nails, dad. ¹⁴⁰
Adieu, Goodman Devil. [Exit.]

SCENE III. [Olivia's garden.]

Enter SEBASTIAN.

Seb. This is the air, that is the glorious sun,
This pearl she gave me, I do feel 't and see 't;
And though 'tis wonder that enwraps me thus,
Yet 't is not madness. Where 's Antonio, then?
I could not find him at the Elephant; ⁵
Yet there he was, and there I found this credit,

That he did range the town to seek me out.
His counsel now might do me golden service;
For though my soul disputes well with my sense,

That this may be some error, but no madness,
Yet doth this accident and flood of fortune ¹¹
So far exceed all instance, all discourse,
That I am ready to distrust mine eyes
And wrangle with my reason that persuades me

To any other trust but that I am mad ¹⁵
Or else the lady's mad; yet, if 't were so,
She could not sway her house, command her followers,

Take and give back affairs and their dispatch
With such a smooth, discreet, and stable bearing

As I perceive she does. There's something in 't ²⁰

That is deceivable. But here the lady comes.

Enter OLIVIA and Priest.

Oli. Blame not this haste of mine. If you mean well,

Now go with me and with this holy man
Into the chantry by; there, before him,
And underneath that consecrated roof, ²⁵
Plight me the full assurance of your faith,

That my most jealous and too doubtful soul
May live at peace. He shall conceal it
Whiles you are willing it shall come to note,
What time we will our celebration keep ³⁰
According to my birth. What do you say?

Seb. I'll follow this good man, and go with you;

And, having sworn truth, ever will be true.

Oli. Then lead the way, good father; and heavens so shine

That they may fairly note this act of mine! ³⁵
[Exeunt.]

ACT V

SCENE I. [Before Olivia's house.]

Enter CLOWN and FABIAN.

Fab. Now, as thou lov'st me, let me see his letter.

Clo. Good Master Fabian, grant me another request.

Fab. Anything. ⁵

Clo. Do not desire to see this letter.

Fab. This is to give a dog and in recompense desire my dog again.

Enter DUKE, VIOLA, CURIO, and Lords.

Duke. Belong you to the Lady Olivia, friends?

Clo. Ay, sir! we are some of her trap-pings. ¹⁰

Duke. I know thee well; how dost thou, my good fellow?

Clo. Truly, sir, the better for my foes and the worse for my friends.

Duke. Just the contrary; the better for thy friends. ¹⁵

Clo. No, sir, the worse.

Duke. How can that be?

Clo. Marry, sir, they praise me and make an ass of me. Now my foes tell me plainly I am an ass; so that by my foes, sir, I profit in ²⁰ the knowledge of myself, and by my friends I am abused; so that, conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make your two affirmatives, why then, the worse for my friends and the better for my foes. ²⁵

Duke. Why, this is excellent.

Clo. By my troth, sir, no; though it please you to be one of my friends.

Duke. Thou shalt not be the worse for me. There's gold. ³¹

Clo. But that it would be double-dealing, sir, I would you could make it another.

Duke. O, you give me ill counsel.

Clo. Put your grace in your pocket, sir, for this once, and let your flesh and blood obey it. ³⁶

Duke. Well, I will be so much a sinner, to be a double-dealer. There's another.

Clo. Primo, secundo, tertio, is a good play; and the old saying is, the third pays for all. The triplex, sir, is a good tripping measure; ⁴⁰ or the bells of Saint Bennet, sir, may put you in mind; one, two, three.

Duke. You can fool no more money out of me at this throw. If you will let your lady know I am here to speak with her, and ⁴⁵ bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Clo. Marry, sir, lullaby to your bounty till I come again. I go, sir, but I would not have you to think that my desire of having is the sin of covetousness; but, as you say, sir, let ⁵⁰ your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon. [Exit.]

Enter ANTONIO and OFFICERS.

Vio. Here comes the man, sir, that did rescue me.

Duke. That face of his I do remember well, Yet, when I saw it last, it was besmear'd ⁵⁵ As black as Vulcan in the smoke of war. A bawbling vessel was he captain of, For shallow draught and bulk unprizable, With which such seaful grapple did he make With the most noble bottom of our fleet, ⁶⁰ That very envy and the tongue of loss Cri'd fame and honour on him. What's the matter?

1. Off. Orsino, this is that Antonio That took the Phoenix and her fraught from Candy,

And this is he that did the Tiger board, ⁶⁵ When your young nephew Titus lost his leg. Here in the streets, desperate of shame and state,

In private brabble did we apprehend him.

Vio. He did me kindness, sir, drew on my side, But in conclusion put strange speech upon me. ⁷⁰

Duke. Notable pirate! Thou salt-water thief! What foolish boldness brought thee to their mercies

Whom thou, in terms so bloody and so dear, Hast made thine enemies?

Ant. Orsino, noble sir, Be pleas'd that I shake off these names you give me. ⁷⁵

Antonio never yet was thief or pirate, Though I confess, on base and ground enough, Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither. That most ingratul boy there by your side, ⁸⁰ From the rude sea's enrag'd and foamy mouth Did I redeem. A wreck past hope he was.

His life I gave him, and did thereto add My love, without retention or restraint, ⁸⁵ All his in dedication. For his sake Did I expose myself, pure for his love, Into the danger of this adverse town;

Drew to defend him when he was beset; Where being apprehended, his false cunning, Not meaning to partake with me in danger, ⁹⁰ Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance, And grew a twenty years removed thing While one would wink; deni'd me mine own purse,

Which I had recommended to his use Not half an hour before.

Vio. How can this be? ⁹⁵

Duke. When came he to this town?

Ant. To-day, my lord; and for three months before,

No interim, not a minute's vacancy, Both day and night did we keep company.

Enter OLIVIA and Attendants.

Duke. Here comes the countess; now heaven walks on earth. ¹⁰⁰

But for thee, fellow; fellow, thy words are madness.

Three months this youth hath tended upon me; But more of that anon. Take him aside.

Ol. What would my lord, but that he may not have,

Wherein Olivia may seem serviceable? ¹⁰⁵ Cesario, you do not keep promise with me.

Vio. Madam!

Duke. Gracious Olivia, —

Ol. What do you say, Cesario? Good my lord, — ¹⁰⁹

Vio. My lord would speak; my duty hushes me.

Ol. If it be aught to the old tune, my lord, It is as fat and fulsome to mine ear As howling after music.

Duke. Still so cruel!

Ol. Still so constant, lord.

Duke. What, to perverseness? You uncivil lady, ¹¹⁵

To whose ingrate and unauspicious altars My soul the faithful'st offerings have breath'd out

That e'er devotion tender'd! What shall I do?

Ol. Even what it please my lord, that shall become him.

Duke. Why should I not, had I the heart to do it, ¹²⁰

Like to the Egyptian thief at point of death, Kill what I love? — a savage jealousy That sometime savours nobly. But hear me this:

Since you to non-regardance cast my faith, And that I partly know the instrument ¹²⁵

That screws me from my true place in your favour,

Live you the marble-breasted tyrant still; But this your minion, whom I know you love, And whom, by heaven I swear, I tender dearly, ¹³⁰ Him will I tear out of that cruel eye, Where he sits crowned in his master's spite. Come, boy, with me; my thoughts are ripe in mischief.

I'll sacrifice the lamb that I do love, To spite a raven's heart within a dove.

Vio. And I, most jocund, apt, and willingly, ¹³⁵

To do you rest, a thousand deaths would die.

Ol. Where goes Cesario?

Vio. After him I love

More than I love these eyes, more than my life, More, by all mores, than e'er I shall love wife. If I do feign, you witness above ¹⁴⁰ Punish my life for tainting of my love!

Ol. Ay me, detested! How am I beguil'd!

Vio. Who does beguile you? Who does do you wrong?

Oli. Hast thou forgot thyself? Is it so long?
Call forth the holy father.

Duke. Come, away! 143

Oli. Whither, my lord? Cesario, husband, stay.

Duke. Husband!

Oli. Ay, husband! Can he that deny?

Duke. Her husband, sirrah!

Vio. No, my lord, not I.

Oli. Alas, it is the baseness of thy fear
That makes thee strangle thy propriety. 150
Fear not, Cesario; take thy fortunes up.
Be that thou know'st thou art, and then thou art

As great as that thou fear'st.

Enter PRIEST.

O, welcome, father!

Father, I charge thee by thy reverence,
Here to unfold, though lately we intended 155
To keep in darkness what occasion now
Reveals before 't is ripe, what thou dost know
Hath newly pass'd between this youth and me.

Priest. A contract of eternal bond of love,
Confirm'd by mutual joinder of your hands, 160
Attested by the holy close of lips,
Strength'n'd by interchangement of your rings;

And all the ceremony of this compact
Seal'd in my function, by my testimony;
Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my grave 165

I have travell'd but two hours.

Duke. O thou dissembling cub! What wilt thou be

When time hath sow'd a grizzle on thy case?
Or wilt not else thy craft so quickly grow,
That thine own trip shall be thine overthrow? 170

Farewell, and take her; but direct thy feet
Where thou and I henceforth may never meet.

Vio. My lord, I do protest—

Oli. O, do not swear!
Hold little faith, though thou hast too much
fear.

Enter SIR ANDREW.

Sir And. For the love of God, a surgeon! 175
Send one presently to Sir Toby.

Oli. What's the matter?

Sir And. Has broke my head across and has given Sir Toby a bloody coxcomb too. For the love of God, your help! I had rather than forty pound I were at home.

Oli. Who has done this, Sir Andrew?

Sir And. The Count's gentleman, one Cesario. We took him for a coward, but he's the very devil incarnadine. 185

Duke. My gentleman, Cesario?

Sir And. 'Od's lifelings, here he is! You broke my head for nothing; and that that I did, I was set on to do 't by Sir Toby.

Vio. Why do you speak to me? I never hurt you. 190

You drew your sword upon me without cause;
But I bespake you fair, and hurt you not.

Enter SIR TOBY and CLOWN.

Sir And. If a bloody coxcomb be a hurt, you have hurt me. I think you set nothing by a bloody coxcomb. Here comes Sir Toby [195 halting. You shall hear more; but if he had not been in drink, he would have tickl'd you other-gates than he did.

Duke. How now, gentleman! How is 't with
you? 200

Sir To. That's all one. Has hurt me, and there's the end on 't. Sot, didst see Dick surgeon, sot?

Clo. O, he's drunk, Sir Toby, an hour ago.
His eyes were set at eight i' the morning. 205

Sir To. Then he's a rogue, and a passy measures pavin. I hate a drunken rogue.

Oli. Away with him! Who hath made this havoc with them?

Sir And. I'll help you, Sir Toby, because we'll be dress'd together. 211

Sir To. Will you help?—an ass-head and a coxcomb and a knave, a thin-faced knave, a gull!

Oli. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look'd to. 215

[Exeunt Clown, Fabian, Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew.]

Enter SEBASTIAN.

Seb. I am sorry, madam, I have hurt your
kinsman;

But, had it been the brother of my blood,
I must have done no less with wit and safety.
You throw a strange regard upon me, and by
that

I do perceive it hath offended you. 220
Pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows
We made each other but so late ago.

Duke. One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons,

A natural perspective, that is and is not!

Seb. Antonio, O my dear Antonio! 225
How have the hours rack'd and tortur'd me,
Since I have lost thee!

Ant. Sebastian are you?

Seb. Fear'st thou that, Antonio?
Ant. How have you made division of yourself?

An apple, cleft in two, is not more twin 231
Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

Oli. Most wonderful!

Seb. Do I stand there? I never had a
brother,

Nor can there be that deity in my nature,
Of here and everywhere. I had a sister, 235
Whom the blind waves and surges have deavour'd.

Of charity, what kin are you to me?

What countryman? What name? What parent-age?

Vio. Of Messaline; Sebastian was my father;
Such a Sebastian was my brother too; 240
So went he suited to his watery tomb.

If spirits can assume both form and suit

You come to fright us.

Seb. A spirit I am indeed;

But am in that dimension grossly clad
Which from the womb I did participate. 245
Were you a woman, as the rest goes even,
I should my tears let fall upon your cheek,
And say, "Thrice welcome, drowned Viola!"

Vio. My father had a mole upon his brow.
Seb. And so had mine. 250

Vio. And died that day when Viola from her birth
Had numb'rd thirteen years.

Seb. O, that record is lively in my soul!
He finished indeed his mortal act
That day that made my sister thirteen years. 255

Vio. If nothing lets to make us happy both
But this my masculine usurp'd attire,
Do not embrace me till each circumstance
Of place, time, fortune, do cohere and jump
That I am Viola; which to confirm, 260
I'll bring you to a captain in this town,
Where lie my maiden weeds; by whose gentle
help

I was preserv'd to serve this noble count.
All the occurrence of my fortune since
Hath been between this lady and this lord. 265

Seb. [To Olivia.] So comes it, lady, you have been mistook;

But nature to her bias drew in that.
You would have been contracted to a maid;
Nor are you therein, by my life, deceiv'd,
You are betroth'd both to a maid and man. 270

Duke. Be not amaz'd, right noble is his blood.

If this be so, as yet the glass seems true,
I shall have share in this most happy wreck.
[To Viola.] Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times

Thou never shouldst love woman like to me. 275
Vio. And all those sayings will I over-swear;
And all those swearings keep as true in soul

As doth that orb'd continent the fire
That severs day from night.

Duke. Give me thy hand,
And let me see thee in thy woman's weeds. 280

Vio. The captain that did bring me first on shore

Hath my maid's garments. He upon some action

Is now in durance, at Malvolio's suit,
A gentleman, and follower of my lady's.

Oli. He shall enlarge him; fetch Malvolio
hither. 285

And yet, alas, now I remember me,
They say, poor gentleman, he's much distract.

Re-enter CLOWN with a letter, and FABIAN.

A most extracting frenzy of mine own
From my remembrance clearly banish'd his.
How does he, sirrah? 290

Clo. Truly, madam, he holds Belzebub at the stove's end as well as a man in his case may do. Has here writ a letter to you. I should have given 't you to-day morning, but as a madman's epistles are no gospels, so it skills not much when they are deliver'd. 295

Oli. Open 't, and read it.

Clo. Look then to be well edified when the fool delivers the madman. [Reads.] "By the Lord, madam,"— 300

Oli. How now, art thou mad?

Clo. No, madam, I do but read madness.
An your ladyship will have it as it ought to be,
you must allow Vox.

Oli. Prithee, read i' thy right wits. 305

Clo. So I do, madonna; but to read his right wits is to read ths; therefore perpend, my princess, and give ear.

Oli. Read it you, sirrah. [To Fabian.] 309

Fab. [Reads.] "By the Lord, madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it. Though you have put me into darkness and given your drunken cousin rule over me, yet have I the benefit of my senses as well as your ladyship.
I have your own letter that induced me to the semblance I put on; with the which I 315 doubt not but to do myself much right, or you much shame. Think of me as you please. I leave my duty a little unthought of and speak out of my injury.

THE MADLY-US'D MALVOLIO."

Oli. Did he write this? 320

Clo. Ay, madam.

Duke. This savours not much of distraction.

Oli. See him deliver'd, Fabian; bring him hither. [Exit Fabian.]

My lord, so please you, these things further thought on,

To think me as well a sister as a wife, 325
One day shall crown the alliance on 't, so please
you,

Here at my house and at my proper cost.

Duke. Madam, I am most apt to embrace your offer.

[To Viola.] Your master quits you; and for your service done him,

So much against the mettle of your sex, 330
So far beneath your soft and tender breeding,
And since you call'd me master for so long,
Here is my hand. You shall from this time be
Your master's mistress.

Oli. A sister! You are she.

Enter MALVOLIO [and FABIAN].

Duke. Is this the madman?

Oli. Ay, my lord, this same. 335

How now, Malvolio!

Mal. Madam, you have done me wrong,
Notorious wrong.

Oli. Have I, Malvolio? No.

Mal. Lady, you have. Pray you, peruse that letter;

You must not now deny it is your hand.
Write from it, if you can, in hand or phrase; 340

Or say 't is not your seal, not your invention.
You can say none of this. Well, grant it then

And tell me, in the modesty of honour,
Why you have given me such clear lights of favour,

Bade me come smiling and cross-garter'd to
you, 345

To put on yellow stockings and to frown
Upon Sir Toby and the lighter people;

And, acting this in an obedient hope,
Why have you suffer'd me to be imprison'd,

Kept in a dark house, visited by the priest, 350
And made the most notorious geck and gull
That e'er invention play'd on? Tell me why.

Oli. Alas, Malvolio, this is not my writing,
Though, I confess, much like the character;
But out of question 't is Maria's hand. 355
And now I do bethink me, it was she First told me thou wast mad. Then cam'st in smiling,

And in such forms which here were presuppos'd
Upon thee in the letter. Prithee, be content.
This practice hath most shrewdly pass'd upon
thee; 360

But when we know the grounds and authors of
it,

Thou shalt be both the plaintiff and the judge
Of thine own cause.

Fab. Good madam, hear me speak,
And let no quarrel nor no brawl to come
Taint the condition of this present hour, 365
Which I have wond'ring at. In hope it shall not,

Most freely I confess, myself and Toby
Set this device against Malvolio here,
Upon some stubborn and uncourteous parts
We had conceiv'd against him. Maria writ 370
The letter at Sir Toby's great importance,
In recompense whereof he hath married her.
How with a sportful malice it was follow'd
May rather pluck on laughter than revenge,
If that the injuries be justly weigh'd 375
That have on both sides pass'd.

Oli. Alas, poor fool, how have they baffl'd
thee!

Clo. Why, "some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrown upon them." I was one, sir, in this interlude; one Sir Topas, sir; but that's all 380 one. "By the Lord, fool, I am not mad." But do you remember? "Madam, why laugh you at such a barren rascal? An you smile not, he's gagg'd." And thus the whirligig of time brings in his revenges. 385

Mal. I'll be reveng'd on the whole pack of
you. [Exit.]

Oli. He hath been most notoriously abus'd.

Duke. Pursue him, and entreat him to a
peace;

He hath not told us of the captain yet. 390
When that is known and golden time convents,
A solemn combination shall be made
Of our dear souls. Meantime, sweet sister,
We will not part from hence. Cesario, come;
For so you shall be, while you are a man; 395
But when in other habits you are seen,
Orsino's mistress and his fancy's queen.

[Exeunt all, except Clown.]

Clo. (Sings.)
When that I was and a little tiny boy,
With hey, ho, the wind and the rain,
A foolish thing was but a toy, 400
For the rain it raineth every day.

But when I came to man's estate,
With hey, ho, &c.
'Gainst knaves and thieves men shut their gate,
For the rain, &c. 405

But when I came, alas! to wive,
With hey, ho, &c.
By swaggering could I never thrive,
For the rain, &c.

But when I came unto my beds,
With hey, ho, &c.
With toss-pots still had drunken heads,
For the rain, &c. 410

A great while ago the world begun,
With hey, ho, &c. 415
But that's all one, our play is done,
And we'll strive to please you every day.
[Exit.]

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA

UNDER the date of February 7, 1603, there was entered on the Stationers' Register for James Roberts "The Booke of Troilus and Cressida, as yt is acted by My Lo. Chamberlen's men. When he hathe gotten sufficient auctorithy for yt." Though Roberts seems never to have got authority to issue the play, the entry gives us a later limit for the date of composition. An earlier limit is found in the production, about the middle of 1601, of Jonson's Poetaster, the Prologue to which is alluded to in Troilus and Cressida (Prol. 23-25). The play, then, was composed in the end of 1601 or during 1602.

The first edition is a quarto published in 1609 in two forms, with differing title-pages but identical text. The earlier title-page states that it was acted by the King's Majesty's Servants at the Globe; the later is followed by a preface claiming that the play was "never stal'd with the stage, never clapperclawed with the palms of the vulgar." This statement is either a plain falsehood for advertising purposes, or is a quibble based on some alterations or omissions. The relation of the text of the First Folio to this quarto it is difficult to determine. The verbal differences between them, though often minute, are very numerous, and several passages found in the Folio are missing from the Quarto, some of which are required by the context. On the other hand, at least three passages need to be supplied to the Folio text from the Quarto; and in many of the more minute differences the Quarto has the better reading; in some, apparently the authentic one. It may be conjectured with some plausibility that the copyist or printer of the Quarto did his work carelessly, though working from an authentic manuscript; and that the Folio version was set up with a different set of mistakes from another and later copy, which may have been revised in details by Shakespeare, or another, or both. The present text is based on the Folio, readings being inserted from the Quarto and later editions only when there appears to be a corruption due to copyist or printer. Passages not in the Folio are enclosed in square brackets.

From evidence based on style, metre, and comparison with sources, it is practically certain that the Prologue and v. vii.-x. are by another hand, and it is probable that Shakespeare's part in v. iv.-vi. is confined to a few lines and phrases. These inferences are corroborated by the recurrence of the lines v. iii. 113-115 in v. x. 32-34, pointing to the later substitution of the present closing scenes.

On account of the extraordinary vogue of the story of Troy in literature, the versions from which Shakespeare may have drawn hints are innumerable. The main sources, however, have been identified. The Troilus story is adapted from Chaucer's poem of the same name, the character of the heroine having been made somewhat lighter in accordance with the current Elizabethan conception of her as the essential coquette, and in order to make plausible the more rapid degradation necessitated by the limits of dramatic treatment. The camp scenes are based on Caxton's Recuyell of the historyes of Troye; and from Homer, probably in Chapman's translation, he drew Hector's challenge to a duel, the pride of Achilles, and some minor hints. The unknown collaborator followed Caxton much more slavishly than did Shakespeare. Whether anything was drawn from four or five lost early plays on similar themes cannot be determined. It has been thought that he was influenced by Greene's Euphues, his Censure to Philautus in the general tone of his treatment of antiquity. Of the characters, Cressida and Pandarus are from Chaucer, Thersites and Nestor from Homer, and the warriors from Caxton. Troilus is a combination of Chaucer's lover with Caxton's heroic figure. The Shakespearean Ajax alone is undiscoverable in any of the older versions. This fact, along with the nature of the description of him in i. ii. 19-31, and its inconsistency with the Ajax of the camp scenes, has led to the conclusion that the character is in part a satire on Ben Jonson. Other attempts to find personal satire in the play are not convincing.

THE PROLOGUE

IN Troy, there lies the scene. From isles of Greece

The princes orgillous, their high blood chaf'd,
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships,
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruel war. Sixty and nine, that wore
Their crownets regal, from the Athenian bay
Put forth toward Phrygia; and their vow is made

To ransack Troy, within whose strong immures
The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps; and that's the quarrel.

To Tenedos they come,
And the deep-drawing barks do there disgorge
Their warlike fraughtage. Now on Dardan plains

The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
Their brave pavilions. Priam's six-gated city,
Dardan, and Timbria, Helias, Chetas, Troien,
And Antenorides, with massy staples
And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts
Spar up the sons of Troy.

Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits,
On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,
Sets all on hazard; and hither am I come
A prologue arm'd, but not in confidence
Of author's pen or actor's voice, but suited
In like conditions as our argument,
To tell you, fair beholders, that our play Leaps o'er the vaunt and firstlings of those broils,

Beginning in the middle, starting thence away
To what may be digested in a play.
Like or find fault; do as your pleasures are,
Now good or bad; 't is but the chance of war.

ACT I

SCENE I. [Troy. Before Priam's palace.]

Enter TROILUS [armed] and PANDARUS.

Tro. Call here my varlet; I'll unarm again.
Why should I war without the walls of Troy,

That find such cruel battle here within?
Each Trojan that is master of his heart,
Let him to field; Troilus, alas! hath none.

Pan. Will this gear ne'er be mended?

Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength,
Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant;

But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance,
Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skillless as unpractis'd infancy.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this.
For my part, I'll not meddle nor make no further.
He that will have a cake out of the wheat must needs tarry the grinding.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must tarry the bolting.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the bolting; but you must tarry the leavening.

Tro. Still have I tarried.

Pan. Ay, to the leavening; but here's yet in the word "hereafter" the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking; nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance to burn your lips.

Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e'er she be,
Doth lesser blench at sufferance than I do.

At Priam's royal table do I sit,
And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts, —

So, traitor, then she comes, when she is thence —

Pan. Well, she look'd yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.

Tro. I was about to tell thee : — when my heart,

As wedged with a sigh, would rive in twain, ⁸⁰
Lest Hector or my father should perceive me
I have, as when the sun doth light a storm,
Buried this sigh in wrinkle of a smile.
But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming glad-

ness,
Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness. ⁴⁰

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's — well, go to ! — there were no more comparison between the women. But, for my part, she is my kinswoman ; I would not, as they term it, praise her ; but I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I ⁴⁵ did. I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit, but —

Tro. O Pandarus ! I tell thee, Pandarus, —
When I do tell thee, there my hopes lie
drown'd,

Reply not in how many fathoms deep ⁵⁰

Thy lie indrench'd. I tell thee I am mad

In Cressid's love ; thou answer'st she is fair ;

Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart

Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her

voice ;

Handlest in thy discourse, O, that her hand, ⁵⁵

In whose comparison all whites are ink

Writing their own reproach, to whose soft seizure

The cygnet's down is harsh and spirit of sense

Hard as the palm of ploughman. This thou tell'st me,

As true thou tell'st me, when I say I love her ;

But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm, ⁶¹

Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given

me

The knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much. ⁶⁵

Pan. Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is. If she be fair, 't is the better for her ;

an she be not, she has the mends in her own hands.

Tro. Good Pandarus, how now, Pandarus ! ⁶⁹

Pan. I have had my labour for my travail ;

ill-thought on of her and ill-thought on of you ;

gone between and between, but small thanks for my labour.

Tro. What, art thou angry, Pandarus ? ⁷⁵

What, with me ?

Pan. Because she's kin to me, therefore she's not so fair as Helen. An she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I ? I care not an she were a black-a-moor ; 't is all one to me. ⁸⁰

Tro. Say I she is not fair ?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no.

She's a fool to stay behind her father ; let her to the Greeks ; and so I'll tell her the next time

I see her. For my part, I'll meddle nor make no more i' the matter. ⁸⁶

Tro. Pandarus, —

Pan. Not I.

Tro. Sweet Pandarus, —

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me. I will leave all as I found it, and there an end. ⁹¹

[Exit Pandarus. Sound alarm.]

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamours ! Peace, rude sounds !

Fools on both sides ! Helen must needs be fair,

When with your blood you daily paint her thus.

I cannot fight upon this argument ; ⁹⁵

It is too starv'd a subject for my sword.

But Pandarus, — O gods, how do you plague

me !

I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar,

And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo,

As she is stubborn-chaste against all suit. ¹⁰⁰

Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,

What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we ?

Her bed is India ; there she lies, a pearl ;

Between our Ilium and where she resides,

Let it be call'd the wild and wandering flood, ¹⁰⁵

Ourselves the merchant, and this sailing Pandar

Our doubtful hope, our convoy, and our bark.

Alarum. Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. How now, Prince Troilus ! wherefore

not afield ?

Tro. Because not there. This woman's answer sorts, ¹¹⁰

For womanish it is to be from thence.

What news, Æneas, from the field to-day ?

Æne. That Paris is returned home and hurt.

Tro. By whom, Æneas ?

Æne. Troilus, by Menelaus.

Tro. Let Paris bleed ; 't is but a scar to scorn ; ¹¹⁵

Paris is gor'd with Menelaus' horn. [Alarum.]

Æne. Hark, what good sport is out of town to-day !

Tro. Better at home, if " would I might "

were " may. "

But to the sport abroad. Are you bound thither ?

Æne. In all swift haste.

Tro. Come, go we then together. ¹²⁰

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. The same. A street.]

Enter CRESSIDA and her man [ALEXANDER].

Cres. Who were those went by ?

Alex. Queen Hecuba and Helen.

Cres. And whither go they ?

Alex. Up to the eastern tower,

Whose height commands as subject all the vale,

To see the battle. Hector, whose patience

Is as a virtue fix'd, to-day was mov'd. ⁵

He chid Andromache and struck his armorer,

And, like as there were husbandry in war,

Before the sun rose he was harness'd light,

And to the field goes he, where every flower

Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw ¹⁰

In Hector's wrath.

Cres. What was his cause of anger ?

Alex. The noise goes, this : there is among the Greeks

A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector ; They call him Ajax.

Cres. Good ; and what of him ?

Alex. They say he is a very man per se,¹⁵ And stands alone.

Cres. So do all men, unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robb'd many beasts of their particular additions : he is as²⁰ valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant ; a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours that his valour is crush'd into folly, his folly sauced with discretion. There is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of, nor any man an attain't but he²⁵ carries some stain of it. He is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair. He hath the joints of everything, but everything so out of joint that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use, or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.³¹

Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry ?

Alex. They say he yesterday cop'd Hector in the battle and struck him down, the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.³⁷

Enter PANDARUS.

Cres. Who comes here ?

Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man.⁴⁰

Alex. As may be in the world, lady.

Pan. What's that ? What's that ?

Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid. What do you talk of ? Good morrow, Alexander. How do you, cousin ? When were you at Ilium ?⁴⁶

Cres. This morning, uncle.

Pan. What were you talking of when I came ? Was Hector arm'd and gone ere ye came to Ilium ? Helen was not up, was she ?⁵⁰

Cres. Hector was gone, but Helen was not up.

Pan. Even so. Hector was stirring early.

Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry ?⁵⁵

Cres. So he says here.

Pan. True, he was so. I know the cause too. He'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that ; and there's Troilus will not come far behind him. Let them take heed of Troilus, I can tell them that too.⁶¹

Cres. What, is he angry too ?

Pan. Who, Troilus ? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cres. O Jupiter ! there's no comparison.⁶⁵

Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector ? Do you know a man if you see him ?

Cres. Ay, if I ever saw him before and knew him.

Pan. Well, I say Troilus is Troilus.⁷⁰

Cres. Then you say as I say ; for, I am sure, he is not Hector.

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus in some degrees.

Cres. 'Tis just to each of them ; he is himself.⁷⁶

Pan. Himself ! Alas, poor Troilus ! I would he were.

Cres. So he is. ●

Pan. Condition, I had gone barefoot to India.

Cres. He is not Hector.⁸¹

Pan. Himself ! No, he's not himself. Would 'a were himself ! Well, the gods are above ; time must friend or end. Well, Troilus, well ; I would my heart were in her body. No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.⁸⁶

Cres. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.⁸⁹

Pan. The other's not come to 't. You shall tell me another tale, when the other's come to 't. Hector shall not have his wit this year.

Cres. He shall not need it, if he have his own.

Pan. Nor his qualities.

Cres. No matter.⁹⁵

Pan. Nor his beauty.

Cres. 'T would not become him ; his own's better.

Pan. You have no judgement, niece. Helen herself swore the other day, that Troilus, for a brown favour — for so 't is, I must confess, — not brown neither, —¹⁰²

Cres. No, but brown.

Pan. 'Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.¹⁰⁵

Cres. To say the truth, true and not true.

Pan. She prais'd his complexion above Paris.

Cres. Why, Paris hath colour enough.

Pan. So he has.¹⁰⁹

Cres. Then Troilus should have too much. If she prais'd him above, his complexion is higher than his. He having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flaming a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.¹¹⁵

Pan. I swear to you, I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cres. Then she's a merry Greek indeed.¹¹⁸

Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him the other day into the compass'd window, — and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin, —

Cres. Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.¹²⁴

Pan. Why, he is very young ; and yet will he, within three pound, lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cres. Is he so young a man and so old a lifter ?¹²⁹

Pan. But to prove to you that Helen loves him ; she came and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin —

Cres. Juno have mercy ! how came it cloven ?

Pan. Why, you know, 't is dimpled. I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia. 136

Cres. O, he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not?

Cres. O yes, an 't were a cloud in autumn.

Pan. Why, go to, then. But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus, — 141

Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you'll prove it so.

Pan. Troilus! Why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg. 145

Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i' the shell.

Pan. I cannot choose but laugh, to think how she tickled his chin. Indeed, she has a marvellous white hand, I must needs confess, — 151

Cres. Without the rack.

Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

Cres. Alas, poor chin! many a wart is richer. 155

Pan. But there was such laughing! Queen Hecuba laugh'd that her eyes ran o'er.

Cres. With mill-stones.

Pan. And Cassandra laugh'd.

Cres. But there was more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes. Did her eyes run o'er too? 161

Pan. And Hector laugh'd.

Cres. At what was all this laughing?

Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin. 165

Cres. An't had been a green hair, I should have laugh'd too.

Pan. They laugh'd not so much at the hair as at his pretty answer.

Cres. What was his answer? 170

Pan. Quoth she, "Here's but two and fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white."

Cres. This is her question. 173

Pan. That's true; make no question of that. "Two and fifty hairs," quoth he, "and one white. That white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons." "Jupiter!" quoth she, "which of these hairs is Paris my husband?" "The forked one," quoth he, "pluck 't out, and give it him." But there was such laughing! and Helen so blush'd, and Paris so chaf'd, and all the rest so laugh'd, that it pass'd. 182

Cres. So let it now; for it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on 't. 186

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn 'tis true; he will weep you, an 't were a man born in April.

[Sound a retreat.

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an 't were a nettle against May. 191

Pan. Hark! They are coming from the field. Shall we stand up here, and see them as they pass toward Ilium? Good niece, do, sweet niece Cressida. 195

Cres. At your pleasure.

Pan. Here, here, here's an excellent place; here we may see most bravely. I'll tell you them all by their names as they pass by; but mark Troilus above the rest. 200

Aeneas passes.

Cres. Speak not so loud.

Pan. That's Aeneas; is not that a brave man? He's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you. But mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

Cres. Who's that? 205

Antenor passes.

Pan. That's Antenor. He has a shrewd wit, I can tell you, and he's a man good enough. He's one o' the soundest judgement in Troy, whosoever, and a proper man of person. When comes Troilus? I'll show you Troilus anon. If he see me, you shall see him nod at me. 211

Cres. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more.

Hector passes.

Pan. That's Hector, that, that, look you, that; there's a fellow! Go thy way, Hector! There's a brave man, niece. O brave Hector! Look how he looks! There's a countenance! Is't not a brave man? 216

Cres. O, a brave man!

Pan. Is 'a not? It does a man's heart good. Look you what hacks are on his helmet! Look you yonder, do you see? Look you there; there's no jesting; [there's] laying on, take 't off who will, as they say. There be hacks! 225

Cres. Be those with swords?

Paris passes.

Pan. Swords! anything, he cares not; an the devil come to him, it's all one. By God's lid, it does one's heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris. Look ye yonder, [230] niece; is't not a gallant man too, is't not? Why, this is brave now. Who said he came hurt home to-day? He's not hurt. Why, this will do Helen's heart good now, ha! Would I could see Troilus now! You shall see Troilus anon. 235

Cres. Who's that?

Helenus passes.

Pan. That's Helenus. I marvel where Troilus is. That's Helenus. I think he went not forth to-day. That's Helenus. 240

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus? no. Yes, he'll fight indifferent well. I marvel where Troilus is. Hark! do you not hear the people cry "Troilus"? Helenus is a priest. 245

Cres. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

Troilus passes.

Pan. Where? Yonder? That's Deiphobus. 'Tis Troilus! There's a man, niece! Hem! Brave Troilus! the prince of chivalry!

Cres. Peace, for shame, peace!

Pan. Mark him; note him. O brave Troilus! Look well upon him, niece. Look you how his sword is bloodied, and his helm more hack'd than Hector's, and how he looks, and how he goes! O admirable youth! he ne'er saw three and twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way! Had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? Paris is dirt to him; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give money to boot.

Common Soldiers pass.

Cres. Here come more.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran, chaff and bran! porridge after meat! I could live and die! the eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look; the eagles are gone; crows and daws, crows and daws! I had rather be such a man as Troilus than Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cres. There is among the Greeks Achilles, a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles! a drayman, a porter, a very camel.

Cres. Well, well.

Pan. "Well, well!" Why, have you any discretion? Have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and so forth, the spice and salt that season a man?

Cres. Ay, a mine'd man; and then to be bak'd with no date in the pie, for then the man's date's out.

Pan. You are such another woman! One knows not at what ward you lie.

Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask, to defend my beauty; and you, to defend all these; and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cres. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too. If I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow; unless it swell past hiding, and then it's past watching.

Enter [Troilus's] Boy.

Pan. You are such another!

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your own house; [there he unarms him.]

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come. [Exit Boy.] I doubt he be hurt. Fare ye well, good niece.

Cres. Adieu, uncle.

Pan. I'll be with you, niece, by and by.

Cres. To bring, uncle?

Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus.

Cres. By the same token, you are a bawd.

Exit Pandarus.

Words, vows, gifts, tears, and love's full sacrifice,

He offers in another's enterprise;
But more in Troilus thousandfold I see
Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be;
Yet hold I off. Women are angels, wooing.
Things won are done, joy's soul lies in the doing.

That she below'd knows nought that knows not this:

Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is.
That she was never yet that ever knew
Love got so sweet as when desire did sue.

Therefore this maxim out of love I teach:
Achievement is command; ungain'd, beseech.

Then though my heart's content firm love doth bear,
Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear.

[Exit.

[SCENE III. The Greek camp. Before Agamemnon's tent.]

Sennet. Enter AGAMEMNON, NESTOR, ULYSSES, DIOMEDES, MENELAUS, with others.

Agam. Princes,

What grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks?

The ample proposition that hope makes
In all designs begun on earth below
Fails in the promis'd largeness. Checks and disasters

Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd,
As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap,

Infect the sound pine and divert his grain
Tortive and errant from his course of growth.

Nor, princes, is it matter new to us
That we come short of our suppose so far

That after seven years' siege yet Troy walls stand;

Sith every action that hath gone before,
Whereof we have record, trial did draw

Bias and thwart, not answering the aim
And that unbodied figure of the thought

That gave't surmised shape. Why then, you princes,

Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works,
And think them shame? which are indeed
nought else

But the protractive trials of great Jove
To find persistive constancy in men;

The fineness of which metal is not found
In fortune's love; for then the bold and coward,

The wise and fool, the artist and unread,
The hard and soft, seem all affn'd and kin.

But, in the wind and tempest of her frown,
Distinction, with a loud and powerful fan,

Puffing at all, winnows the light away;
And what hath mass or matter, by itself

Lies rich in virtue and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy godlike seat,

Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply
Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance

Lies the true proof of men. The sea being smooth,

How many shallow bauble boats dare sail

Upon her patient breast, making their way
 With those of nobler bulk!
 But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage
 The gentle Thetis, and anon behold
 The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains cut, 40

Bounding between the two moist elements,
 Like Perseus' horse; where's then the saucy boat

Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now
 Co-rivall'd greatness? Either to harbour fled,
 Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so 45
 Doth valour's show and valour's worth divide
 In storms of fortune; for in her ray and brightness

The herd hath more annoyance by the breeze
 Than by the tiger; but when the splitting wind
 Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks, 50
 And flies fled under shade, why, then the thing of courage,

As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,

And with an accent tun'd in selfsame key
 Retorts to chiding fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon,
 Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece, 55

Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit,
 In whom the tempers and the minds of all
 Should be shut up, hear what Ulysses speaks.
 Besides the applause and approbation

The which, [To Agamemnon] most mighty for thy place and sway, 60

[To Nestor] And thou most reverend for thy stretch'd-out life,

I give to both your speeches, which were such
 As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
 Should hold up high in brass, and such again
 As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver, 65

Should with a bond of air, strong as the axle-
 tree

On which the heavens ride, knit all Greek ears

To his experienc'd tongue, yet let it please both,
 Thou great, and wise, to hear Ulysses speak.

Agam. Speak, Prince of Ithaca; and be't of less expect 70

That matter needless, of importless burden,
 Divide thy lips, than we are confident,
 When rank Thersites opes his mastic jaws,
 We shall hear music, wit, and oracle.

Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been
 down, 75

And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a master,

But for these instances:

The specialty of rule hath been neglected;
 And, look, how many Grecian tents do stand Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions. 80

When that the general is not like the hive
 To whom the foragers shall all repair, What honey is expected? Degree being vizarded,

The unworthiest shows as fairly in the mask.
 The heavens themselves, the planets, and this centre 85

Observe degree, priority, and place,
 Insisture, course, proportion, season, form,
 Office, and custom, in all line of order;
 And therefore is the glorious planet Sol
 In noble eminence enthron'd and spher'd 90

Amidst the other; whose medicinable eye
 Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil,
 And posts, like the commandment of a king, Sans check to good and bad. But when the planets

In evil mixture to disorder wander, 95
 What plagues and what portents! what mutiny!

What raging of the sea! shaking of earth!
 Commotion in the winds! Frights, changes, horrors,

Divert and crack, rend and deracinate
 The unity and married calm of states 100 Quite from their fixture! O, when degree is shak'd,

Which is the ladder to all high designs,
 Then enterprise is sick! How could communities,

Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities,
 Peaceful commerce from dividable shores, 105
 The primogenitive and due of birth,
 Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,
 But by degree, stand in authentic place?

Take but degree away, untune that string,
 And, hark, what discord follows! Each thing
 meets 110

In mere oppugnancy. The bounded waters
 Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores
 And make a sop of all this solid globe.
 Strength should be lord of imbecility,
 And the rude son should strike his father dead. 115

Force should be right; or rather, right and
 wrong,

Between whose endless jar justice resides,
 Should lose their names, and so should justice
 too.

Then everything includes itself in power,
 Power into will, will into appetite; 120

And appetite, an universal wolf,
 So doubly seconded with will and power,
 Must make perforce an universal prey,
 And last eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
 This chaos, when degree is suffocate, 125
 Follows the choking.

And this neglection of degree is it
 That by a pace goes backward, in a purpose
 It hath to climb. The general's disdain'd
 By him one step below, he by the next, 130
 That next by him beneath; so every step,
 Exemplary by the first pace that is sick
 Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
 Of pale and bloodless emulation;
 And 't is this fever that keeps Troy on foot, 135
 Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length,
 Troy in our weakness stands, not in her strength.

Nest. Most wisely hath Ulysses here dis-cover'd

The fever whereof all our power is sick.

Agam. The nature of the sickness found,
 Ulysses, 140

What is the remedy?

Ulyss. The great Achilles, whom opinion crowns
 The sinew and the forehead of our host,
 Having his ear full of his airy fame,
 Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent 145
 Lies mocking our designs. With him Patroclus
 Upon a lazy bed the livelong day
 Breaks scurril jests,
 And with ridiculous and awkward action,
 Which, slanderer, he imitation calls, 150
 He pageants us. Sometime, great Agamemnon, Thy topless deputation he puts on,
 And, like a strutting player, whose conceit
 Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich
 To hear the wooden dialogue and sound 155
 'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffold-
 age, —
 Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested seeming
 He acts thy greatness in; and when he speaks,
 'Tis like a chime a-mending, with terms un-squar'd,
 Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon
 dropp'd, 160
 Would seem hyperboles. At this fusty stuff
 The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling,
 From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause;
 Cries, "Excellent! 'Tis Agamemnon just.
 Now play me Nestor; hem, and stroke thy
 beard, 165
 As he being drest to some oration."
 That's done, as near as the extreme ends
 Of parallels, as like as Vulcan and his wife;
 Yet god Achilles still cries, "Excellent!
 'Tis Nestor right. Now play him me, Patro-
 clus, 170
 Arming to answer in a night alarm."
 And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age
 Must be the scene of mirth; to cough and spit,
 And, with a palsy fumbling on his gorget,
 Shake in and out the rivet; and at this sport 175
 Sir Valour dies; cries, "O, enough, Patroclus;
 Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all
 In pleasure of my spleen." And in this fashion,
 All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
 Severals and generals of grace exact, 180
 Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,
 Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,
 Success or loss, what is or is not, serves
 As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.
Nest. And in the imitation of these twain — 185
 Who, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
 With an imperial voice — many are infect.
 Ajax is grown self-will'd, and bears his head
 In such a rein, in full as proud a place
 As broad Achilles; keeps his tent like him; 190 Makes factious feasts; rails on our state of war,
 Bold as an oracle, and sets Thersites,
 A slave whose gall coins slanders like a mint,
 To match us in comparisons with dirt,
 To weaken and discredit our exposure, 195
 How rank soever rounded in with danger.
Ulyss. They tax our policy, and call it cowardice,

Count wisdom as no member of the war,
 Forestall prescience, and esteem no act
 But that of hand. The still and mental parts, 200
 That do contrive how many hands shall strike
 When fitness calls them on, and know by measure
 Of their observant toil the enemies' weight, —
 Why, this hath not a finger's dignity.
 They call this bed-work, mappery, closet-
 war; 205
 So that the ram that batters down the wall,
 For the great swing and rudeness of his poise,
 They place before his hand that made the engine,
 Or those that with the fineness of their souls
 By reason guide his execution. 210
Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse
 Makes many Thetis' sons. [A tucket.
Agam. What trumpet? Look, Menelaus.
Men. From Troy.

Enter ÆNEAS.

Agam. What would you 'fore our tent? 215
Æne. Is this great Agamemnon's tent, I pray you?
Agam. Even this.
Æne. May one, that is a herald and a prince,
 Do a fair message to his kingly ears?
Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles'
 arm, 220
 'Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one
 voice
 Call Agamemnon head and general.
Æne. Fair leave and large security. How may
 A stranger to those most imperial looks
 Know them from eyes of other mortals?
Agam. How? 225
Æne. Ay.
 I ask, that I might waken reverence,
 And bid the cheek be ready with a blush
 Modest as Morning when she coldly eyes
 The youthful Phoebus. 230
 Which is that god in office, guiding men?
 Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?
Agam. This Trojan scorns us; or the men of Troy
 Are ceremonious courtiers.
Æne. Courtiers as free, as debonair, un-arm'd, 235
 As bending angels; that's their fame in peace.
 But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls,
 Good arms, strong joints, true swords; and,
 Jove's accord,
 Nothing so full of heart. But peace, Æneas,
 Peace, Trojan; lay thy finger on thy lips! 240
 The worthiness of praise distains his worth,
 If that the prais'd himself bring the praise
 forth;
 But what the repining enemy commends,
 That breath fame blows; that praise, sole pure, transcends.
Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself
 Æneas? 245
Æne. Ay, Greek, that is my name.

Agam. What's your affair, I pray you?

Æne. Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamemnon's ears.

Agam. He hears nought privately that comes from Troy.

Æne. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper him. 250

I bring a trumpet to awake his ear,
To set his sense on the attentive bent,
And then to speak.

Agam. Speak frankly as the wind;
It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour.

That thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake, 255
He tells thee so himself.

Æne. Trumpet, blow loud,
Send thy brass voice through all these lazy tents,

And every Greek of mettle, let him know,
What Troy means fairly shall be spoke aloud.

[The trumpets sound.]

We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy 260
A prince call'd Hector, — Priam is his father —
Who in this dull and long-continu'd truce
Is rusty grown; he bade me take a trumpet,
And to this purpose speak. Kings, princes, lords!

If there be one amongst the fair'st of Greece 265
That holds his honour higher than his ease,
That seeks his praise more than he fears his peril,

That knows his valour, and knows not his
fear,

That loves his mistress more than in confession
With truant vows to her own lips he loves, 270
And dare avow her beauty and her worth
In other arms than hers, — to him this challenge.

Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks,
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it,
He hath a lady, wiser, fairer, truer, 275
Than ever Greek did compass in his arms,
And will to-morrow with his trumpet call
Midway between your tents and walls of Troy,
To rouse a Grecian that is true in love.

If any come, Hector shall honour him; 280
If none, he'll say in Troy when he retires,
The Grecian dames are sunburnt and not worth
The splinter of a lance. Even so much.

Agam. This shall be told our lovers, Lord
Æneas.

If none of them have soul in such a kind, 285
We left them all at home. But we are soldiers;

And may that soldier a mere recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in love!
If then one is, or hath, or means to be, 290

That one meets Hector; if none else, I am he.

Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a
man

When Hector's grandsire suck'd: he is old
now;

But if there be not in our Grecian host
One noble man that hath one spark of fire
To answer for his love, tell him from me 295
I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver
And in my vantbrace put this wither'd brawn,
And, meeting him, will tell him that my lady

Was fairer than his grandam, and as chaste
As may be in the world. His youth in flood, I'll prove this truth with my three drops of
blood. 301

Æne. Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth!

Ulyss. Amen.

Agam. Fair Lord Æneas, let me touch your
hand;

To our pavilion shall I lead you first. 305
Achilles shall have word of this intent;
So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent.
Yourself shall feast with us before you go
And find the welcome of a noble foe.

[Exeunt all but Ulysses and Nestor.]

Ulyss. Nestor!

Nest. What says Ulysses?

Ulyss. I have a young conception in my brain;

Be you my time to bring it to some shape.

Nest. What is 't?

Ulyss. This 't is: 315
Blunt wedges rive hard knots. The seeded pride

That hath to this maturity blown up
In rank Achilles must or now be cropp'd
Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil,
To overbulk us all.

Nest. Well, and how? 320

Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,

However it is spread in general name,
Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance,

Whose grossness little characters sum up; 325
And, in the publication, make no strain,
But that Achilles, were his brain as barren
As banks of Libya, — though, Apollo knows,
'T is dry enough, — will, with great speed of judgement,

Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose 330
Pointing on him.

Ulyss. And wake him to the answer, think
you?

Nest. Yes, 'tis most meet. Who may you else oppose

That can from Hector bring his honour off,
If not Achilles? Though 't be a sportful combat, 335

Yet in this trial much opinion dwells;
For here the Trojans taste our dear'st repute
With their fin'st palate; and trust to me,
Ulysses,

Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd
In this wild action; for the success, 340
Although particular, shall give a scantling
Of good or bad unto the general;
And in such indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass 345

Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd
He that meets Hector issues from our choice;
And choice, being mutual act of all our souls,
Makes merit her election, and doth boil,
As 't were from forth us all, a man distill'd 350
Out of our virtues; who miscarrying,

What heart from hence receives the conquering
part,

To steel a strong opinion to themselves?
Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments,
In no less working than are swords and bows 365
Directive by the limbs.

Ulyss. Give pardon to my speech:
Therefore 't is meet Achilles meet not Hector.
Let us, like merchants, show our foulest wares,
And think, perchance, they'll sell; if not, 360
The lustre of the better yet to show,
Shall show the better. Do not consent
That ever Hector and Achilles meet;
For both our honour and our shame in this
Are dogg'd with two strange followers: 365

Nest. I see them not with my old eyes. What are they?

Ulyss. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector,

Were he not proud, we all should wear with
him.

But he already is too insolent;
And we were better parch in Afric sun 370
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,
Should he scape Hector fair. If he were foil'd,
Why then, we did our main opinion crush
In taint of our best man. No, make a lottery;
And, by device, let blockish Ajax draw 375
The sort to fight with Hector; among ourselves
Give him allowance as the worthier man;
For that will physic the great Myrmidon
Who broils in loud applause, and make him fall

His crest that prouder than blue Iris bends. 380
If the dull brainless Ajax come safe off,
We'll dress him up in voices. If he fail,
Yet go we under our opinion still

That we have better men. But, hit or miss, 384
Our project's life this shape of sense assumes:
Ajax employ'd plucks down Achilles' plumes.

Nest. Now, Ulysses, I begin to relish thy advice;

And I will give a taste of it forthwith
To Agamemnon. Go we to him straight. 390
Two curs shall tame each other; pride alone Must tarre the mastiffs on, as 't were their bone. [Exeunt.]

[ACT II

SCENE I. A part of the Greek camp.]

Enter AJAX and THERSITES.

Ajax. Thersites!

Ther. Agamemnon, how if he had boils—full, all over, generally?

Ajax. Thersites!

Ther. And those boils did run? Say so: did not the general run then? Were not that a botchy core?

Ajax. Dog!

Ther. Then there would come some matter from him. I see none now. 40

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst thou not hear? Feel, then. [Strikes him.]

Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord!

Ajax. Speak then, thou unsalted leaven, speak. I will beat thee into handsomeness. 45

Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness; but I think thy horse will sooner con an oration than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou? A red mumain o' thy jade's tricks! 51

Ajax. Toadstool, learn me the proclamation.

Ther. Dost thou think I have no sense, thou strick'st me thus?

Ajax. The proclamation! 55

Ther. Thou art proclaim'd a fool, I think.

Ajax. Do not, porpentine, do not; my fingers itch. 58

Ther. I would thou didst itch from head to foot and I had the scratching of thee. I would make thee the loathsom'st scab in Greece.
[When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strick'st as slow as another.]

Ajax. I say, the proclamation! 64

Ther. Thou grumblest and railest every hour on Achilles, and thou art as full of envy at his greatness as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty, ay, that thou bark'st at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites!

Ther. Thou shouldst strike him. 60

Ajax. Cobloaf!

Ther. He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Ajax. [Beating him.] You whoreson cur!

Ther. Do, do. 65

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!

Ther. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted lord!
Thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows; an asinego may tutor thee. Thou scurvy valiant ass! thou art here but to thrash Trojans; and thou art bought and sold 70
among those of any wit, like a barbarian slave.
If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. You dog! 75

Ther. You scurvy lord!

Ajax. [Beating him.] You cur!

Ther. Mars his idiot! do, rudeness; do, camel; do, do. 80

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax! wherefore do you this? How now, Thersites! what's the matter, man?

Ther. You see him there, do you?

Achil. Ay; what's the matter?

Ther. Nay, look upon him. 85

Achil. So I do. What's the matter?

Ther. Nay, but regard him well.

Achil. Well! why, I do so.

Ther. But yet you look not well upon him;
for, whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax. 90

Achil. I know that, fool.

Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.

Ajax. Therefore I beat thee. 95

Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicums of wit he utters! His evasions have ears thus long.
I have bobbd' his brain more than he has beat my bones. I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pia mater is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow. This lord, Achilles, Ajax, who wears his wit in his belly and his guts in his head, I'll tell you what I say of him. 81

Achil. What?

Ther. I say, this Ajax —

[Ajax offers to beat him.]

Achil. Nay, good Ajax.

Ther. Has not so much wit — 85

Achil. Nay, I must hold you.

Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen's needle, for whom he comes to fight.

Achil. Peace, fool! 89

Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not, — he there, that he. Look you there.

Ajax. O thou damn'd cur! I shall —

Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool's? 94

Ther. No, I warrant you; for a fool's will shame it.

Patr. Good words, Thersites.

Achil. What's the quarrel?

Ajax. I bade the vile owl go learn me the tenour of the proclamation, and he rails upon me. 100

Ther. I serve thee not.

Ajax. Well, go to, go to.

Ther. I serve here voluntary. 103

Achil. Your last service was sufferance, 't was not voluntary; no man is beaten voluntary. Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress. 107

Ther. E'en so. A great deal of your wit, too, lies in your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector shall have a great catch, if he knock out either of your brains. He were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel. 112

Achil. What, with me too, Thersites?

Ther. There's Ulysses and old Nestor, whose wit was mouldy ere your grandsires had nails on their toes, yoke you like draught-oxen and make you plough up the war. 117

Achil. What, what?

Ther. Yes, good sooth. To Achilles, to Ajax, to — 120

Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.

Ther. 'T is no matter; I shall speak as much as thou afterwards.

Patr. No more words, Thersites; peace!

Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles' brach bids me, shall I? 126

Achil. There's for you, Patroclus.

Ther. I will see you hang'd like clodpoles ere I come any more to your tents. I will keep where there is wit stirring and leave the faction of fools. [Exit. 131

Patr. A good riddance.

Achil. Marry, this, sir, is proclaim'd through all our host: —

That Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun,
Will with a trumpet 'twixt our tents and
Troy 135

To-morrow morning call some knight to arms
That hath a stomach; and such a one that dare

Maintain — I know not what; 'tis trash.
Farewell.

Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer him?

Achil. I know not; 'tis put to lottery.

Otherwise, 140

He knew his man.

Ajax. O, meaning you. I will go learn more of it. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. Troy. A room in Priam's palace.]

Enter PRIAM, HECTOR, TROILUS, PARIS, and HELENUS.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches
spent,

Thus once again says Nestor from the Greeks:

"Deliver Helen, and all damage else —

As honour, loss of time, travail, expense,

Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd 6

In hot digestion of this cormorant war —

Shall be struck off." Hector, what say you
to 't?

Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I

As far as touches my particular,

Yet, dread Priam, 19

There is no lady of more softer bowels,

More spongy to suck in the sense of fear,

More ready to cry out, "Who knows what follows?"

Than Hector is. The wound of peace is surety,

Surety secure; but modest doubt is call'd 15

The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches

To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go.

Since the first sword was drawn about this question,

Every tithe soul, 'mongst many thousand dismes,

Hath been as dear as Helen; I mean, of ours.

If we have lost so many tenths of ours, 21

To guard a thing not ours nor worth to us,

Had it our name, the value of one ten,

What merit's in that reason which denies

The yielding of her up?

Tro.

Fie, fie, my brother! 25

Weigh you the worth and honour of a king

So great as our dread father in a scale

Of common ounces? Will you with counters sum

The past proportion of his infinite,

And buckle in a waist most fathomless 30

With spans and inches so diminutive

As fears and reasons? Fie, for godly shame!

Hel. No marvel, though you bite so sharp at reasons,

You are so empty of them. Should not our father

Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons,
Because your speech hath none that tells him
so? 36

Tro. You are for dreams and slumbers, brother priest;

You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons:

You know an enemy intends you harm;

You know a sword employ'd is perilous, 41

And reason flies the object of all harm.

Who marvels then, when Helenus beholds

A Grecian and his sword, if he do set
The very wings of reason to his heels
And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove, 45 Or like a star disorb'd? Nay, if we talk of reason,

Let's shut our gates and sleep. Manhood and
honour

Should have hare hearts, would they but fat their thoughts

With this cramm'd reason. Reason and respect
Makes livers pale and lustihood deject. 50

Hect. Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost

The holding.

Tro. What is aught, but as 'tis valu'd?
Hect. But value dwells not in particular will;

It holds his estimate and dignity
As well wherein 'tis precious of itself 65
As in the prize. 'Tis mad idolatry

To make the service greater than the god;
And the will dotes that is inclineable

To what infectiously itself affects,
Without some image of the affected merit. 60

Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my election
Is led on in the conduct of my will.

My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,
Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores 65
Of will and judgement: how may I avoid,

Although my will distaste what it elected,
The wife I chose? There can be no evasion

To blench from this and to stand firm by honour.

We turn not back the silks upon the merchant,
When we have soil'd them, nor the remainder 70
viands

We do not throw in unrespective sieve,
Because we now are full. It was thought meet

Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks.
Your breath of full consent bellied his sails;

The seas and winds, old wranglers, took a truce
And did him service; he touch'd the ports de- 75
sir'd,

And for an old aunt whom the Greeks held captive,

He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and freshness

Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes stale the morning.

Why keep we her? The Grecians keep our aunt. 80

Is she worth keeping? Why, she is a pearl, Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,

And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.
If you'll avouch 't was wisdom Paris went—

As you must needs, for you all cried "Go,
go,"— 85

If you'll confess he brought home noble prize—
As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your hands,

And cried "Inestimable!"—why do you now
The issue of your proper wisdoms rate,

And do a deed that fortune never did, 90
Beggard the estimation which you priz'd

Richer than sea and land? O, theft most base,
That we have stol'n what we do fear to keep!

But, thieves, unworthy of a thing so stol'n,
That in their country did them that disgrace, or
We fear to warrant in our native place!

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans, cry!
Pri. What noise, what shriek is this?

Tro. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voice.

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans!
Hect. It is Cassandra. 100

Enter CASSANDRA [raving] with her hair about her ears.

Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry! Lend me ten thousand eyes,

And I will fill them with prophetic tears.
Hect. Peace, sister, peace!

Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled
eld,

Soft infancy, that nothing can but cry, 105
Add to my clamour! Let us pay betimes

A moiety of that mass of moan to come.
Cry, Trojans, cry! Practise your eyes with tears!

Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilium stand.
Our firebrand brother, Paris, burns us all. 110

Cry, Trojans, cry! A Helen and a woe!
Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go.

[Exit.
Hect. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains

Of divination in our sister work
Some touches of remorse? Or is your blood 115
So madly hot that no discourse of reason,

Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
Can qualify the same?

Tro. Why, brother Hector,
We may not think the justness of each act

Such and no other than event doth form it, 120
Nor once deject the courage of our minds,

Because Cassandra's mad. Her brain-sick raptures

Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel
Which hath our several honours all engag'd

To make it gracious. For my private part, 125
I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons;

And Jove forbid there should be done amongst
us

Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
To fight for and maintain!

Par. Else might the world convince of levity
As well my undertakings as your counsels; 131
But I attest the gods, your full consent

Gave wings to my propension and cut off
All fears attending on so dire a project.

For what, alas, can these my single arms? 135
What propugnation is in one man's valour,

To stand the push and enmity of those
This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,

Were I alone to pass the difficulties
And had as ample power as I have will, 140
Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,

Nor faint in the pursuit.

Pri. Paris, you speak
Like one besotted on your sweet delights.

You have the honey still, but these the gall;
So to be valiant is no praise at all. 145

Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself

The pleasures such a beauty brings with it;
But I would have the soil of her fair rape
Wip'd off, in honourable keeping her.
What treason were it to the ransack'd
queen, 150

Disgrace to your great worths and shame to
me,

Now to deliver her possession up
On terms of base compulsion! Can it be
That so degenerate a strain as this Should once set footing in your generous bo-soms? 155

There's not the meanest spirit on our party
Without a heart to dare or sword to draw
When Helen is defended, nor none so noble
Whose life were ill bestow'd or death unfam'd
Where Helen is the subject. Then, I say, 160
Well may we fight for her whom, we know
well,

The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hect. Paris and Troilus, you have both said
well,

And on the cause and question now in hand
Have glaz'd, but superficially; not much 165
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
Unfit to hear moral philosophy.

The reasons you allege do more conduce
To the hot passion of distemp'rd blood
Than to make up a free determination 170
'Twixt right and wrong, for pleasure and revenge

Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice
Of any true decision. Nature craves

All dues be rend'rd to their owners: now,
What nearer debt in all humanity 175

Than wife is to the husband? If this law
Of nature be corrupted through affection,
And that great minds, of partial indulgence
To their benumbed wills, resist the same,
There is a law in each well-ord'rd nation 180
To curb those raging appetites that are Most disobedient and refractory.

If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king,
As it is known she is, these moral laws
Of nature and of nations speak aloud 185
To have her back return'd. Thus to persist
In doing wrong extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion

Is this in way of truth; yet ne'ertheless,
My spritely brethren, I propend to you 190
In resolution to keep Helen still,
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependence
Upon our joint and several dignities.

Tro. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design.
Were it not glory that we more affected 195
Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,

She is a theme of honour and renown,
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds, 200 Whose present courage may beat down our
foes,

And fame in time to come canonize us;
For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose

So rich advantage of a promis'd glory
As smiles upon the forehead of this action 205
For the wide world's revenue.

Hect. I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Priamus.
I have a roisting challenge sent amongst
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks
Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits. 210

I was advertis'd their great general slept,
Whilst emulation in the army crept.
This, I presume, will wake him. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. The Greek camp. Before Achilles's tent.]

Enter THERSITES, solus.

Ther. How now, Thersites! What, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury! Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? He beats me, and I rail at him. O, worthy satisfaction! would it were otherwise; that I could beat him, whilst he rail'd at me. 'S foot, I'll learn to conjure [5 and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations. Then there's Achilles, a rare engineer! If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. O thou great thunder- [10 darter of Olympus, forget that thou art Jove, the king of gods, and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy caduceus, if ye take not that little little less than little wit from them that they have, which short-arm'd ignorance [15 itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their massy irons and cutting the web! After this, the vengeance on the whole camp! or rather, the [Neapolitan] boneache! for that, methinks, is the curse de- [20 pendent on those that war for a placket. I have said my prayers, and devil Envy say Amen.
What ho! my Lord Achilles!

Enter PATROCLUS.

Patr. Who's there? Thersites! Good Ther-sites, come in and rail. 25

Ther. If I could have rememb'rd a gilt counterfeit, thou wouldst not have slipp'd out of my contemplation. But it is no matter; thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great [30 revenue! Heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death, then if she that lays thee out says thou art a fair corpse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon 't she never [35 shrouded any but lazars. Amen. Where's Achilles?

Patr. What, art thou devout? Wast thou in prayer?

Ther. Ay; the heavens hear me! 40
[Patr. Amen.]

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites, my lord.

Achil. Where, where? Art thou come?

Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not serv'd thyself in to my table so many meals? Come, what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles. Then tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites. Then tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus. Then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou mayst tell that know'st.

Achil. O, tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question. Agamemnon commands Achilles; Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal!

Ther. Peace, fool! I have not done.

Achil. He is a privileg'd man. Proceed, Thersites.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool; Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this; come.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool?

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, AJAX, and CALCHAS.

Ther. Make that demand of the Creator; it suffices me thou art. Look you, who comes here?

Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody. Come in with me, Thersites.

Ther. Here is such patchery, such juggling, and such knavery! All the argument is a cuckold and a whore; a good quarrel to draw emulous factions and bleed to death upon. Now, the dry serpigo on the subject, and war and lechery confound all!

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his tent; but ill dispos'd, my lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here.

He shent our messengers, and we lay by Our apertainties, visiting of him. Let him be told so, lest perchance he think We dare not move the question of our place, Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall so say to him.

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent;

He is not sick.

Ajax. Yes, lion-sick, sick of proud heart. You may call it melancholy, if you will favour the man, but, by my head, it is pride; but why, why? Let him show us the cause. A word, my lord.

Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?

Ulyss. Achilles hath inveigled his fool from him.

Nest. Who, Thersites?

Ulyss. He.

Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.

Ulyss. No, you see, he is his argument that has his argument, Achilles.

Nest. All the better; their fraction is more our wish than their faction. But it was a strong composure a fool could disunite.

Ulyss. The amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily untie.

Re-enter PATROCLUS.

Here comes Patroclus.

Nest. No Achilles with him.

Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for courtesy. His legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.

Patr. Achilles bids me say, he is much sorry If anything more than your sport and pleasure Did move your greatness and this noble state To call upon him. He hopes it is no other But for your health and your digestion sake, An after-dinner's breath.

Agam. Hear you, Patroclus.

We are too well acquainted with these answers;

But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn, Cannot outfly our apprehensions.

Much attribute he hath, and much the reason Why we ascribe it to him; yet all his virtues, Not virtuously of his own part beheld, Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss, Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish, Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him We came to speak with him; and you shall not sin

If you do say we think him over-proud And under-honest, in self-assumption greater Than in the note of judgement; and worthier than himself

Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on, Disguise the holy strength of their command, And underwrite in an observing kind

His humorous predominance; yea, watch His pettish lines, his ebbs, his flows, as if

The passage and whole carriage of this action Rode on his tide. Go tell him this, and add,

That if he overhold his price so much, We'll none of him; but let him, like an engine

Not portable, lie under this report:

"Bring action hither, this cannot go to war." A stirring dwarf we do allowance give

Before a sleeping giant. Tell him so.

Patr. I shall; and bring his answer presently.

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied;

We come to speak with him. Ulysses, enter you.

Ajax. What is he more than another?

Agam. No more than what he thinks he is.

Ajax. Is he so much? Do you not think he thinks himself a better man than I am?

Agam. No question.

Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is?

Agam. No, noble Ajax; you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable. 180

Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what it is.

Agam. Your mind is the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud eats up himself. Pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.

Re-enter ULYSSES.

Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the engendering of toads. 170

Nest. [Aside.] Yet he loves himself. Is't not strange?

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-morrow.

Agam. What's his excuse?

Ulyss. He doth rely on none, But carries on the stream of his dispose Without observance or respect of any, 175 In will peculiar and in self-admission.

Agam. Why will he not upon our fair request Untent his person and share the air with us?

Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only,

He makes important. Possess'd he is with greatness, 180

And speaks not to himself but with a pride That quarrels at self-breath. Imagin'd wrath Holds in his blood such swoln and hot discourse

That 'twixt his mental and his active parts Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages 185 And batters 'gainst itself. What should I say? He is so plaguy proud that the death-tokens of it

Cry "No recovery."

Agam. Let Ajax go to him.

Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent. 'Tis said he holds you well, and will be led 190 At your request a little from himself.

Ulyss. O Agamemnon, let it not be so! We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes When they go from Achilles. Shall the proud lord

That bastes his arrogance with his own seam 195 And never suffers matter of the world

Enter his thoughts, save such as do revolve And ruminate himself, shall he be worshipp'd Of that we hold an idol more than he?

No, this thrice worthy and right valiant lord 200 Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd; Nor, by my will, assubjugate his merit, As amply titled as Achilles' is, By going to Achilles.

That were to enlard his fat-already pride 205 And add more coals to Cancer when he burns

With entertaining great Hyperion. This lord go to him! Jupiter forbid,

And say in thunder, "Achilles go to him."

Nest. [Aside to Dio.] O, this is well. He rubs the vein of him. 210

Dio. [Aside to Nest.] And how his silence drinks up this applause!

Ajax. If I go to him, with my armed fist I'll pash him o'er the face.

Agam. O, no, you shall not go.

Ajax. An 'a be proud with me, I'll pheeze his pride. 215

Let me go to him.

Ulyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.

Ajax. A paltry, insolent fellow!

Nest. How he describes himself!

Ajax. Can he not be sociable? 220

Ulyss. The raven chides blackness.

Ajax. I'll let his humours blood.

Agam. He will be the physician that should be the patient.

Ajax. An all men were o' my mind, — 225

Ulyss. Wit would be out of fashion.

Ajax. 'A should not bear it so, 'a should eat swords first. Shall pride carry it?

Nest. An 't would, you 'd carry half.

Ulyss. 'A would have ten shares. 230

Ajax. I will knead him; I'll make him supple.

Nest. He's not yet through warm. Force him with praises; pour in, pour in; his ambition is dry.

Ulyss. [To Agam.] My lord, you feed too much on this dislike. 235

Nest. Our noble general, do not do so.

Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Ulyss. Why, 't is this naming of him doth him harm.

Here is a man—but 't is before his face; 240 I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so?

He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

Ulyss. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter thus with us!

Would he were a Trojan! 245

Nest. What a vice were it in Ajax now, —

Ulyss. If he were proud, —

Dio. Or covetous of praise, —

Ulyss. Ay, or surly borne, —

Dio. Or strange, or self-affected! 250

Ulyss. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure.

Praise him that got thee, she that gave thee suck;

Fam'd be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature Thrice fam'd, beyond all erudition;

But he that disciplin'd thy arms to fight, 255 Let Mars divide eternity in twain,

And give him half; and, for thy vigour, Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield

To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom, Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confines 260

Thy spacious and dilated parts. Here's Nestor; Instructed by the antiquary times,

He must, he is, he cannot but be wise;

But pardon, father Nestor, were your days As green as Ajax' and your brain so temper'd, 265

You should not have the eminence of him, But be as Ajax.

Ajax. Shall I call you father?
Ulyss. Ay, my good son.
Dio. Be rul'd by him, Lord Ajax.
Ulyss. There is no tarrying here; the hart
Achilles

Keeps thicket. Please it our great general 270
To call together all his state of war.
Fresh kings are come to Troy; to-morrow
We must with all our main of power stand fast;
And here's a lord, — come knights from east
to west,
And call their flower, Ajax shall cope the best. 275

Agam. Go we to council. Let Achilles sleep:
Light boats sail swift, though greater hulks
draw deep. [Exeunt.]

[ACT III

SCENE I. Troy. Priam's palace.]

Music sounds within. Enter PANDARUS and a SERVANT.

Pan. Friend, you! pray you, a word. Do not you follow the young Lord Paris?

Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me.

Pan. You depend upon him, I mean?

Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord. 5

Pan. You depend upon a noble gentleman;
I must needs praise him.

Serv. The lord be praised!

Pan. You know me, do you not?

Serv. Faith, sir, superficially. 10

Pan. Friend, know me better; I am the Lord Pandarus.

Serv. I hope I shall know your honour better.

Pan. I do desire it.

Serv. You are in the state of grace. 15

Pan. Grace! Not so, friend. Honour and lordship are my titles. What music is this?

Serv. I do but partly know, sir. It is music in parts. 20

Pan. Know you the musicians?

Serv. Wholly, sir.

Pan. Who play they to?

Serv. To the hearers, sir.

Pan. At whose pleasure, friend? 25

Serv. At mine, sir, and theirs that love
music.

Pan. Command, I mean, friend.

Serv. Who shall I command, sir?

Pan. Friend, we understand not one another.
I am too courtly and thou art too cunning. At whose request do these men play? 31

Serv. That's to't indeed, sir. Marry, sir, at the request of Paris my lord, who's there in person; with him, the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul. 35

Pan. Who? My cousin Cressida?

Serv. No, sir, Helen. Could you not find out that by her attributes? 38

Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the Lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the Prince Troilus. I will make a complimentary assault upon him, for my business seethes. 43

Serv. Sudden business! There's a stew'd phrase indeed!

Enter PARIS and HELEN [attended].

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! Fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them, especially to you, fair queen! Fair thoughts be your fair pillow! 49

Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.

Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen. Fair prince, here is good broken
music. 52

Par. You have broke it, cousin, and, by my life, you shall make it whole again; you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance.
Nell, he is full of harmony. 55

Pan. Truly, lady, no.

Helen. O, sir, —

Pan. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude. 60
Par. Well said, my lord! Well, you say so in fits.

Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen.
My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?

Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out.
We'll hear you sing, certainly. 65

Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me. But, marry, thus, my lord: my dear lord and most esteemed friend, your brother
Troilus, — 70

Helen. My Lord Pandarus, honey-sweet
lord, —

Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to: — commends himself most affectionately to you, — 74

Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody. If you do, our melancholy upon your head!

Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen! That's a sweet queen, i' faith.

Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offence. 80

Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn; that shall it not, in truth, la. Nay, I care not for such words; no, no. And, my lord, he desires you, that if the King call for him at supper, you will make his excuse. 85

Helen. My Lord Pandarus, —

Pan. What says my sweet queen, my very sweet queen?

Par. What exploit's in hand? Where sups
he to-night? 90

Helen. Nay, but, my lord, —

Pan. What says my sweet queen? My cousin will fall out with you.

Helen. You must not know where he sups.

Par. [I'll lay my life,] with my disposer
Cressida. 95

Pan. No, no; no such matter; you are wide.
Come, your disposer is sick.

Par. Well, I'll make excuse.

Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say Cressida? No, your poor disposer's sick. 101

Par. I spy.

Pan. You spy! what do you spy? Come, give me an instrument. Now, sweet queen.

Helen. Why, this is kindly done. 105

Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.

Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my Lord Paris.

Pan. He! no, she'll none of him. They two are twain. 111

Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may make them three.

Pan. Come, come, I'll hear no more of this; I'll sing you a song now. 115

Helen. Ay, ay, prithee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.

Pan. Ay, you may, you may.

Helen. Let thy song be love. 'This love will undo us all. O Cupid, Cupid, Cupid! 120

Pan. Love! ay, that it shall, i' faith.

Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but love.

Pan. In good troth, it begins so. [Sings.]

Love, love, nothing but love, still more!

For, O, love's bow 125

Shoots buck and doe.

The shaft confounds

Not that it wounds,

But tickles still the sore. 130

These lovers cry Oh! ho! they die!

Yet that which seems the wound to kill,

Doth turn oh! ho! to ha! ha! ha!

So, dying, love lives still.

Oh! ho! a while, but ha! ha! ha! 135

Oh! ho! groans out for ha! ha! ha!

Heigh-ho!

Helen. In love, i' faith, to the very tip of the nose. 139

Par. He eats nothing but doves, love, and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love. 143

Pan. Is this the generation of love,—hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds? Why, they are vipers. Is love a generation of vipers? Sweet lord, who's a-field to-day? 147

Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy. I would fain have arm'd to-day, but my Nell would not have it so. How chance my brother Troilus went not? 151

Helen. He hangs the lip at something. You know all, Lord Pandarus.

Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen. I long to hear how they sped to-day. You'll remember your brother's excuse? 155

Par. To a hair.

Pan. Farewell, sweet queen.

Helen. Commend me to your niece.

Pan. I will, sweet queen. 160

[Exit.] Sound a retreat.

Par. They're come from field. Let us to Priam's hall,

To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must woo you

To help unarm our Hector. His stubborn buckles,

With these your white enchanting fingers touch'd,

Shall more obey than to the edge of steel 165

Or force of Greekish sinews. You shall do more Than all the island kings,—disarm great Hector.

Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant, Paris;

Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty Gives us more palm in beauty than we have, 170

Yea, overshines ourself.

[Par.] Sweet, above thought I love thee.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. The same. Pandarus's orchard.]

Enter PANDARUS and Troilus's BOY [meeting.]

Pan. How now! where's thy master? At my cousin Cressida's?

Boy. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct him thither.

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. O, here he comes. How now, how now!

Tro. Sirrah, walk off. [Exit Boy.]

Pan. Have you seen my cousin?

Tro. No, Pandarus. I stalk about her door, Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks 15

Staying for waftage. O, be thou my Charon, And give me swift transportance to those fields

Where I may wallow in the lily-beds Propos'd for the deserfer! O gentle Pandarus,

From Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted wings, 15

And fly with me to Cressid!

Pan. Walk here i' the orchard, I'll bring her straight. [Exit.]

Tro. I am giddy; expectation whirls me round.

The imaginary relish is so sweet 20

That it enchants my sense; what will it be, When that the watery palates taste indeed

Love's thrice repured nectar? Death, I fear me, Swooning destruction, or some joy too fine,

Too subtle, potent, tun'd too sharp in sweetness For the capacity of my ruder powers. 25

I fear it much; and I do fear besides

That I shall lose distinction in my joys, As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps

The enemy flying. 30

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. She's making her ready, she'll come straight. You must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were frayed with a sprite. I'll fetch her. It is the prettiest villain; she fetches her breath

so short as a new-ta'en sparrow. [Exit. 35

Tro. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom.

My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse, And all my powers do their bestowing lose,

Like vassalage at unawares encountering 40

The eye of majesty.

Re-enter PANDARUS with CRESSIDA.

Pan. Come, come, what need you blush? Shame's a baby. Here she is now; swear the oaths now to her that you have sworn to me. [Cressida draws backward.] What, are you gone again? You must be watch'd ere you [⁴⁴ be made tame, must you? Come your ways, come your ways; an you draw backward, we'll put you i' the fills. Why do you not speak to her? Come, draw this curtain, and let's see your picture. Alas the day, how loath you are to offend daylight! An't were dark, [⁵⁰ you'd close sooner. So, so; rub on, and kiss the mistress. How now! a kiss in fee-farm! Build there, carpenter; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out ere I part you. The falcon as the tercel, for all the ducks i' the river. Go to, go to. ⁵⁶

Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds; but she'll bereave you o' the deeds too, if she call your activity in question. What, billing [⁶⁰ again? Here's "In witness whereof the parties interchangeably" — Come in, come in. I'll go get a fire. [Exit.]

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Tro. O Cressida, how often have I wish'd me thus! ⁶⁶

Cres. Wish'd, my lord! The gods grant, — O my lord!

Tro. What should they grant? What makes this pretty abrupton? What too curious dreg espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love? ⁷¹

Cres. More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.

Tro. Fears make devils of cherubins; they never see truly. ⁷⁵

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear. To fear the worst oft cures the worse. ⁷⁹

Tro. O, let my lady apprehend no fear. In all Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster.

Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither?

Tro. Nothing, but our undertakings, when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough than for us [⁸⁵ to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstruosity in love, lady, that the will is infinite and the execution confin'd, that the desire is boundless and the act a slave to limit. ⁹⁰

Cres. They say all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform, vowing more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions and the act of hares, are they not monsters? ⁹⁶

Tro. Are there such? Such are not we. Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove. Our head shall go bare till merit crown it. No perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present; we will not name desert before his [¹⁰⁰ birth, and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith. Troilus shall be such to Cressid as what envy can say worst shall be a mock for his truth, and what truth can speak truest not truer than Troilus. ¹⁰⁶

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. What, blushing still? Have you not done talking yet?

Cres. Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you. ¹¹¹

Pan. I thank you for that; if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me. Be true to my lord; if he flinch, chide me for it.

Tro. You know now your hostages: your uncle's word and my firm faith. ¹¹⁶

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too. Our kindred, though they be long ere they are wooed, they are constant being won. They are burs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown. ¹²⁰

Cres. Boldness comes to me now, and brings me heart.

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day For many weary months.

Tro. Why was my Cressid then so hard to win?

Cres. Hard to seem won; but I was won, my lord. ¹²⁵

With the first glance that ever — pardon me — If I confess much, you will play the tyrant.

I love you now; but not, till now, so much But I might master it. In faith, I lie;

My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown ¹³⁰

Too headstrong for their mother. See, we fools! Why have I blabb'd? Who shall be true to us,

When we are so unsecret to ourselves? But, though I lov'd you well, I woo'd you not;

And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man, ¹³⁵ Or that we women had men's privilege

Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue,

For in this rapture I shall surely speak The thing I shall repent. See, see, your silence,

Cunning in dumbness, from my weakness draws ¹⁴⁰

My soul of counsel from me! Stop my mouth. Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music issues thence.

Pan. Pretty, i' faith.

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me;

"T was not my purpose, thus to beg a kiss. ¹⁴⁵ I am asham'd. O heavens! what have I done?

For this time will I take my leave, my lord. Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid!

Pan. Leave! An you take leave till to-morrow morning, — ¹⁵⁰

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Tro. What offends you, lady?

Cres. Sir, mine own company.

Tro. You cannot shun yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try.

I have a kind of self resides with you; ¹⁵⁵ But an unkind self, that itself will leave

To be another's fool. Where is my wit? I would be gone. I speak I know not what.

Tro. Well know they what they speak that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance, my lord, I shew more craft than love, ¹⁶⁰

And fell so roundly to a large confession,
To angle for your thoughts. But you are wise,
Or else you love not, for to be wise and love Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

Tro. O that I thought it could be in a woman — 165

As, if it can, I will presume in you —
To feed for aye her lamp and flames of love,
To keep her constancy in plight and youth,
Outliving beauties outward, with a mind
That doth renew swifter than blood decays! 170
Or that persuasion could but thus convince
me

That my integrity and truth to you
Might be affronted with the match and weight
Of such a winnow'd purity in love,
How were I then uplifted! But, alas! 175
I am as true as truth's simplicity,
And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you.

Tro. O virtuous fight,
When right with right wars who shall be most right!

True swains in love shall in the world to come Approve their truths by Troilus. When their rhymes, 181

Full of protest, of oath and big compare,
Wants similes, truth tir'd with iteration,
As true as steel, as plantage to the moon,
As sun to day, as turtle to her mate, 185
As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre,
Yet, after all comparisons of truth,
As truth's authentic author to be cited,
"As true as Troilus" shall crown up the verse,

And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be!
If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth, 191
When time is old and hath forgot itself,
When waterdrops have worn the stones of
Troy,

And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,
And mighty states characterless are grated 195
To dusty nothing, yet let memory,
From false to false, among false maids in love, Upbraid my falsehood! When they've said as false

As air, as water, as wind, as sandy earth,
As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf, 200
Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son, Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,

"As false as Cressid." 203

Pan. Go to, a bargain made; seal it, seal it,
I'll be the witness. Here I hold your hand, here my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be called to the world's end after my name;
call them all Pandars. Let all constant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and [210 all brokers-between Pandars! Say, amen.

Tro. Amen.

Cres. Amen. 214

Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show you a chamber, whose bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death.

Away!
And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens here
Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this gear! 220
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. The Greek camp. Before the tent of Achilles.]

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, DIOMEDES,
NESTOR, [AJAX,] MENELAUS, and CALCHAS.
Flourish.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have done you,

The advantage of the time prompts me aloud
To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind

That, through the sight I bear in things to
love,

I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession, 6
Incurr'd a traitor's name, expos'd myself,
From certain and possess'd conveniences,
To doubtful fortunes, sequestering from me all
That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition
Made tame and most familiar to my nature; 10
And here, to do you service, am become
As new into the world, strange, unacquainted.
I do beseech you, as in way of taste,
To give me now a little benefit
Out of those many regist'ed in promise, 15
Which, you say, live to come in my behalf.

Agam. What wouldst thou of us, Troyan?
Make demand.

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor,

Yesterday took; Troy holds him very dear.
Offer have you — often have you thanks therefore — 20

Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange, Whom Troy hath still deni'd; but this Antenor,

I know, is such a wrest in their affairs
That their negotiations all must slack,
Wanting his manage; and they will almost 25
Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam,
In change of him. Let him be sent, great princes,

And he shall buy my daughter; and her presence

Shall quite strike off all service I have done,
In most accepted pain.

Agam. Let Diomedes bear him,
And bring us Cressid hither; Calchas shall have 31

What he requests of us. Good Diomed,
Furnish you fairly for this interchange;
Withal bring word if Hector will to-morrow
Be answer'd in his challenge: Ajax is ready. 35

Dio. This shall I undertake; and 't is a burden

Which I am proud to bear.

[Exeunt Diomedes [and Calchas].]

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS, and stand in [the door of] their tent.

Ulyss. Achilles stands i' the entrance of his tent.

Please it our general to pass strangely by him,
As if he were forgot; and, princes all,
Lay negligent and loose regard upon him.
I will come last. 'Tis like he'll question me
Why such unplausible eyes are bent on him.
If so, I have derision medicinable

To use between your strangeness and his pride,

Which his own will shall have desire to drink.
It may do good; pride hath no other glass
To show itself but pride, for supple knees
Feed arrogance and are the proud man's fees.

Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put on

A form of strangeness as we pass along.
So do each lord, and either greet him not,
Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him
more

Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.
Achil. What comes the general to speak with me?

You know my mind, I'll fight no more 'gainst
Troy.

Agam. What says Achilles? Would he aught with us?

Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the general?

Achil. No.

Nest. Nothing, my lord.

Agam. The better.

[Exeunt Agamemnon and Nestor.]

Achil. Good day, good day.

Men. How do you? How do you? [Exit.]

Achil. What, does the cuckold scorn me?

Ajax. How now, Patroclus!

Achil. Good morrow, Ajax.

Ajax. Ha?

Achil. Good morrow.

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too. [Exit.]

Achil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles?

Patr. They pass by strangely. They were used to bend,

To send their smiles before them to Achilles,
To come as humbly as they used to creep
To holy altars.

Achil. What, am I poor of late?

'Tis certain, greatness, once fallen out with fortune,

Must fall out with men too. What the declined is

He shall as soon read in the eyes of others
As feel in his own fall; for men, like butterflies,

Show not their mealy wings but to the summer,

And not a man, for being simply man,
Hath any honour, but honour'd for those honours

That are without him, as place, riches, and favour,—

Prizes of accident as oft as merit;
Which when they fall, as being slippery stand-
ers,

The love that lean'd on them as slippery too,
Doth one pluck down another and together
Die in the fall. But 't is not so with me;

Fortune and I are friends. I do enjoy
At ample point all that I did possess,
Save these men's looks; who do, methinks, find out

Something not worth in me such rich behold-
ing

As they have often given. Here is Ulysses;
I'll interrupt his reading.

How now, Ulysses!

Ulyss. Now, great Thetis' son!

Achil. What are you reading?

Ulyss. A strange fellow here

Writes me: "That man, how dearly ever parted,

How much in having, or without or in,
Cannot make boast to have that which he hath,

Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection;
As when his virtues shining upon others

Heat them and they retort that heat again
To the first giver."

Achil. This is not strange, Ulysses.
The beauty that is borne here in the face
The bearer knows not, but commends itself
[To others' eyes; nor doth the eye itself,

That most pure spirit of sense, behold itself,]
Not going from itself; but eye to eye oppos'd
Salutes each other with each other's form;

For speculation turns not to itself,
Till it hath travell'd and is mirror'd there

Where it may see itself. This is not strange at all.

Ulyss. I do not strain at the position, —
It is familiar, — but at the author's drift;

Who, in his circumstance, expressly proves
That no man is the lord of anything,

(Though in and of him there is much consisting,)

Till he communicate his parts to others;
Nor doth he of himself know them for aught
Till he behold them formed in the applause
Where they're extended; who, like an arch, reverberate

The voice again, or, like a gate of steel
Fronting the sun, receives and renders back His figure and his heat. I was much wrapt in this;

And apprehended here immediately
The unknown Ajax.

Heavens, what a man is there! A very horse,
That has he knows not what. Nature, what things there are

Most abject in regard and dear in use!
What things again most dear in the esteem
And poor in worth! Now shall we see tomorrow —

An act that very chance doth throw upon
him —

Ajax renown'd. O heavens, what some men do,
While some men leave to do!

How some men creep in skittish Fortune's hall,
Whiles others play the idiots in her eyes!

How one man eats into another's pride,
While pride is fasting in his wantonness!

To see these Grecian lords! — why, even already

They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder,

As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast 140
And great Troy shrieking.

Achil. I do believe it; for they pass'd by me
As misers do by beggars, neither gave to me
Good word nor look. What, are my deeds forgot?

Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his back, 145

Wherein he puts alms for oblivion,
A great-sized monster of ingratitude.
Those scraps are good deeds past, which are devour'd

As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done. Perseverance, dear my lord, 150
Keeps honour bright; to have done is to hang Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail
In monumental mockery. Take the instant way;

For honour travels in a strait so narrow,
Where one but goes abreast. Keep then the path; 155

For emulation hath a thousand sons
That one by one pursue. If you give way,
Or hedge aside from the direct forthright,
Like to an ent'red tide, they all rush by
And leave you hindmost; 160

Or, like a gallant horse fall'n in first rank,
Lie there for pavement to the abject rear,
O'er-run and trampled on. Then what they do in present,

Though less than yours in past, must o'ertop
yours;

For Time is like a fashionable host 165
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the
hand,

And with his arms outstretch'd, as he would fly,
Grasps in the comer. Welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. O, let not virtue seek

Remuneration for the thing it was; 170

For beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating Time.

One touch of nature makes the whole world kin, 175

That all, with one consent, praise new-born gawds,

Though they are made and moulded of things past,

And give to dust that is a little gilt
More laud than gilt o'er-dusted.

The present eye praises the present object. 180
Then marvel not, thou great and complete
man,

That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax;
Since things in motion sooner catch the eye
Than what not stirs. The cry went once on
thee,

And still it might, and yet it may again, 185
If thou wouldst not entomb thyself alive
And case thy reputation in thy tent;

Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,

Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods
themselves 190

And drave great Mars to faction.

Achil.

I have strong reasons.

Ulyss.

But 'gainst your privacy
The reasons are more potent and heroic.
'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priam's daughters.

Achil.

Ha! known!

Ulyss.

Is that a wonder? 196

The providence that's in a watchful state
Knows almost every grain of Plutus' gold,
Finds bottom in the uncomprehensive deeps,
Keeps place with thought and almost, like the gods,

Do thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles. 200

There is a mystery — with whom relation
Durst never meddle — in the soul of state;
Which hath an operation more divine
Than breath or pen can give expressure to.

All the commerce that you have had with Troy
As perfectly is ours as yours, my lord; 204

And better would it fit Achilles much
To throw down Hector than Polyxena.

But it must grieve young Pyrrhus now at home,
When Fame shall in our island sound her trump, 210

And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sing,
"Great Hector's sister did Achilles win,
But our great Ajax bravely beat down him."
Farewell, my lord; I as your lover speak.

The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break. [Exit.] 215

Patr.

To this effect, Achilles, have I mov'd
you.

A woman impudent and mannish grown
Is not more loath'd than an effeminate man
In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this.
They think my little stomach to the war 220
And your great love to me restrains you thus.

Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak wanton
Cupid

Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,

Be shook to air.

Achil.

Shall Ajax fight with Hector?

Patr.

Ay, and perhaps receive much honour
by him. 226

Achil.

I see my reputation is at stake;

My fame is shrewdly gored.

Patr.

O, then, beware!
Those wounds heal ill that men do give themselves.

Omission to do what is necessary 230

Seals a commission to a blank of danger;
And danger, like an ague, subtly taints
Even then when we sit idly in the sun.

Achil.

Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patro-
clus.

I'll send the fool to Ajax and desire him 235
To invite the Trojan lords after the combat
To see us here, unarm'd. I have a woman's longing,

An appetite that I am sick withal,
To see great Hector in his weeds of peace,

Enter THERSITES.

To talk with him and to behold his visage, 240
Even to my full of view. — A labour sav'd!

Ther. A wonder!

Achil. What?

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field, asking for himself. 245

Achil. How so?

Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector, and is so prophetically proud of an heroic cudgelling that he raves in saying nothing.

Achil. How can that be? 250

Ther. Why, he stalks up and down like a peacock, — a stride and a stand; ruminates like an hostess that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning; bites his lip with a politic regard, as who should say there were wit in his head, an't would out; and 255 so there is, but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone for ever; for if Hector break not his neck i' the combat, he'll break 't himself in vain-glory. He knows not me. I said, 260 "Good morrow, Ajax;" and he replies, "Thanks, Agamemnon." What think you of this man that takes me for the general? He's grown a very land-fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion! A man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin. 266

Achil. Thou must be my ambassador to him, Therites.

Ther. Who, I? Why, he'll answer nobody; he professes not answering. Speaking is for beggars; he wears his tongue in 's arms. I will put on his presence; let Patroclus make his demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax. 273

Achil. To him, Patroclus. Tell him I humbly desire the valiant Ajax to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarm'd to my tent, and to procure safe-conduct for his person of the magnanimous and most illustrious six-or-seven-times-honoured captain-general of the Grecian army, Agamemnon, et cetera. Do this. 280

Patr. Jove bless great Ajax!

Ther. Hum!

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles, —

Ther. Ha!

Patr. Who most humbly desires you to invite Hector to his tent, — 286

Ther. Hum!

Patr. And to procure safe-conduct from Agamemnon.

Ther. Agamemnon? 290

Patr. Ay, my lord.

Ther. Ha!

Patr. What say you to 't?

Ther. God buy you, with all my heart.

Patr. Your answer, sir. 295

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock it will go one way or other. Howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patr. Your answer, sir,

Ther. Fare you well, with all my heart. 300

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?
Ther. No, but he's out o' tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has knock'd out his brains, I know not; but, I am sure, none, unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make catlings on. 308

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him straight.

Ther. Let me carry another to his horse; for that's the more capable creature. 310

Achil. My mind is troubled, like a fountain stirr'd;

And I myself see not the bottom of it.

[Exeunt Achilles and Patroclus.]

Ther. Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it! I had rather be a tick in a sheep than such a valiant ignorance. [Exit.] 316

[ACT IV

SCENE I. Troy. A street.]

Enter, at one door, ÆNEAS, with a torch; at another, PARIS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTENOR, DIOMEDES the Grecian [and others], with torches.

Par. See, ho! who is that there?

Dei. It is the Lord Æneas.

Æne. Is the prince there in person?

Had I so good occasion to lie long

As you, Prince Paris, nothing but heavenly business

Should rob my bed-mate of my company. 3

Dio. That's my mind too. Good morrow, Lord Æneas.

Par. A valiant Greek, Æneas, — take his hand —

Witness the process of your speech, wherein You told how Diomed, a whole week by days, Did haunt you in the field.

Æne. Health to you, valiant sir, 10

During all question of the gentle truce; But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance As heart can think or courage execute.

Dio. The one and other Diomed embraces. Our bloods are now in calm; and, so long, health! 15

But when contention and occasion meets, By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life

With all my force, pursuit, and policy.

Æne. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly With his face backward. In humane gentleness, 20

Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' life, Welcome, indeed! By Venus' hand I swear,

No man alive can love in such a sort

The thing he means to kill more excellently.

Dio. We sympathize. Jove, let Æneas live, If to my sword his fate be not the glory, 25

A thousand complete courses of the sun!

But in mine emulous honour let him die,

With every joint a wound, and that to-morrow!

Æne. We know each other well. 30

Dio. We do; and long to know each other worse.

Par. This is the most despiteful'st gentle greeting,

The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of.

What business, lord, so early?

Æne. I was sent for to the King; but why, I know not. 35

Par. His purpose meets you ; 't was to bring this Greek

To Calchas' house, and there to render him,
For the enfréed Antenor, the fair Cressid.
Let's have your company, or, if you please,
Haste there before us. I constantly do think — 40
Or rather, call my thought a certain knowledge —

My brother Troilus lodges there to-night.
Rouse him and give him note of our approach,
With the whole quality whereof. I fear 44
We shall be much unwelcome.

Æne. That I assure you.
Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece
Than Cressid borne from Troy.

Par. There is no help.
The bitter disposition of the time
Will have it so. On, lord ; we'll follow you.

Æne. Good morrow, all. [Exit. 50]

Par. And tell me, noble Diomed, faith, tell me true,

Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship,
Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen most,

Myself or Menelaus ?

Dio. Both alike.
He merits well to have her, that doth seek 55
her,

Not making any scruple of her soilure,
With such a hell of pain and world of charge ;
And you as well to keep her, that defend her,
Not palating the taste of her dishonour,
With such a costly loss of wealth and friends. 60
He, like a puling cuckold, would drink up
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed piece ;
You, like a lecher, out of whorish loins
Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors.
Both merits pois'd, each weighs no less nor 65
more ;

But he as he, which heavier for a whore.

Par. You are too bitter to your countrywoman.

Dio. She's bitter to her country. Hear me,
Paris ;

For every false drop in her bawdy veins
A Grecian's life hath sunk ; for every scruple 70
Of her contaminated carrion weight,
A Trojan hath been slain. Since she could speak,

She hath not given so many good words breath
As for her Greeks and Trojans suff' red death.

Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chapmen do, 75
Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy ;
But we in silence hold this virtue well,
We'll not commend what we intend to sell.
Here lies our way. [Exit.]

[SCENE II. The same. Court of Pandarus's house.]

Enter TROILUS and CRESSIDA.

Tro. Dear, trouble not yourself ; the morn is cold.

Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle down ;

He shall unbolt the gates.

Tro. Trouble him not ;

To bed, to bed. Sleep kill those pretty eyes,
And give as soft attachment to thy senses 80
As infants' empty of all thought !

Cres. Good morrow, then.

Tro. I prithee now, to bed.

Cres. Are you a-weary of me ?

Tro. O Cressida ! but that the busy day,
Wak'd by the lark, hath rous'd the ribald 84
crows,
And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer, 86

I would not from thee.

Cres. Night hath been too brief.

Tro. Beshrew the witch ! with venomous wights she stays
As tediously as hell, but flies the grasps of 88
love

With wings more momentary-swift than thought.

You will catch cold, and curse me.

Cres. Frithee, tarry ;

You men will never tarry. 90

O foolish Cressid ! I might have still held off,
And then you would have tarried. Hark !

there's one up.

Pan. (Within.) What, 's all the doors open
here ?

Tro. It is your uncle. 92

Enter PANDARUS.

Cres. A pestilence on him ! now will he be mocking.

I shall have such a life !

Pan. How now, how now ! how go maiden-heads ? Here, you maid ! where's my cousin
Cressid ? 95

Cres. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle !

You bring me to do — and then you flout me
too.

Pan. To do what ? to do what ? Let her say what. What have I brought you to do ?

Cres. Come, come, beshrew your heart !

You'll ne'er be good, 98

Nor suffer others.

Pan. Ha, ha ! Alas, poor wretch ! a poor capocchia ! hast not slept to-night ? Would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep ? A bugbear take him ! [One knocks.]

Cres. Did not I tell you ? Would he were knock'd i' the head ! 99

Who's that at door ? Good uncle, go and see.
My lord, come you again into my chamber.

You smile and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.

Tro. Ha, ha !

Cres. Come, you are deceiv'd, I think of no such thing. [Knock. 100

How earnestly they knock ! Pray you, come in.
I would not for half Troy have you seen here.

[Exit Troilus and Cressida.]

Pan. Who's there ? What's the matter ?
Will you beat down the door ? How now !
what's the matter ? 102

[Enter ÆNEAS.]

Æne. Good morrow, lord, good morrow.

Pan. Who's there? My Lord Æneas! By my troth,
I knew you not. What news with you so early?

Æne. Is not Prince Troilus here?

Pan. Here! What should he do here? 50

Æne. Come, he is here, my lord; do not deny him.

It doth import him much to speak with me.

Pan. Is he here, say you? 'Tis more than I know, I'll be sworn. For my own part, I came in late. What should he do here? 55

Æne. Who! — nay, then. Come, come, you'll do him wrong ere you're ware. You'll be so true to him, to be false to him. Do not you know of him, but yet go fetch him hither; go.

Re-enter TROILUS.

Tro. How now! what's the matter? 60

Æne. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,

My matter is so rash. There is at hand Paris your brother, and Deiphobus, The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor Deliver'd to us; and for him forthwith, 65 Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour, We must give up to Diomedes' hand The Lady Cressida.

Tro. Is it concluded so?

Æne. By Priam and the general state of Troy.

They are at hand and ready to effect it. 70

Tro. How my achievements mock me! I will go meet them; and, my Lord Æneas, We met by chance; you did not find me here.

Æne. Good, good, my lord; the secrets of nature

Have not more gift in taciturnity. 75
[Exeunt [Troilus and Æneas].]

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Pan. Is 't possible? No sooner got but lost? The devil take Antenor! the young prince will go mad. A plague upon Antenor! I would they had broke's neck!

Cres. How now! what's the matter? Who was here? 81

Pan. Ah, ah!

Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? Where's my lord? Gone! Tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter? 85

Pan. Would I were as deep under the earth as I am above!

Cres. O the gods! what's the matter? 88

Pan. Prithee, get thee in. Would thou hadst ne'er been born! I knew thou wouldst be his death. O, poor gentleman! A plague upon Antenor!

Cres. Good uncle, I beseech you, on my knees I beseech you, what's the matter? 94

Pan. Thou must be gone, wench, thou must be gone; thou art chang'd for Antenor. Thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troilus. 'T will be his death; 't will be his bane; he cannot bear it. 99

Cres. O you immortal gods! I will not go.

Pan. Thou must.

Cres. I will not, uncle. I have forgot my father;

I know no touch of consanguinity;
No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me
As the sweet Troilus. O you gods divine! 105
Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood,

If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and death,

Do to this body what extremes you can;
But the strong base and building of my love
Is as the very centre of the earth, 110
Drawing all things to it. I'll go in and weep.

Pan. Do, do.

Cres. Tear my bright hair and scratch my praised cheeks,
Crack my clear voice with sobs and break my heart

With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy. [Exeunt. 115]

[SCENE III. The same. Street before Pandarus's house.]

Enter PARIS, TROILUS, ÆNEAS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTENOR, and DIOMEDES.

Par. It is great morning, and the hour pre-fix'd

Of her delivery to this valiant Greek Comes fast upon. Good my brother Troilus,
Tell you the lady what she is to do,
And haste her to the purpose.

Tro. Walk into her house.
I'll bring her to the Grecian presently;
And to his hand when I deliver her,
Think it an altar, and thy brother Troilus
A priest there offering to it his own heart. [Exit.]

Par. I know what 't is to love;
And would, as I shall pity, I could help!
Please you walk in, my lords. [Exeunt. 120]

[SCENE IV. The same. Pandarus's house.]

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation?
The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,
And violenteth in a sense as strong
As that which causeth it. How can I moderate it? 5

If I could temporize with my affection
Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,
The like allayment could I give my grief.
My love admits no qualifying dross;

Enter TROILUS.

No more my grief, in such a precious loss. 10
Pan. Here, here, here he comes. Ah, sweet ducks!

Cres. O Troilus! Troilus! [Embracing him.]

Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here! Let me embrace too. "O heart," as the goodly saying is, 15

— O heart, heavy heart,
Why sigh'st thou without breaking?"

where he answers again,

"Because thou canst not ease thy smart 20
By friendship nor by speaking."

There was never a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may live to have need of such a verse. We see it, we see it. How now, lamb? 25

Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strain'd a purity

That the bless'd gods, as angry with my fancy,
More bright in zeal than the devotion which Cold lips blow to their deities, take thee from
me.

Cres. Have the gods envy? 30

Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay; 't is too plain a case.

Cres. And is it true that I must go from Troy?

Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres. What, and from Troilus, too?

Tro. From Troy and Troilus.

Cres. Is it possible? 35

Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by
All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips
Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents
Our lock'd embrasures, strangles our dear vows
Even in the birth of our own labouring
breath. 40

We two, that with so many thousand sighs
Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves
With the rude brevity and discharge of one.
Injurious time now with a robber's haste
Crams his rich thievery up, he knows not how. 45
As many farewells as be stars in heaven,
With distinct breath and consign'd kisses to
them,

He fumbles up into a loose adieu,
And scants us with a single famish'd kiss,
Distasted with the salt of broken tears. 50

Æne. (Within.) My lord, is the lady ready?

Tro. Hark! you are call'd. Some say the Genius so

Cries "come" to him that instantly must die.
Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.

Pan. Where are my tears? Rain, to lay this wind, or my heart will be blown up by the root. [Exit.] 55

Cres. I must then to the Grecians?

Tro. No remedy.

Cres. A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry Greeks!

When shall we see again?

Tro. Hear me, my love. Be thou but true of
heart, — 60

Cres. I true! How now! what wicked deem is this?

Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,
For it is parting from us.

I speak not "be thou true," as fearing thee,
For I will throw my glove to Death himself 65
That there's no maculation in thy heart;
But "be thou true," say I, to fashion in
My sequent protestation; be thou true,
And I will see thee.

Cres. O, you shall be expos'd, my lord, to dangers 70

As infinite as imminent! But I'll be true.

Tro. And I'll grow friend with danger.
Wear this sleeve.

Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see
you?

Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels,
To give these nightly visitation. 75
But yet be true.

Cres. O heavens! "be true" again!

Tro. Hear why I speak it, love.

The Grecian youths are full of quality;
They're loving, well compos'd, with gifts of nature,
Flowing and swelling o'er with arts and exercise. 80

How novelties may move, and parts with person,
Alas, a kind of godly jealousy —

Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous sin —
Makes me afraid.

Cres. O heavens! you love me not.

Tro. Die I a villain, then! 85

In this I do not call your faith in question
So mainly as my merit. I cannot sing,
Nor heel the high lavolt, nor sweeten talk,
Nor play at subtle games; fair virtues all,
To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant: 90

But I can tell that in each grace of these
There lurks a still and dumb-discoursive devil
That tempts most cunningly; but be not tempted.

Cres. Do you think I will?

Tro. No. 95

But something may be done that we will not;
And sometimes we are devils to ourselves,
When we will tempt the frailty of our powers,
Presuming on their changeful potency. 100

Æne. (Within.) Nay, good my lord, —

Tro. Come, kiss; and let us part.

Par. (Within.) Brother Troilus!

Tro. Good brother, come you hither;
And bring Æneas and the Grecian with you.

Cres. My lord, will you be true?

Tro. Who? I? Alas, it is my vice, my fault.
Whiles others fish with craft for great opinion,
I with great truth catch mere simplicity; 105
Whilst some with cunning gild their copper crowns,

With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare.

Enter [ÆNEAS, PARIS, ANTENOR, DEIPHOBUS, and DIOMEDES].

Fear not my truth. The moral of my wit Is "plain and true"; there's all the reach of
it. 110

Welcome, Sir Diomed! Here is the lady
Which for Antenor we deliver you.

At the port, lord, I'll give her to thy hand,
And by the way possess thee what she is.

Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Greek,
If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword, 115
Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe
As Priam is in Ilium.

Dio. Fair Lady Cressid,

So please you, save the thanks this prince expects.

The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek, 120
Pleads your fair usage; and to Diomed

You shall be mistress, and command him wholly.

Tro. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously,

To shame the zeal of my petition to thee
In praising her. I tell thee, lord of Greece, ¹²⁵
She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises
As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant.
I charge thee use her well, even for my charge;
For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not,
Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard,
I'll cut thy throat.

Dio. O, be not mov'd, Prince Troilus.
Let me be privileg'd by my place and message, ¹³²

To be a speaker free. When I am hence,
I'll answer to my lust; and know, my lord,
I'll nothing do on charge. To her own worth ¹³⁵
She shall be prized; but that you say "Be 't
so,"

I'll speak it in my spirit and honour, "No."

Tro. Come, to the port. I'll tell thee,
Diomed,

This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy
head.

Lady, give me your hand, and, as we walk, ¹⁴⁰
To our own selves bend we our needful talk.

[Exeunt Troilus, Cressida, and Diomedes.] Sound trumpet.

Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet.

Æne. How have we spent this morning!
The Prince must think me tardy and remiss,
That swore to ride before him in the field.

Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault. Come, come, to field with him. ^[Exit. 145]

Dei. Let us make ready straight.

Æne. Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity

Let us address to tend on Hector's heels.

The glory of our Troy doth this day lie
On his fair worth and single chivalry. ¹⁵⁰
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE V. The Greek camp. Lists set out.]

Enter AJAX, armed; AGAMEMNON, ACHILLES, PATROCLUS, MENELAUS, ULYSSES, NESTOR, etc.

Agam. Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair,

Anticipating time with starting courage.
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,
Thou dreadful Ajax, that the appalled air
May pierce the head of the great combatant
And hale him hither.

Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there's my purse.
Now crack thy lungs, and split thy brazen pipe.
Blow, villain, till thy spher'd bias cheek
Outswell the colic of puff'd Aquilon.

Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout blood; ¹⁰

Thou blow'st for Hector. ^[Trumpet sounds.]

Ulyss. No trumpet answers.

Achil.

'Tis but early days.

Agam. Is not yond Diomed, with Calchas'
daughter?

Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait;

He rises on the toe. That spirit of his
In aspiration lifts him from the earth. ¹⁵

[Enter DIOMEDES, with CRESSIDA.]

Agam. Is this the Lady Cressid?

Dio. Even she.

Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady.

Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.

Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular. ²⁰
'Twere better she were kiss'd in general.

Nest. And very courtly counsel. I'll begin.
So much for Nestor.

Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips, fair lady.

Achilles bids you welcome. ²⁵

Men. I had good argument for kissing once.

Patr. But that's no argument for kissing
now;

For thus popp'd Paris in his hardiment,
[And parted thus you and your argument.]

Ulyss. O deadly gall, and theme of all our scorns, ³⁰

For which we lose our heads to gild his horns!
Patr. The first was Menelaus' kiss; this,
mine.

Patroclus kisses you.

Men. O, this is trim!

Patr. Paris and I kiss evermore for him.

Men. I'll have my kiss, sir. Lady, by your leave. ³⁵

Cres. In kissing, do you render or receive?

Patr. Both take and give.

Cres. I'll make my match to live,
The kiss you take is better than you give;

Therefore no kiss.

Men. I'll give you boot, I'll give you three for one. ⁴⁰

Cres. You're an odd man; give even, or give none.

Men. An odd man, lady? Every man is odd.

Cres. No, Paris is not; for you know 'tis true
That you are odd, and he is even with you.

Men. You fillip me o' the head.

Cres. No, I'll be sworn.

Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against his horn. ⁴⁵

May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?

Cres. You may.

Ulyss. I do desire it.

Cres. Why, beg, then.

Ulyss. Why then for Venus' sake, give me a kiss.

When Helen is a maid again, and his— ⁵⁰
Cres. I am your debtor, claim it when 'tis due.

Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss of
you.

Dio. Lady, a word. I'll bring you to your father. ^[Exit with Cressida.]

Nest. A woman of quick sense.

Ulyss. Fie, fie upon her!
There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip, ⁵⁵

Nay, her foot speaks; her wanton spirits look
out

At every joint and motive of her body.
O, these encounterers, so glib of tongue,
That give accosting welcome ere it comes,
And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts⁶⁰
To every tickling reader! set them down
For sluttish spoils of opportunity
And daughters of the game.

Enter all of Troy, HECTOR [armed;] PARIS, ÆNEAS, HELENUS, [TROILUS, and other Trojans] with Attendants. Flourish.

All. The Trojans' trumpet.

Agam. Yonder comes the troop.

Æne. Hail, all you state of Greece! What shall be done⁶⁵

To him that victory commands? or do you purpose

A victor shall be known? Will you the knights

Shall to the edge of all extremity

Pursue each other, or shall be divided

By any voice or order of the field?⁷⁰

Hector bade ask.

Agam. Which way would Hector have it?

Æne. He cares not; he'll obey conditions.

Achil. 'Tis done like Hector, but securely done;

A little proudly, and great deal disprizing

The knight oppos'd.

Æne. If not Achilles, sir,⁷⁵

What is your name?

Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.

Æne. Therefore Achilles; but, whate'er, know this:

In the extremity of great and little,

Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector;

The one almost as infinite as all,⁸⁰

The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well,

And that which looks like pride is courtesy.

This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood;

In love whereof, half Hector stays at home;

Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek⁸⁵

This blended knight, half Trojan and half Greek.

Achil. A maiden battle, then? O, I perceive you.

[Re-enter DIOMEDES.]

Agam. Here is Sir Diomed. Go, gentle knight,

Stand by our Ajax. As you and Lord Æneas

Consent upon the order of their fight,⁹⁰

So be it; either to the uttermost,

Or else a breath. The combatants being kin

Half stints their strife before their strokes begin. [Ajax and Hector enter the lists.]

Ulyss. They are oppos'd already.

Agam. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy?⁹⁵

Ulyss. The youngest son of Priam, a true knight,

Not yet mature, yet matchless, firm of word,

Speaking in deeds, and deedless in his tongue;

Not soon provok'd, nor being provok'd soon calm'd;

His heart and hand both open and both free;¹⁰⁰

For what he has he gives, what thinks he shows;

Yet gives he not till judgement guide his bounty,

Nor dignifies an impair thought with breath;

Manly as Hector, but more dangerous;

For Hector in his blaze of wrath subscribes¹⁰⁵

To tender objects, but he in heat of action

Is more vindictive than jealous love.

They call him Troilus, and on him erect

A second hope, as fairly built as Hector.

Thus says Æneas; one that knows the youth¹¹⁰

Even to his inches, and with private soul

Did in great Ilion thus translate him to me.

[Alarum. [Hector and Ajax fight.]]

Agam. They are in action.

Nest. Now, Ajax, hold thine own!

Tro. Hector, thou sleep'st;¹¹⁵

Awake thee!

Agam. His blows are well dispos'd. There,

Ajax!

Dio. You must no more. [Trumpets cease.]

Æne. Princes, enough, so please you.

Ajax. I am not warm yet; let us fight again.

Dio. As Hector pleases.

Hect. Why, then will I no more.

Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son,¹²⁰

A cousin-german to great Priam's seed.

The obligation of our blood forbids

A gory emulation 'twixt us twain.

Were thy commixtion Greek and Trojan so

That thou couldst say, "This hand is Grecian

all,"¹²⁵

And this is Trojan; the sinews of this leg

All Greek, and this all Troy; my mother's

blood

Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister

Bounds in my father's;," by Jove multipo-

tent,

Thou shouldst not bear from me a Greekish

member¹³⁰

Wherein my sword had not impressure made

Of our rank feud; but the just gods gainsay

That any drop thou borrow'dst from thy mother,

My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword

Be drained! Let me embrace thee, Ajax.¹³⁵

By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms!

Hector would have them fall upon him thus.

Cousin, all honour to thee!

Ajax. I thank thee, Hector.

Thou art too gentle and too free a man.

I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence¹⁴⁰

A great addition earned in thy death.

Hect. Not Neoptolemus so mirable,

On whose bright crest Fame with her loud'st

Oyes

Cries, "This is he," could promise to himself

A thought of added honour torn from Hector.

Æne. There is expectance here from both the sides,¹⁴⁵

What further you will do.

Hect. We'll answer it:

The issue is embracement. Ajax, farewell.

Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success—

As sold I have the chance—I would desire¹⁵⁰

My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

Dio. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish, and great Achilles

Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector.

Hect. Æneas, call my brother Troilus to me, And signify this loving interview 158

To the expecters of our Trojan part. Desire them home. Give me thy hand, my cousin.

I will go eat with thee and see your knights.

AGAMEMNON and the rest [come forward].

Ajar. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here.

Hect. The worthiest of them tell me name by name; 160

But for Achilles, mine own searching eyes Shall find him by his large and portly size.

Agam. Worthy of arms! as welcome as to one

That would be rid of such an enemy.

But that's no welcome. Understand more clear, 165

What's past and what's to come is strew'd with husks

And formless ruin of oblivion;

But in this extant moment, faith and troth, Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing, Bids thee, with most divine integrity, 170

From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.

Hect. I thank thee, most imperious Agamemnon.

Agam. [To Troilus.] My well-fam'd lord of Troy, no less to you.

Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting. 174

You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither.

Hect. Who must we answer?

Æne. The noble Menelaus.

Hect. O, you, my lord? By Mars his gauntlet, thanks!

Mock not, that I affect the untraded oath, Your quondam wife swears still by Venus' glove.

She's well, but bade me not commend her to you. 180

Men. Name her not now, sir; she's a deadly theme.

Hect. O, pardon; I offend.

Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee oft,

Labouring for destiny, make cruel way Through ranks of Greekish youth, and I have seen thee, 185

As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed, And seen thee scorning forfeits and subduements,

When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i' the air,

Not letting it decline on the declined, That I have said unto my standers by 190

"Lo, Jupiter is yonder, dealing life!" And I have seen thee pause and take thy breath,

When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee in,

Like an Olympian wrestling. This have I seen;

But this thy countenance, still lock'd in steel, I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire, 196 And once fought with him. He was a soldier good;

But, by great Mars, the captain of us all, Never like thee. Let an old man embrace thee; And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents. 200

Æne. 'Tis the old Nestor.

Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle,

That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with Time.

Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.

Nest. I would my arms could match thee in contention, 205

As they contend with thee in courtesy.

Hect. I would they could.

Nest. Ha!

By this white beard, I'd fight with thee tomorrow.

Well, welcome, welcome!—I have seen the time. 210

Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city stands When we have here her base and pillar by us.

Hect. I know your favour, Lord Ulysses, well.

Ah, sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan dead

Since first I saw yourself and Diomed 215 In Ilion, on your Greekish embassy.

Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue.

My prophecy is but half his journey yet, For yonder walls, that pertly front your town, Yond towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds, 220

Must kiss their own feet.

Hect. I must not believe you.

There they stand yet, and modestly I think The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost A drop of Grecian blood. The end crowns all, And that old common arbitrator, Time, 225 Will one day end it.

Ulyss. So to him we leave it.

Most gentle and most valiant Hector, welcome!

After the general, I beseech you next

To feast with me and see me at my tent.

Achil. I shall forestall thee, Lord Ulysses, thou! 230

Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee; I have with exact view perus'd thee, Hector, And quoted joint by joint.

Hect. Is this Achilles?

Achil. I am Achilles.

Hect. Stand fair, I prithee; let me look on thee. 235

Achil. Behold thy fill.

Hect. Nay, I have done already.

Achil. Thou art too brief. I will the second time,

As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.

Hect. O, like a book of sport thou'lt read me o'er; 239

But there's more in me than thou understand'st. Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye?

Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body

Shall I destroy him, whether there, or there, or there?

That I may give the local wound a name
And make distinct the very breach whereout
Hector's great spirit flew. Answer me, heavens!

Hect. It would discredit the blest gods, proud man,

To answer such a question. Stand again.
Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly
As to prenominate in nice conjecture
Where thou wilt hit me dead?

Achil. I tell thee, yea.

Hect. Wert thou the oracle to tell me so,
I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well;

For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there;

But, by the forge that stithied Mars his helm,
I'll kill thee everywhere, yea, o'er and o'er.
You wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag.
His insolence draws folly from my lips;
But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words,
Or may I never —

Ajax. Do not chafe thee, cousin;
And you, Achilles, let these threats alone,
Till accident or purpose bring you to't.
You may have every day enough of Hector,
If you have stomach. The general state, I fear,
Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him.

Hect. I pray you, let us see you in the field.
We have had pelting wars, since you refus'd
The Grecians' cause.

Achil. Dost thou entreat me, Hector?
To-morrow do I meet thee, fell as death;
To-night all friends.

Hect. Thy hand upon that match.
Agam. First, all you peers of Greece, go to my tent;

There in the full convive you. Afterwards,
As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall Concur together, severally entreat him.
Beat loud the tabourines, let the trumpets blow,

That this great soldier may his welcome know.
[Exeunt [all except Troilus and Ulysses].

Tro. My Lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech you,

In what place of the field doth Calchas keep?

Ulyss. At Menelaus' tent, most princely Troilus.

There Diomed feast with him to-night;
Who neither looks on heaven nor on earth,
But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view
On the fair Cressid.

Tro. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to thee so much,

After we part from Agamemnon's tent,
To bring me thither?

Ulyss. You shall command me, sir.
As gentle tell me, of what honour was
This Cressida in Troy? Had she no lover there
That waits her absence?

Tro. O, sir, to such as boasting show their scars

A mock is due. Will you walk on, my lord?

She was belov'd, she lov'd; she is, and doth:
But still sweet love is food for fortune's tooth.
[Exeunt.]

[ACT V

SCENE I. The Greek camp. Before the tent of Achilles.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. I'll heat his blood with Greekish wine to-night,

Which with my scimitar I'll cool to-morrow.
Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.

Patr. Here comes Thersites.

Enter THERSITES.

Achil. How now, thou core of envy!
Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the news?

Ther. Why, thou picture of what thou seem'st, and idol of idiot-worshippers, here's a letter for thee.

Achil. From whence, fragment?

Ther. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.

Patr. Who keeps the tent now?

Ther. The surgeon's box, or the patient's wound.

Patr. Well said, adversity! and what need these tricks?

Ther. Prithee, be silent, boy; I profit not by thy talk. Thou art thought to be Achilles' male varlet.

Patr. Male varlet, you rogue! What's that?

Ther. Why, his masculine whore. Now, the rotten diseases of the south, guts-griping, ruptures, catarrhs, loads o' gravel i' the back, lethargies, cold palsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of imposthume, sciaticas, limekilns i' the palm, incurable bone-ache, and the rivelled fee-simple of the tetter, take and take again such preposterous discoveries!

Patr. Why, thou damnable box of envy, thou, what mean'st thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I curse thee?

Patr. Why, no, you ruinous butt, you whoreson indistinguishable cur, no.

Ther. No! why art thou then exasperate, thou idle immaterial skein of sleeve-silk, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse, thou? Ah, how the poor world is pest' red with such waterflies, diminutives of nature!

Patr. Out, gall!

Ther. Finch-egg!

Achil. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite

From my great purpose in to-morrow's battle.
Here is a letter from Queen Hecuba,
A token from her daughter, my fair love,
Both taxing me and gaging me to keep
An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it,
Fall Greeks; fall fame; honour or go or stay;
My major vow lies here, this I'll obey.
Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent;

This night in banqueting must all be spent.
Away, Patroclus!

[Exeunt [Achilles and Patroclus].]

Ther. With too much blood and too little brain, these two may run mad; but, if with too much brain and too little blood they do, I'll be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon, an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails; but he has not so much brain as ear-wax: and the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother the bull, the primitive statue and oblique memorial of cuckolds; a thrifty shoeing-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg,—to what form but that he is, should wit larded with malice and malice forced with wit turn him to? To an ass, were nothing; he is both ass and ox: to an ox, were nothing; he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care; but to be Menelaus! I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites; for I care not to be the louse of a lazar, so I were not Menelaus. Hoy-day! spirits and fires!

Enter HECTOR, [TROILUS] AJAX, AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, [MENE LAUS] and DIOMEDES, with lights.

Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis;

Ther. Where we see the light.

Hect. I trouble you. 75

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Re-enter ACHILLES.

Ulyss. Here comes himself to guide you.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector; welcome, Princes all.

Agam. So now, fair Prince of Troy, I bid good night.

Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.

Hect. Thanks and good night to the Greeks' general. 80

Men. Good night, my lord.

Hect. Good night, sweet Lord Menelaus.

Ther. Sweet draught! "Sweet" quoth 'a! Sweet sink, sweet sewer.

Achil. Good night and welcome, both at once, to those

That go or tarry. 85

Agam. Good night.

[Exeunt Agamemnon and Menelaus.]

Achil. Old Nestor tarries, and you too, Diomed,

Keep Hector company an hour or two.

Dio. I cannot, lord; I have important business,

The tide whereof is now. Good night, great Hector. 90

Hect. Give me your hand.

Ulyss. [Aside to Troilus.] Follow his torch; he goes to Calchas' tent.

I'll keep you company.

Tro. Sweet sir, you honour me.

Hect. And so, good night.

[Exit Diomedes; Ulysses and Troilus following.]

Achil. Come, come, enter my tent. 94

[Exeunt Achilles, Hector, Ajax, and Nestor].

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave. I will no more trust him when he leers than I will a serpent when he hisses. He will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brabblers the hound; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it. It is prodigious, there will come some change. The [100] sun borrows of the moon, when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him. They say he keeps a Trojan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas his tent. I'll after. Nothing but lechery! All incontinent varlets! [Exit. 106

[SCENE II. The same. Before Calchas's tent.]

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. What, are you up here, ho? Speak.

Cal. [Within.] Who calls?

Dio. Diomed. Calchas, I think. Where's your daughter?

Cal. [Within.] She comes to you.

Enter TROILUS and ULYSSES [at a distance; after them, THERSITES.]

Ulyss. Stand where the torch may not discover us. 5

Enter CRESSIDA.

Tro. Cressid comes forth to him.

Dio. How now, my charge!

Cres. Now, my sweet guardian! Hark, a word with you. [Whispers.]

Tro. Yea, so familiar!

Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.

Ther. And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff. She's noted. 11

Dio. Will you remember?

Cres. Remember! yes.

Dio. Nay, but do, then;

And let your mind be coupled with your words.

Tro. What should she remember? 16

Ulyss. List.

Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.

Ther. Roguery!

Dio. Nay, then, — 20

Cres. I'll tell you what, —

Dio. Foh, foh! come, tell a pin. You are a forsworn —

Cres. In faith, I cannot. What would you have me do?

Ther. A juggling trick, — to be secretly open.

Dio. What did you swear you would bestow on me? 25

Cres. I prithee, do not hold me to mine oath. Bid me do anything but that, sweet Greek.

Dio. Good night.

Tro. Hold, patience!

Ulyss. How now, Trojan!

Cres. Diomed, — 30

Dio. No, no, good night. I'll be your fool no more.
Tro. Thy better must.
Cres. Hark, one word in your ear.
Tro. O plague and madness!
Ulys. You are moved, Prince. Let us depart, I pray you,
Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself
To wrathful terms. This place is dangerous;
The time right deadly. I beseech you, go. 35
Tro. Behold, I pray you!
Ulys. Nay, good my lord, go off;
You flow to great distraction. Come, my lord.
Tro. I pray thee, stay.
Ulys. You have not patience; come.
Tro. I pray you, stay. By hell and all hell's torments,
I will not speak a word!
Dio. And so, good night.
Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.
Tro. Doth that grieve thee? 45
O withered truth!
Ulys. Why, how now, lord!
Tro. By Jove,
I will be patient.
Cres. Guardian! Why, Greek!
Dio. Foh, foh! adieu; you palter.
Cres. In faith, I do not. Come hither once
again.
Ulys. You shake, my lord, at something.
Will you go? 50
You will break out.
Tro. She strokes his cheek!
Ulys. Come, come.
Tro. Nay, stay; by Jove, I will not speak a
word.
There is between my will and all offences
A guard of patience. Stay a little while. 54
Ther. How the devil Luxury, with his fat rump and potato-finger, tickles these together!
Fry, lechery, fry!
Dio. But will you, then?
Cres. In faith, I will, la; never trust me else.
Dio. Give me some token for the surety of
it. 60
Cres. I'll fetch you one. [Exit.]
Ulys. You have sworn patience.
Tro. Fear me not, sweet lord.
I will not be myself, nor have cognition
Of what I feel. I am all patience.

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Ther. Now the pledge; now, now, now! 65
Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve.
Tro. O beauty! where is thy faith?
Ulys. My lord,—
Tro. I will be patient; outwardly I will.
Cres. You look upon that sleeve; behold it
well.
He lov'd me—O false wench!—Give 't me
again. 70
Dio. Whose was 't?
Cres. It is no matter, now I have 't again.
I will not meet with you to-morrow night.
I prithee, Diomed, visit me no more.
Ther. Now she sharpens. Well said, whetstone! 75

Dio. I shall have it.
Cres. What, this?
Dio. Ay, that.
Cres. O, all you gods! O pretty, pretty pledge!
Thy master now lies thinking in his bed
Of thee and me, and sighs, and takes my glove,
And gives memorial dainty kisses to it, 80
As I kiss thee. Nay, do not snatch it from me.
He that takes that doth take my heart withal.
Dio. I had your heart before, this follows it.
Tro. I did swear patience.
Cres. You shall not have it, Diomed; faith, you shall not. 85
I'll give you something else.
Dio. I will have this. Whose was it?
Cres. It is no matter.
Dio. Come, tell me whose it was.
Cres. 'Twas one's that lov'd me better than you will.
But, now you have it, take it.
Dio. Whose was it? 90
Cres. By all Diana's waiting-women yond,
And by herself, I will not tell you whose.
Dio. To-morrow will I wear it on my helm,
And grieve his spirit that dares not challenge
it.
Tro. Wert thou the devil, and wor'st it on thy horn, 95
It should be challeng'd.
Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past. And yet it is not;
I will not keep my word.
Dio. Why, then, farewell;
Thou never shalt mock Diomed again.
Cres. You shall not go. One cannot speak a
word, 100
But it straight starts you.
Dio. I do not like this fooling.
Ther. Nor I, by Pluto; but that that likes not you pleases me best.
Dio. What, shall I come? The hour?
Cres. Ay, come:—O Jove!—do come.—I shall be plagu'd. 105
Dio. Farewell till then. [Exit Diomedes.]
Cres. Good night. I prithee, come.
Troilus, farewell! one eye yet looks on thee,
But with my heart the other eye doth see.
Ah, poor our sex! this fault in us I find,
The error of our eye directs our mind. 110
What error leads must err; O, then conclude Minds sway'd by eyes are full of turpitude.
[Exit.]
Ther. A proof of strength she could not publish more, faithless
Unless she say, My mind is now turn'd whore.
Ulys. All's done, my lord.
Tro. It is.
Ulys. Why stay we, then?
Tro. To make a recordation to my soul 115
Of every syllable that here was spoke.
But if I tell how these two did co-act, sooth's what Shall I not lie in publishing a truth? we saw & heard
Sith yet there is a credence in my heart, a lies 120
An esperance so obstinately strong,
That doth invert the attest of eyes and ears,
As if those organs had deceptive functions,

Created only to calumniate.

Was Cressid here?

Ulyss. I cannot conjure, Trojan. 125

Tro. She was not, sure.

Ulyss. Most sure she was.

Tro. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness.

Ulyss. Nor mine, my lord. Cressid was here but now.

Tro. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood! Think, we had mothers; do not give advantage To stubborn critics, apt, without a theme, 131 For depravation, to square the general sex By Cressid's rule. Rather think this not Cressid.

Ulyss. What hath she done, Prince, that can soil our mothers?

Tro. Nothing at all, unless that this were she. 135

Ther. Will he swagger himself out on 's own eyes?

Tro. This she? no, this is Diomed's Cressida. If beauty have a soul, this is not she.

If souls guide vows, if vows are sanctimony, If sanctimony be the gods' delight, 140

If there be rule in unity itself, This is not she. O madness of discourse,

That cause sets up, with and against thyself, Bi-fold authority, where reason can revolt

Without perdition, and loss assume all reason Without revolt: this is, and is not, Cressid. 146

Within my soul there doth conduce a fight Of this strange nature, that a thing inseparate

Divides more wider than the sky and earth, And yet the spacious breadth of this division

Admits no orifice for a point as subtle 151 As Ariachne's broken woof to enter.

Instance, O instance! strong as Pluto's gates; Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven.

Instance, O instance! strong as heaven itself; The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd; 156

And with another knot, five-finger-tied, The fractions of her faith, orts of her love,

The fragments, scraps, the bits and greasy relics 159

Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed.

Ulyss. May worthy Troilus be half attached With that which here his passion doth express?

Tro. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged well

In characters as red as Mars his heart Inflam'd with Venus. Never did young man

fancy 165

With so eternal and so fix'd a soul. Hark, Greek: as much as I do Cressid love,

So much by weight hate I her Diomed. That sleeve is mine that he'll bear on his helm.

Were it a casque compos'd by Vulcan's skill, My sword should bite it. Not the dreadful spout 171

Which shipmen do the hurricano call, Constring'd in mass by the almighty sun,

Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear In his descent than shall my prompted sword 175

Falling on Diomed.

Ther. He'll tickle it for his concupy.

Tro. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false!

Let all untruths stand by thy stained name, And they'll seem glorious.

Ulyss. O, contain yourself; Your passion draws ears hither. 181

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. I have been seeking you this hour, my lord.

Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy; Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.

Tro. Have with you, Prince. My courteous lord, adieu. 185

Farewell, revolted fair! and, Diomed, Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head!

Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.

Tro. Accept distracted thanks. 189

[Exeunt Troilus, Æneas, and Ulysses.]

Ther. Would I could meet that rogue Diomed! I would croak like a raven; I would bode, I would bode. Patroclus will give me anything for the intelligence of this whore. The parrot will not do more for an almond than he for a commodious drab. Lechery, lechery; still wars and lechery; nothing else holds fashion. A burning devil take them! [Exit.] 197

[SCENE III. Troy. Before Priam's palace.]

Enter HECTOR and ANDROMACHE.

And. When was my lord so much ungently temper'd

To stop his ears against admonishment? Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.

Hect. You train me to offend you; get you gone.

By all the everlasting gods, I'll go! 5

And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day.

Hect. No more, I say.

Enter CASSANDRA.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector?

And. Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intent.

Consort with me in loud and dear petition, Pursue we him on knees; for I have dream'd

Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night 11 Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.

Cas. O, 't is true.

Hect. Ho! bid my trumpet sound!

Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother.

Hect. Be gone, I say; the gods have heard me swear. 15

Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows.

They are polluted offerings, more abhor'd Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.

And. O, be persuaded! do not count it holy

To hurt by being just. It is as lawful, 20 For we would give much, to use violent thefts, And rob in the behalf of charity.

Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the
vow,
But vows to every purpose must not hold.
Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hect. Hold you still, I say; ²⁵
Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate.
Life every man holds dear; but the brave man
Holds honour far more precious-dear than life.

Enter TROILUS.

How now, young man! mean'st thou to fight
to-day?

And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade.
[Exit Cassandra.]

Hect. No, faith, young Troilus; doff thy harness, youth; ³¹

I am to-day i' the vein of chivalry.
Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong,
And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.
Unarm thee, go, and doubt thou not, brave boy, ³⁵

I'll stand to-day for thee and me and Troy.

Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in
you,

Which better fits a lion than a man.

Hect. What vice is that, good Troilus?
Chide me for it.

Tro. When many times the captive Grecian falls, ⁴⁰

Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword,
You bid them rise, and live.

Hect. O, 't is fair play.

Tro. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector.

Hect. How now! how now!

Tro. For the love of all the gods,
Let's leave the hermit pity with our mothers, ⁴⁵
And when we have our armours buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords,
Spur them to ruthful work, rein them from ruth.

Hect. Fie, savage, fie!

Tro. Hector, then 't is wars.

Hect. Troilus, I would not have you fight today. ⁵⁰

Tro. Who should withhold me?

Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars
Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire;
Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees,
Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears; ⁵⁵
Nor you, my brother, with your true sword drawn,
Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way,
But by my ruin.

Re-enter CASSANDRA, with PRIAM.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him
fast;

He is thy crutch. Now if thou lose thy stay, ⁶⁰
Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,
Fall all together.

Pri. Come, Hector, come, go back.
Thy wife hath dream'd; thy mother hath had visions;

Cassandra doth foresee; and I myself
Am like a prophet suddenly enrap't ⁶⁵
To tell thee that this day is ominous:
Therefore, come back.

Hect. Æneas is a-field;
And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks,
Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.

Pri. Ay, but thou shalt not go.

Hect. I must not break my faith. ⁷¹

You know me dutiful; y therefore, dear sir,
Let me not shame respect; but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voice,
Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam. ⁷⁵

Cas. O Priam, yield not to him!

And. Do not, dear father.

Hect. Andromache, I am offended with you.
Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

[Exit Andromache.]

Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl

Makes all these bodements.

Cas. O, farewell, dear Hector!
Look, how thou diest! look, how thy eye turns pale! ⁸¹

Look, how thy wounds doth bleed at many vents!

Hark, how Troy roars! how Hecuba cries
out!

How poor Andromache shrills her dolour forth!

Behold, distraction, frenzy, and amazement, ⁸⁵

Like witless antics, one another meet,

And all cry, Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector!

Tro. Away! away!

Cas. Farewell; yet, soft! Hector, I take my
leave.

Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive. ⁹⁰

[Exit.]

Hect. You are amaz'd, my liege, at her exclaim.

Go in and cheer the town. We'll forth and fight.

Do deeds of praise and tell you them at night.

Pri. Farewell! The gods with safety stand about thee!

[Exeunt severally Priam and Hector.] Alarum.

Tro. They are at it, hark! Proud Diomed, believe, ⁹⁵

I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve.

Enter PANDARUS.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? Do you hear?

Tro. What now?

Pan. Here's a letter come from yond poor girl.

Tro. Let me read. ¹⁰⁰

Pan. A whoreson tisick, a whoreson rascally tisick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl; and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o' these days; and I have a rheum in mine eyes too, and such an ache in my bones that, unless a man were curs'd, I cannot tell what to think on 't. What says she there? ¹⁰⁷

Tro. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart;

The effect doth operate another way.

[Tearing the letter.]

Go, wind, to wind, there turn and change together. ¹¹⁰

My love with words and errors still she feeds,
But edifies another with her deeds.

Pan. Why, but hear you!

Tro. Hence, broker! lackey! Ignomy and shame

Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name! 115
[Exeunt [severally].]

[SCENE IV. Plains between Troy and the Greek camp.]

Alarum. Enter THERSITES in excursion.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another; I'll go look on. That dissembling abominable varlet, Diomed, has got that same scurvy doting foolish young knave's sleeve of Troy there in his helm. I would fain see them meet, that that same young Trojan ass, [5] that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whoremasterly villain with the sleeve back to the dissembling luxurious drab, of a sleeveless errand. O' the t'other side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals, that [10] stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor, and that same dog-fox, Ulysses, is not prov'd worth a blackberry. They set me up, in policy, that mongrel cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles; and now is the cur Ajax [15] prouder than the cur Achilles, and will not arm to-day; whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion.

Enter DIOMEDES, TROILUS [following].

Soft! here comes sleeve, and the other.

Tro. Fly not; for shouldst thou take the river Styx, 20

I would swim after.

Dio. Thou dost miscall retire.

I do not fly, but advantageous care

Withdrew me from the odds of multitude.

Have at thee! 24

Ther. Hold thy whore, Grecian!—now for thy whore, Trojan!—now the sleeve, now the sleeve! [Exeunt Troilus and Diomedes fighting.]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. What art thou, Greek? Art thou for Hector's match?

Art thou of blood and honour? 29

Ther. No, no, I am a rascal; a scurvy railing knave; a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee; live. [Exit.] 32

Ther. God-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me; but a plague break thy neck for frightening me! What's become of the wenching rogues? I think they have swallowed one another. I would laugh at that miracle; yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself. I'll seek them. [Exit.] 38

[SCENE V. Another part of the plains.]

Enter DIOMEDES and a SERVANT.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse;

Present the fair steed to my lady Cressida.

Fellow, commend my service to her beauty;
Tell her I have chastis'd the amorous Trojan,
And am her knight by proof.

Serv.

I go, my lord. 5
[Exit.]

Enter AGAMEMNON.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamas Hath beat down Menon; bastard Margarelon Hath Doreus prisoner, And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam, Upon the pashed corpses of the kings 10 Epistrophus and Cediüs; Polyxenes is slain, Amphimachus and Thoas deadly hurt, Patroclus ta'en or slain, and Palamedes Sore hurt and bruised. The dreadful Sagittary Appals our numbers. Haste we, Diomed, 15 To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter NESTOR.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles; And bid the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shame. There is a thousand Hectors in the field.

Now here he fights on Galathe his horse, 20 And there lacks work; anon he's there afoot, And there they fly or die, like scaled schools Before the belching whale; then is he yonder, And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge,

Fall down before him like the mower's swath. Here, there, and everywhere, he leaves and takes, 26

Dexterity so obeying appetite

That what he will he does, and does so much

That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss. O, courage, courage, Princes! Great Achilles 30

Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance. Patroclus' wounds have rous'd his drowsy blood,

Together with his mangled Myrmidons, That noseless, handless, hack'd and chipp'd, come to him,

Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend 35 And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd and at it, Roaring for Troilus, who hath done to-day Mad and fantastic execution, Engaging and redeeming of himself With such a careless force and forceless care 40 As if that luck, in very spite of cunning, Bade him win all.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus! thou coward Troilus! [Exit.]

Dio. Ay, there, there.

Nest. So, so, we draw together. [Exit.]

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Where is this Hector? Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face; Know what it is to meet Achilles angry. 46

Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE VI. Another part of the plains.]

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy head!

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. Troilus, I say! where 's Troilus?

Ajax. What wouldst thou?

Dio. I would correct him.

Ajax. Were I the general, thou shouldst have my office
Ere that correction. Troilus, I say! what, Troilus!

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. O traitor Diomed! turn thy false face, thou traitor,
And pay thy life thou ow'st me for my horse!

Dio. Ha, art thou there?

Ajax. I'll fight with him alone. Stand, Diomed.

Dio. He is my prize; I will not look upon.

Tro. Come, both you cogging Greeks; have at you both! [Exeunt [fighting].]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Yea, Troilus? O, well fought, my youngest brother!

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Now do I see thee. Have at thee, Hector!

Hect. Pause, if thou wilt.

Achil. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Trojan. 15

Be happy that my arms are out of use;
My rest and negligence befriends thee now,
But thou anon shalt hear of me again;
Till when, go seek thy fortune. [Exit.]

Hect. Fare thee well:
I would have been much more a fresher man, 20
Had I expected thee. How now, my brother!

Re-enter TROILUS.

Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Æneas! Shall it be? No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven, He shall not carry him; I'll be ta'en too, Or bring him off. Fate, hear me what I say! 25 I reek not though thou end my life to-day. [Exit.]

Enter one in [sumptuous] armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art a goodly mark.

No? Wilt thou not? I like thy armour well; I'll crush it and unlock the rivets all,
But I'll be master of it. Wilt thou not, beast, abide? 30

Why, then fly on, I'll hunt thee for thy hide. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE VII. Another part of the plains.]

Enter ACHILLES, with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me, you my Myrmidons:

Mark what I say. Attend me where I wheel;
Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in breath;

And when I have the bloody Hector found,
Empale him with your weapons round about, 5
In fellest manner execute your aims.
Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings eye;
It is decreed Hector the great must die. 8
[Exeunt.]

Enter MENELAUS and PARIS [fighting: then] THERSITES.

Ther. The cuckold and the cuckold-maker are at it. Now, bull! now, dog! 'Loo, Paris, 'loo! Now my double-henned sparrow! 'Loo, Paris, 'loo! The bull has the game; ware horns, ho! [Exeunt Paris and Menelaus. 12]

Enter Bastard [MARGARELON].

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight.

Ther. What art thou?

Mar. A bastard son of Priam's. 15

Ther. I am a bastard too; I love bastards. I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valour, in everything illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and wherefore should one bastard? Take heed, 20 the quarrel 's most ominous to us. If the son of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgement. Farewell, bastard.

Mar. The devil take thee, coward! [Exeunt.]

[SCENE VIII. Another part of the plains.]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Most putrefied core, so fair without,
Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life.
Now is my day's work done; I'll take good breath.

Rest, sword; thou hast thy fill of blood and death.

[Puts off his helmet and hangs his shield behind him.]

Enter ACHILLES and Myrmidons.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set, 5

How ugly night comes breathing at his heels.
Even with the vail and darning of the sun,
To close the day up, Hector's life is done.

Hect. I am unarm'd; forego this vantage, Greek.

Achil. Strike, fellows, strike; this is the man I seek. [Hector falls.] 10

So, Ilion, fall thou! Now, Troy, sink down!
Here lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone.
On, Myrmidons, and cry you all amain,
"Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain!"

[A retreat [sounded].]

Hark! a retreat upon our Grecian part. 15

Myr. The Trojan trumpets sound the like, my lord.

Achil. The dragon wing of night o'erspreads the earth,
And, stickler-like, the armies separates.
My half-suppl'd sword, that frankly would have fed,

Pleas'd with this dainty bait, thus goes to bed.
 [Sheathes his sword.]
 Come, tie his body to my horse's tail; 21
 Along the field I will the Trojan trail.
 [Exeunt.]

[SCENE IX. Another part of the plains.]

Sound retreat. Shout.

Enter AGAMEMNON, AJAX, MENELAUS, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and the rest, marching.

Agam. Hark! hark! what shout is that?

Nest. Peace, drums!

Soldiers. [Within.] Achilles! Achilles!
 Hector's slain! Achilles!

Dio. The bruit is, Hector's slain, and by Achilles.

Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be; 5
 Great Hector was a man as good as he.

Agam. March patiently along; let one be sent

To pray Achilles see us at our tent.
 If in his death the gods have us befriended,
 Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended. [Exeunt.] 10

[SCENE X. Another part of the plains.]

Enter ÆNEAS, PARIS, ANTENOR, and DEIPHOBUS.

Æne. Stand, ho! yet are we masters of the field.

Never go home; here starve we out the night.

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. Hector is slain.

All. Hector! the gods forbid!

Tro. He's dead; and at the murderer's horse's tail,

In beastly sort, dragg'd through the shameful field. 5

Frown on you heavens, effect your rage with speed!

Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at Troy!

I say, at once let your brief plagues be mercy,
 And linger not our sure destructions on!

Æne. My lord, you do discomfort all the host. 10

Tro. You understand me not that tell me so.

I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death,
 But dare all imminence that gods and men

Address their dangers in. Hector is gone.

Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba? 15

Let him that will a screech-owl aye be call'd,

Go in to Troy, and say there, "Hector's dead!"

There is a word will Priam turn to stone,
 Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives,
 Cold statues of the youth, and, in a word, 20
 Scare Troy out of itself. But, march away.

Hector is dead; there is no more to say.

Stay yet. You vile abominable tents,
 Thus proudly pight upon our Phrygian plains,
 Let Titan rise as early as he dare. 25

I'll through and through you! and, thou great-siz'd coward,

No space of earth shall sunder our two hates.
 I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still,
 That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy's thoughts.

Strike a free march to Troy! With comfort go; 30

Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.
 [Exeunt Æneas and Trojans.]

[As TROILUS is going out] enter [from the other side] PANDARUS.

Pan. But hear you, hear you!

Tro. Hence, broker! lackey! Ignomy and shame

Pursue thy life, and live aye with thy name! 34
 [Exit.]

Pan. A goodly medicine for mine aching bones! O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despis'd! O traitors and bawds, how earnestly are you set a-work, and how ill requited! Why should our endeavour be so desir'd and the performance so loath'd? What verse for it? What instance for it? Let me see: 41

"Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,
 Till he hath lost his honey and his sting;
 And being once subdu'd in armed tail,
 Sweet honey and sweet notes together fail." 45

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths:

As many as be here of Pandar's hall,
 Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall;
 Or if you cannot weep, yet give some groans, 50
 Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.
 Brethren and sisters of the hold-door trade,
 Some two months hence my will shall here be made.

It should be now, but that my fear is this,
 Some galled goose of Winchester would hiss. 55
 Till then I'll sweat and seek about for eases,
 And at that time bequeath you my diseases.

[Exit]

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL

THE present text is based upon that of the First Folio, no earlier edition having been found. This lack of an early quarto is the more to be regretted, since the corruptions of the existing text are unusually frequent and hopeless.

There is no certain external evidence of date. In Meres's list there occurs the title Love's Labour's Won, which on the whole fits this play better than it fits any other. The only serious rival is The Taming of the Shrew, in which, though Petruchio wins Katherine as the result of his labors, the labors are hardly to be called love's. On the other hand, Helena's efforts and success stand in sufficiently clear contrast to the ineffectiveness of the King and his lords in Love's Labour's Lost to give point to the parallelism in title. This identification would place the play before 1598; and there are parts of the play, notably the rimed passages, which suggest Shakespeare's earliest manner in comedy. As against this, there is much which points to a later date. The subtlety of the psychology, especially in the heroine, the frequency of passages of condensed expression, and the general sombreness of tone, all tend to associate the play with the productions of the early years of the seventeenth century. Such resemblances, however, as that between the Countess's advice to Bertram (i. i. 73-79) and Polonius's maxims to Laertes, and that between the devices resorted to by Helena and by Mariana in Measure for Measure, however interesting, are of little force in arguing questions of date. In view of these two sets of considerations, it is plausibly conjectured that Shakespeare may have written an early play with the title or sub-title of Love's Labour's Won, and have re-cast it in his maturity. It is to be observed that this implies a much more thorough re-writing than Love's Labour's Lost, for example, was subjected to; so that, on this hypothesis, the play as we have it belongs rather to the period about 1602 than to the early nineties of the sixteenth century.

The source of the main plot is the ninth Novel of the third Day of Boccaccio's Decameron, a story which was most probably known to Shakespeare in the translation by Painter in his Palace of Pleasure (1566). The chief features of this tale are indicated in the argument prefixed by Painter: "Giletta, a Phisicians daughter of Narbon, healed the Frenche Kyng of a Fistula, for reward wherof she demaunded Beltramo Count of Rossiglione to husband. The Counte beyng married againste his will, for despite fled to Florence and loved an other. Giletta his wife, by pollicie founde meanes to lye with her husbände, in place of his lover; and was begotten with child of two soones: whiche knowen to her husbände, he received her againe, and afterwarde she lived in great honor and felicitie." To the characters involved here Shakespeare added the Countess, Lafeu, the clown, the steward, and Parolles; but the most essential change made by him was in the interpretation of the character of the heroine. The Countess and Lafeu, delightful and individual as they are in themselves, are dramatically important mainly for the effect produced on us by their warm appreciation of Helena. To render sympathetic a character playing such a rôle as Helena's was exceedingly difficult, and it is achieved by Shakespeare by an insistence on her poverty (Boccaccio makes her rich), her humility, and the pathos of a passion more fatal than wilful. Parolles, besides affording occasion for the low comedy scenes at the French court and in the Florentine camp — all of which are of Shakespeare's invention — helps to define the character of Bertram. The weakness of the hero implied in this indiscriminating association with a worthless braggart, and his boggling and lying in the elaborate dénouement created by Shakespeare in v. iii., result in a degradation of his character which, if meant to throw our sympathy by contrast on Helena, comes perilously near overshooting the mark.

ACT I

SCENE I. [Rousillon. The Count's palace.]

Enter young BERTRAM, Count of Rousillon, his mother [the COUNTESS OF ROUSSILLON], HELENA, and LORD LAFEU, all in black.

Count. In delivering my son from me, I bury a second husband.

Ber. And I in going, madam, weep o'er my father's death anew; but I must attend his Majesty's command, to whom I am now in ward, evermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the King a husband, madam; you, sir, a father. He that so generally is at all times good must of necessity hold his virtue to you, whose worthiness would stir it up where it wanted rather than lack it where there is such abundance.

Count. What hope is there of his Majesty's amendment?

Laf. He hath abandon'd his physicians, madam, under whose practices he hath persecuted time with hope, and finds no other advantage in the process but only the losing of hope by time.

Count. This young gentlewoman had a father, — O, that "had"! how sad a passage 'tis! — whose skill was almost as great as his honesty; had it stretch'd so far, would have made nature immortal, and death should have play for lack of work. Would, for the King's sake, he were living! I think it would be the death of the King's disease.

Laf. How call'd you the man you speak of, madam?

Count. He was famous, sir, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so, — Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent indeed, madam. The King very lately spoke of him admiringly and mourningly. He was skilful enough to have liv'd still, if knowledge could be set up against mortality.

Ber. What is it, my good lord, the King languishes of?

Laf. A fistula, my lord.

Ber. I heard not of it before.

Laf. I would it were not notorious. Was this gentlewoman the daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Count. His sole child, my lord, and bequeathed to my overlooking. I have those hopes of her good that her education provides. Her dispositions she inherits, which makes fair gifts fairer; for where an unclean mind carries virtuous qualities, there commendations go with pity: they are virtues and traitors too. In her they are the better for their simpleness; she derives her honesty and achieves her goodness.

Laf. Your commendations, madam, get from her tears.

Count. 'Tis the best brine a maiden can season her praise in. The remembrance of her father never approaches her heart but the tyranny of her sorrows takes all livelihood from her cheek. No more of this, Helena; go to, no more, lest it be rather thought you affect a sorrow than to have —

Hel. I do affect a sorrow indeed, but I have it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, excessive grief the enemy to the living.

Count. If the living be enemy to the grief, the excess makes it soon mortal.

Ber. Madam, I desire your holy wishes.

Laf. How understand we that?

Count. Be thou blest, Bertram, and succeed thy father

In manners, as in shape! Thy blood and virtue Contend for empire in thee, and thy goodness Share with thy birthright! Love all, trust a few,

Do wrong to none. Be able for thine enemy Rather in power than use, and keep thy friend Under thy own life's key. Be check'd for silence,

But never tax'd for speech. What Heaven more will,

That thee may furnish and my prayers pluck down,
 Fall on thy head! Farewell! My lord,
 'T is an unseason'd courtier; good my lord, 80
 Advise him.

Laf. He cannot want the best
 That shall attend his love.

Count. Heaven bless him! Farewell, Bertram. [Exit.]

Ber. [To Helena.] The best wishes that can be forg'd in your thoughts be servants to you! Be comfortable to my mother, your mistress, and make much of her. 87

Laf. Farewell, pretty lady. You must hold the credit of your father.

[Exeunt Bertram and Lafew.]

Hel. O, were that all! I think not on my father, 90
 And these great tears grace his remembrance more

Than those I shed for him. What was he like? I have forgot him. My imagination Carries no favour in 't but Bertram's. I am undone! There is no living, none, 95
 If Bertram be away. 'T were all one That I should love a bright particular star And think to wed it, he is so above me. In his bright radiance and collateral light Must I be comforted, not in his sphere. 100
 The ambition in my love thus plagues itself. The hind that would be mated by the lion Must die for love. 'T was pretty, though a plague,

To see him every hour; to sit and draw His arch'd brows, his hawking eye, his curls, 105
 In our heart's table; heart too capable Of every line and trick of his sweet favour. But now he's gone, and my idolatrous fancy Must sanctify his reliques. Who comes here?

Enter PAROLLES.

[Aside.] One that goes with him. I love him for his sake; 110

And yet I know him a notorious liar, Think him a great way fool, solely a coward; Yet these fix'd evils sit so fit in him, That they take place, when virtue's steely bones

Looks bleak i' the cold wind. Withal, full oft we see 115

Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.

Par. Save you, fair queen!

Hel. And you, monarch!

Par. No.

Hel. And no. 120

Par. Are you meditating on virginity?

Hel. Ay. You have some stain of soldier in you; let me ask you a question. Man is enemy to virginity; how may we barricado it against him?

Par. Keep him out. 125

Hel. But he assails; and our virginity, though valiant, in the defence yet is weak. Unfold to us some warlike resistance.

Par. There is none. Man, sitting down before you, will undermine you and blow you up. 130

Hel. Bless our poor virginity from underminers and blowers up! Is there no military policy, how virgins might blow up men?

Par. Virginity being blown down, man will quicklier be blown up. Marry, in blowing him down again, with the breach yourselves 135 made, you lose your city. It is not politic in the commonwealth of nature to preserve virginity. Loss of virginity is rational increase, and there was never virgin got till virginity was first lost. That you were made of is metal 140 to make virgins. Virginity by being once lost may be ten times found; by being ever kept, it is ever lost. 'T is too cold a companion; away with 't!

Hel. I will stand for 't a little, though therefore I die a virgin. 145

Par. There's little can be said in 't; 't is against the rule of nature. To speak on the part of virginity is to accuse your mothers, which is most infallible disobedience. He that hangs himself is a virgin. Virginity 150 murders itself, and should be buried in high-ways out of all sanctified limit, as a desperate offends against nature. Virginity breeds mites, much like a cheese; consumes itself to the very paring, and so dies with feeding his 155 own stomach. Besides, virginity is peevish, proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most inhibited sin in the canon. Keep it not; you cannot choose but lose by 't. Out with 't! Within ten year it will make itself two, which is a goodly increase, and the principal itself 160 not much the worse. Away with 't!

Hel. How might one do, sir, to lose it to her own liking? 164

Par. Let me see. Marry, ill, to like him that ne'er it likes. 'T is a commodity will lose the gloss with lying; the longer kept, the less worth. Off with 't while 't is vendible; answer the time of request. Virginity, like an old courtier, wears her cap out of fashion; richly suited, but unsuitable,—just like the 170 brooch and the tooth-pick, which wear not now. Your date is better in your pie and your porridge than in your cheek; and your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French wither'd pears, it looks ill, it eats drily; 175 marry, 't is a wither'd pear; it was formerly better; marry, yet 't is a wither'd pear. Will you anything with it?

Hel. Not my virginity yet . . . There shall your master have a thousand loves, A mother and a mistress and a friend, 181 A phoenix, captain, and an enemy, A guide, a goddess, and a sovereign, A counsellor, a traitress, and a dear; His humble ambition, proud humility, 185 His jarring concord, and his discord dulcet, His faith, his sweet disaster; with a world Of pretty, fond, adoptious christendoms, That blinking Cupid gossips. Now shall he — I know not what he shall. God send him well! 190 The court's a learning place, and he is one —

Par. What one, i' faith?

Hel. That I wish well. 'T is pity —

Par. What's pity?

Hel. That wishing well had not a body in 't, ¹⁰⁸
Which might be felt; that we, the poorer born,
Whose baser stars do shut us up in wishes,
Might with effects of them follow our friends,
And show what we alone must think, which never Returns us thanks. 300

Enter PAGE.

Page. Monsieur Parolles, my lord calls for you. [Exit.]

Par. Little Helen, farewell. If I can remember thee, I will think of thee at court.

Hel. Monsieur Parolles, you were born under a charitable star. 205

Par. Under Mars, I.

Hel. I especially think, under Mars.

Par. Why under Mars?

Hel. The wars hath so kept you under that you must needs be born under Mars. 210

Par. When he was predominant.

Hel. When he was retrograde, I think, rather.

Par. Why think you so?

Hel. You go so much backward when you fight.

Par. That's for advantage. 215

Hel. So is running away, when fear proposes the safety. But the composition that your valour and fear makes in you is a virtue of a good wing, and I like the wear well. 219

Par. I am so full of businesses, I cannot answer thee acutely. I will return perfect courtier; in the which, my instruction shall serve to naturalize thee, so thou wilt be capable of a courtier's counsel and understand what advice shall thrust upon thee; else thou diest in thine unthriftfulness, and thine ignorance ²²⁵ makes thee away. Farewell! When thou hast leisure, say thy prayers; when thou hast none, remember thy friends. Get thee a good husband, and use him as he uses thee. So, farewell. [Exit.] 230

Hel. Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie,
Which we ascribe to heaven. The fated sky
Gives us free scope, only doth backward pull
Our slow designs when we ourselves are dull.
What power is it which mounts my love so high, 235

That makes me see, and cannot feed mine eye?
The mightiest space in fortune native brings
To join like likes and kiss like native things.
Impossible be strange attempts to those 239
That weigh their pains in sense and do suppose
What hath been cannot be. Who ever strove
To show her merit, that did miss her love?
The King's disease — my project may deceive
me,

But my intents are fix'd and will not leave me. [Exit.]

[SCENE II. Paris. The King's palace.]

Flourish of cornets. Enter the KING OF FRANCE, with letters, [LORDS] and divers attendants.

King. The Florentines and Senoys are by the ears,

Have fought with equal fortune, and continue
A braving war.

1. Lord. So 't is reported, sir.

King. Nay, 't is most credible. We here receive it

A certainty, vouch'd from our cousin Austria, ⁵
With caution that the Florentine will move us
For speedy aid; wherein our dearest friend
Prejudicates the business, and would seem
To have us make denial.

1. Lord. His love and wisdom,
Approv'd so to your Majesty, may plead ¹⁰
For amplest credence.

King. He hath arm'd our answer,
And Florence is denied before he comes.

Yet, for our gentlemen that mean to see
The Tuscan service, freely have they leave
To stand on either part.

2. Lord. It well may serve ¹⁵
A nursery to our gentry, who are sick
For breathing and exploit.

King. What's he comes here?

Enter BERTRAM, LAFEU, and PAROLLES.

1. Lord. It is the Count Rousillon, my good
lord,
Young Bertram.

King. Youth, thou bear'st thy father's face.
Frank nature, rather curious than in haste, ²⁰ Hath well compos'd thee. Thy father's moral parts

Mayst thou inherit too! Welcome to Paris.

Ber. My thanks and duty are your Majesty's.

King. I would I had that corporal soundness
now,

As when thy father and myself in friendship ²⁵
First tried our soldiership! He did look far Into the service of the time, and was Disciplin'd of the bravest. He lasted long;
But on us both did haggish age steal on
And wore us out of act. It much repairs me ³⁰
To talk of your good father. In his youth
He had the wit which I can well observe
To-day in our young lords; but they may jest
Till their own scorn return to them unmoted
Ere they can hide their levity in honour ³⁵
So like a courtier. Contempt nor bitterness
Were in his pride or sharpness; if they were,
His equal had awak'd them, and his honour,
Clock to itself, knew the true minute when Exception bid him speak, and at this time ⁴⁰
His tongue obey'd his hand. Who were below
him

He us'd as creatures of another place,
And bow'd his eminent top to their low ranks,
Making them proud of his humility,
In their poor praise he humbled. Such a man ⁴⁵
Might be a copy to these younger times;
Which, followed well, would demonstrate them
now

But goes backward.

Ber. His good remembrance, sir,
Lies richer in your thoughts than on his tomb.
So in proof lives not his epitaph ⁵⁰
As in your royal speech.

King. Would I were with him! He would always say —

Methinks I hear him now! His plausible words
He scatter'd not in ears, but grafted them,
To grow there and to bear, — "Let me not live," — 55

Thus his good melancholy oft began,
On the catastrophe and heel of pastime,
When it was out, — "Let me not live," quoth
he,

"After my flame lacks oil, to be the snuff
Of younger spirits, whose apprehensive senses
All but new things disdain; whose judgements
are 61

Mere fathers of their garments; whose constancies

Expire before their fashions." This he wish'd;
I after him do after him wish too,
Since I nor wax nor honey can bring home, 65
I quickly were dissolved from my hive,
To give some labourers room.

2. Lord. You're loved, sir;
They that least lend it you shall lack you first.

King. I fill a place, I know 't. How long is 't,
Count,

Since the physician at your father's died? 70
He was much fam'd.

Ber. Some six months since, my lord.
King. If he were living, I would try him yet.
Lend me an arm; the rest have worn me out
With several applications. Nature and sickness Debate it at their leisure. Welcome, Count; 75
My son's no dearer.

Ber. Thank your Majesty.
[Exeunt. Flourish.]

[SCENE III. Rousillon. The Count's palace.]

Enter COUNTESS, STEWARD, and CLOWN.

Count. I will now hear. What say you of this gentlewoman?

Stew. Madam, the care I have had to even your content, I wish might be found in the calendar of my past endeavours; for then we wound our modesty and make foul the clearness of our deservings, when of ourselves we publish them. 7

Count. What does this knave here? Get you gone, sirrah. The complaints I have heard of you I do not all believe. 'Tis my slowness that I do not, for I know you lack not folly to commit them, and have ability enough to make such knaveries yours. 13

Clo. 'Tis not unknown to you, madam, I am a poor fellow.

Count. Well, sir. 16

Clo. No, madam, 't is not so well that I am poor, though many of the rich are damn'd;
but, if I may have your ladyship's good will to go to the world, Isbel the woman and I will do as we may. 31

Count. Wilt thou needs be a beggar?

Clo. I do beg your good will in this case.

Count. In what case? 34

Clo. In Isbel's case and mine own. Service is no heritage; and I think I shall never have the blessing of God till I have issue o' my body;
for they say barnes are blessings.

Count. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt marry. 39

Clo. My poor body, madam, requires it. I am driven on by the flesh; and he must needs go that the devil drives.

Count. Is this all your worship's reason?

Clo. Faith, madam, I have other holy reasons, such as they are. 58

Count. May the world know them?

Clo. I have been, madam, a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are; and, indeed, I do marry that I may repent.

Count. Thy marriage, sooner than thy wickedness. 61

Clo. I am out o' friends, madam; and I hope to have friends for my wife's sake.

Count. Such friends are thine enemies, knave. 64

Clo. Y' are shallow, madam, in great friends; for the knaves come to do that for me which I am weary of. He that ears my land spares my team and gives me leave to in the crop. If I be his cuckold, he's my drudge. He that comforts my wife is the cherisher of my flesh and blood; he that cherishes my flesh and blood 50 loves my flesh and blood; he that loves my flesh and blood is my friend; ergo, he that kisses my wife is my friend. If men could be contented to be what they are, there were no fear in marriage; for young Charbon the 55 puritan and old Poyssam the papist, howsom-e'er their hearts are sever'd in religion, their heads are both one; they may joul horns together, like any deer i' the herd.

Count. Wilt thou ever be a foul-mouth'd and calumnious knave? 61

Clo. A prophet I, madam; and I speak the truth the next way:

"For I the ballad will repeat,
Which men full true shall find: 65
Your marriage comes by destiny,
Your cuckoo sings by kind."

Count. Get you gone, sir; I'll talk with you more anon.

Stew. May it please you, madam, that he bid
Helen come to you. Of her I am to speak. 71

Count. Sirrah, tell my gentlewoman I would speak with her; Helen, I mean.

Clo. [Sings.]

"Was this fair face the cause, quoth she,
Why the Grecians sacked Troy? 75
Fond done, done fond, . . .

Was this King Priam's joy?
With that she sighed as she stood,
With that she sighed as she stood,
And gave this sentence then; 80
Among nine bad if one be good,
Among nine bad if one be good,
There's yet one good in ten."

Count. What, one good in ten? You corrupt the song, sirrah. 85

Clo. One good woman in ten, madam; which is a purifying o' the song. Would God would serve the world so all the year! We'd find no fault with the tithe-woman, if I were the parson. One in ten, quoth 'a! An we might have a good woman born but o'er every ⁹⁰ blazing star, or at an earthquake, 't would mend the lottery well; a man may draw his heart out, ere 'a pluck one.

Count. You'll be gone, sir knave, and do as I command you. ⁹⁵

Clo. That man should be at woman's command, and yet no hurt done! Though honesty be no puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the surplice of humility over the black gown of a big heart. I am going, forsooth. The business is for Helen to come hither. ¹⁰¹

[Exit.]

Count. Well, now.

Stew. I know, madam, you love your gentlewoman entirely. ¹⁰⁴

Count. Faith, I do. Her father bequeath'd her to me; and she herself, without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much love as she finds. There is more owing her than is paid, and more shall be paid her than she'll demand. ¹⁰⁹

Stew. Madam, I was very late more near her than I think she wish'd me. Alone she was, and did communicate to herself her own words to her own ears; she thought, I dare vow for her, they touch'd not any stranger sense. Her matter was, she lov'd your son. Fortune, she said, was no goddess, that had put such ¹¹⁵ difference betwixt their two estates; Love no god, that would not extend his might, only where qualities were level; [Diana no] queen of virgins, that would suffer her poor knight surpris'd, without rescue in the first assault ¹²⁰ or ransom afterward. This she deliver'd in the most bitter touch of sorrow that e'er I heard virgin exclaim in; which I held my duty speedily to acquaint you withal; sithence, in the loss that may happen, it concerns you something to know it. ¹²⁶

Count. You have discharg'd this honestly; keep it to yourself. Many likelihoods inform'd me of this before, which hung so tottering in the balance that I could neither believe nor misdoubt. Pray you, leave me. Stall this in your bosom; and I thank you for your honest care. I will speak with you further anon. ¹³³

[Exit Steward.]

Enter HELENA.

Even so it was with me when I was young.

If ever we are nature's, these are ours. This thorn ¹³⁵

Doth to our rose of youth rightly belong;

Our blood to us, this to our blood is born.

It is the show and seal of nature's truth,

Where love's strong passion is impress'd in youth.

By our remembrances of days foregone, ¹⁴⁰

Such were our faults, or then we thought them none.

Her eye is sick on 't; I observe her now.

Hel. What is your pleasure, madam?

Count. You know, Helen, I am a mother to you.

Hel. Mine honourable mistress.

Count. Nay, a mother. ¹⁴⁵

Why not a mother? When I said "a mother,"

Methought you saw a serpent. What's in mother,

That you start at it? I say, I am your mother;

And put you in the catalogue of those

That were enwombed mine. 'T is often seen ¹⁵⁰

Adoption strives with nature, and choice breeds

A native slip to us from foreign seeds.

You ne'er oppress'd me with a mother's groan,

Yet I express to you a mother's care.

God's mercy, maiden! does it curd thy blood ¹⁵⁵

To say I am thy mother? What's the matter,

That this distemp'ered messenger of wet,

The many-colour'd Iris, rounds thine eye?

Why? That you are my daughter?

Hel. That I am not.

Count. I say, I am your mother.

Hel. Pardon, madam;

The Count Rousillon cannot be my brother. ¹⁶¹

I am from humble, he from honoured name;

No note upon my parents, his all noble.

My master, my dear lord he is; and I

His servant live, and will his vassal die. ¹⁶⁵

He must not be my brother.

Count. Nor I your mother?

Hel. You are my mother, madam; would you were, —

So that my lord your son were not my brother, —

Indeed my mother! Or were you both our mothers,

I care no more for than I do for heaven, ¹⁷⁰

So I were not his sister. Can't no other,

But, I your daughter, he must be my brother?

Count. Yes, Helen, you might be my daughter-in-law.

God shield you mean it not! daughter and mother

So strive upon your pulse. What, pale again? ¹⁷⁵

My fear hath catch'd your fondness. Now I see

The mystery of your loneliness, and find

Your salt tears' head. Now to all sense 't is gross

You love my son. Invention is asham'd,

Against the proclamation of thy passion, ¹⁸⁰

To say thou dost not: therefore tell me true;

But tell me then, 't is so; for, look, thy cheeks

Confess it, the one to the other; and thine eyes

See it so grossly shown in thy behaviours

That in their kind they speak it. Only sin ¹⁸⁵

And hellish obstinacy tie thy tongue,

That truth should be suspected. Speak, is 't so?

If it be so, you have wound a goodly clew;

If it be not, forswear 't. Howe'er, I charge thee,

As heaven shall work in me for thine avail, ¹⁹⁰

To tell me truly.

Hel. Good madam, pardon me!

Count. Do you love my son?

Hel. Your pardon, noble mistress!

Count. Love you my son?

Hel. Do not you love him, madam?

Count. Go not about; my love hath in 't a bond,

Whereof the world takes note. Come, come, disclose. ¹⁹⁵

The state of your affection ; for your passions
Have to the full appeach'd.

Hel. Then, I confess,
Here on my knee, before high heaven and you,
That before you, and next unto high heaven,
I love your son. ²⁰⁰

My friends were poor, but honest ; so 's my love.
Be not offended ; for it hurts not him
That he is lov'd of me. I follow him not
By any token of presumptuous suit ;
Nor would I have him till I do deserve him ; ²⁰⁵
Yet never know how that desert should be.
I know I love in vain, strive against hope ;
Yet in this captious and intenable sieve

I still pour in the waters of my love
And lack not to lose still. Thus, Indian-like, ²¹⁰
Religious in mine error, I adore

The sun, that looks upon his worshipper,
But knows of him no more. My dearest madam,
Let not your hate encounter with my love
For loving where you do ; but if yourself, ²¹⁵
Whose aged honour cites a virtuous youth,
Did ever in so true a flame of liking

Wish chastely and love dearly, that your Dian
Was both herself and love, O, then, give pity
To her, whose state is such that cannot choose ²²⁰

But lend and give where she is sure to lose ;
That seeks not to find that her search implies,
But riddle-like lives sweetly where she dies !

Count. Had you not lately an intent, — speak truly, — ²²⁴

To go to Paris ?

Hel. Madam, I had.
Count. Wherefore ? Tell true.

Hel. I will tell truth ; by grace itself I swear.
You know my father left me some prescriptions
Of rare and prov'd effects, such as his reading
And manifest experience had collected
For general sovereignty ; and that he will'd me
In heedfull'st reservation to bestow them, ²³¹
As notes, whose faculties inclusive were
More than they were in note. Amongst the rest,
There is a remedy approv'd set down,
To cure the desperate languishings whereof ²³⁵
The King is render'd lost.

Count. This was your motive
For Paris, was it ? Speak.

Hel. My lord your son made me to think of
this,

Else Paris and the medicine and the King
Had from the conversation of my thoughts ²⁴⁰
Haply been absent then.

Count. But think you, Helen,
If you should tender your supposed aid,
He would receive it ? He and his physicians
Are of a mind ; he, that they cannot help him, They, that they cannot help. How shall they credit ²⁴⁵

A poor unlearned virgin, when the schools,
Embowell'd of their doctrine, have left off
The danger to itself ?

Hel. There's something in 't,
More than my father's skill, which was the greatest

Of his profession, that his good receipt ²⁵⁰
Shall for my legacy be sanctified

By the luckiest stars in heaven ; and, would your honour

But give me leave to try success, I'd venture
The well-lost life of mine on his Grace's cure
By such a day and hour.

Count. Dost thou believe 't ?

Hel. Ay, madam, knowingly. ²⁵⁵

Count. Why, Helen, thou shalt have my leave and love,

Means and attendants, and my loving greetings
To those of mine in court. I'll stay at home
And pray God's blessing into thy attempt. ²⁶⁰
Be gone to-morrow ; and be sure of this,
What I can help thee to thou shalt not miss.

[Exit.]

ACT II

[SCENE I. Paris. The King's palace.]

Flourish of cornets. Enter the KING, with divers young LORDS taking leave for the Florentine war ; BERTRAM and PAROLLES.

King. Farewell, young lords ! these warlike principles

Do not throw from you ; and you, my lords,
farewell !

Share the advice betwixt you. If both gain all,
The gift doth stretch itself as 't is receiv'd,
And is enough for both.

1. Lord. 'T is our hope, sir, ⁵

After well ent'red soldiers, to return
And find your Grace in health.

King. No, no, it cannot be ; and yet my heart
Will not confess he owes the malady
That doth my life besiege. Farewell, young lords ! ¹⁰

Whether I live or die, be you the sons
Of worthy Frenchmen. Let higher Italy, —
Those bated that inherit but the fall
Of the last monarchy, — see that you come
Not to woo honour, but to wed it. When ¹⁵
The bravest questant shrinks, find what you
seek,

That fame may cry you loud. I say, farewell.

2. Lord. Health, at your bidding, serve your Majesty !

King. Those girls of Italy, take heed of
them.

They say our French lack language to deny ²⁰
If they demand. Beware of being captives
Before you serve.

Both. Our hearts receive your warnings.

King. Farewell. Come hither to me.

[Exit, attended.]

1. Lord. O my sweet lord, that you will stay behind us !

Par. 'T is not his fault, the spark.

2. Lord. O, 't is brave wars !
Par. Most admirable ! I have seen those wars. ²⁵

Ber. I am commanded here, and kept a coil with

"Too young" and "the next year" and "'t is too early."

Par. An thy mind stand to 't, boy, steal away bravely.

Ber. I shall stay here the forehorse to a smock, 50
Creaking my shoes on the plain masonry,
Till honour be bought up and no sword worn
But one to dance with! By heaven, I'll steal away.

1. Lord. There's honour in the theft.
Par. Commit it, Count.

2. Lord. I am your accessory; and so farewell. 55

Ber. I grow to you, and our parting is a tortur'd body.

1. Lord. Farewell, captain.

2. Lord. Sweet Monsieur Parolles! 59

Par. Noble heroes, my sword and yours are kin. Good sparks and lustrous, a word, good metals: you shall find in the regiment of the Spinii our Captain Spurio, with his cicatrice, an emblem of war, here on his sinister cheek, — it was this very sword entrench'd it; — say to him, I live; and observe his reports for me. 46

1. Lord. We shall, noble captain.

[Exeunt Lords.]

Par. Mars dote on you for his novices! What wilt ye do?

Ber. Stay, the King! 60

[Re-enter the KING.]

Par. [To Ber.] Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble lords; you have restrain'd yourself within the list of too cold an adieu. Be more expressive to them; for they wear themselves in the cap of the time, there do muster true gait, eat, speak, and move [55 under the influence of the most receiv'd star; and though the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed. After them, and take a more dilated farewell.

Ber. And I will do so. 60

Par. Worthy fellows; and like to prove most sinewy swordmen.

[Exeunt [Bertram and Parolles].]

Enter LAFEU.

Laf. [Kneeling.] Pardon, my lord, for me and for my tidings.

King. I'll fee thee to stand up.

Laf. Then here's a man stands, that has brought his pardon. 65

I would you had kneel'd, my lord, to ask me mercy,

And that at my bidding you could so stand up.

King. I would I had, so I had broke thy pate,

And ask'd thee mercy for 't.

Laf. Good faith, across; but, my good lord, 't is thus: 70

Will you be cur'd of your infirmity?

King. No.

Laf. O, will you eat no grapes, my royal fox? Yes, but you will my noble grapes, an if My royal fox could reach them. I have seen a medicine 75

That's able to breathe life into a stone,
Quicken a rock, and make you dance canary
With spritely fire and motion; whose simple touch

Is powerful to araise King Pepin, nay,
To give great Charlemain a pen in 's hand 80
And write to her a love-line.

King.

Why, Doctor She! My lord, there's one arriv'd,

If you will see her. Now, by my faith and honour,

If seriously I may convey my thoughts
In this my light deliverance, I have spoke 85
With one that, in her sex, her years, profession,
Wisdom, and constancy, hath amaz'd me more Than I dare blame my weakness. Will you see her, —

For that is her demand, — and know her business?

That done, laugh well at me.

King.

Now, good Lafeu,

Bring in the admiration, that we with thee 91
May spend our wonder too, or take off thine
By wondering how thou took'st it.

Laf.

Nay, I'll fit you,

And not be all day neither. [Exit.]

King. Thus he his special nothing ever prologues. 95

[Re-enter LAFEU.]

Laf. Nay, come your ways.

Enter HELENA.

King.

This haste hath wings indeed.

Laf. Nay, come your ways.

This is his Majesty; say your mind to him.
A traitor you do look like, but such traitors 99
His Majesty seldom fears. I am Cressid's uncle,
That dare leave two together; fare you well. [Exit.]

King. Now, fair one, does your business follow us?

Hel. Ay, my good lord.

Gerard de Narbon was my father;
In what he did profess, well found.

King.

I knew him.

Hel. The rather will I spare my praises towards him; 100

Knowing him is enough. On's bed of death
Many receipts he gave me; chiefly one,
Which, as the dearest issue of his practice,
And of his old experience the only darling, 110
He bade me store up, as a triple eye,
Safer than mine own two, more dear. I have so;
And, hearing your high Majesty is touch'd
With that malignant cause wherein the honour
Of my dear father's gift stands chief in power,
I come to tender it and my appliance 115
With all bound humbleness.

King.

We thank you, maiden;

But may not be so credulous of cure,
When our most learned doctors leave us, and
The congregated college have concluded 120
That labouring art can never ransom Nature
From her inaidable estate; I say we must not
So stain our judgement or corrupt our hope,
To prostitute our past-cure malady
To empirics, or to disserve so 125
Our great self and our credit, to esteem
A senseless help when help past sense we deem.

Hel. My duty then shall pay me for my pains.
I will no more enforce mine office on you ;
Humbly entreating from your royal thoughts
A modest one, to bear me back again. 151

King. I cannot give thee less, to be call'd grateful.

Thou thought'st to help me, and such thanks I give

As one near death to those that wish him live ;
But what at full I know, thou know'st no part,
I knowing all my peril, thou no art. 156

Hel. What I can do can do no hurt to try,
Since you set up your rest 'gainst remedy.
He that of greatest works is finisher

Off does them by the weakest minister : 140
So holy writ in babes hath judgement shown,
When judges have been babes ; great floods have flown

From simple sources, and great seas have dried When miracles have by the greatest been denied.

Off expectation fails, and most oft there 145
Where most it promises ; and oft it hits
Where hope is coldest and despair most fits.

King. I must not hear thee ; fare thee well, kind maid !

Thy pains not us'd must by thyself be paid. 148
Proffers not took reap thanks for their reward.

Hel. Inspired merit so by breath is barr'd,
It is not so with Him that all things knows
As 'tis with us that square our guess by shows ;
But most it is presumption in us when

The help of Heaven we count the act of men.
Dear sir, to my endeavours give consent ; 155
Of Heaven, not me, make an experiment.
I am not an impostor that proclaim

Myself against the level of mine aim ;
But know I think and think I know most sure
My art is not past power nor you past cure. 161

King. Art thou so confident ? Within what space

Hop'st thou my cure ?
Hel. The great'st grace lending grace,
Ere twice the horses of the sun shall bring

Their fiery torcher his diurnal ring, 165
Ere twice in murk and accidental damp
Moist Hesperus hath quench'd her sleepy lamp,
Or four and twenty times the pilot's glass

Hath told the thievish minutes how they pass,
What is infirm from your sound parts shall fly,
Health shall live free and sickness freely die.

King. Upon thy certainty and confidence 172
What dar'st thou venture ?

Hel. Tax of impudence,
A trumpet's boldness, a divulged shame,
Traduc'd by odious ballads, my maiden's

name 175
Sear'd otherwise ; nay, worse of worst extended,
With vilest torture let my life be ended.

King. Methinks in thee some blessed spirit doth speak

His powerful sound within an organ weak ;
And what impossibility would slay 180
In common sense, sense saves another way.
Thy life is dear : for all that life can rate

Worth name of life in thee hath estimate,—
Youth, beauty, wisdom, courage, all

That happiness and prime can happy call : 185
Thou thus to hazard needs must intimate
Skill infinite or monstrous desperate.
Sweet practiser, thy physic I will try,
That ministers thine own death if I die.

Hel. If I break time, or flinch in property
Of what I spoke, unpitied let me die, 191
And well deserv'd. Not helping, death's my fee ;

But, if I help, what do you promise me ?
King. Make thy demand.

Hel. But will you make it even ?
King. Ay, by my sceptre and my hopes of
heaven. 195

Hel. Then shalt thou give me with thy kingly hand

What husband in thy power I will command ;
Exempted be from me the arrogance
To choose from forth the royal blood of France,
My low and humble name to propagate 200
With any branch or image of thy state ;
But such a one, thy vassal, whom I know

Is free for me to ask, thee to bestow.
King. Here is my hand ; the premises observ'd,

Thy will by my performance shall be serv'd. 205
So make the choice of thy own time, for I,
Thy resolv'd patient, on thee still rely.
More should I question thee, and more I must,—

Though more to know could not be more to trust, —
From whence thou cam'st, how tended on ; but rest 210
Unquestion'd welcome and undoubted blest.
Give me some help here, ho ! If thou proceed
As high as word, my deed shall match thy deed. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. Rousillon. The Count's palace.]
Enter COUNTESS and CLOWN.

Count. Come on, sir ; I shall now put you to the height of your breeding.

Clow. I will show myself highly fed and lowly taught. I know my business is but to the court. 4

Count. To the court ! Why, what place make you special, when you put off that with such contempt ? But to the court !

Clow. Truly, madam, if God have lent a man any manners, he may easily put it off at court.
He that cannot make a leg, put off's cap, kiss his hand and say nothing, has neither leg, 10 hands, lip, nor cap ; and indeed such a fellow, to say precisely, were not for the court. But for me, I have an answer will serve all men.

Count. Marry, that's a bountiful answer that fits all questions. 16

Clow. It is like a barber's chair that fits all buttocks, the pin-buttock, the quatch-buttock, the brawn buttock, or any buttock.

Count. Will your answer serve fit to all questions ? 21

Clow. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an attorney, as your French crown for your taffeta punk, as Tib's rush for Tom's forefinger, as a pancake for Shrove Tuesday, a morris for Mayday, as the nail to his hole, [25] the cuckold to his horn, as a scolding quean to a wrangling knave, as the nun's lip to the friar's mouth, nay, as the pudding to his skin.

Count. Have you, I say, an answer of such fitness for all questions? 31

Clo. From below your duke to beneath your constable, it will fit any question.

Count. It must be an answer of most monstrous size that must fit all demands. 35

Clo. But a trifle neither, in good faith, if the learned should speak truth of it. Here it is, and all that belongs to 't. Ask me if I am a courtier: it shall do you no harm to learn. 39

Count. To be young again, if we could, I will be a fool in question, hoping to be the wiser by your answer. I pray you, sir, are you a courtier?

Clo. O Lord, sir!—There's a simple putting off. More, more, a hundred of them. 44

Count. Sir, I am a poor friend of yours, that loves you.

Clo. O Lord, sir!—Thick, thick, spare not me.

Count. I think, sir, you can eat none of this homely meat. 49

Clo. O Lord, sir!—Nay, put me to 't, I warrant you.

Count. You were lately whipp'd, sir, as I think.

Clo. O Lord, sir!—Spare not me. 53

Count. Do you cry, "O Lord, sir!" at your whipping, and "spare not me"? Indeed your "O Lord, sir!" is very sequent to your whipping; you would answer very well to a whipping, if you were but bound to 't. 58

Clo. I ne'er had worse luck in my life in my "O Lord, sir!" I see things may serve long, but not serve ever.

Count. I play the noble housewife with the time,

To entertain 't so merrily with a fool. 63

Clo. O Lord, sir!—Why, there 't serves well again.

Count. An end, sir. To your business! Give Helen this,

And urge her to a present answer back.
Commend me to my kinsmen and my son.
This is not much.

Clo. Not much commendation to them. 70

Count. Not much employment for you. You understand me?

Clo. Most fruitfully; I am there before my legs.

Count. Haste you again. [Exeunt [severally].]

[SCENE III. Paris. The King's palace.]

Enter BERTRAM, LAFEU, and PAROLLES.

Laf. They say miracles are past; and we have our philosophical persons, to make modern and familiar, things supernatural and causeless. Hence is it that we make trifles of terrors, ensconcing ourselves into seeming knowledge, when we should submit ourselves to an unknown fear. 8

Par. Why, 't is the rarest argument of wonder that hath shot out in our latter times.

Ber. And so 't is.

Laf. To be relinquish'd of the artists,— 10

Par. So I say; both of Galen and Paracelsus.

Laf. Of all the learned and authentic fellows,—

Par. Right; so I say. 14

Laf. That gave him out incurable,—

Par. Why, there 't is; so say I too.

Laf. Not to be help'd,—

Par. Right; as 't were a man assured of a—

Laf. Uncertain life, and sure death. 20

Par. Just, you say well; so would I have said.

Laf. I may truly say, it is a novelty to the world.

Par. It is, indeed; if you will have it in showing, you shall read it in—what do ye call there? 26

Laf. A showing of a heavenly effect in an earthly actor.

Par. That 's it; I would have said the very same.

Laf. Why, your Dauphin is not lustier. 'Fore me, I speak in respect— 32

Par. Nay, 't is strange, 't is very strange, that is the brief and the tedious of it; and he's of a most facinorous spirit that will not acknowledge it to be the—

Laf. Very hand of Heaven.

Par. Ay, so I say. 38

Laf. In a most weak—

Par. And debile minister, great power, great transcendence; which should, indeed, give us a further use to be made than alone the recovery of the King, as to be—

Laf. Generally thankful. 48

Enter KING, HELENA, and Attendants.

Par. I would have said it; you say well. Here comes the King.

Laf. Lustig, as the Dutchman says. I'll like a maid the better, whilst I have a tooth in my head. Why, he's able to lead her a coranto.

Par. Mort du vinaigre! is not this Helen? 50

Laf. 'Fore God, I think so.

King. Go, call before me all the lords in court. Sit, my preserver, by thy patient's side; And with this healthful hand, whose banish'd sense

Thou hast repeal'd, a second time receive 55
The confirmation of my promis'd gift,
Which but attends thy naming.

Enter three or four LORDS.

Fair maid, send forth thine eye. This youthful parcel

Of noble bachelors stand at my bestowing,
O'er whom both sovereign power and father's voice 60

I have to use. Thy frank election make;
Thou hast power to choose, and they none to forsake.

Hel. To each of you one fair and virtuous mistress
Fall, when Love please! Marry, to each but one!

Laf. I'd give bay Curtal and his furniture,
My mouth no more were broken than these boys', 66

And writ as little beard.

King. Peruse them well.

Not one of those but had a noble father.

Hel. Gentlemen,
Heaven hath through me restor'd the King to health. 70

All. We understand it, and thank Heaven for you.

Hel. I am a simple maid, and therein wealthiest,

That I protest I simply am a maid.

Please it your Majesty, I have done already.

The blushes in my cheeks thus whisper me, 75
"We blush that thou shouldst choose; but, be refus'd,

Let the white death sit on thy cheek for ever,
We'll ne'er come there again."

King. Make choice and see,
Who shuns thy love shuns all his love in me.

Hel. Now, Dian, from thy altar do I fly, 80

And to imperial Love, that god most high,
Do my sighs stream. Sir, will you hear my suit?

1. Lord. And grant it.

Hel. Thanks, sir; all the rest is mute.

Laf. I had rather be in this choice than throw ames-ace for my life. 85

Hel. The honour, sir, that flames in your fair eyes,

Before I speak, too threateningly replies.

Love make your fortunes twenty times above
Her that so wishes and her humble love!

2. Lord. No better, if you please.

Hel. My wish receive,

Which great Love grant! and so, I take my
leave. 91

Laf. Do all they deny her? An they were sons of mine, I'd have them whipp'd; or I would send them to the Turk, to make eunuchs
of.

Hel. Be not afraid that I your hand should take;

I'll never do you wrong for your own sake. 96

Blessing upon your vows! and in your bed
Find fairer fortune, if you ever wed!

Laf. These boys are boys of ice, they'll none have her. Sure, they are bastards to the English; the French ne'er got 'em. 101

Hel. You are too young, too happy, and too
good,

To make yourself a son out of my blood.

4. Lord. Fair one, I think not so. 104

Laf. There's one grape yet; I am sure thy father drunk wine:—but if thou be'st not an ass, I am a youth of fourteen. I have known thees already.

Hel. [To Bertram.] I dare not say I take you; but I give

Me and my service, ever whilst I live, 110
Into your guiding power. This is the man.

King. Why, then, young Bertram, take her;
she's thy wife.

Ber. My wife, my liege! I shall beseech your Highness,

In such a business give me leave to use
The help of mine own eyes.

King. Know'st thou not, Bertram, 114
What she has done for me?

Ber. Yes, my good lord;
But never hope to know why I should marry
her.

King. Thou know'st she has rais'd me from my sickly bed.

Ber. But follows it, my lord, to bring me
down

Must answer for your raising? I know her
well; 120

She had her breeding at my father's charge.
A poor physician's daughter my wife! Disdain
Rather corrupt me ever!

King. 'Tis only tittle thou disdain'st in her,
the which

I can build up. Strange is it that our bloods, 125
Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together,

Would quite confound distinction, yet stand off
In differences so mighty. If she be

All that is virtuous, save what thou dislik'st,
A poor physician's daughter, thou dislik'st 130
Of virtue for the name. But do not so.

From lowest place when virtuous things proceed,

The place is dignified by the doer's deed.
Where great additions swell's, and virtue none,

It is a dropis'd honour. Good alone 135
Is good, without a name. Vileness is so;

The property by what it is should go,
Not by the title. She is young, wise, fair;

In these to nature she's immediate heir,
And these breed honour. That is honour's scorn,

Which challenges itself as honour's born 141
And is not like the sire. Honours thrive,

When rather from our acts we them derive
Than our foregoers. The mere word's a slave

Debauch'd on every tomb, on every grave 145
A lying trophy, and as oft is dumb

Where dust and damn'd oblivion is the tomb
Of honour'd bones indeed. What should be said?

If thou canst like this creature as a maid,
I can create the rest. Virtue and she 150

Is her own dower; honour and wealth from
me.

Ber. I cannot love her, nor will strive to do't.

King. Thou wrong'st thyself, if thou shouldst strive to choose.

Hel. That you are well restor'd, my lord,
I'm glad.

Let the rest go. 155

King. My honour's at the stake; which to defeat,

I must produce my power. Here, take her
hand,

Proud scornful boy, unworthy this good gift;
That dost in vile misprision shackle up

My love and her desert; that canst not dream,
We, poisoning us in her defective scale, 160

Shall weigh thee to the beam, that wilt not
know,

It is in us to plant thine honour where We please to have it grow. Check thy contempt;

Obeys our will, which travails in thy good; 155
Believe not thy disdain, but presently
Do thine own fortunes that obedient right
Which both thy duty owes and our power claims;

Or I will throw thee from my care for ever
Into the staggerers and the careless lapse 170
Of youth and ignorance; both my revenge and hate

Loosing upon thee, in the name of justice,
Without all terms of pity. Speak; thine answer.

Ber. Pardon, my gracious lord; for I submit
My fancy to your eyes. When I consider 175
What great creation and what dole of honour Flies where you bid it, I find that she, which late

Was in my nobler thoughts most base, is now
The praised of the King; who, so ennobled,
Is as 't were born so.

King. Take her by the hand, 180
And tell her she is thine; to whom I promise
A counterpoise, if not to thy estate
A balance more replete.

Ber. I take her hand.
King. Good fortune and the favour of the King

Smile upon this contract; whose ceremony 185
Shall seem expedient on the now-born brief,
And be perform'd to-night. The solemn feast
Shall more attend upon the coming space,
Expecting absent friends. As thou lov'st her,
Thy love's to me religious; else, does err. 190

[Exeunt all but Lafew and Parolles, who stay behind, commenting of this wedding.]

Laf. [Advancing.] Do you hear, monsieur?
A word with you.

Par. Your pleasure, sir?
Laf. Your lord and master did well to make his recantation. 195

Par. Recantation! My lord! My master!
Laf. Ay; is it not a language I speak?

Par. A most harsh one, and not to be understood without bloody succeeding. My master!

Laf. Are you companion to the Count Rousillon? 201

Par. To any count, to all counts, to what is
man.

Laf. To what is count's man. Count's master is of another style. 205

Par. You are too old, sir; let it satisfy you, you are too old.

Laf. I must tell thee, sirrah, I write man;
to which title age cannot bring thee. 209

Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.
Laf. I did think thee, for two ordinaries, to be a pretty wise fellow. Thou didst make tolerable vent of thy travel; it might pass: yet the scarfs and the bannerets about thee did manifoldly dissuade me from believing thee a vessel of too great a burden. I have now 215 found thee. When I lose thee again, I care not; yet art thou good for nothing but taking up, and that thou'rt scarce worth.

Par. Hadst thou not the privilege of antiquity upon thee, — 221

Laf. Do not plunge thyself too far in anger, lest thou hasten thy trial; which if — Lord have mercy on thee for a hen! So, my good window of lattice, fare thee well! Thy easement I need not open, for I look through thee.
Give me thy hand. 227

Par. My lord, you give me most egregious indignity.

Laf. Ay, with all my heart; and thou art worthy of it. 231

Par. I have not, my lord, deserv'd it.

Laf. Yes, good faith, every dram of it; and I will not bate thee a scruple.

Par. Well, I shall be wiser. 235

Laf. Ev'n as soon as thou canst, for thou hast to pull at a smack o' the contrary. If ever thou be'st bound in thy scarf and beaten, thou shalt find what it is to be proud of thy bondage. I have a desire to hold my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge, that I may say in the default, he is a man I know. 242

Par. My lord, you do me most insupportable vexation.

Laf. I would it were hell-pains for thy sake, and my poor doing eternal; for doing I am past, as I will by thee, in what motion age will give me leave. [Exit.] 248

Par. Well, thou hast a son shall take this disgrace off me, scurvy, old, filthy, scurvy lord!
Well, I must be patient; there is no fettering of authority. I'll beat him, by my life, if I can meet him with any convenience, an he were double and double a lord. I'll have no more pity of his age than I would have of — I'll beat him, an if I could but meet him again. 255

Re-enter LAFEU.

Laf. Sirrah, your lord and master's married;
there's news for you. You have a new mistress.

Par. I most unfeignedly beseech your lordship to make some reservation of your wrongs.
He is my good lord; whom I serve above is my master. 261

Laf. Who? God?
Par. Ay, sir.

Laf. The devil it is that's thy master. Why dost thou garter up thy arms o' this fashion?
Dost make hose of thy sleeves? Do other servants so? Thou wert best set thy lower 266 part where thy nose stands. By mine honour, if I were but two hours younger, I'd beat thee.
Methinks, thou art a general offence, and every man should beat thee. I think thou wast created for men to breathe themselves upon
thee. 272

Par. This is hard and undeserved measure,
my lord.

Laf. Go to, sir; you were beaten in Italy 275 for picking a kernel out of a pomegranate. You are a vagabond and no true traveller. You are more saucy with lords and honourable personages than the commission of your birth and virtue gives you heraldry. You are not worth another word, else I'd call you knave. I leave
you. [Exit.] 281

Re-enter BERTRAM.

Par. Good, very good ; it is so-then. Good, very good ; let it be conceal'd awhile.

Ber. Undone, and forfeited to cares for ever !

Par. What's the matter, sweetheart ? 285

Ber. Although before the solemn priest I have sworn,
I will not bed her.

Par. What, what, sweetheart ?

Ber. O my Parolles, they have married me !
I'll to the Tuscan wars, and never bed her, 290

Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits

The tread of a man's foot. To the wars !

Ber. There's letters from my mother ; what the import is, I know not yet.

Par. Ay, that would be known. To the wars, my boy, to the wars ! 295

He wears his honour in a box unseen,
That hugs his kicky-wicky here at home,
Spending his manly marrow in her arms,
Which should sustain the bound and high curvet

Of Mars's fiery steed. To other regions ! 300

France is a stable, we that dwell in 't jades,
Therefore, to the war !

Ber. It shall be so. I'll send her to my house,

Acquaint my mother with my hate to her,
And wherefore I am fled ; write to the King 305

That which I durst not speak. His present gift
Shall furnish me to those Italian fields

Where noble fellows strike. War is no strife
To the dark house and the detested wife.

Par. Will this capriccio hold in thee ? Art sure ?

Ber. Go with me to my chamber, and advise me. 311

I'll send her straight away. To-morrow
I'll to the wars, she to her single sorrow.

Par. Why, these balls bound ; there's noise in it. 'Tis hard !

A young man married is a man that's marr'd ; 315

Therefore away, and leave her bravely ; go.
The King has done you wrong ; but, hush,
'tis so. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. Paris. The King's palace.]Enter HELENA and CLOWN.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly. Is she well ?

Clo. She is not well, but yet she has her health. She's very merry, but yet she is not well ; but thanks be given, she's very well and wants nothing i' the world ; but yet she is not well. 5

Hel. If she be very well, what does she ail, that she's not very well ?

Clo. Truly, she's very well indeed, but for two things.

Hel. What two things ? 10

Clo. One, that she's not in heaven, whither God send her quickly ! the other, that she's in earth, from whence God send her quickly !

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. Bless you, my fortunate lady !

Hel. I hope, sir, I have your good will to have mine own good fortunes. 15

Par. You had my prayers to lead them on ; and to keep them on, have them still. O, my knave, how does my old lady ?

Clo. So that you had her wrinkles and I her money, I would she did as you say. 21

Par. Why, I say nothing.

Clo. Marry, you are the wiser man ; for many a man's tongue shakes out his master's undoing. To say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to be a great part of your title ; which is within a very little of nothing. 27

Par. Away ! thou'rt a knave.

Clo. You should have said, sir, before a knave thou'rt a knave ; that's, before me thou'rt a knave. This had been truth, sir. 31

Par. Go to, thou art a witty fool ; I have found thee.

Clo. Did you find me in yourself, sir, or were you taught to find me ? The search, sir, was profitable ; and much fool may you 35 find in you, even to the world's pleasure and the increase of laughter.

Par. A good knave, i' faith, and well fed. Madam, my lord will go away to-night ; 40
A very serious business calls on him.

The great prerogative and rite of love,
Which, as your due, time claims, he does acknowledge ;

But puts it off to a compell'd restraint ;
Whose want, and whose delay, is strew'd with sweets, 45

Which they distil now in the curbed time,
To make the coming hour o'erflow with joy
And pleasure drown the brim.

Hel. What's his will else ?

Par. That you will take your instant leave o' the King,
And make this haste as your own good proceeding, 50

Strength'n'd with what apology you think
May make it probable need.

Hel. What more commands he ?

Par. That, having this obtain'd, you presently

Attend his further pleasure.

Hel. In everything I wait upon his will. 55

Par. I shall report it so. [Exit Parolles.]

Hel. I pray you.
Come, sirrah. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE V. Paris. The King's palace.]Enter LAFEU and BERTRAM.

Laf. But I hope your lordship thinks not him a soldier.

Ber. Yes, my lord, and of very valiant approval.

Laf. You have it from his own deliverance.

Ber. And by other warranted testimony. 4

Laf. Then my dial goes not true. I took this lark for a bunting.

Ber. I do assure you, my lord, he is very great in knowledge and accordingly valiant. ⁹

Laf. I have then sinn'd against his experience and transgress'd against his valour; and my state that way is dangerous, since I cannot yet find in my heart to repent. Here he comes. I pray you, make us friends; I will pursue the amity. ¹⁵

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. [To Bertram.] These things shall be done, sir.

Laf. Pray you, sir, who's his tailor?

Par. Sir?

Laf. O, I know him well, I, sir; he, sir, 's a good workman, a very good tailor. ²¹

Ber. [Aside to Par.] Is she gone to the King?

Par. She is.

Ber. Will she away to-night?

Par. As you'll have her. ²⁵

Ber. I have writ my letters, casketed my treasure,

Given order for our horses; and to-night, When I should take possession of the bride, End ere I do begin. ²⁹

Laf. A good traveller is something at the latter end of a dinner; but one that lies three thirds and uses a known truth to pass a thousand nothings with, should be once heard and thrice beaten. God save you, captain. ³⁴

Ber. Is there any unkindness between my lord and you, monsieur?

Par. I know not how I have deserved to run into my lord's displeasure. ³⁸

Laf. You have made shift to run into 't, boots and spurs and all, like him that leap'd into the custard; and out of it you'll run again, rather than suffer question for your residence.

Ber. It may be you have mistaken him, my lord. ⁴⁴

Laf. And shall do so ever, though I took him at 's prayers. Fare you well, my lord; and believe this of me, there can be no kernel in this light nut: the soul of this man is his clothes. Trust him not in matter of heavy consequence; I have kept of them tame, and know their natures. Farewell, monsieur! I have spoken ⁵⁰ better of you than you have or will to deserve at my hand; but we must do good against evil. [Exit.]

Par. An idle lord, I swear.

Ber. I think so. ⁵⁵

Par. Why, do you not know him?

Ber. Yes, I do know him well, and common speech

Gives him a worthy pass. Here comes my clog.

Enter HELENA.

Hel. I have, sir, as I was commanded from you,

Spoke with the King and have procur'd his leave ⁶⁰

For present parting; only he desires Some private speech with you.

Ber. I shall obey his will. You must not marvel, Helen, at my course, Which holds not colour with the time, nor does

The ministration and required office ⁶⁵
On my particular. Prepar'd I was not For such a business; therefore am I found So much unsettled. This drives me to entreat you

That presently you take your way for home, And rather muse than ask why I entreat you; ⁷⁰ For my respects are better than they seem, And my appointments have in them a need Greater than shows itself at the first view To you that know them not. This to my mother: [Giving a letter.]

'T will be two days ere I shall see you, so I leave you to your wisdom. ⁷⁵

Hel. Sir, I can nothing say,

But that I am your most obedient servant, —

Ber. Come, come, no more of that.

Hel. And ever shall

With true observance seek to eke out that Wherein toward me my homely stars have fail'd ⁸⁰

To equal my great fortune.

Ber. Let that go.

My haste is very great. Farewell; hie home.

Hel. Pray, sir, your pardon.

Ber. Well, what would you say?

Hel. I am not worthy of the wealth I owe, Nor dare I say 't is mine, and yet it is; ⁸⁵

But, like a timorous thief, most fain would steal What law does vouch mine own.

Ber. What would you have?

Hel. Something; and scarce so much. Nothing, indeed.

I would not tell you what I would, my lord. Faith, yes! ⁹⁰

Strangers and foes do sunder, and not kiss.

Ber. I pray you, stay not, but in haste to horse.

Hel. I shall not break your bidding, good my lord.

Ber. Where are my other men?

Hel. Monsieur, farewell! [Exit.] ⁹⁴

Ber. Go thou toward home, where I will never come

Whilst I can shake my sword or hear the drum. Away, and for our flight.

Par. Bravely, coragio! [Exeunt.]

ACT III

[SCENE I. Florence. The Duke's palace.]

Flourish. Enter the DUKE OF FLORENCE, the two French LORDS, with a troop of soldiers.

Duke. So that from point to point now have you heard

The fundamental reasons of this war, Whose great decision hath much blood let forth And more thirsts after.

1. Lord. Holy seems the quarrel Upon your Grace's part; black and fearful ⁹⁵ On the opposer.

Duke. Therefore we marvel much our cousin France

Would in so just a business shut his bosom Against our borrowing prayers.

1. Lord. Good my lord,
The reasons of our state I cannot yield 10
But like a common and an outward man
That the great figure of a council frames
By self-unable motion; therefore dare not Say what I think of it, since I have found Myself in my uncertain grounds to fail 15
As often as I guess'd.

Duke. Be it his pleasure.
2. Lord. But I am sure the younger of our nature,
That surfeit on their ease, will day by day
Come here for physic.

Duke. Welcome shall they be;
And all the honours that can fly from us 20
Shall on them settle. — You know your places
well;
When better fall, for your avails they fell.
To-morrow to the field. [Flourish. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. Rousillon. The Count's palace.]

Enter COUNTESS and CLOWN.

Count. It hath happen'd all as I would have had it, save that he comes not along with her.

Clo. By my troth, I take my young lord to be a very melancholy man.

Count. By what observance, I pray you? 5

Clo. Why, he will look upon his boot and sing; mend the ruff and sing; ask questions and sing; pick his teeth and sing. I know a man that had this trick of melancholy sold a goodly manor for a song. 10

Count. Let me see what he writes, and when he means to come. [Opening a letter.]

Clo. I have no mind to Isbel since I was at court. Our old ling and our Isbels o' the country are nothing like your old ling and your Is-bels o' the court. The brains of my Cupid's 15 knock'd out, and I begin to love, as an old man loves money, with no stomach.

Count. What have we here?
Clo. E'en that you have there. [Exit. 20

[Count. Reads] a letter. "I have sent you a daughter-in-law; she hath recovered the King, and undone me. I have wedded her, not bedded her; and sworn to make the 'not' eternal.
You shall hear I am run away: know it before the report come. If there be breadth enough 25 in the world, I will hold a long distance. My duty to you.

Your unfortunate son,
BERTRAM."

This is not well, rash and unbridled boy, 30
To fly the favours of so good a king,
To pluck his indignation on thy head
By the misprising of a maid too virtuous
For the contempt of empire.

Re-enter CLOWN.

Clo. O madam, yonder is heavy news within between two soldiers and my young lady! 35

Count. What is the matter?

Clo. Nay, there is some comfort in the news, some comfort. Your son will not be kill'd so soon as I thought he would.

Count. Why should he be kill'd? 41

Clo. So say I, madam, if he run away, as I hear he does. The danger is in standing to 't.
That's the loss of men, though it be the getting of children. Here they come will tell you more; for my part, I only hear your son was run away. [Exit. 44

Enter HELENA and the two French LORDS.

1. Lord. Save you, good madam.

Hel. Madam, my lord is gone, for ever gone.

2. Lord. Do not say so.

Count. Think upon patience, pray you.
Gentlemen, 48

I have felt so many quirks of joy and grief,
That the first face of neither, on the start,
Can woman me unto 't. Where is my son, I pray you?

2. Lord. Madam, he's gone to serve the Duke of Florence.

We met him thitherward; for thence we came,
And, after some dispatch in hand at court, 56
Thither we bend again.

Hel. Look on his letter, madam; here's my passport.

[Reads.] "When thou canst get the ring upon my finger which never shall come off, and show me a child begotten of thy body that I am 61 father to, then call me husband; but in such a 'then' I write a 'never.'"
This is a dreadful sentence.

Count. Brought you this letter, gentlemen?

1. Lord. Ay, madam;
And for the contents' sake are sorry for our
pains. 66

Count. I prithee, lady, have a better cheer;
If thou engrosses all the griefs are thine,
Thou robbst me of a moiety. He was my son;
But I do wash his name out of my blood, 70
And thou art all my child. Towards Florence is he?

2. Lord. Ay, madam.

Count. And to be a soldier?
2. Lord. Such is his noble purpose; and,
believe 't,

The Duke will lay upon him all the honour
That good convenience claims.

Count. Return you thither?

1. Lord. Ay, madam, with the swiftest wing of speed. 76

Hel. [Reads.] "Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France."

'T is bitter.

Count. Find you that there?

Hel. Ay, madam.

1. Lord. 'T is but the boldness of his hand, haply, which his heart was not consenting to. 80

Count. Nothing in France, until he have no wife!

There's nothing here that is too good for him
But only she; and she deserves a lord
That twenty such rude boys might tend upon And call her hourly mistress. Who was with
him? 85

1. Lord. A servant only, and a gentleman
Which I have sometime known.

Count. Parolles, was it not?

1. Lord. Ay, my good lady, he.

Count. A very tainted fellow, and full of wickedness.

My son corrupts a well-derived nature 90
With his inducement.

1. Lord. Indeed, good lady,
 The fellow has a deal of that too much,
 Which holds him much to have.

Count. You're welcome, gentlemen.
I will entreat you, when you see my son, 95
To tell him that his sword can never win
The honour that he loses. More I'll entreat you Written to bear along.

2. Lord. We serve you, madam,
 In that and all your worthiest affairs.

Count. Not so, but as we change our courtesies. 100

Will you draw near?

[Exeunt [Countess and Lords].]

Hel. "Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France."

Nothing in France, until he has no wife!
 Thou shalt have none, Rousillon, none in France;

Then hast thou all again. Poor lord! is't I 105
 That chase thee from thy country and expose
 Those tender limbs of thine to the event
 Of the none-sparing war? And is it I That drive thee from the sportive court, where thou

Wast shot at with fair eyes, to be the mark 110
 Of smoky muskets? O you leaden messengers,
 That ride upon the violent speed of fire,
 Fly with false aim; move the still-peering air,
 That sings with piercing; do not touch my lord.
 Whoever shoots at him, I set him there; 115
 Whoever charges on his forward breast,
 I am the catiff that do hold him to 't;
 And, though I kill him not, I am the cause
 His death was so effected. Better 't were
 I met the ravin lion when he roar'd 120
 With sharp constraint of hunger; better 't were
 That all the miseries which nature owes
 Were mine at once. No, come thou home,
 Rousillon,

Whence honour but of danger wins a scar,
 As oft it loses all. I will be gone. 125
 My being here it is that holds thee hence.
 Shall I stay here to do 't? No, no, although
 The air of paradise did fan the house
 And angels offic'd all. I will be gone,
 That pitiful rumour may report my flight, 130
 To console thee ear. Come, night; end,
 day!

For with the dark, poor thief, I'll steal away. 1.
 [Exit.]

[SCENE III. Florence. Before the Duke's palace.]

Flourish. Enter the DUKE OF FLORENCE, BERTRAM, PAROLLES, Soldiers, drum and trumpets.

Duke. The general of our horse thou art;
 and we,
 Great in our hope, lay our best love and credence
 Upon thy promising fortune.

Ber. Sir, it is
 A charge too heavy for my strength, but yet
 We'll strive to bear it for your worthy sake 5
 To the extreme edge of hazard.

Duke. Then go thou forth;
 And fortune play upon thy prosperous helm,
 As thy auspicious mistress!

Ber. This very day,
 Great Mars, I put myself into thy file.
 Make me but like my thoughts, and I shall prove 10
 A lover of thy drum, hater of love.

[Exeunt omnes.]

[SCENE IV. Rousillon. The Count's palace.]

Enter COUNTESS and STEWARD.

Count. Alas! and would you take the letter of her?

Might you not know she would do as she has done,

By sending me a letter? Read it again.

[Stew. Reads] letter.
 "I am Saint Jaques' pilgrim, thither gone.
 Ambitious love hath in me so offended, 5
 That barefoot plod I the cold ground upon,
 With sainted vow my faults to have amended.
 Write, write, that from the bloody course of
 war

My dearest master, your dear son, may hie.
 Bless him at home in peace, whilst I from far 10
 His name with zealous fervour sanctify.
 His taken labours bid him me forgive.
 I, his despitful Juno, sent him forth
 From courtly friends, with camping foes to live,
 Where death and danger dogs the heels of 15
 worth.

He is too good and fair for death and me,
 Whom I myself embrace, to set him free."
 [Count.] Ah, what sharp stings are in her mildest words!

Rinaldo, you did never lack advice so much,
 As letting her pass so. Had I spoke with her,
 I could have well diverted her intents, 21
 Which thus she hath prevented.

Stew. Pardon me, madam;
 If I had given you this at over-night,
 She might have been o'erta'en; and yet she writes,
 Pursuit would be but vain.

Count. What angel shall 25 Bless this unworthy husband? He cannot thrive,
 Unless her prayers, whom Heaven delights to hear

And loves to grant, relieve him from the wrath
 Of greatest justice. Write, write, Rinaldo,
 To this unworthy husband of his wife. 30
 Let every word weigh heavy of her worth
 That he does weigh too light. My greatest grief,

Though little he do feel it, set down sharply.
 Dispatch the most convenient messenger.
 When haply he shall hear that she is gone, 35
 He will return; and hope I may that she,
 Hearing so much, will speed her foot again,
 Led hither by pure love. Which of them both

Is dearest to me, I have no skill in sense
To make distinction. Provide this messenger. 40

My heart is heavy and mine age is weak;
Grief would have tears, and sorrow bids me speak. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE V. Florence. Without the walls.] A tucket afar off.

Enter an old WIDOW of Florence, her daughter, [DIANA,] VIOLENTA, and MARIANA, with other Citizens.

Wid. Nay, come; for if they do approach the city, we shall lose all the sight.

Dia. They say the French count has done most honourable service. 4

Wid. It is reported that he has taken their great'st commander; and that with his own hand he slew the Duke's brother. [Tucket.] We have lost our labour; they are gone a contrary way. Hark! you may know by their trumpets. 9

Mar. Come, let's return again, and suffice ourselves with the report of it. Well, Diana, take heed of this French earl. The honour of a maid is her name, and no legacy is so rich as honesty. 14

Wid. I have told my neighbour how you have been solicited by a gentleman his companion.

Mar. I know that knave, hang him! one Parolles; a filthy officer he is in those suggestions for the young earl. Beware of them, Diana; their promises, enticements, oaths, tokens, and all these engines of lust, are not 20 the things they go under. Many a maid hath been seduced by them; and the misery is, example, that so terrible shows in the wreck of maidenhood, cannot for all that dissuade succession, but that they are limed with the twigs 25 that threatens them. I hope I need not to advise you further; but I hope your own grace will keep you where you are, though there were no further danger known but the modesty which is so lost. 30

Dia. You shall not need to fear me.

Enter HELENA [disguised like a Pilgrim].

Wid. I hope so. Look, here comes a pilgrim. I know she will lie at my house; thither they send one another. I'll question her. God save you, pilgrim! whither are you bound? 36

Hel. To Saint Jaques le Grand.

Where do the palmers lodge, I do beseech you?

Wid. At the Saint Francis here beside the port.

Hel. Is this the way? [A march afar. 40

Wid. Ay, marry, is't. Hark you! they come this way.

If you will tarry, holy pilgrim,
But till the troops come by,
I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd;
The rather, for I think I know your hostess 45 as ample as myself.

Hel. Is it yourself?

Wid. If you shall please so, pilgrim.

Hel. I thank you, and will stay upon your leisure.

Wid. You came, I think, from France?

Hel. I did so.

Wid. Here you shall see a countryman of yours 50

That has done worthy service.

Hel. His name, I pray you.

Dia. The Count Rousillon. Know you such a one?

Hel. But by the ear, that hears most nobly of him.

His face I know not.

Dia. Whatsome'er he is,

He's bravely taken here. He stole from France, 55

As 'tis reported, for the King had married him

Against his liking. Think you it is so?

Hel. Ay, surely, mere the truth. I know his lady.

Dia. There is a gentleman that serves the Count

Reports but coarsely of her.

Hel. What's his name? 60

Dia. Monsieur Parolles.

Hel. O, I believe with him.

In argument of praise, or to the worth Of the great Count himself, she is too mean

To have her name repeated. All her deserving Is a reserved honesty, and that. 65

I have not heard examin'd.

Dia. Alas, poor lady!

'Tis a hard bondage to become the wife Of a detesting lord.

Wid. Ay, right! Good creature, wheresoe'er she is,

Her heart weighs sadly. This young maid might do her 70

A shrewd turn, if she pleas'd.

Hel. How do you mean?

May be the amorous Count solicits her In the unlawful purpose.

Wid. He does indeed;

And brokes with all that can in such a suit Corrupt the tender honour of a maid. 75

But she is arm'd for him and keeps her guard In honestest defence.

Drum and colours. Enter BERTRAM, PAROLLES, and the whole army.

Mar. The gods forbid else!

Wid. So, now they come.

That is Antonio, the Duke's eldest son; That, Escalus.

Hel. Which is the Frenchman?

Dia. He,

That with the plume; 'tis a most gallant fellow. 81

I would he lov'd his wife. If he were honest He were much goodlier. Is't not a handsome gentleman?

Hel. I like him well.

Dia. 'Tis pity he is not honest. Yond's that same knave 85

That leads him to these places. Were I his lady,

I would poison that vile rascal.

Hel. Which is he?

Dia. That jack-an-apes with scarfs. Why is he melancholy?

Hel. Perchance he's hurt i' the battle. 90

Par. Lose our drum! Well.

Mar. He's shrewdly vex'd at something. Look, he has spied us.

Wid. Marry, hang you!

Mar. And your courtesy, for a ring-carier! [Exeunt Bertram, Parolles, and army]. 95

Wid. The troop is past. Come, pilgrim, I will bring you

Where you shall host. Of enjoin'd penitents
There's four or five, to great Saint Jaques bound,

Already at my house.

Hel. I humbly thank you.

Please it this matron and this gentle maid 100
To eat with us to-night, the charge and thank-
ing

Shall be for me; and, to requite you further,
I will bestow some precepts of this virgin

Worthy the note.

Both. We'll take your offer kindly.
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE VI. Camp before Florence.]

Enter BERTRAM and the French LORDS, as at first.

1. Lord. Nay, good my lord, put him to 't; let him have his way.

2. Lord. If your lordship find him not a hilding, hold me no more in your respect.

1. Lord. On my life, my lord, a bubble.

Ber. Do you think I am so far deceived in him? 7

1. Lord. Believe it, my lord, in mine own direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speak of him as my kinsman, he's a most notable coward, an infinite and endless liar, an hourly promise-breaker, the owner of no one good quality worthy your lordship's entertain-
ment. 13

2. Lord. It were fit you knew him, lest, reposing too far in his virtue, which he hath not, he might at some great and trusty business in a main danger fail you.

Ber. I would I knew in what particular action to try him. 19

2. Lord. None better than to let him fetch off his drum, which you hear him so confidently undertake to do.

1. Lord. I, with a troop of Florentines, will suddenly surprise him; such I will have, whom I am sure he knows not from the enemy. We will bind and hoodwink him so, that he 25 shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the leaguer of the adversaries, when we bring him to our own tents. Be but your lordship present at his examination; if he do not, for the promise of his life and in the highest 30 compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the divine forfeit of his soul upon oath, never trust my judgement in any-
thing. 35

2. Lord. O, for the love of laughter, let him fetch his drum; he says he has a stratagem for 't. When your lordship sees the bottom of his success in 't, and to what metal this counterfeit lump of ore will be melted, if you give him not John Drum's entertainment, your inclining cannot be removed. Here he comes. 42

Enter PAROLLES.

1. Lord. [Aside to Ber.] O, for the love of laughter, hinder not the honour of his design. Let him fetch off his drum in any hand. 45

Ber. How now, monsieur! this drum sticks sorely in your disposition.

2. Lord. A pox on 't, let it go; 'tis but a drum. 49

Par. "But a drum"! is't "but a drum"? A drum so lost! There was excellent command, — to charge in with our horse upon our own wings, and to rend our own soldiers! 53

2. Lord. That was not to be blam'd in the command of the service; it was a disaster of war that Caesar himself could not have prevented, if he had been there to command. 57

Ber. Well, we cannot greatly condemn our success. Some dishonour we had in the loss of that drum; but it is not to be recovered. 61

Par. It might have been recovered.

Ber. It might; but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recovered. But that the merit of service is seldom attributed to the true and exact performer, I would have that drum or another, or "hic jacet." 65

Ber. Why, if you have a stomach, to 't, monsieur: if you think your mystery in stratagem can bring this instrument of honour again into his native quarter, be magnanimous in the 70 enterprise and go on; I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit. If you speed well in it, the Duke shall both speak of it, and extend to you what further becomes his greatness, even to the utmost syllable of your worthiness. 75

Par. By the hand of a soldier, I will undertake it.

Ber. But you must not now slumber in it.

Par. I'll about it this evening; and I will presently pen down my dilemmas, encourage 80 myself in my certainty, put myself into my mortal preparation; and by midnight look to hear further from me.

Ber. May I be bold to acquaint his Grace you are gone about it? 85

Par. I know not what the success will be, my lord; but the attempt I vow.

Ber. I know thou'rt valiant; and, to the possibility of thy soldiership, will subscribe for thee. Farewell. 90

Par. I love not many words. [Exit.]

1. Lord. No more than a fish loves water. Is not this a strange fellow, my lord, that so confidently seems to undertake this business, which he knows is not to be done; damns himself to do, and dares better be damn'd than to do 't? 95

2. Lord. You do not know him, my lord, as we do. Certain it is, that he will steal himself into a man's favour and for a week escape

a great deal of discoveries ; but when you find him out, you have him ever after. 101

Ber. Why, do you think he will make no deed at all of this that so seriously he does address himself unto ? 104

1. Lord. None in the world ; but return with an invention and clap upon you two or three probable lies. But we have almost emboss'd him ; you shall see his fall to-night ; for indeed he is not for your lordship's respect. 109

2. Lord. We'll make you some sport with the fox ere we cease him. He was first smok'd by the old lord Lafew. When his disguise and he is parted, tell me what a sprat you shall find him ; which you shall see this very night. 114

1. Lord. I must go look my twigs. He shall be caught.

Ber. Your brother he shall go along with me.

2. Lord. As 't please your lordship. I'll leave you. [Exit.]

Ber. Now will I lead you to the house, and show you
The lass I spoke of.

1. Lord. But you say she's honest.

Ber. That's all the fault. I spoke with her but once 120

And found her wondrous cold ; but I sent to her, By this same coxcomb that we have i' the wind, Tokens and letters which she did re-send ; And this is all I have done. She's a fair creature :

Will you go see her ?

1. Lord. With all my heart, my lord. 125
[Exit.]

[SCENE VII. Florence. The Widow's house.]

Enter HELENA and WIDOW.

Hel. If you misdoubt me that I am not she, I know not how I shall assure you further, But I shall lose the grounds I work upon.

Wid. Though my estate be fallen, I was well born,

Nothing acquainted with these businesses, 5
And would not put my reputation now

In any staining act.

Hel. Nor would I wish you.
First, give me trust, the Count he is my husband ;

And what to your sworn counsel I have spoken Is so from word to word ; and then you cannot, By the good aid that I of you shall borrow, 11
Err in bestowing it.

Wid. I should believe you ;
For you have show'd me that which well approves

You're great in fortune.

Hel. Take this purse of gold,
And let me buy your friendly help thus far, 15
Which I will over-pay and pay again

When I have found it. The Count he woos your daughter,

Lays down his wanton siege before her beauty,
Resolves to carry her. Let her, in fine, consent

As we'll direct her how 't is best to bear it. 20

Now his important blood will nought deny
That she'll demand. A ring the County wears,
That downward hath succeeded in his house
From son to son, some four or five descents
Since the first father wore it. This ring he holds 25

In most rich choice ; yet in his idle fire,
To buy his will, it would not seem too dear,
Howe'er repented after.

Wid. Now I see
The bottom of your purpose. 29

Hel. You see it lawful, then. It is no more
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Desires this ring ; appoints him an encounter ;
In fine, delivers me to fill the time,
Herself most chastely absent. After this,
To marry her, I'll add three thousand crowns 35

To what is past already.

Wid. I have yielded.
Instruct my daughter how she shall persevere,
That time and place with this deceit so lawful
May prove coherent. Every night he comes
With musics of all sorts and songs compos'd 40
To her unworthiness. It nothing steads us
To chide him from our eaves, for he persists
As if his life lay on 't.

Hel. Why then to-night
Let us assay our plot ; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed. 45
And lawful meaning in a lawful act,
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact.
But let's about it. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV

[SCENE I. Without the Florentine camp.]

Enter First French LORD, with five or six other SOLDIERS in ambush.

1. Lord. He can come no other way but by this hedge-corner. When you sally upon him, speak what terrible language you will. Though you understand it not yourselves, no matter ; for we must not seem to understand him, unless some one among us, whom we must produce for an interpreter. 7

1. Sold. Good captain, let me be the interpreter.

1. Lord. Art not acquainted with him ?
Knows he not thy voice ? 11

1. Sold. No, sir, I warrant you.

1. Lord. But what linsey-woolsey hast thou to speak to us again ?

1. Sold. E'en such as you speak to me. 15

1. Lord. He must think us some band of strangers i' the adversary's entertainment. Now he hath a smack of all neighbouring languages, therefore we must every one be a man of his own fancy ; not to know what we speak one to another, so we seem to know, is to [30 know straight our purpose : choughs' language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you, interpreter, you must seem very politic. But cough, ho ! here he comes, to beguile two hours in a sleep, and then to return and swear the lies he forges. 26

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. Ten o'clock : within three hours 't will be time enough to go home. What shall I say I have done? It must be a very plausible invention that carries it. They begin to smoke me, and disgraces have of late knock'd too [50 often at my door. I find my tongue is too fool-hardy; but my heart hath the fear of Mars before it and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

1. Lord. [Aside, in ambush.] This is the first truth that e'er thine own tongue was guilty of. 50

Par. What the devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drum, being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must give myself some hurts, and say I got them in exploit. Yet [50 slight ones will not carry it. They will say, "Come you off with so little?" And great ones I dare not give. Wherefore, what's the instance? Tongue, I must put you into a butter-woman's mouth and buy myself another of [45 Bajazet's mule, if you prattle me into these perils.

1. Lord. Is it possible he should know what he is, and be that he is? 49

Par. I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn, or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

1. Lord. We cannot afford you so.

Par. Or the baring of my beard; and to say it was in stratagem. 55

1. Lord. 'T would not do.

Par. Or to drown my clothes, and say I was stripp'd.

1. Lord. Hardly serve.

Par. Though I swore I leap'd from the window of the citadel — 61

1. Lord. How deep?

Par. Thirty fathom.

1. Lord. Three great oaths would scarce make that be believed. 65

Par. I would I had any drum of the enemy's. I would swear I recover'd it.

1. Lord. You shall hear one anon.

Par. A drum now of the enemy's, — [Alarum within.

1. Lord. Throca movousus, cargo, cargo, cargo. 71

All. Cargo, cargo, cargo, villianda par corbo, cargo. 71

Par. O, ransom, ransom! do not hide mine eyes. [They seize and blindfold him.] 75

1. Sold. Bosko throumuldo boskos.

Par. I know you are the Muskos' regiment, And I shall lose my life for want of language. If there be here German, or Dane, low Dutch, Italian, or French, let him speak to me; I'll 79 Discover that which shall undo the Florentine.

1. Sold. Boskos vauvado: I understand thee, and can speak thy tongue. Kerelybonto, sir, betake thee to thy faith, for seventeen poniards are at thy bosom.

Par. O!

1. Sold. O, pray, pray, pray! Manka revania dulce. 85

1. Lord. Oscorbidulchos volivorco.

1. Sold. The general is content to spare thee yet; 89

And, hoodwink'd as thou art, will lead thee on To gather from thee. Haply thou mayst inform Something to save thy life.

Par. O, let me live!

And all the secrets of our camp I'll show, Their force, their purposes; nay, I'll speak that

Which you will wonder at.

1. Sold. But wilt thou faithfully? 90

Par. If I do not, damn me.

1. Sold. Acordo linta.

Come on; thou art granted space.

[Exit with Parolles guarded]. A short alarum within.

1. Lord. Go, tell the Count Rousillon, and my brother,

We have caught the woodcock, and will keep him muffled 100

Till we do hear from them.

2. Sold. Captain, I will.

1. Lord. 'A will betray us all unto ourselves: Inform on that.

2. Sold. So I will, sir.

1. Lord. Till then I'll keep him dark and safely lock'd. [Exeunt. 105

[SCENE II. Florence. The Widow's house.]

Enter BERTRAM and the maid called DIANA.

Ber. They told me that your name was Fontibell.

Dia. No, my good lord, Diana.

Ber. Titled goddess,

And worth it, with addition! But, fair soul,

In your fine frame hath love no quality?

If the quick fire of youth light not your mind, You are no maiden, but a monument. 6

When you are dead, you should be such a one

As you are now, for you are cold and stern;

And now you should be as your mother was

When your sweet self was got. 10

Dia. She then was honest.

Ber. So should you be.

Dia. No; 10

My mother did but duty; such, my lord,

As you owe to your wife.

Ber. No more o' that.

I prithee, do not strive against my vows.

I was compell'd to her; but I love thee 15

By love's own sweet constraint, and will for ever

Do thee all rights of service.

Dia. Ay, so you serve us

Till we serve you; but when you have our roses,

You barely leave our thorns to prick ourselves, And mock us with our bareness.

Ber. How have I sworn!

Dia. 'Tis not the many oaths that makes the truth, 21

But the plain single vow that is vow'd true.

What is not holy, that we swear not by,

But take the High'st to witness; then, pray you, tell me,

If I should swear by Jove's great attributes 25
 I lov'd you dearly, would you believe my oaths,
 When I did love you ill? This has no holding,
 To swear by Him whom I protest to love,
 That I will work against Him; therefore your oaths

Are words and poor conditions, but unseal'd, 30
 At least in my opinion.

Ber. Change it, change it!
 Be not so holy-cruel. Love is holy,
 And my integrity ne'er knew the crafts
 That you do charge men with. Stand no more off,

But give thyself unto my sick desires, 35
 Who then recovers. Say thou art mine, and ever

My love as it begins shall so persevere.

Dia. I see that men make rope's in such a scarce

That we'll forsake ourselves. Give me that ring.

Ber. I'll lend it thee, my dear; but have no power 40

To give it from me.

Dia. Will you not, my lord?

Ber. It is an honour longing to our house,
 Bequeathed down from many ancestors,
 Which were the greatest obloquy i' the world
 In me to lose.

Dia. Mine honour's such a ring, 45
 My chastity's the jewel of our house,
 Bequeathed down from many ancestors,
 Which were the greatest obloquy i' the world
 In me to lose. Thus your own proper wisdom Brings in the champion Honour on my part, 50
 Against your vain assault.

Ber. Here, take my ring!
 My house, mine honour, yea, my life, be thine,
 And I'll be bid by thee.

Dia. When midnight comes, knock at my chamber-window.

I'll order take my mother shall not hear. 55
 Now will I charge you in the band of truth,
 When you have conquer'd my yet maiden bed,
 Remain there but an hour, nor speak to me.
 My reasons are most strong, and you shall know
 them

When back again this ring shall be deliver'd;
 And on your finger in the night I'll put Another ring, that what in time proceeds 61
 May taken to the future our past deeds.

Adieu, till then; then, fail not. You have won
 A wife of me, though there my hope be done. 65

Ber. A heaven on earth I have won by wooing thee. [Exit.]

Dia. For which live long to thank both Heaven and me!

You may so in the end.

My mother told me just how he would woo,
 As if she sat in 's heart. She says all men 70
 Have the like oaths. He had sworn to marry
 me

When his wife's dead; therefore I'll lie with
 him

When I am buried. Since Frenchmen are so braid,

Marry that will, I live and die a maid.

Only in this disguise I think 't no sin 75
 To cozen him that would unjustly win. [Exit.]

[SCENE III. The Florentine camp.]

Enter the two French LORDS and some two or three Soldiers.

2. Lord. You have not given him his mother's letter?

1. Lord. I have deliver'd it an hour since.
 There is something in 't that stings his nature;
 for on the reading it he chang'd almost into another man. 6

2. Lord. He has much worthy blame laid upon him for shaking off so good a wife and so sweet a lady. 9

1. Lord. Especially he hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the King, who had even tun'd his bounty to sing happiness to him.
 I will tell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly with you. 14

2. Lord. When you have spoken it, 't is dead, and I am the grave of it.

1. Lord. He hath perverted a young gentlewoman here in Florence, of a most chaste renown; and this night he fleshes his will in the spoil of her honour. He hath given her his 20 monumental ring, and thinks himself made in the unchaste composition.

2. Lord. Now, God delay our rebellion! As we are ourselves, what things are we! 24

1. Lord. Merely our own traitors. And as in the common course of all treasons, we still see them reveal themselves, till they attain to their abhor'd ends, so he that in this action contrives against his own nobility, in his proper stream overflows himself. 30

2. Lord. Is it not meant damnable in us, to be trumpeters of our unlawful intents? We shall not then have his company to-night?

1. Lord. Not till after midnight; for he is dieted to his hour. 35

2. Lord. That approaches apace. I would gladly have him see his company anatomiz'd, that he might take a measure of his own judgements, wherein so curiously he had set this counterfeit. 40

1. Lord. We will not meddle with him till he come, for his presence must be the whip of the other.

2. Lord. In the mean time, what hear you of these wars? 45

1. Lord. I hear there is an overture of peace.

2. Lord. Nay, I assure you, a peace concluded.

1. Lord. What will Count Rousillon do then?
 Will he travel higher, or return again into France? 51

2. Lord. I perceive, by this demand, you are not altogether of his council.

1. Lord. Let it be forbid, sir; so should I be a great deal of his act. 55

2. Lord. Sir, his wife some two months since fled from his house. Her pretence is a pilgrimage to Saint Jaques le Grand; which holy undertaking with most austere sanctimony she accomplish'd; and, there residing, the ten- 60

derness of her nature became as a prey to her grief; in fine, made a groan of her last breath, and now she sings in heaven.

1. Lord. How is this justified? 64

2. Lord. The stronger part of it by her own letters, which makes her story true, even to the point of her death. Her death itself, which could not be her office to say is come, was faithfully confirm'd by the rector of the place. 66

1. Lord. Hath the Count all this intelligence?

2. Lord. Ay, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of the verity.

1. Lord. I am heartily sorry that he'll be glad of this. 75

2. Lord. How mightily sometimes we make us comforts of our losses!

1. Lord. And how mightily some other times we drown our gain in tears! The great dignity that his valour hath here acquir'd for him shall at home be encount'ed with a shame as ample. 82

2. Lord. The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together: our virtues would be proud, if our faults whipp'd them not; and our crimes would despair, if they were not cherish'd by our virtues. 87

Enter a MESSENGER.

How now! where's your master?

Mess. He met the Duke in the street, sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave. His lordship will next morning for France. The Duke hath offered him letters of commendations to the King. 90

1. Lord. They shall be no more than needful there, if they were more than they can commend.

Enter BERTRAM.

2. Lord. They cannot be too sweet for the King's tartness. Here's his lordship now. How now, my lord! is't not after midnight? 97

Ber. I have to-night dispatch'd sixteen businesses, a month's length a-piece, by an abstract of success. I have congied with the Duke, done my adieu with his nearest; buried a wife, mourn'd for her; writ to my lady mother I am returning; entertain'd my convoy; and between these main parcels of dispatch effected many nicer needs. The last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet. 106

1. Lord. If the business be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your lordship. 109

Ber. I mean, the business is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter. But shall we have this dialogue between the fool and the soldier? Come, bring forth this counterfeit module, has deceiv'd me, like a double-meaning prophetess. 115

1. Lord. Bring him forth. Has sat it the stocks all night, poor gallant knave.

Ber. No matter; his heels have deserv'd it, in usurping his spurs so long. How does he carry himself? 120

1. Lord. I have told your lordship already, the stocks carry him. But to answer you as you would be understood, he weeps like a wench that had shed her milk. He hath confess'd himself to Morgan, whom he supposes to be a friar, from the time of his remembrance to this very instant disaster of his setting in the stocks; and what think you he hath confess'd?

Ber. Nothing of me, has 'a? 123

1. Lord. His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face. If your lordship be in 't, as I believe you are, you must have the patience to hear it.

Enter PAROLLES with [FIRST SOLDIER as] his Interpreter.

Ber. A plague upon him! Muffled! He can say nothing of me. Hush! hush! 135

2. Lord. Hoodman comes! Portotartarossa.

1. Sold. He calls for the tortures. What will you say without 'em?

Par. I will confess what I know without constraint. If ye pinch me like a pasty, I can say no more. 141

1. Sold. Bosko chimurco.

2. Lord. Bolibindo chicurmurco.

1. Sold. You are a merciful general. Our general bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a note. 146

Par. And truly, as I hope to live.

1. Sold. [Reads.] "First demand of him how many horse the Duke is strong." What say you to that? 150

Par. Five or six thousand; but very weak and unserviceable. The troops are all scattered, and the commanders very poor rogues, upon my reputation and credit and as I hope to live. 154

1. Sold. Shall I set down your answer so?

Par. Do: I'll take the sacrament on't, how and which way you will.

Ber. All's one to him. What a past-saving slave is this! 159

2. Lord. You're deceiv'd, my lord; this is Monsieur Parolles, the gallant militarist, — that was his own phrase, — that had the whole theoretic of war in the knot of his scarf, and the practice in the chape of his dagger. 164

1. Lord. I will never trust a man again for keeping his sword clean, nor believe he can have everything in him by wearing his apparel neatly.

1. Sold. Well, that's set down. 169

Par. Five or six thousand horse, I said, — I will say true, — or thereabouts, set down, for I'll speak truth.

2. Lord. He's very near the truth in this.

Ber. But I can him no thanks for 't, in the nature he delivers it. 175

Par. Poor rogues, I pray you, say.

1. Sold. Well, that's set down.

Par. I humbly thank you, sir. A truth's a truth; the rogues are marvellous poor. 179

1. Sold. [Reads.] "Demand of him, of what strength they are a-foot." What say you to that?

Par. By my troth, sir, if I were to live this present hour, I will tell true. Let me see: — Spurio, a hundred and fifty; Sebastian, so many; Corambus, so many; Jaques, so many; Guiltian, Cosmo, Lodowick, and Gratii, ¹⁸⁵ two hundred fifty each; mine own company, Chitopher, Vaumond, Bentii, two hundred fifty each; so that the muster-file, rotten and sound, upon my life, amounts not to fifteen thousand poll; half of the which dare not ¹⁹⁰ shake the snow from off their cassocks, lest they shake themselves to pieces.

Ber. What shall be done to him? ¹⁹⁴

2. Lord. Nothing, but let him have thanks. Demand of him my condition, and what credit I have with the Duke.

1. Sold. Well, that's set down.

[Reads.] "You shall demand of him, whether one Captain Dumaïn be i' the camp, a Frenchman; what his reputation is with the Duke; ²⁰⁰ what his valour, honesty, and expertness in wars; or whether he thinks it were not possible, with well-weighing sums of gold, to corrupt him to a revolt." What say you to this? What do you know of it? ²⁰⁵

Par. I beseech you, let me answer to the particular of the inter'gatories. Demand them singly. ²⁰⁸

1. Sold. Do you know this Captain Dumaïn?

Par. I know him. 'A was a botcher's 'prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipp'd for getting the shrieve's fool with child, — a dumb innocent, that could not say him nay. ²¹⁴

Ber. Nay, by your leave, hold your hands; though I know his brains are forfeit to the next tile that falls.

1. Sold. Well, is this captain in the Duke of Florence's camp? ²¹⁹

Par. Upon my knowledge, he is, and lousy.

2. Lord. Nay, look not so upon me; we shall hear of your lordship anon.

1. Sold. What is his reputation with the Duke? ²²⁴

Par. The Duke knows him for no other but a poor officer of mine; and writ to me this other day to turn him out o' the band. I think I have his letter in my pocket.

1. Sold. Marry, we'll search. ²²⁹

Par. In good sadness, I do not know. Either it is there, or it is upon a file with the Duke's other letters in my tent.

1. Sold. Here 't is; here 's a paper. Shall I read it to you?

Par. I do not know if it be it or no. ²³⁵

Ber. Our interpreter does it well.

2. Lord. Excellently.

1. Sold. [Reads.] "Dian, the Count's a fool, and full of gold," —

Par. That is not the Duke's letter, sir; that is an advertisement to a proper maid in ²⁴⁰ Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurements of one Count Rousillon, a foolish idle boy, but for all that very ruttish. I pray you, sir, put it up again. ²⁴³

1. Sold. Nay, I'll read it first, by your favour.

Par. My meaning in't, I protest, was very honest in the behalf of the maid; for I knew the young Count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy, who is a whale to virginity and devours up all the fry it finds. ²⁵⁰

Ber. Damnable both-sides rogue!

1. Sold. [Reads.]

"When he swears oaths, bid him drop gold, and take it;

After he scores, he never pays the score.

Half won is match well made; match, and well make it;

He ne'er pays after-debts, take it before; ²⁵⁵ And say a soldier, Dian, told thee this, Men are to mell with, boys are not to kiss; For count of this, the Count's a fool, I know it, Who pays before, but not when he does owe it.

Thine, as he vow'd to thee in thine ear, ²⁶⁰ PAROLLES."

Ber. He shall be whipp'd through the army with this rhyme in's forehead.

1. Lord. This is your devoted friend, sir, the manifold linguist and the armpotent soldier. ²⁶⁵

Ber. I could endure anything before but a cat; and now he's a cat to me.

1. Sold. I perceive, sir, by our general's looks, we shall be fain to hang you. ²⁶⁹

Par. My life, sir, in any case: not that I am afraid to die; but that, my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of nature. Let me live, sir, in a dungeon, i' the stocks, or anywhere, so I may live. ²⁷⁴

1. Sold. We'll see what may be done, so you confess freely; therefore, once more to this Captain Dumaïn. You have answer'd to his reputation with the Duke, and to his valour; what is his honesty? ²⁷⁹

Par. He will steal, sir, an egg out of a cloister. For rapes and ravishments he parallels Nessus. He professes not keeping of oaths; in breaking 'em he is stronger than Hercules; he will lie, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool. Drunkenness is his best virtue, for he will be swine drunk, and ²⁸⁵ in his sleep he does little harm, save to his bed-clothes about him; but they know his conditions and lay him in straw. I have but little more to say, sir, of his honesty. He has everything that an honest man should not have; ²⁹⁰ what an honest man should have, he has nothing.

2. Lord. I begin to love him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honesty? A pox upon him for me, he's more and more a cat. ²⁹⁵

1. Sold. What say you to his expertness in war?

Par. Faith, sir, has led the drum before the English tragedians. To belie him, I will not, and more of his soldiership I know not; except, in that country he had the honour to be the ³⁰⁰ officer at a place there called Mile-end, to instruct for the doubling of files. I would do the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certain. ³⁰⁴

2. Lord. He hath out-villain'd villainy so far, that the rarity redeems him.

Ber. A pox on him, he's a cat still.

1. Sold. His qualities being at this poor price,

I need not to ask you if gold will corrupt him to revolt.

Par. Sir, for a quart d'écu he will sell the fee-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it; and cut the entail from all remainders, and a perpetual succession for it perpetually.

1. Sold. What's his brother, the other Captain Dumain?

1. Lord. Why does he ask him of me?

1. Sold. What's he?

Par. E'en a crow o' the same nest; not altogether so great as the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in evil. He excels his brother for a coward, yet his brother is reputed one of the best that is. In a retreat he outruns any lackey; marry, in coming on he has the cramp.

1. Sold. If your life be saved, will you undertake to betray the Florentine?

Par. Ay, and the captain of his horse, Count Rousillon.

1. Sold. I'll whisper with the general, and know his pleasure.

Par. [Aside.] I'll no more drumming; a plague of all drums! Only to seem to deserve well, and to beguile the supposition of that lascivious young boy the Count, have I run into this danger. Yet who would have suspected an ambush where I was taken?

1. Sold. There is no remedy, sir, but you must die. The general says, you that have so traitorously discover'd the secrets of your army and made such pestiferous reports of men very nobly held, can serve the world for no honest use; therefore you must die. Come, headsmen, off with his head.

Par. O Lord, sir, let me live, or let me see my death!

1. Sold. That shall you, and take your leave of all your friends. [Unblinding him.] So, look about you. Know you any here?

Ber. Good morrow, noble captain.

1. Lord. God bless you, Captain Parolles.

2. Lord. God save you, noble captain.

1. Lord. Captain, what greeting will you to my Lord Lafew? I am for France.

2. Lord. Good captain, will you give me a copy of the sonnet you writ to Diana in behalf of the Count Rousillon? An I were not a very coward, I'd compel it of you; but fare you well. [Eeunt [Bertram and Lords].

1. Sold. You are undone, captain, all but your scarf; that has a knot on 't yet.

Par. Who cannot be crush'd with a plot?

1. Sold. If you could find out a country where but women were that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent nation. Fare ye well, sir; I am for France too. We shall speak of you there.

[Exit [with Soldiers].

Par. Yet am I thankful. If my heart were great,

'T would burst at this. Captain I'll be no more; But I will eat and drink, and sleep as soft As captain shall. Simply the thing I am Shall make me live. Who knows himself a braggart, Let him fear this; for it will come to pass That every braggart shall be found an ass. Rust, sword! cool, blushes! and, Parolles, live Safest in shame! Being fool'd, by foolery thrive!

There's place and means for every man alive. I'll after them.

[Exit.

[SCENE IV. Florence. The Widow's house.]

Enter HELENA, WIDOW, and DIANA.

Hel. That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd you,

One of the greatest in the Christian world Shall be my surety; 'fore whose throne 't is needful,

Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneel.

Time was, I did him a desired office, Dear almost as his life; which gratitude Through finty Tartar's bosom would peep forth,

And answer, thanks. I duly am inform'd His Grace is at Marseilles, to which place We have convenient convoy. You must know, I am supposed dead. The army breaking, My husband hies him home; where, Heaven aiding,

And by the leave of my good lord the King, We'll be before our welcome.

Wid. Gentle madam, You never had a servant to whose trust Your business was more welcome.

Hel. Nor you, mistress, Ever a friend whose thoughts more truly labour To recompense your love. Doubt not but Heaven

Hath brought me up to be your daughter's dower,

As it hath fated her to be my motive And helper to a husband. But, O strange men! That can such sweet use make of what they hate,

When saucy trusting of the cozen'd thoughts Defiles the pitchy night; so lust doth play With what it loathes for that which is away. But more of this hereafter. You, Diana, Under my poor instructions yet must suffer Something in my behalf.

Dia. Let death and honesty Go with your impositions, I am yours Upon your will to suffer.

Hel. Yet, I pray you. But with the word the time will bring on summer,

When briars shall have leaves as well as thorns, And be as sweet as sharp. We must away. Our waggon is prepar'd, and time revives us. All's well that ends well! Still the fine's the crown;

Whate'er the course, the end is the renown.

[Eeunt.

[SCENE V. Rousillon. The Count's palace.]

Enter COUNTESS, LAFEU, and CLOWN.

Laf. No, no, no, your son was misled with a snipt-taffeta fellow there, whose villainous saffrom would have made all the unbak'd and doughy youth of a nation in his colour. Your daughter-in-law had been alive at this hour, and your son here at home, more advanc'd by the King than by that red-tail'd humble-bee I speak of. 7

Count. I would I had not known him. It was the death of the most virtuous gentlewoman that ever Nature had praise for creating. If she had partaken of my flesh, and cost me the dearest groans of a mother, I could not have owed her a more rooted love. 13

Laf. 'T was a good lady, 't was a good lady. We may pick a thousand salads ere we light on such another herb. 16

Clo. Indeed, sir, she was the sweet-marjoram of the salad, or rather, the herb of grace.

Laf. They are not [salad] herbs, you knave; they are nose-herbs. 20

Clo. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, sir; I have not much skill in grass.

Laf. Whether dost thou profess thyself a knave or a fool?

Clo. A fool, sir, at a woman's service, and a knave at a man's. 28

Laf. Your distinction?

Clo. I would cozen the man of his wife and do his service.

Laf. So you were a knave at his service, indeed. 31

Clo. And I would give his wife my bauble, sir, to do her service.

Laf. I will subscribe for thee, thou art both knave and fool. 35

Clo. At your service.

Laf. No, no, no.

Clo. Why, sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

Laf. Who's that? A Frenchman? 40

Clo. Faith, sir, 'a has an English name; but his fignomy is more hotter in France than there.

Laf. What prince is that?

Clo. The black prince, sir; alias, the prince of darkness; alias, the devil. 45

Laf. Hold thee, there's my purse. I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy master thou talk'st of. Serve him still. 48

Clo. I am a woodland fellow, sir, that always loved a great fire; and the master I speak of ever keeps a good fire. But, sure, he is the prince of the world; let his nobility remain in 's court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pomp 53 to enter. Some that humble themselves may; but the many will be too chill and tender, and they 'll be for the flowery way that leads to the broad gate and the great fire. 58

Laf. Go thy ways, I begin to be aweary of thee; and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy ways. Let my horses be well look'd to, without any tricks. 63

Clo. If I put any tricks upon 'em, sir, they shall be jades' tricks; which are their own right by the law of nature. [Exit.]

Laf. A shrewd knave and an unhappy. 66

Count. So 'a is. My lord that's gone made himself much sport out of him. By his authority he remains here, which he thinks is a patent for his sauciness; and, indeed, he has no pace, but runs where he will. 71

Laf. I like him well; 't is not amiss. And I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good lady's death and that my lord your son was upon his return home, I moved the King my master to speak in the behalf of my daughter; which, in the minority of them 76 both, his Majesty, out of a self-gracious remembrance, did first propose. His Highness hath promis'd me to do it; and, to stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How does your ladyship like it? 82

Count. With very much content, my lord; and I wish it happily effected.

Laf. His Highness comes post from Marseilles, of as able body as when he number'd thirty. 'A will be here to-morrow, or I am deceiv'd by him that in such intelligence hath seldom fail'd. 88

Count. It rejoices me, that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters that my son will be here to-night. I shall beseech your lordship to remain with me till they meet together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking with what manners I might safely be admitted. 94

Count. You need but plead your honourable privilege.

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter; but I thank my God it holds yet. 98

Re-enter CLOWN.

Clo. O madam, yonder 's my lord your son with a patch of velvet on 's face. Whether there be a scar under 't or no, the velvet knows; but 't is a goodly patch of velvet. His left cheek is a cheek of two pile and a half, but his right cheek is worn bare. 104

Laf. A scar nobly got, or a noble scar, is a good livery of honour; so belike is that.

Clo. But it is your carbonado'd face.

Laf. Let us go see your son, I pray you. I long to talk with the young noble soldier. 109

Clo. 'Faith, there 's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hats and most courteous feathers which bow the head and nod at every man. [Exit.]

ACT V

[SCENE I. Marseilles. A street.]

Enter HELENA, WIDOW, and DIANA, with two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding posting day and night Must wear your spirits low; we cannot help it: But since you have made the days and nights as one,

To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs, Be bold you do so grow in my requital 5

Enter a GENTLE ASTRINGER.

As nothing can unroot you. In happy time! This man may help me to his Majesty's ear, If he would spend his power. God save you, sir.

Gent. And you.

Hel. Sir, I have seen you in the court of France. 10

Gent. I have been sometimes there.

Hel. I do presume, sir, that you are not fallen from the report that goes upon your goodness; And therefore, goaded with most sharp occasions,

Which lay nice manners by, I put you to 15
The use of your own virtues, for the which I shall continue thankful.

Gent. What's your will?

Hel. That it will please you
To give this poor petition to the King,
And aid me with that store of power you have
To come into his presence. 21

Gent. The King's not here.

Hel. Not here, sir!

Gent. Not, indeed.
He hence remov'd last night, and with more haste
Than is his use.

Wid. Lord, how we lose our pains!

Hel. All's well that ends well yet, 25
Though time seem so adverse and means unfit.
I do beseech you, whither is he gone?

Gent. Marry, as I take it, to Rousillon, Whither I am going.

Hel. I do beseech you, sir,
Since you are like to see the King before me, 30
Commend the paper to his gracious hand,
Which I presume shall render you no blame
But rather make you thank your pains for it.
I will come after you with what good speed
Our means will make us means.

Gent. This I'll do for you.

Hel. And you shall find yourself to be well thank'd, 35

Whate'er falls more. We must to horse again.
Go, go, provide. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. Rousillon. Inner court of the Count's palace.]

Enter CLOWN and PAROLLES.

Par. Good Master Lavache, give my Lord Lafeu this letter. I have ere now, sir, been better known to you, when I have held familiarity with fresher clothes; but I am now, sir, muddled in Fortune's mood, and smell somewhat strong of her strong displeasure. 5

Clo. Truly, Fortune's displeasure is but sluttish, if it smell so strongly as thou speak'st of.
I will henceforth eat no fish of Fortune's buttering. Prithee, allow the wind. 10

Par. Nay, you need not to stop your nose, sir; I spake but by a metaphor.

Clo. Indeed, sir, if your metaphor stink, I will stop my nose; or against any man's metaphor. Prithee, get thee further. 15

Par. Pray you, sir, deliver me this paper.

Clo. Foh! prithee, stand away. A paper from Fortune's close-stool to give to a nobleman! Look, here he comes himself. 19

Enter LAFEU.

Here is a purr of Fortune's, sir, or of Fortune's cat,—but not a musk-cat,—that has fallen into the unclean fishpond of her displeasure, and, as he says, is muddled withal. Pray you, sir, use the carp as you may; for he looks like a poor, decayed, ingenious, foolish, rascally 24 knave. I do pity his distress in my similes of comfort and leave him to your lordship.

[Exit.]

Par. My lord, I am a man whom Fortune hath cruelly scratch'd. 25

Laf. And what would you have me to do?
'Tis too late to pare her nails now. Wherein have you play'd the knave with Fortune, that she should scratch you, who of herself is a good lady and would not have knaves thrive long under her? There's a quart d'écu for you. Let the justices make you and Fortune friends; 35
I am for other business.

Par. I beseech your honour to hear me one single word.

Laf. You beg a single penny more. Come, you shall ha' 't; save your word. 40

Par. My name, my good lord, is Parolles.

Laf. You beg more than word, then. Cox my passion! give me your hand. How does your drum?

Par. O my good lord, you were the first that found me! 45

Laf. Was I, in sooth? And I was the first that lost thee.

Par. It lies in you, my lord, to bring me in some grace, for you did bring me out. 50

Laf. Out upon thee, knave! Dost thou put upon me at once both the office of God and the devil? one brings thee in grace and the other brings thee out. [Trumpets sound.] The King's coming; I know by his trumpets. Sirrah, 55 inquire further after me. I had talk of you last night. Though you are a fool and a knave, you shall eat; go to, follow.

Par. I praise God for you. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. Rousillon. The Count's palace.]

Flourish. Enter KING, COUNTESS, LAFEU, the two French LORDS, with Attendants.

King. We lost a jewel of her, and our esteem
Was made much poorer by it; but your son,
As mad in folly, lack'd the sense to know
Her estimation home.

Count. 'Tis past, my liege;
And I beseech your Majesty to make it 5
Natural rebellion, done i' the blaze of youth;
When oil and fire, too strong for reason's force,
O'erbears it and burns on.

King. My honour'd lady,
I have forgiven and forgotten all;
Though my revenges were high bent upon him,
And watch'd the time to shoot.

Laf. This I must say
But first I beg my pardon, the young lord
Did to his Majesty, his mother, and his lady Offence of mighty note; but to himself
The greatest wrong of all. He lost a wife 15
Whose beauty did astonish the survey
Of richest eyes, whose words all ears took captive,

Whose dear perfection hearts that scorn'd to serve
Humbly call'd mistress.

King. Praising what is lost Makes the remembrance dear. Well, call him
hither;
We are reconcil'd, and the first view shall kill
All repetition. Let him not ask our pardon.
The nature of his great offence is dead,
And deeper than oblivion we do bury
The incensing relics of it. Let him approach, ²⁵
A stranger, no offender; and inform him
So 't is our will he should.

1. Lord. I shall, my liege.

[Exit.]

King. What says he to your daughter? Have you spoke?

Laf. All that he is hath reference to your Highness.

King. Then shall we have a match. I have letters sent me ³⁰
That sets him high in fame.

Enter BERTRAM.

Laf. He looks well on 't.

King. I am not a day of season,
For thou mayst see a sunshine and a hail
In me at once. But to the brightest beams ³⁴
Distracted clouds give way, so stand thou forth;
The time is fair again.

Ber. My high-repent'd blames,
Dear sovereign, pardon to me.

King. All is whole;
Not one word more of the consumed time.
Let's take the instant by the forward top;
For we are old, and on our quick'st decrees ⁴⁰
The inaudible and noiseless foot of Time
Steals ere we can effect them. You remember
The daughter of this lord?

Ber. Admiringly, my liege. At first
I stuck my choice upon her, ere my heart ⁴⁵
Durst make too bold a herald of my tongue,
Where the impression of mine eye infixing,
Contempt his scornful perspective did lend me,
Which warp'd the line of every other favour,
Scorn'd a fair colour, or express'd it stolen, ⁵⁰
Extended or contracted all proportions
To a most hideous object. Thence it came
That she whom all men prais'd and whom myself,

Since I have lost, have lov'd, was in mine eye
The dust that did offend it.

King. Well excus'd. ⁵⁵
That thou didst love her, strikes some scores
away
From the great contempt; but love that comes too
late,

Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried,
To the great sender turns a sour offence,
Crying, "That 's good that 's gone." Our rash faults ⁶⁰

Make trivial price of serious things we have,
Not knowing them until we know their grave.
Off our displeasures, to ourselves unjust,
Destroy our friends and after weep their dust.
Our own love waking cries to see what 's done.
While shameful hate sleeps out the afternoon. ⁶⁵

Be this sweet Helen's knell, and now forget
her.

Send forth your amorous token for fair Maudlin.

The main consents are had; and here we'll stay

To see our widower's second marriage-day, ⁷⁰
Which better than the first, O dear Heaven, bless!

Or, ere they meet, in me, O nature, cease!

Laf. Come on, my son, in whom my house's
name

Must be digested, give a favour from you
To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter, ⁷⁵

That she may quickly come. [Bertram gives a ring.] By my old beard,

And every hair that 's on 't, Helen, that 's dead,
Was a sweet creature; such a ring as this,
The last that e'er I took her leave at court,
I saw upon her finger.

Ber. Hers it was not. ⁸⁰
King. Now, pray you, let me see it; for mine
eye,

While I was speaking, oft was fasten'd to 't.
This ring was mine; and, when I gave it Helen,
I bade her, if her fortunes ever stood
Necessitated to help, that by this token ⁸⁵
I would relieve her. Had you that craft, to reave her

Of what should stand her most?

Ber. My gracious sovereign,
Howe'er it pleases you to take it so,

The ring was never hers.

Count. Son, on my life,
I have seen her wear it; and she reckon'd it ⁹⁰
At her life's rate.

Laf. I am sure I saw her wear it.
Ber. You are deceiv'd, my lord, she never saw it.

In Florence was it from a casement thrown me,
Wrapp'd in a paper, which contain'd the name
Of her that threw it. Noble she was, and ⁹⁵
thought

I stood engag'd; but when I had subscrib'd
To mine own fortune, and inform'd her fully
I could not answer in that course of honour
As she had made the overture, she ceas'd ¹⁰⁰
In heavy satisfaction and would never Receive the ring again.

King. Plutus himself,
That knows the tinct and multiplying medicine,
Hath not in nature's mystery more science
Than I have in this ring. 'T was mine, 't was Helen's,

Whoever gave it you. Then, if you know ¹⁰⁵
That you are well acquainted with yourself,
Confess 't was hers, and by what rough enforcement

You got it from her. She call'd the saints to surety

That she would never put it from her finger,
Unless she gave it to yourself in bed, ¹¹⁰

Where you have never come, or sent it us
Upon her great disaster.

Ber. She never saw it.

King. Thou speak'st it falsely, as I love mine
honour;

And mak'st conjectural fears to come into me,
Which I would fain shut out. If it should prove ¹¹⁵

That thou art so inhuman, — 't will not prove
so; —

And yet I know not: thou didst hate her deadly,
And she is dead; which nothing, but to close
Her eyes myself, could win me to believe,
More than to see this ring. Take him away. ¹²⁰

[Guards seize Bertram.]

My fore-past proofs, howe'er the matter fall,
Shall tax my fears of little vanity, Having vainly fear'd too little. Away with
him!

We'll sift this matter further.

Ber. If you shall prove
This ring was ever hers, you shall as easy. ¹²⁵
Prove that I husbanded her bed in Florence,
Where yet she never was. [Exit, guarded.]

Enter a GENTLEMAN.

King. I am wrapp'd in dismal thinkings.

Gent. Gracious sovereign,
Whether I have been to blame or no, I know
not.

Here's a petition from a Florentine, ¹³⁰
Who hath for four or five removes come short
To tender it herself. I undertook it,
Vanquish'd thereto by the fair grace and speech
Of the poor suppliant, who by this I know
Is here attending. Her business looks in her ¹³⁵
With an importing visage; and she told me,
In a sweet verbal brief, it did concern
Your Highness with herself.

[King. Reads a letter. "Upon his many protestations to marry me when his wife was dead,
I blush to say it, he won me. Now is the ¹⁴⁰ Count Rousillon a widower; his vows are forfeited to me, and my honour's paid to him.
He stole from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow him to his country for justice. Grant it me, O king! In you it best lies. Otherwise ¹⁴⁵ a seducer flourishes, and a poor maid is undone.

DIANA CAPILET."

Laf. I will buy me a son-in-law in a fair, and toll for this. I'll none of him.

King. The heavens have thought well on thee, Lafen. ¹⁵⁰
To bring forth this discovery. Seek these suitors.

Go speedily and bring again the Count.
I am afraid the life of Helen, lady,
Was foully snatch'd.

Count. Now, justice on the doers!

Re-enter BERTRAM [guarded].

King. I wonder, sir, sith wives are monsters to you, ¹⁵⁵

And that you fly them as you swear them lordship,

Yet you desire to marry. What woman's that?

Enter WIDOW and DIANA.

Dia. I am, my lord, a wretched Florentine,
Derived from the ancient Capilet.

My suit, as I do understand, you know, ¹⁶⁰
And therefore know how far I may be pitied.

Wid. I am her mother, sir, whose age and
honour

Both suffer under this complaint we bring,
And both shall cease, without your remedy.

King. Come hither, Count; do you know these women? ¹⁶⁵

Ber. My lord, I neither can nor will deny
But that I know them. Do they charge me further?

Dia. Why do you look so strange upon your wife?

Ber. She's none of mine, my lord.

Dia. If you shall marry,
You give away this hand, and that is mine; ¹⁷⁰
You give away heaven's vows, and those are
mine;

You give away myself, which is known mine;
For I by vow am so embodied yours,
That she which marries you must marry me,
Either both or none. ¹⁷⁵

Laf. Your reputation comes too short for my daughter; you are no husband for her.

Ber. My lord, this is a fond and desperate creature,

Whom sometime I have laugh'd with. Let your Highness

Lay a more noble thought upon mine honour ¹⁸⁰
Than for to think that I would sink it here.

King. Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend

Till your deeds gain them. Fairer prove your honour

Than in my thought it lies.

Dia. Good my lord,
Ask him upon his oath, if he does think ¹⁸⁵
He had not my virginity.

King. What say'st thou to her?

Ber. She's impudent, my lord,
And was a common gamester to the camp.

Dia. He does me wrong, my lord; if I were
so,

He might have bought me at a common price.
Do not believe him. O, behold this ring, ¹⁹⁰

Whose high respect and rich validity

Did lack a parallel; yet for all that

He gave it to a commoner o' the camp,

If I be one.

Count. He blushes, and 't is hit. ¹⁹⁵

Of six preceding ancestors, that gem,
Confer'd by testament to the sequent issue,

Hath it been owed and worn. This is his wife;
That ring's a thousand proofs.

King. Methought you said
You saw one here in court could witness it. ²⁰⁰

Dia. I did, my lord, but loath am to produce
So bad an instrument. His name's Parolles.

Laf. I saw the man to-day, if man he be.

King. Find him, and bring him hither.
[Exit an attendant.]

Ber. What of him?

He's quoted for a most perfidious slave, ²⁰⁵
With all the spots o' the world tax'd and de-bauch'd,

Whose nature sickens but to speak a truth.

Am I or that or this for what he'll utter,

That will speak anything?

King. She hath that ring of yours.

Ber. I think she has. Certain it is I lik'd her,
 And boarded her i' the wanton way of youth.
 She knew her distance and did angle for me,
 Madding my eagerness with her restraint,
 As all impediments in fancy's course
 Are motives of more fancy; and, in fine,
 Her infinite cunning, with her modern grace,
 Subdu'd me to her rate. She got the ring;
 And I had that which any inferior might
 At market-price have bought.

Dia. I must be patient.
 You, that have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
 May justly diet me. I pray you yet, —
 Since you lack virtue, I will lose a husband, —
 Send for your ring, I will return it home,
 And give me mine again.

Ber. I have it not.
King. What ring was yours, I pray you?
Dia. Sir, much like

The same upon your finger.
King. Know you this ring? This ring was his of late.

Dia. And this was it I gave him, being abed.
King. The story then goes false, you threw it him

Out of a casement.
Dia. I have spoke the truth. 380

Enter PAROLLES.

Ber. My lord, I do confess the ring was hers.
King. You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts you.

Is this the man you speak of?
Dia. Ay, my lord.

King. Tell me, sirrah, but tell me true, I charge you,

Not fearing the displeasure of your master, 385
 Which on your just proceeding I'll keep off,
 By him and by this woman here what know
 you?

Par. So please your Majesty, my master hath been an honourable gentleman. Tricks he hath had in him, which gentlemen have. 390

King. Come, come, to the purpose. Did he love this woman?

Par. Faith, sir, he did love her; but how?
King. How, I pray you?

Par. He did love her, sir, as a gentleman loves a woman. 395

King. How is that?
Par. He lov'd her, sir, and lov'd her not.

King. As thou art a knave, and no knave.
 What an equivocal companion is this! 400

Par. I am a poor man, and at your Majesty's command.

Laf. He's a good drum, my lord, but a naughty orator.

Dia. Do you know he promis'd me marriage? 405

Par. Faith, I know more than I'll speak.
King. But wilt thou not speak all thou know'st?

Par. Yes, so please your Majesty. I did go between them, as I said; but more than that, he lov'd her; for indeed he was mad for her,
 and talk'd of Satan and of Limbo and of 410

Furies and I know not what. Yet I was in that credit with them at that time that I knew of their going to bed, and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things which would derive me ill will to speak of; therefore I will not speak what I know. 405

King. Thou hast spoken all already, unless thou canst say they are married. But thou art too fine in thy evidence; therefore stand aside.
 This ring, you say, was yours?

Dia. Ay, my good lord.
King. Where did you buy it? Or who gave it you? 410

Dia. It was not given me, nor I did not buy it.
King. Who lent it you?

Dia. It was not lent me neither.
King. Where did you find it, then?

Dia. I found it not.
King. If it were yours by none of all these ways, 415

How could you give it him?
Dia. I never gave it him.

Laf. This woman's an easy glove, my lord;
 she goes off and on at pleasure.

King. This ring was mine; I gave it his first wife. 420

Dia. It might be yours or hers, for aught I
 know.

King. Take her away; I do not like her now.
 To prison with her; and away with him.

Unless thou tell'st me where thou hadst this
 ring, 425

Thou diest within this hour.
Dia. I'll never tell you.

King. Take her away.
Dia. I'll put in bail, my liege.

King. I think thee now some common customer.

Dia. By Jove, if ever I knew man, 't was you.
King. Wherefore hast thou accus'd him all this while?

Dia. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty. 430

He knows I am no maid, and he'll swear to 't:
 I'll swear I am a maid, and he knows not.

Great king, I am no strumpet, by my life;
 I am either maid, or else this old man's wife.

King. She does abuse our ears. To prison
 with her! 435

Dia. Good mother, fetch my bail. Stay, royal sir, [Exit Widow.]

The jeweller that owes the ring is sent for,
 And he shall surety me. But for this lord,

Who hath abus'd me, as he knows himself,
 Though yet he never harm'd me, here I quit
 him. 440

He knows himself my bed he hath defil'd,
 And at that time he got his wife with child.

Dead though she be, she feels her young one kick.

So there's my riddle: one that's dead is quick;
 And now behold the meaning.

Re-enter Widow, with HELENA.

King. Is there no exorcist
 Beguiles the truer office of mine eyes? 445

Is 't real that I see?

Hel. No, my good lord ;
'Tis but the shadow of a wife you see,
The name and not the thing.

Ber. Both, both, O, pardon !

Hel. O my good lord, when I was like this
maid, 310
I found you wondrous kind. There is your
ring ;

And, look you, here 's your letter. This it says :
" When from my finger you can get this ring
And are by me with child," etc.

This is done.

Will you be mine, now you are doubly won ? 315

Ber. If she, my liege, can make me know this clearly,

I 'll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly.

Hel. If it appear not plain and prove untrue,
Deadly divorce step between me and you !
O my dear mother, do I see you living ? 320

Laf. Mine eyes smell onions ; I shall weep anon.

[To Parolles.] Good Tom Drum, lend me a handkercher. So,

I thank thee ; wait on me home, I 'll make sport with thee.

Let thy courtesies alone, they are scurvy ones.

King. Let us from point to point this story
know, 325

To make the even truth in pleasure flow.

[To Diana.] If thou be'st yet a fresh uncropped flower,

Choose thou thy husband, and I 'll pay thy
dower ;

For I can guess that by thy honest aid
Thou kept'st a wife herself, thyself a maid. 330

Of that and all the progress, more and less,

Resolvedly more leisure shall express.

All yet seems well ; and if it end so meet,

The bitter past, more welcome is the sweet.
[Flourish.]

[EPILOGUE]

[King.] The king 's a beggar, now the play is done. 335

All is well ended, if this suit be won,

That you express content ; which we will pay,

With strife to please you, day exceeding day.

Ours be your patience then, and yours our
parts ;

Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts. [Exeunt omnes. 340]

MEASURE FOR MEASURE

THE date most generally agreed on for the composition of Measure for Measure is 1603-4, and though external evidence is even more scanty than usual, internal evidence tends to corroborate this conjecture. The entry in the Revels accounts of a performance on December 26, 1604, is a forgery, but is founded on a good guess. Barksted's Myrrha (1607) contains an apparent reminiscence of the simile in II. iv. 24-26, and thus affords a later limit. The lines in I. i. 68-73 and II. iv. 27-30 may have been written in allusion to James I's attitude towards the populace, and, if so, place the play soon after his accession in 1603. Similarities in tone, in metre, and in details of thought, to All's Well and Hamlet all tend in the same direction.

There is no trace of the play's having been printed before 1623, and the present text is based on the far from perfect version in the First Folio.

Stories containing the central situation of Measure for Measure, the perfidy of Angelo, are common in European literature. The direct source, however, of Shakespeare's play is clearly to be found in the double drama of Promos and Cassandra, written by George Whetstone before he left England in 1578, the plot of which he later threw into narrative form in his Heptameron of Civil Discourses (1582). Whetstone's source seems to have been the fifth novel of the tenth day in the Hecatommihi of Giraldu Cinthio, who dramatized the same story in his Epitia. There is no evidence of Shakespeare's having used any version of the story but Whetstone's drama, except that in the Heptameron the narrator of the tale is a Madam Isabella, the identity of whose name with that of Shakespeare's heroine may point to his having seen the book.

The scene of Whetstone's comedy is Julio in Hungary, governed by Promos as representative of Corvinus, King of Bohemia. The society of this city is described as seething with moral corruption, a picture transferred by Shakespeare to Vienna. But the typical characters chosen to represent this society are all re-created in Measure for Measure, Pompey alone bearing some resemblance to a prototype, the Rosko of Whetstone. The function of the King in the older play is practically confined to the redressing of wrongs in the last act, so that the Duke's disguise as a monk, all his activity in the intrigue, and his final offer of marriage to Isabella, are Shakespeare's. The Deputy in Whetstone is honest in his severity before he sees Isabella, but the subtle portrayal of his austere Puritanism, so carefully made in the earlier scenes of the present play, is altogether absent. Shakespeare spares him the additional villainy of a false promise of marriage in his attempt to seduce the heroine, and also the cruelty of ordering the head of her brother to be sent to her.

The most profound change is in the creation of the rôle of Mariana. In the older forms of the story, the main heroine yields to the Deputy, who is forced to marry her at the end. But for such an Isabella as Shakespeare conceived, this fate was clearly impossible. So the device of substitution, which Shakespeare had used in All's Well, was again employed, and a much loftier type of character made possible for the heroine. This elevation appears in all the great scenes, in her argument on mercy and justice, in her immediate rejection of Angelo's proposal, and in her scorn for her brother's weakness, — all of which are found in Whetstone in a crude form. It is suggestive of the level of Whetstone's Cassandra that considerations of reputation play a great part in the discussion between brother and sister. The first appearance of Isabella in Shakespeare is as a novice about to enter a sisterhood; the last is as the prospective bride of the Duke. Neither of these is in Whetstone; and the first may be regarded as indicating Shakespeare's view of the essential ideal quality in Isabella's character, the second as a concession to the convention of the happy ending. It is perhaps significant that she does not explicitly accept the Duke's proposal.

The increased delicacy of characterization is seen again in the brother. His first sound reaction in horror against Angelo's infamous proposal is wholly Shakespearean, and serves to place him on a plane which, in spite of his later cowardice, makes it possible to conceive him as Isabella's brother. The Provost is a development of Whetstone's gaoler; but Escalus is a creation of Shakespeare's, serving as a foil to the severity of Angelo.

MEASURE FOR MEASURE

[DRAMATIS PERSONÆ]

VINCENTIO, the Duke.
ANGELO, the Deputy.
ESCALUS, an ancient Lord.
CLAUDIO, a young gentleman.
LUCIO, a fantastic.
Two other like gentlemen.
Provost.
THOMAS, } two friars.
PETER, }
[A Justice.]
[VARRIUS.]

ELBOW, a simple constable.
FROTH, a foolish gentleman.
[POMPEY,] clown [servant to Mistress Overdone].
ABHORSON, an executioner.
BARNARDINE, a dissolute prisoner.

ISABELLA, sister to Claudio.
MARIANA, betrothed to Angelo.
JULIET, beloved of Claudio.
FRANCISCA, a nun.
MISTRESS OVERDONE, a bawd.

SCENE : Vienna.

ACT I

SCENE I. [An apartment in the Duke's palace.]

Enter DUKE, ESCALUS, Lords [and Attendants].

Duke. Escalus.

Escal. My lord.

Duke. Of government the properties to unfold

Would seem in me to affect speech and discourse,

Since I am put to know that your own science exceeds

In that, the lists of all advice My strength can give you. Then no more remains,

But that to your sufficiency . . . as your worth is able,

And let them work. The nature of our people, 10
Our city's institutions, and the terms

For common justice, you're as pregnant in
As art and practice hath enriched any

That we remember. There is our commission,
From which we would not have you warp. Call 15

hither,
I say, bid come before us Angelo.

[Exit an attendant.]
What figure of us think you he will bear?

For you must know, we have with special soul
Elected him our absence to supply,

Lent him our terror, dress'd him with our love,
And given his deputation all the organs 21

Of our own power. What think you of it?
Escal. If any in Vienna be of worth

To undergo such ample grace and honour,
It is Lord Angelo.

Enter ANGELO.

Duke. Look where he comes. 25

Ang. Always obedient to your Grace's will,
I come to know your pleasure.

Duke. Angelo,
There is a kind of character in thy life,

That to the observer doth thy history

Fully unfold. Thyself and thy belongings 30
Are not thine own so proper as to waste

Thyself upon thy virtues, they on thee.
Heaven doth with us as we with torches do,

Not light them for themselves; for if our virtues
Did not go forth of us, 't were all alike 35

As if we had them not. Spirits are not finely touch'd

But to fine issues, nor Nature never lends
The smallest scruple of her excellence

But, like a thrifty goddess, she determines Herself the glory of a creditor, 40

Both thanks and use. But I do bend my speech
To one that can my part in him advertise.

Hold therefore, Angelo:
In our remove be thou at full yourself.

Mortality and mercy in Vienna 45
Live in thy tongue and heart. Old Escalus,

Though first in question, is thy secondary.
Take thy commission.

Ang. Now, good my lord,
Let there be some more test made of my metal

Before so noble and so great a figure 50
Be stamp'd upon it.

Duke. No more evasion.
We have with a heaven'd and prepared choice

Proceeded to you; therefore take your honours.
Our haste from hence is of so quick condition

That it prefers itself and leaves unquestion'd 55 Matters of needful value. We shall write to

you,
As time and our concerns shall importune,

How it goes with us, and do look to know
What doth befall you here. So, fare you well.

To the hopeful execution do I leave you 60
Of your commissions.

Ang. Yet give leave, my lord,
That we may bring you something on the way.

Duke. My haste may not admit it;
Nor need you, on mine honour, have to do

With any scruple. Your scope is as mine own, 65
So to enforce or qualify the laws

As to your soul seems good. Give me your hand ;
 I'll privily away. I love the people,
 But do not like to stage me to their eyes.
 Though it do well, I do not relish well 70
 Their loud applause and Aves vehement ;
 Nor do I think the man of safe discretion
 That does affect it. Once more, fare you well.

Ang. The heavens give safety to your purposes !

Escal. Lead forth and bring you back in happiness ! 75

Duke. I thank you. Fare you well. [Exit.]

Escal. I shall desire you, sir, to give me leave

To have free speech with you ; and it concerns me

To look into the bottom of my place.
 A power I have, but of what strength and nature 80

I am not yet instructed.

Ang. 'T is so with me. Let us withdraw together,

And we may soon our satisfaction have

Touching that point.

Escal. I'll wait upon your honour. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [A street.]

Enter LUCIO and two other GENTLEMEN.

Lucio. If the Duke with the other dukes come not to composition with the King of Hungary, why then all the dukes fall upon the King.

1. Gent. Heaven grant us its peace, but not the King of Hungary's !

2. Gent. Amen.

Lucio. Thou conclud'st like the sanctimonious pirate, that went to sea with the Ten Commandments, but scrap'd one out of the table.

2. Gent. "Thou shalt not steal" ? 10

Lucio. Ay, that he raz'd.

1. Gent. Why, 't was a commandment to command the captain and all the rest from their functions ; they put forth to steal. There's not a soldier of us all, that, in the thanksgiving before meat, do relish the petition well that prays for peace. 17

2. Gent. I never heard any soldier dislike it.

Lucio. I believe thee ; for I think thou never wast where grace was said. 20

2. Gent. No ? A dozen times at least.

1. Gent. What, in metre ?

Lucio. In any proportion or in any language.

1. Gent. I think, or in any religion. 24

Lucio. Ay, why not ? Grace is grace, despite of all controversy ; as, for example, thou thyself art a wicked villain, despite of all grace.

1. Gent. Well, there went but a pair of shears between us.

Lucio. I grant ; as there may between the lists and the velvet. Thou art the list, 31

1. Gent. And thou the velvet. Thou art good velvet ; thou 'rt a three-pil'd piece, I warrant thee. I had as lief be a list of an English kersay as be pil'd, as thou art pil'd, for a French velvet. Do I speak feelingly now ? 36

Lucio. I think thou dost ; and, indeed, with most painful feeling of thy speech. I will, out of thine own confession, learn to begin thy health ; but, whilst I live, forget to drink after thee. 40

1. Gent. I think I have done myself wrong, have I not ?

2. Gent. Yes, that thou hast, whether thou art tainted or free. 44

Enter Bawd [MISTRESS OVERDONE].

Lucio. Behold, behold, where Madam Mitigation comes ! I have purchas'd as many diseases under her roof as come to —

2. Gent. To what, I pray ?

Lucio. Judge. 49

2. Gent. To three thousand dolours a year.

1. Gent. Ay, and more.

Lucio. A French crown more.

1. Gent. Thou art always figuring diseases in me ; but thou art full of error ; I am sound. 54

Lucio. Nay, not as one would say, healthy ; but so sound as things that are hollow. Thy bones are hollow ; impiety has made a feast of thee.

1. Gent. How now ! which of your hips has the most profound sciatica ? 59

Mrs. Ov. Well, well ; there's one yonder arrested and carried to prison was worth five thousand of you all.

2. Gent. Who's that, I pray thee ?

Mrs. Ov. Marry, sir, that's Claudio, Signior Claudio. 65

1. Gent. Claudio to prison ? 'T is not so.

Mrs. Ov. Nay, but I know 't is so. I saw him arrested, saw him carried away ; and, which is more, within these three days his head to be chop'd off. 70

Lucio. But, after all this fooling, I would not have it so. Art thou sure of this ?

Mrs. Ov. I am too sure of it ; and it is for getting Madam Julietta with child. 74

Lucio. Believe me, this may be. He promis'd to meet me two hours since, and he was ever precise in promise-keeping.

2. Gent. Besides, you know, it draws something near to the speech we had to such a purpose. 79

1. Gent. But, most of all, agreeing with the proclamation.

Lucio. Away ! let's go learn the truth of it. [Exeunt Lucio and Gentlemen].

Mrs. Ov. Thus, what with the war, what with the sweat, what with the gallows, and what with poverty, I am custom-shrunk. 85

Enter Clown [POMPEY].

How now ! what's the news with you ?

Pom. Yonder man is carried to prison.

Mrs. Ov. Well ; what has he done ?

Pom. A woman.

Mrs. Ov. But what's his offence ? 90

Pom. Groping for trouts in a peculiar river.

Mrs. Ov. What, is there a maid with child by him ?

Pom. No, but there's a woman with maid by him. You have not heard of the proclamation, have you ? 94

Mrs. Ov. What proclamation, man?

Pom. All houses in the suburbs of Vienna must be pull'd down.

Mrs. Ov. And what shall become of those in the city?

Pom. They shall stand for seed. They had gone down too, but that a wise burgher put in for them.

Mrs. Ov. But shall all our houses of resort in the suburbs be pull'd down?

Pom. To the ground, mistress.

Mrs. Ov. Why, here's a change indeed in the commonwealth! What shall become of me?

Pom. Come, fear not you; good counsellors lack no clients. Though you change your place, you need not change your trade. I'll be your tapster still. Courage! there will be pity taken on you. You that have worn your eyes almost out in the service, you will be considered.

Mrs. Ov. What's to do here, Thomas tapster? Let's withdraw.

Pom. Here comes Signior Claudio, led by the provost to prison; and there's Madam Juliet.

Enter PROVOST, CLAUDIO, JULIET, and Officers.

Claud. Fellow, why dost thou show me thus to the world?

Bear me to prison, where I am committed.

Prov. I do it not in evil disposition, But from Lord Angelo by special charge.

Claud. Thus can the demigod authority Make us pay down for our offence by weight The words of heaven: on whom it will, it will; On whom it will not, so; yet still 'tis just.

[Re-enter LUCIO and two Gentlemen.]

Lucio. Why, how now, Claudio! whence comes this restraint?

Claud. From too much liberty, my Lucio, liberty.

As surfeit is the father of much fast, So every scope by the immoderate use Turns to restraint. Our natures do pursue, Like rats that ravin down their proper bane, A thirsty evil; and when we drink we die.

Lucio. If I could speak so wisely under an arrest, I would send for certain of my creditors; and yet, to say the truth, I had as lief have the foppery of freedom as the morality of imprisonment. What's thy offence, Claudio?

Claud. What but to speak of would offend again.

Lucio. What, is't murder?

Claud. No.

Lucio. Lechery?

Claud. Call it so.

Prov. Away, sir! you must go.

Claud. One word, good friend. Lucio, a word with you.

Lucio. A hundred, if they'll do you any good.

Is lechery so look'd after?

Claud. Thus stands it with me: upon a true contract

I got possession of Julietta's bed.

You know the lady; she is fast my wife, Save that we do the denunciation lack

Of outward order. This we came not to, Only for propagation of a dower

Remaining in the coffer of her friends,

From whom we thought it meet to hide our love Till time had made them for us. But it chanceth

The stealth of our most mutual entertainment With character too gross is writ on Juliet.

Lucio. With child, perhaps?

Claud. Unhappily, even so.

And the new deputy now for the Duke— Whether it be the fault and glimpse of newness,

Or whether that the body public be A horse whereon the governor doth ride,

Who, newly in the seat, that it may know He can command, lets it straight feel the spur;

Whether the tyranny be in his place, Or in his eminence that fills it up,

I stagger in:—but this new governor Awakes me all the enrolled penalties

Which have, like unscour'd armour, hung by the wall

So long that nineteen zodiacs have gone round And none of them been worn; and, for a name,

Now puts the drowsy and neglected act Freshly on me. 'Tis surely for a name.

Lucio. I warrant it is; and thy head stands so tickle on thy shoulders that a milkmaid, if she be in love, may sigh it off. Send after the Duke and appeal to him.

Claud. I have done so, but he's not to be found.

I prithee, Lucio, do me this kind service. This day my sister should the cloister enter

And there receive her approbation. Acquaint her with the danger of my state;

Implore her, in my voice, that she make friends

To the strict deputy; bid herself assay him. I have great hope in that; for in her youth

There is a prone and speechless dialect, Such as move men; beside, she hath prosperous art

When she will play with reason and discourse, And well she can persuade.

Lucio. I pray she may; as well for the encouragement of the like, which else would stand under grievous imposition, as for the enjoying of thy life, who I would be sorry should be thus foolishly lost at a game of tick-tack. I'll to her.

Claud. I thank you, good friend Lucio.

Lucio. Within two hours.

Claud. Come, officer, away!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE [III. A monastery.]

Enter DUKE and FRIAR THOMAS.

Duke. No, holy father; throw away that thought.

Believe not that the dribbling dart of love Can pierce a complete bosom. Why I desire thee

To give me secret harbour, hath a purpose
More grave and wrinkled than the aims and ends
Of burning youth.

Fri. T. May your Grace speak of it ?

Duke. My holy sir, none better knows than
you

How I have ever lov'd the life removed,
And held in idle price to haunt assemblies
Where youth, and cost, and witless bravery keeps.

I have deliver'd to Lord Angelo,
A man of stricture and firm abstinence,
My absolute power and place here in Vienna,
And he supposes me travell'd to Poland ;
For so I have strew'd it in the common ear, 15
And so it is receiv'd. Now, pious sir,
You will demand of me why I do this.

Fri. T. Gladly, my lord.

Duke. We have strict statutes and most bitting laws,

The needful bits and curbs to headstrong
steeds,

Which for this nineteen years we have let slip ;
Even like an o'ergrown lion in a cave,
That goes not out to prey. Now, as fond fathers,

Having bound up the threatening twigs of birch,

Only to stick it in their children's sight 25
For terror, not to use, in time the rod [Becomes] more mock'd than fear'd ; so our decrees,

Dead to infliction, to themselves are dead,
And liberty plucks justice by the nose,
The baby breeds the nurse, and quite athwart 30
Goes all decorum.

Fri. T. It rested in your Grace
To unloose this tied-up justice when you
pleas'd :

And it in you more dreadful would have seem'd
Than in Lord Angelo.

Duke. I do fear, too dreadful.
Sith 't was my fault to give the people scope, 35
'T would be my tyranny to strike and gall
them

For what I bid them do ; for we bid this be
done,

When evil deeds have their permissive pass
And not the punishment. Therefore indeed, my father,

I have on Angelo impos'd the office ; 40
Who may, in the ambush of my name, strike
home,

And yet my nature never in the sight
To do it slander. And to behold his sway,
I will, as 't were a brother of your order,
Visit both prince and people ; therefore, I prithe, 45

Supply me with the habit and instruct me
How I may formally in person bear me
Like a true friar. Moe-reasons for this action
At our more leisure shall I render you ;
Only, this one : Lord Angelo is precise, 50
Stands at a guard with envy, scarce confesses
That his blood flows, or that his appetite

Is more to bread than stone ; hence shall we
see,
If power change purpose, what our seemers be.
[Exeunt]

SCENE [IV. A nunnery.]

Enter ISABELLA and FRANCISCA, a Nun.

Isab. And have you nuns no farther privileges ?

Fran. Are not these large enough ?

Isab. Yes, truly. I speak not as desiring
more,

But rather wishing a more strict restraint
Upon the sisterhood, the votaries of Saint Clare.

Lucio. [Within.] Ho ! Peace be in this place !

Isab. Who 's that which calls ?

Fran. It is a man's voice. Gentle Isabella, Turn you the key, and know his business of
him.

You may, I may not ; you are yet unsworn.
When you have vow'd, you must not speak with men 10

But in the presence of the prioress ;
Then, if you speak, you must not show your
face,

Or, if you show your face, you must not speak.
He calls again ; I pray you, answer him.

Isab. Peace and prosperity ! Who is 't that calls ? 15

[Enter LUCIO.]

Lucio. Hail, virgin, if you be, as those cheek-roses

Proclaim you are no less ! Can you so stead me
As bring me to the sight of Isabella,
A novice of this place and the fair sister
To her unhappy brother Claudio ? 20

Isab. Why her unhappy brother ? let me ask,
The rather for I now must make you know
I am that Isabella and his sister.

Lucio. Gentle and fair, your brother kindly greet you.

Not to be weary with you, he 's in prison. 25

Isab. Woe me ! for what ?

Lucio. For that which, if myself might be his judge,

He should receive his punishment in thanks.

He hath got his friend with child.

Isab. Sir, make me not your story.

Lucio. It is true.
I would not — though 't is my familiar sin 30

With maids to seem the lapwing and to jest, Tongue far from heart — play with all virgins
so.

I hold you as a thing enskied and sainted,
By your renouncement an immortal spirit, 35
And to be talk'd with in sincerity,
As with a saint.

Isab. You do blaspheme the good in mocking
me.

Lucio. Do not believe it. Fewness and truth,
't is thus :

Your brother and his lover have embrac'd, 40
As those that feed grow full, as blossoming time
That from the seedness the bare fallow brings

To teeming foison, even so her plenteous womb
Expresseth his full tilth and husbandry.

Isab. Some one with child by him? My cousin Juliet?

Lucio. Is she your cousin?

Isab. Adoptedly; as school-maids change their names

By vain though apt affection.

Lucio. She it is.

Isab. O, let him marry her.

Lucio. This is the point.

The Duke is very strangely gone from hence;

Bore many gentlemen, myself being one,

In hand, in hope of action; but we do learn

By those that know the very nerves of state,

His givings-out were of an infinite distance

From his true-meant design. Upon his place,

And with full line of his authority,

Governs Lord Angelo, a man whose blood

Is very snow-broth, one who never feels

The wanton stings and motions of the sense,

But doth rebate and blunt his natural edge

With profits of the mind, study, and fast.

He—to give fear to use and liberty,

Which have for long run by the hideous law,

As mice by lions—hath pick'd out an act;

Under whose heavy sense your brother's life

Falls into forfeit; he arrests him on it;

And follows close the rigour of the statute,

To make him an example. All hope is gone,

Unless you have the grace by your fair prayer

To soften Angelo. And that's my pith

Of business 'twixt you and your poor brother.

Isab. Doth he so seek his life?

Lucio. Has censur'd him

Already; and, as I hear, the Provost hath

A warrant for his execution.

Isab. Alas! what poor ability 's in me

To do him good?

Lucio. Assay the power you have.

Isab. My power? Alas, I doubt—

Lucio. Our doubts are traitors;

And makes us lose the good we oft might win

By fearing to attempt. Go to Lord Angelo,

And let him learn to know, when maidens sue

Men give like gods; but when they weep and kneel,

All their petitions are as freely theirs

As they themselves would owe them.

Isab. I'll see what I can do.

Lucio. But speedily.

Isab. I will about it straight;

No longer staying but to give the Mother

Notice of my affair. I humbly thank you.

Commend me to my brother. Soon at night

I'll send him certain word of my success.

Lucio. I take my leave of you.

Isab. Good sir, adieu.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I. [A hall in Angelo's house.]

Enter ANGELO, ESCALUS, a JUSTICE, and Servants.

Ang. We must not make a scarecrow of the law,

Setting it up to fear the birds of prey,
And let it keep one shape, till custom make it
Their perch and not their terror.

Escal. Ay, but yet
Let us be keen, and rather cut a little,
Than fall, and bruise to death. Alas, this gentleman

Whom I would save had a most noble father!

Let but your honour know,
Whom I believe to be most strait in virtue,
That, in the working of your own affections,
Had time coher'd with place or place with wish-
ing,

Or that the resolute acting of your blood
Could have attain'd the effect of your own purpose,

Whether you had not sometime in your life
Err'd in this point which now you censure him,
And pull'd the law upon you.

Ang. 'Tis one thing to be tempted, Escalus,

Another thing to fall. I not deny,

The jury, passing on the prisoner's life,

May in the sworn twelve have a thief or two Guiltier than him they try. What's open made to justice,

That justice seizes. What knows the laws

That thieves do pass on thieves? 'Tis very

pregnant,

The jewel that we find, we stoop and take 't

Because we see it; but what we do not see

We tread upon, and never think of it.

You may not so extenuate his offence

For I have had such faults; but rather tell me,

When I, that censure him, do so offend,

Let mine own judgement pattern out my death,

And nothing come in partial. Sir, he must die.

Enter PROVOST.

Escal. Be it as your wisdom will.

Ang. Where is the Provost?

Prov. Here, if it like your honour.

Ang. See that Claudio

Be executed by nine-to-morrow morning.

Bring him his confessor, let him be prepar'd;

For that's the utmost of his pilgrimage.

[Exit Provost.]

Escal. [Aside.] Well, Heaven forgive him!

and forgive us all!

Some rise by sin, and some by virtue fall.

Some run from brakes of vice, and answer none;

And some condemned for a fault alone.

Enter ELBOW, FROTH, Clown [POMPEY, and] Officers.

Elb. Come, bring them away. If these be good people in a commonweal that do nothing but use their abuses in common houses, I know

no law. Bring them away.

Ang. How now, sir! What's your name?

and what's the matter?

Elb. If it please your honour, I am the poor

Duke's constable, and my name is Elbow. I do lean upon justice, sir, and do bring in here before your good honour two notorious benefactors.

Ang. Benefactors? Well, what benefactors are they? Are they not malefactors?

Elb. If it please your honour, I know not well what they are; but precise villains they are, that I am sure of; and void of all profanation in the world that good Christians ought to have.

Escal. This comes off well. Here's a wise officer.

Ang. Go to; what quality are they of? Elbow is your name? Why dost thou not speak, Elbow?

Pom. He cannot, sir; he's out at elbow.

Ang. What are you, sir?

Elb. He, sir! A tapster, sir; parcel-bawd; one that serves a bad woman, whose house, sir, was, as they say, pluck'd down in the suburbs; and now she professes a hot-house, which, I think, is a very ill house too.

Escal. How know you that?

Elb. My wife, sir, whom I detest before Heaven and your honour,— Escal. How? Thy wife?

Elb. Ay, sir; whom, I thank Heaven, is an honest woman,— Escal. Dost thou detest her therefore?

Elb. I say, sir, I will detest myself also, as well as she, that this house, if it be not a bawd's house, it is pity of her life, for it is a naughty house.

Escal. How dost thou know that, constable?

Elb. Marry, sir, by my wife; who, if she had been a woman cardinally given, might have been accus'd in fornication, adultery, and all uncleanness there.

Escal. By the woman's means?

Elb. Ay, sir, by Mistress Overdone's means; but as she spit in his face, so she defid' him.

Pom. Sir, if it please your honour, this is not so.

Elb. Prove it before these varlets here, thou honourable man; prove it.

Escal. Do you hear how he misplaces?

Pom. Sir, she came in great with child, and longing, saving your honour's reverence, for stew'd prunes. Sir, we had but two in the house, which at that very distant time stood, as it were, in a fruit-dish, a dish of some three-pence. Your honours have seen such dishes; they are not china dishes, but very good dishes,— Escal. Go to, go to; no matter for the dish, sir.

Pom. No, indeed, sir, not of a pin; you are therein in the right. But to the point. As I say, this Mistress Elbow, being, as I say, with child, and being great-bellied, and longing, as I said, for prunes; and having but two in the dish, as I said, Master Froth here, this very man, having eaten the rest, as I said, and, as I say, paying for them very honestly; for, as you know, Master Froth, I could not give you three-pence again.

Froth. No, indeed.

Pom. Very well; you being then, if you be rememb'ed, cracking the stones of the foresaid prunes,— Froth. Ay, so I did indeed.

Pom. Why, very well. I telling you then, if you be rememb'ed, that such a one and such a one were past cure of the thing you wot of, unless they kept very good diet, as I told you,—

Froth. All this is true.

Pom. Why, very well, then,—

Escal. Come, you are a tedious fool. To the purpose. What was done to Elbow's wife, that he hath cause to complain of? Come me to what was done to her.

Pom. Sir, your honour cannot come to that yet.

Escal. No, sir, nor I mean it not.

Pom. Sir, but you shall come to it, by your honour's leave. And, I beseech you, look into Master Froth here, sir; a man of fourscore pound a year; whose father died at Hallowmas. Was't not at Hallowmas, Master Froth?

Froth. All-hallowd eve.

Pom. Why, very well; I hope here be truths. He, sir, sitting, as I say, in a lower chair, sir; 't was in the Bunch of Grapes, where indeed you have a delight to sit, have you not?

Froth. I have so; because it is an open room and good for winter.

Pom. Why, very well, then; I hope here be truths.

Ang. This will last out a night in Russia, When nights are longest there. I'll take my leave,

And leave you to the hearing of the cause, Hoping you'll find good cause to whip them all.

Escal. I think no less. Good morrow to your lordship.

[Exit Angelo.] Now, sir, come on. What was done to Elbow's wife, once more?

Pom. Once, sir? There was nothing done to her once.

Elb. I beseech you, sir, ask him what this man did to my wife.

Pom. I beseech your honour, ask me.

Escal. Well, sir; what did this gentleman to her?

Pom. I beseech you, sir, look in this gentleman's face. Good Master Froth, look upon his honour; 'tis for a good purpose. Doth your honour mark his face?

Escal. Ay, sir, very well.

Pom. Nay, I beseech you, mark it well.

Escal. Well, I do so.

Pom. Doth your honour see any harm in his face?

Escal. Why, no.

Pom. I'll be suppos'd upon a book, his face is the worst thing about him. Good, then; if his face be the worst thing about him, how could Master Froth do the constable's wife any harm? I would know that of your honour.

Escal. He's in the right. Constable, what say you to it?

Elb. First, an it like you, the house is a respected house; next, this is a respected fellow; and his mistress is a respected woman.

Pom. By this hand, sir, his wife is a more respected person than any of us all.

Elb. Varlet, thou liest! Thou liest, wicked varlet! The time is yet to come that she was ever respected with man, woman, or child.

Pom. Sir, she was respected with him before he married with her.

Escal. Which is the wiser here, Justice or Iniquity? Is this true?

Elb. O thou catiff! O thou varlet! O thou wicked Hannibal! I respected with her before I was married to her! If ever I was respected with her, or she with me, let not your worship think me the poor Duke's officer. Prove this, thou wicked Hannibal, or I'll have mine action of battery on thee.

Escal. If he took you a box o' the ear, you might have your action of slander too.

Elb. Marry, I thank your good worship for it. What is 't your worship's pleasure I shall do with this wicked catiff?

Escal. Truly, officer, because he hath some offences in him that thou wouldst discover if thou couldst, let him continue in his courses till thou know'st what they are.

Elb. Marry, I thank your worship for it. Thou seest, thou wicked varlet, now, what's come upon thee. Thou art to continue now, thou varlet; thou art to continue.

Escal. Where were you born, friend?

Froth. Here in Vienna, sir.

Escal. Are you of fourscore pounds a year?

Froth. Yes, an't please you, sir.

Escal. So. What trade are you of, sir?

Pom. A tapster; a poor widow's tapster.

Escal. Your mistress' name?

Pom. Mistress Overdone.

Escal. Hath she had any more than one husband?

Pom. Nine, sir; Overdone by the last.

Escal. Nine! Come hither to me, Master

Froth. Master Froth, I would not have you acquainted with tapsters; they will draw you, Master Froth, and you will hang them. Get you gone, and let me hear no more of you.

Froth. I thank your worship. For mine own part, I never come into any room in a tap-house, but I am drawn in.

Escal. Well, no more of it, Master Froth. Farewell. [Exit Froth.] Come you hither to me, Master tapster. What's your name, Master tapster?

Pom. Pompey.

Escal. What else?

Pom. Bum, sir.

Escal. Troth, and your bum is the greatest thing about you, so that in the beastliest sense you are Pompey the Great. Pompey, you are partly a bawd, Pompey, howsoever you colour it in being a tapster, are you not? Come, tell me true; it shall be the better for you.

Pom. Truly, sir, I am a poor fellow that would live.

Escal. How would you live, Pompey? By being a bawd? What do you think of the trade, Pompey? Is it a lawful trade?

Pom. If the law would allow it, sir.

Escal. But the law will not allow it, Pompey; nor it shall not be allowed in Vienna.

Pom. Does your worship mean to geld and splay all the youth of the city?

Escal. No, Pompey.

Pom. Truly, sir, in my poor opinion, they will to't then. If your worship will take order for the drabs and the knaves, you need not to fear the bawds.

Escal. There is pretty orders beginning, I can tell you. It is but heading and hanging.

Pom. If you head and hang all that offend that way but for ten year together, you'll be glad to give out a commission for more heads. If this law hold in Vienna ten year, I'll rent the fairest house in it after three-pence a day. If you live to see this come to pass, say Pompey told you so.

Escal. Thank you, good Pompey; and, in requital of your prophecy, hark you: I advise you, let me not find you before me again upon any complaint whatsoever; no, not for dwelling where you do. If I do, Pompey, I shall beat you to your tent, and prove a shrewd Cæsar to you; in plain dealing, Pompey, I shall have you whipt. So, for this time, Pompey, fare you well.

Pom. I thank your worship for your good counsel; [aside] but I shall follow it as the flesh and fortune shall better determine.

Whip me? No, no; let carman whip his jade; The valiant heart's not whipt out of his trade.

Escal. Come hither to me, Master Elbow; come hither, Master constable. How long have you been in this place of constable?

Elb. Seven year and a half, sir.

Escal. I thought, by the readiness in the office, you had continued in it some time. You say, seven years together?

Elb. And a half, sir.

Escal. Alas, it hath been great pains to you. They do you wrong to put you so oft upon 't. Are there not men in your ward sufficient to serve it?

Elb. Faith, sir, few of any wit in such matters. As they are chosen, they are glad to choose me for them. I do it for some piece of money, and go through with all.

Escal. Look you bring me in the names of some six or seven, the most sufficient of your parish.

Elb. To your worship's house, sir?

Escal. To my house. Fare you well.

[Exit Elbow.]

What's o'clock, think you?

Just. Eleven, sir.

Escal. I pray you home to dinner with me.

Just. I humbly thank you.

Escal. It grieves me for the death of Claudio; But there's no remedy.

Just. Lord Angelo is severe.

Escal. It is but needful.

Mercy is not itself, that oft looks so;

Pardon is still the nurse of second woe.

But yet,—poor Claudio! There is no remedy. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [Another room in the same.]

Enter PROVOST and a SERVANT.

Serv. He's hearing of a cause; he will come straight.

I'll tell him of you.

Prov. Pray you, do.

[Exit SERVANT.]

I'll know

His pleasure; may be he will relent.
He hath but as offended in a dream!
All sects, all ages smack of this vice; and he
To die for 't!

Enter ANGELO.

Ang. Now, what's the matter, Provost?

Prov. Is it your will Claudio shall die to-morrow?

Ang. Did not I tell thee yea? Hadst thou not order?

Why dost thou ask again?

Prov. Lest I might be too rash.

Under your good correction, I have seen
When, after execution, judgement hath Repented o'er his doom.

Ang. Go to; let that be mine.

Do you your office, or give up your place,
And you shall well be spar'd.

Prov. I crave your honour's pardon.

What shall be done, sir, with the groaning Juliet?

She's very near her hour.

Ang. Dispose of her

To some more fitter place, and that with speed.

[Re-enter SERVANT.]

Serv. Here is the sister of the man condemn'd

Desires access to you.

Ang. Hath he a sister?

Prov. Ay, my good lord; a very virtuous
maid.

And to be shortly of a sisterhood,
If not already.

Ang. Well, let her be admitted.

[Exit SERVANT.]

See you the fornicatress be remov'd.

Let her have needful, but not lavish, means;
There shall be order for 't.

Enter ISABELLA and LUCIO.

Prov. God save your honour!

Ang. Stay a little while. [To Isab.] You're welcome; what's your will?

Isab. I am a woeful suitor to your honour,
Please but your honour hear me.

Ang. Well; what's your suit?

Isab. There is a vice that most I do abhor,
And most desire should meet the blow of
justice;

For which I would not plead, but that I must;
For which I must not plead, but that I am
At war 'twixt will and will not.

Ang. Well; the matter?

Isab. I have a brother is condemn'd to die.
I do beseech you, let it be his fault,
And not my brother.

Prov. [Aside.] Heaven give thee moving graces!

Ang. Condemn the fault, and not the actor of it?

Why, every fault's condemn'd ere it be done.
Mine were the very cipher of a function,
To fine the faults whose fine stands in record,
And let go by the actor.

Isab. O just but severe law!
I had a brother, then. Heaven keep your honour!

Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] Give 't not o'er so.
To him again, entreat him,
Kneel down before him, hang upon his gown.
You are too cold. If you should need a pin,
You could not with more tame a tongue desire
it.

To him, I say!

Isab. Must he needs die?

Ang. Maiden, no remedy.

Isab. Yes; I do think that you might pardon
him,

And neither heaven nor man grieve at the mercy.

Ang. I will not do 't.

Isab. But can you, if you would?

Ang. Look, what I will not, that I cannot do.

Isab. But might you do 't, and do the world
no wrong,

If so your heart were touch'd with that remorse
As mine is to him?

Ang. He's sentenc'd; 't is too late.

Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] You are too cold.

Isab. Too late? Why, no, I, that do speak a
word,

May call it back again. Well, believe this,
No ceremony that to great ones longs,

Not the king's crown, nor the deputed sword,
The marshal's truncheon, nor the judge's robe,

Become them with one half so good a grace
As mercy does.

If he had been as you and you as he,
You would have slept like him; but he, like
you,

Would not have been so stern.

Ang. Pray you, be gone.

Isab. I would to heaven I had your potency,
And you were Isabel! Should it then be thus?
No; I would tell what 't were to be a judge,
And what a prisoner.

Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] Ay, touch him;
there's the vein.

Ang. Your brother is a forfeit of the law,
And you but waste your words.

Isab. Alas, alas!

Why, all the souls that were were forfeit once;
And He that might the vantage best have took Found out the remedy. How would you be,
If He, which is the top of judgement, should
But judge you as you are? O, think on that;
And mercy then will breathe within your lips,
Like man new made.

Ang. Be you content, fair maid.

It is the law, not I condemn your brother.
Were he my kinsman, brother, or my son,
It should be thus with him. He must die to-morrow.

Isab. To-morrow! O, that's sudden! Spare him, spare him!
He's not prepared for death. Even for our kitchens
We kill the fowl of season. Shall we serve Heaven 85

With less respect than we do minister To our gross selves? Good, good my lord, be-think you:

Who is it that hath died for this offence?
There's many have committed it.

Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] Ay, well said.
Ang. The law hath not been dead, though it hath slept. 90

Those many had not dar'd to do that evil,
If [but] the first that did the edict infringe
Had answer'd for his deed. Now 't is awake,
Takes note of what is done, and, like a prophet,
Looks in a glass that shows what future evils,
Either new, or by remissness new-conceiv'd, 95
And so in progress to be hatch'd and born,
Are now to have no successive degrees,
But, ere they live, to end.

Isab. Yet show some pity.
Ang. I show it most of all when I show justice, 100

For then I pity those I do not know,
Which a dismiss'd offence would after gall;
And do him right that, answering one foul
wrong,

Lives not to act another. Be satisfied.
Your brother dies to-morrow. Be content. 105

Isab. So you must be the first that gives this sentence,

And he, that suffers. O, it is excellent
To have a giant's strength; but it is tyrannous
To use it like a giant.

Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] That's well said.
Isab. Could great men thunder 110

As Jove himself does, Jove would ne'er be quiet;

For every pelting, petty officer
Would use his heaven for thunder,

Nothing but thunder! Merciful Heaven, 114
Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt
Splits the unwedgeable and gnarled oak

Than the soft myrtle; but man, proud man,
Dress'd in a little brief authority,

Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd,
His glassy essence, like an angry ape, 120

Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven
As make the angels weep; who, with our spleens,

Would all themselves laugh mortal.

Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] O, to him, to him,
wench! he will relent.

He's coming; I perceive 't.

Prov. [Aside.] Pray Heaven she win him!
Isab. We cannot weigh our brother with our-
self. 125

Great men may jest with saints; 't is wit in
them,

But in the less foul profanation.

Lucio. Thou 'rt i' the right, girl. More o' that.
Isab. That in the captain's but a choleric
word, 130

Which in the soldier is flat blasphemy.

Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] Art avis'd o' that?
More on 't.

Ang. Why do you put these sayings upon
me?

Isab. Because authority, though it err like others,

Hath yet a kind of medicine in itself, 135
That skins the vice o' the top. Go to your bosom;

Knock there, and ask your heart what it doth
know

That's like my brother's fault. If it confess
A natural guiltiness such as is his,

Let it not sound a thought upon your tongue 140
Against my brother's life.

Ang. [Aside.] She speaks, and 't is Such sense, that my sense breeds with it.— Fare
you well.

Isab. Gentle my lord, turn back.
Ang. I will bethink me. Come again to-morrow.

Isab. Hark how I'll bribe you. Good my lord, turn back. 145

Ang. How! bribe me?
Isab. Ay, with such gifts that Heaven shall share with you.

Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] You had marr'd all
else.

Isab. Not with fond shekels of the tested
gold,

Or stones whose rates are either rich or poor 150
As fancy values them; but with true prayers
That shall be up at heaven and enter there

Ere sun-rise, prayers from preserved souls,
From fasting maids whose minds are dedicate
To nothing temporal.

Ang. Well, come to me to-morrow.
Lucio. [Aside to Isab.] Go to; 't is well.

Away! 155
Isab. Heaven keep your honour safe!

Ang. [Aside.] Amen!
For I am that way going to temptation,
Where prayers cross.

Isab. At what hour to-morrow
Shall I attend your lordship?

Ang. At any time 'fore noon. 160
Isab. 'Save your honour!

[Eceunt Isabella, Lucio, and Provost.]

Ang. From thee, even from thy virtue.
What's this, what's this? Is this her fault or mine?

The tempter or the tempted, who sins most?
Ha!

Not she, nor doth she tempt; but it is I 165
That, lying by the violet in the sun,
Do as the carrion does, not as the flower,
Corrupt with virtuous season. Can it be
That modesty may more betray our sense Than woman's lightness? Having waste ground enough, 170

Shall we desire to raze the sanctuary
And pitch our evils there? O, fie, fie, fie!
What dost thou, or what art thou, Angelo?

Dost thou desire her foully for those things
That make her good? O, let her brother live!
Thieves for their robbery have authority 175

When judges steal themselves. What, do I love her,
That I desire to hear her speak again
And feast upon her eyes? What is't I dream on?

O cunning enemy, that, to catch a saint, 180
With saints dost bait thy hook! Most dangerous
Is that temptation that doth goad us on
To sin in loving virtue. Never could the strumpet,

With all her double vigour, art and nature,
Once stir my temper; but this virtuous maid
Subdues me quite. Ever till now, 185
When men were fond, I smil'd and wond'ring
how. [Exit.]

SCENE III. [A room in a prison.]

Enter [severally] DUKE [disguised as a friar] and PROVOST.

Duke. Hail to you, Provost! so I think you are.

Prov. I am the Provost. What's your will, good friar?

Duke. Bound by my charity and my blest order,
I come to visit the afflicted spirits
Here in the prison. Do me the common right 5
To let me see them and to make me know
The nature of their crimes, that I may minister
To them accordingly.

Prov. I would do more than that, if more were needful.

Enter JULIET.

Look, here comes one; a gentlewoman of mine,
Who, falling in the flames of her own youth, 11
Hath blister'd her report. She is with child;
And he that got it, sentenc'd; a young man
More fit to do another such offence
Than die for this. 15

Duke. When must he die?

Prov. As I do think, to-morrow.
I have provided for you. Stay awhile,

[To Juliet.]

And you shall be conducted.

Duke. Repent you, fair one, of the sin you carry?

Jul. I do; and bear the shame most patiently. 20

Duke. I'll teach you how you shall arraign your conscience,

And try your penitence, if it be sound

Or hollowly put on.

Jul. I'll gladly learn.

Duke. Love you the man that wrong'd you?

Jul. Yes, as I love the woman that wrong'd him. 25

Duke. So then it seems your most offenceful act

Was mutually committed?

Jul. Mutually.

Duke. Then was your sin of heavier kind than his.

Jul. I do confess it, and repent it, father.

Duke. 'Tis meet so, daughter; but lest you do repent, 30

As that the sin hath brought you to this shame,
Which sorrow is always towards ourselves, not heaven,
Showing we would not spare heaven as we love it,

But as we stand in fear,—

Jul. I do repent me, as it is an evil, 35
And take the shame with joy.

Duke. There rest.

Your partner, as I hear, must die to-morrow,
And I am going with instruction to him.

Grace go with you, Benedicite! [Exit.]

Jul. Must die to-morrow! O injurious law, 40
That respites me a life whose very comfort
Is still a dying horror!

Prov. 'Tis pity of him.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV [A room in Angelo's house.]

Enter ANGELO.

Ang. When I would pray and think, I think and pray

To several subjects. Heaven hath my empty words,

Whilst my invention, hearing not my tongue,
Anchors on Isabel; Heaven in my mouth,

As if I did but only chew his name, 5
And in my heart the strong and swelling evil
Of my conception. The state, whereon I studied,

Is like a good thing, being often read,
Grown sear'd and tedious; yea, my gravity,

Wherein—let no man hear me—I take pride, 10

Could I with boot change for an idle plume,
Which the air beats for vain. O place, O form,

How often dost thou with thy case, thy habit,
Wrench awe from fools and tie the wiser souls

To thy false seeming! Blood, thou art blood, 15
Let's write good angel on the devil's horn;
'Tis not the devil's crest.

Enter a SERVANT.

How now! who's there?

Serv. One Isabel, a sister, desires access to you.

Ang. Teach her the way. [Exit Serv.] O heavens!

Why does my blood thus muster to my heart, 20
Making both it unable for itself,
And dispossessing all my other parts
Of necessary fitness?

So play the foolish throngs with one that swoons;

Come all to help him, and so stop the air 25
By which he should revive; and even so
The general subject to a well-wish'd king
Quit their own part, and in obsequious fondness

Crowd to his presence, where their untaught love

Must needs appear offence.

Enter ISABELLA.

How now, fair maid?

Isab. I am come to know your pleasure. 31

Ang. That you might know it, would much better please me
Than to demand what 't is. Your brother cannot live.

Isab. Even so. Heaven keep your honour!

Ang. Yet may he live a while; and, it may be,

As long as you or I. Yet he must die.

Isab. Under your sentence?

Ang. Yea.

Isab. When, I beseech you? that in his reprieve,

Longer or shorter, he may be so fitted
That his soul sicken not.

Ang. Ha! fie, these filthy vices! It were as good

To pardon him that hath from nature stolen

A man already made, as to remit

Their saucy sweetness that do coin Heaven's image

In stamps that are forbid. 'T is all as easy

Falsely to take away a life true made

As to put metal in restrained means

To make a false one.

Isab. 'T is set down so in heaven, but not in earth.

Ang. Say you so? Then I shall pose you quickly.

Which had you rather, that the most just law

Now took your brother's life; or, to redeem him,

Give up your body to such sweet uncleanness

As she that he hath stain'd?

Isab. Sir, believe this, I had rather give my body than my soul.

Ang. I talk not of your soul; our compell'd

Stand more for number than for accomp't.

Isab. How say you?

Ang. Nay, I'll not warrant that; for I can speak

Against the thing I say. Answer to this:

I, now the voice of the recorded law,

Pronounce a sentence on your brother's life.

Might there not be a charity in sin

To save this brother's life?

Isab. Please you to do 't, I'll take it as a peril to my soul,

It is no sin at all, but charity.

Ang. Plead'st you to do 't at peril of your soul,

Were equal poise of sin and charity.

Isab. That I do beg his life, if it be sin, Heaven let me bear it! You granting of my suit,

If that be sin, I'll make it my morn prayer

To have it added to the faults of mine,

And nothing of your answer.

Ang. Nay, but hear me; Your sense pursues not mine. Either you are ignorant,

Or seem so craftily; and that's not good.

Isab. Let me be ignorant, and in nothing good,

But graciously to know I am no better.

Ang. Thus wisdom wishes to appear most bright

When it doth tax itself; as these black masks

Proclaim an enshield beauty ten times louder
Than beauty could, displayed. But mark me:
To be received plain, I'll speak more gross.
Your brother is to die.

Isab. So.

Ang. And his offence is so, as it appears, Accountant to the law upon that pain.

Isab. True.

Ang. Admit no other way to save his life,— As I subscribe not that, nor any other,

But in the loss of question,—that you, his sister,

Finding yourself desir'd of such a person, Whose credit with the judge, or own great place,

Could fetch your brother from the manacles Of the all-building law; and that there were

No earthly mean to save him, but that either

You must lay down the treasures of your body To this supposed, or else to let him suffer;

What would you do?

Isab. As much for my poor brother as myself:

That is, were I under the terms of death, The impression of keen whips I'd wear as rubies,

And strip myself to death, as to a bed That, longing, have been sick for, ere I'd yield

My body up to shame.

Ang. Then must your brother die.

Isab. And 't were the cheaper way.

Better it were a brother died at once, Than that a sister, by redeeming him,

Should die for ever.

Ang. Were not you then as cruel as the sentence

That you have slander'd so?

Isab. Ignomy in ransom and free pardon

Are of two houses. Lawful mercy

Is nothing kin to foul redemption.

Ang. You seem'd of late to make the law a tyrant;

And rather prov'd the sliding of your brother A merriment than a vice.

Isab. O, pardon me, my lord. It oft falls out,

To have what we would have, we speak not what we mean.

I something do excuse the thing I hate, For his advantage that I dearly love.

Ang. We are all frail.

Isab. Else let my brother die, If not a fedary, but only he Owe and succeed this weakness.

Ang. Nay, women are frail too.

Isab. Ay, as the glasses where they view themselves;

Which are as easy broke as they make forms. Women! Help, Heaven! men their creation mar In profiting by them. Nay, call us ten times frail;

For we are soft as our complexions are, And credulous to false prints.

Ang. I think it well; And from this testimony of your own sex,—

Since I suppose we are made to be no stronger

Than faults may shake our frames,—let me be bold.

I do arrest your words. Be that you are,
That is, a woman; if you be more, you 're none; 135

If you be one, as you are well express'd
By all external warrants, show it now,
By putting on the destin'd livery.

Isab. I have no tongue but one; gentle my lord,

Let me entreat you speak the former language. 140

Ang. Plainly conceive, I love you.

Isab. My brother did love Juliet,
And you tell me that he shall die for it.

Ang. He shall not, Isabel, if you give me love.

Isab. I know your virtue hath a license in 't, 145

Which seems a little fouler than it is,
To pluck on others.

Ang. Believe me, on mine honour,
My words express my purpose.

Isab. Ha! little honour to be much believ'd,
And most pernicious purpose! Seeming, seeming! 150

I will proclaim thee, Angelo. Look for 't!

Sign me a present pardon for my brother,
Or with an outstretch'd throat I'll tell the world aloud

What man thou art.

Ang. Who will believe thee, Isabel?

My unsoil'd name, the austereness of my life, 155

My vouch against you, and my place i' the state,

Will so your accusation overweigh,

That you shall stifle in your own report

And smell of calumny. I have begun,

And now I give my sensual race the rein. 160

Fit thy consent to my sharp appetite;

Lay by all nicety and prolixious blushes

That banish what they sue for; redeem thy brother

By yielding up thy body to my will;

Or else he must not only die the death, 165

But thy unkindness shall his death draw out

To lingering sufferance. Answer me to-morrow,

Or, by the affection that now guides me most,

I'll prove a tyrant to him. As for you,

Say what you can, my false o'erweighs your true. [Exit. 170

Isab. To whom should I complain? Did I tell this,

Who would believe me? O perilous mouths,

That bear in them one and the self-same tongue,

Either of condemnation or approval;

Bidding the law make curtsy to their will; 175

Hooking both right and wrong to the appetite,

To follow as it draws! I'll to my brother.

Though he hath fallen by prompture of the blood,

Yet hath he in him such a mind of honour

That, had he twenty heads to tender down 180

On twenty bloody blocks, he'd yield them up,

Before his sister should her body stoop

To such abhor'd pollution.

Then, Isabel, live chaste, and, brother, die;

More than our brother is our chastity. 185

I'll tell him yet of Angelo's request,
And fit his mind to death, for his soul's rest. [Exit.

ACT III

SCENE I. [A room in the prison.]

Enter DUKE [disguised as before,] CLAUDIO, and PROVOST.

Duke. So then you hope of pardon from Lord Angelo?

Claud. The miserable have no other medicine But only hope.

I've hope to live, and am prepar'd to die.

Duke. Be absolute for death; either death or life 5

Shall therefore be the sweeter. Reason thus with life:

If I do lose thee, I do lose a thing

That none but fools would keep. A breath thou art,

Servile to all the skyey influences,

That dost this habitation where thou keep'st 10

Hourly afflict. Merely, thou art Death's fool;

For him thou labour'st by thy flight to shun

And yet runn'st toward him still. Thou art not noble;

For all the accommodations that thou bear'st Are nurs'd by baseness. Thou 'rt by no means 15 valiant;

For thou dost fear the soft and tender fork

Of a poor worm. Thy best of rest is sleep,

And that thou oft provok'st; yet grossly fear'st

Thy death, which is no more. Thou art not thyself;

For thou exist'st on many a thousand grains 20

That issue out of dust. Happy thou art not;

For what thou hast not, still thou striv'st to get,

And what thou hast, forget'st. Thou art not certain;

For thy complexion shifts to strange effects, 25

After the moon. If thou art rich, thou 'rt poor;

For, like an ass whose back with ingots bows,

Thou bear'st thy heavy riches but a journey,

And Death unloads thee. Friend hast thou none;

For thine own bowels, which do call thee sire,

The mere effusion of thy proper loins, 30

Do curse the gout, serpigo, and the rheum,

For ending thee no sooner. Thou hast nor youth nor age,

But, as it were, an after-dinner's sleep,

Dreaming on both; for all thy blessed youth

Becomes as aged, and doth beg the alms 35

Of palsied Eld; and when thou art old and rich,

Thou hast neither heat, affection, limb, nor beauty,

To make thy riches pleasant. What's yet in this

That bears the name of life? Yet in this life

Lie hid moe thousand deaths; yet death we fear, 40

That makes these odds all even.

Claud. I humbly thank you.

To sue to live, I find I seek to die;

And, seeking death, find life. Let it come on.

Isab. [Within.] What, ho! Peace here; grace and good company!

Prov. Who's there? Come in; the wish deserves a welcome. 46

Duke. Dear sir, ere long I'll visit you again.

Claud. Most holy sir, I thank you.

Enter ISABELLA.

Isab. My business is a word or two with Claudio.

Prov. And very welcome. Look, signior, here's your sister.

Duke. Provost, a word with you. 50

Prov. As many as you please.

Duke. Bring me to hear them speak, where I may be conceal'd.

[Exeunt Duke and Provost.]
Claud. Now, sister, what's the comfort?

Isab. Why, As all comforts are; most good, most good indeed. 56

Lord Angelo, having affairs to heaven, intends you for his swift ambassador, Where you shall be an everlasting leiger; Therefore your best appointment make with speed, 60

To-morrow you set on.

Claud. Is there no remedy?

Isab. None but such remedy as; to save a head,

To cleave a heart in twain.

Claud. But is there any?

Isab. Yes, brother, you may live.

There is a devilish mercy in the judge, 65

If you'll implore it, that will free your life,

But fetter you till death.

Claud. Perpetual durance?

Isab. Ay, just; perpetual durance, a restraint,

Though all the world's vastidity you had,

To a determin'd scope.

Claud. But in what nature? 70

Isab. In such a one as, you consenting to 't, Would bark your honour from that trunk you bear,

And leave you naked.

Claud. Let me know the point.

Isab. O, I do fear thee, Claudio; and I quake,

Lest thou a feverous life shouldst entertain, 75

And six or seven winters more respect

Than a perpetual honour. Dar'st thou die?

The sense of death is most in apprehension;

And the poor beetle, that we tread upon,

In corporal sufferance finds a pang as great 80

As when a giant dies.

Claud. Why give you me this shame?

Think you I can a resolution fetch

From flowery tenderness? If I must die,

I will encounter darkness as a bride, 85

And hug it in mine arms.

Isab. There spake my brother; there my father's grave

Did utter forth a voice. Yes, thou must die.

Thou art too noble to conserve a life

In base appliances. This outward-sainted deputy,

Whose settled visage and deliberate word
Nips youth i' the head and follies doth emmew
As falcon doth the fowl, is yet a devil;
His filth within being cast, he would appear
A pond as deep as hell.

Claud. The prenzie Angelo!
Isab. O, 't is the cunning livery of hell, 95

The damned'st body to invest and cover
In prenzie guards! Dost thou think, Claudio?

If I would yield him my virginity,
Thou mightst be freed.

Claud. O heavens! it cannot be.

Isab. Yes, he would give 't thee, from this rank offence, 100

So to offend him still. This night's the time
That I should do what I abhor to name,

Or else thou diest to-morrow.

Claud. Thou shalt not do 't.

Isab. O, were it but my life,

I'd throw it down for your deliverance 105

As frankly as a pin.

Claud. Thanks, dear Isabel.
Isab. Be ready, Claudio, for your death to-morrow.

Claud. Yes. Has he affections in him,
That thus can make him bite the law by the nose,

When he would force it? Sure, it is no sin; 110

Or of the deadly seven it is the least.

Isab. Which is the least?

Claud. If it were damnable, he being so wise,
Why would he for the momentary trick

Be perdurably fin'd? O Isabel! 115

Isab. What says my brother?

Claud. Death is a fearful thing.

Isab. And shamed life a hateful.

Claud. Ay, but to die, and go we know not where;

To lie in cold obstruction and to rot;
This sensible warm motion to become 120

A kneaded clod, and the delighted spirit

To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside

In thrilling region of thick-ribbed ice;

To be imprison'd in the viewless winds,

And blown with restless violence round about

The pendent world; or to be—worse than worst— 125

Of those that lawless and incertain thought
Imagine howling, — 't is too horrible!

The weariest and most loathed worldly life

That age, ache, penury, and imprisonment 130

Can lay on nature is a paradise

To what we fear of death.

Isab. Alas, alas!

Claud. Sweet sister, let me live.

What sin you do to save a brother's life,

Nature dispenses with the deed so far 135

That it becomes a virtue.

Isab. O you beast!

O faithless coward! O dishonest wretch!

Wilt thou be made a man out of my vice?

Is't not a kind of incest, to take life

From thine own sister's shame? What should I 140

think?

Heaven shield my mother play'd my father

fair!

For such a warped slip of wilderness

Ne'er issu'd from his blood. Take my defiance!
Die, perish! Might but my bending down
Relieve thee from thy fate, it should proceed.
I'll pray a thousand prayers for thy death, 148
No word to save thee.

Claud. Nay, hear me, Isabel.

Isab. O, fie, fie, fie!
Thy sin's not accidental, but a trade.
Mercy to thee would prove itself a bawd; 150
'T is best that thou diest quickly.

Claud. O hear me, Isabella!

[Re-enter DUKE.]

Duke. Vouchsafe a word, young sister, but one word.

Isab. What is your will? 153

Duke. Might you dispense with your leisure,
I would by and by have some speech with you.
The satisfaction I would require is likewise your own benefit.

Isab. I have no superfluous leisure; my stay must be stolen out of other affairs; but I will attend you a while. [Walks apart.] 156

Duke. Son, I have overheard what hath pass'd between you and your sister. Angelo had never the purpose to corrupt her; only he hath made an assay of her virtue to practise his judgement with the disposition of natures. She, having the truth of honour in her, hath made him 158 that gracious denial which he is most glad to receive. I am confessor to Angelo, and I know this to be true; therefore prepare yourself to death.
Do not satisfy your resolution with hopes that are fallible; to-morrow you must die. Go to your knees and make ready. 172

Claud. Let me ask my sister pardon. I am so out of love with life that I will sue to be rid of it.

Duke. Hold you there! Farewell. [Exit
Claudio.] Provost, a word with you!

[Re-enter PROVOST.]

Prov. What's your will, father? 178

Duke. That now you are come, you will be gone. Leave me a while with the maid. My mind promises with my habit no loss shall touch her by my company.

Prov. In good time. 183

[Exit [Provost. Isabella comes forward].]

Duke. The hand that hath made you fair hath made you good; the goodness that is cheap in beauty makes beauty brief in goodness; but grace, being the soul of your complexion, shall keep the body of it ever fair. The assault that Angelo hath made to you, fortune hath 188 convey'd to my understanding; and, but that frailty hath examples for his falling, I should wonder at Angelo. How will you do to content this substitute, and to save your brother? 193

Isab. I am now going to resolve him. I had rather my brother die by the law than my son should be unlawfully born. But, O, how much is the good Duke deceiv'd in Angelo! If ever he return and I can speak to him, I will open my lips in vain, or discover his government. 199

Duke. That shall not be much amiss; yet, as the matter now stands, he will avoid your accusation; he made trial of you only. Therefore fasten your ear on my advising. To the love I have in doing good a remedy presents itself. I do make myself believe that you may most uprightly do a poor wronged lady 205 a merited benefit, redeem your brother from the angry law, do no stain to your own gracious person, and much please the absent Duke, if peradventure he shall ever return to have hearing of this business. 211

Isab. Let me hear you speak farther. I have spirit to do anything that appears not foul in the truth of my spirit. 214

Duke. Virtue is bold, and goodness never fearful. Have you not heard speak of Mariana, the sister of Frederick, the great soldier who miscarried at sea?

Isab. I have heard of the lady, and good words went with her name. 220

Duke. She should this Angelo have married; was affianced to her by oath, and the nuptial appointed; between which time of the contract and limit of the solemnity, her brother Frederick was wreck'd at sea, having in that perished vessel the dowry of his sister. But 225 mark how heavily this befell to the poor gen-tlewoman. There she lost a noble and renowned brother, in his love toward her ever most kind and natural; with him, the portion and sinew of her fortune, her marriage-dowry; with both, her combinate husband, this well-seeming Angelo. 233

Isab. Can this be so? Did Angelo so leave
her?

Duke. Left her in her tears, and dried not one of them with his comfort; swallowed his vows whole, pretending in her discoveries of dishonour; in few, bestow'd her on her own lamentation, which she yet wears for his sake; and he, a marble to her tears, is washed with them, but relents not. 239

Isab. What a merit were it in death to take this poor maid from the world! What corruption in this life, that it will let this man live!
But how out of this can she avail? 243

Duke. It is a rupture that you may easily heal; and the cure of it not only saves your brother, but keeps you from dishonour in doing it.

Isab. Show me how, good father. 247

Duke. This forenamed maid hath yet in her the continuance of her first affection; his unjust unkindness, that in all reason should have 250 quenched her love, hath, like an impediment in the current, made it more violent and unruly. Go you to Angelo; answer his requiring with a plausible obedience; agree with his demands to the point; only refer yourself to this advantage, first, that your stay with him 255 may not be long; that the time may have all shadow and silence in it; and the place answer to convenience. This being granted in course, — and now follows all, — we shall advise this wronged maid to stand up your appoint- 260 ment, go in your place. If the encounter acknowledge itself hereafter, it may compel him to her recompense; and here, by this is your brother saved, your honour untainted, the poor

Mariana advantaged, and the corrupt deputy ²⁶⁵ sealed. The maid will I frame and make fit for his attempt. If you think well to carry this as you may, the doubleness of the benefit defends the deceit from reproof. What think you of it? ²⁶⁹

Isab. The image of it gives me content already; and I trust it will grow to a most prosperous perfection. ²⁷²

Duke. It lies much in your holding up. Haste you speedily to Angelo. If for this night he entreat you to his bed, give him promise of satisfaction. I will presently to Saint Luke's; there, at the moated grange, resides this dejected Mariana. At that place call upon me; and dispatch with Angelo, that it may be quickly. ²⁷⁹

Isab. I thank you for this comfort. Fare you well, good father. [Exit [Isabella and Duke].]

[SCENE II. The street before the prison.]

Enter [on one side, DUKE, disguised as before; on the other.] ELBOW, and Officers with Clown [POMPEY].

Elb. Nay, if there be no remedy for it but that you will needs buy and sell men and women like beasts, we shall have all the world drink brown and white bastard.

Duke. O heavens! what stuff is here? ⁵

Pom. 'T was never merry world since, of two usuries, the merriest was put down, and the worsor allow'd by order of law a furr'd gown to keep him warm; and furr'd with fox and lambskins too, to signify that craft, being richer than innocency, stands for the facing. ¹¹

Elb. Come your way, sir. 'Bless you, good father friar.

Duke. And you, good brother father. What offence hath this man made you, sir? ¹⁵

Elb. Marry, sir, he hath offended the law; and, sir, we take him to be a thief too, sir, for we have found upon him, sir, a strange pick-lock, which we have sent to the deputy.

Duke. Fie, sirrah! a bawd, a wicked bawd! ²⁰

The evil that thou causest to be done, That is thy means to live. Do thou but think What 't is to cram a maw or clothe a back From such a filthy vice; say to thyself, From their abominable and beastly touches ²⁵ I drink, I eat, array myself, and live. Canst thou believe thy living is a life, So stinkingly depending? Go mend, go mend.

Pom. Indeed, it does stink in some sort, sir; but yet, sir, I would prove — ³⁰

Duke. Nay, if the devil have given thee proofs for sin, Thou wilt prove his. Take him to prison, officer.

Correction and instruction must both work Ere this rude beast will profit. ³⁴

Elb. He must before the deputy, sir; he has given him warning. The deputy cannot abide a whoremaster. If he be a whoremonger, and comes before him, he were as good go a mile on his errand.

Duke. That we were all, as some would seem to be, ⁴⁰ Free from our faults, as faults from seeming, free!

Enter LUCIO.

Elb. His neck will come to your waist, — a cord, sir.

Pom. I spy comfort; I cry bail. Here's a gentleman and a friend of mine. ⁴⁴

Lucio. How now, noble Pompey! What, at the wheels of Cæsar? Art thou led in triumph? What, is there none of Pygmalion's images, newly made woman, to be had now, for putting the hand in the pocket and extracting it, clutch'd? What reply, ha? What say'st thou to this tune, matter, and method? Is 't not ⁵⁰ drown'd i' the last rain, ha? What say'st thou, Trot? Is the world as it was, man? Which is the way? Is it sad, and few words? or how? The trick of it? ⁵⁶

Duke. Still thus, and thus; still worse!

Lucio. How doth my dear morsel, thy mistress? Procures she still, ha?

Pom. Troth, sir, she hath eaten up all her beef, and she is herself in the tub. ⁶⁰

Lucio. Why, 't is good; it is the right of it; it must be so. Ever your fresh whore and your powder'd bawd; an unshunn'd consequence; it must be so. Art going to prison, Pompey?

Pom. Yes, faith, sir. ⁶⁴

Lucio. Why, 't is not amiss, Pompey. Farewell. Go, say I sent thee thither. For debt, Pompey? or how?

Elb. For being a bawd, for being a bawd. ⁶⁸

Lucio. Well, then, imprison him. If imprisonment be the due of a bawd, why, 't is his right. Bawd is he doubtless, and of antiquity too; bawd-born. Farewell, good Pompey. Commend me to the prison, Pompey. You will turn good husband now, Pompey; you will keep the house. ⁷⁴

Pom. I hope, sir, your good worship will be my bail.

Lucio. No, indeed, will I not, Pompey; it is not the wear. I will pray, Pompey, to increase your bondage. If you take it not patiently, why, your mettle is the more. Adieu, trusty Pompey. 'Bless you, friar. ⁸¹

Duke. And you.

Lucio. Does Bridget paint still, Pompey, ha?

Elb. Come your ways, sir; come.

Pom. You will not bail me, then, sir? ⁸⁵

Lucio. Then, Pompey, nor now. What news abroad, friar? what news?

Elb. Come your ways, sir; come.

Lucio. Go to kennel, Pompey; go. [Exeunt Elbow, Pompey, and Officers.] What news, friar, of the Duke? ⁹¹

Duke. I know none. Can you tell me of any?

Lucio. Some say he is with the Emperor of Russia; other some, he is in Rome; but where is he, think you? ⁹⁵

Duke. I know not where; but wheresoever, I wish him well.

Lucio. It was a mad fantastical trick of him to steal from the state, and usurp the beggary he was never born to. Lord Angelo dukes it well in his absence; he puts transgression to 't.

Duke. He does well in 't.

Lucio. A little more lenity to lechery would do no harm in him. Something too crabbed that way, friar.

Duke. It is too general a vice, and severity must cure it.

Lucio. Yes, in good sooth, the vice is of a great kindred, it is well allied; but it is impossible to extirp it quite, friar, till eating and drinking be put down. They say this Angelo was not made by man and woman after this downright way of creation. Is it true, think you?

Duke. How should he be made, then?

Lucio. Some report a sea-maid spawn'd him; some, that he was begot between two stock-fishes. But it is certain that when he makes water his urine is congeal'd ice; that I know to be true: and he is a motion generative; that's infallible.

Duke. You are pleasant, sir, and speak apace.

Lucio. Why, what a ruthless thing is this in him, for the rebellion of a codpiece to take away the life of a man! Would the Duke that is absent have done this? Ere he would have hang'd a man for the getting a hundred bastards, he would have paid for the nursing a thousand. He had some feeling of the sport; he knew the service, and that instructed him to mercy.

Duke. I never heard the absent Duke much detected for women. He was not inclin'd that way.

Lucio. O, sir, you are deceiv'd.

Duke. 'Tis not possible.

Lucio. Who, not the Duke? Yes, your beggar of fifty; and his use was to put a ducat in her clack-dish. The Duke had crotchets in him. He would be drunk too; that let me inform you.

Duke. You do him wrong, surely.

Lucio. Sir, I was an inward of his. A shy fellow was the Duke; and I believe I know the cause of his withdrawing.

Duke. What, I prithee, might be the cause?

Lucio. No, pardon; 't is a secret must be lock'd within the teeth and the lips. But this I can let you understand, the greater file of the subject held the Duke to be wise.

Duke. Wise! Why, no question but he was.

Lucio. A very superficial, ignorant, unweighing fellow.

Duke. Either this is envy in you, folly, or mistaking. The very stream of his life and the business he hath helmed must upon a warranted need give him a better proclamation. Let him be but testimonied in his own bringings-forth, and he shall appear to the envious a scholar, a statesman, and a soldier. Therefore you speak unskilfully; or if your knowledge be more it is much dark'n'd in your malice.

Lucio. Sir, I know him, and I love him.

Duke. Love talks with better knowledge, and knowledge with dearer love.

Lucio. Come, sir, I know what I know.

Duke. I can hardly believe that, since you know not what you speak. But, if ever the Duke return, as our prayers are he may, let me desire you to make your answer before him. If it be honest you have spoke, you have courage to maintain it. I am bound to call upon you; and, I pray you, your name?

Lucio. Sir, my name is Lucio; well known to the Duke.

Duke. He shall know you better, sir, if I may live to report you.

Lucio. I fear you not.

Duke. O, you hope the Duke will return no more; or you imagine me too unhurtful an opposite. But indeed I can do you little harm; you'll forswear this again.

Lucio. I'll be hang'd first; thou art deceiv'd in me, friar. But no more of this. Canst thou tell if Claudio die to-morrow or no?

Duke. Why should he die, sir?

Lucio. Why? For filling a bottle with a tundish. I would the Duke we talk of were return'd again. This ungentle'd agent will unpeople the province with continency. Sparrows must not build in his house-eaves, because they are lecherous. The Duke yet would have dark deeds darkly answered; he would never bring them to light. Would he were return'd! Marry, this Claudio is condemned for untrussing. Farewell, good friar; I prithee, pray for me. The Duke, I say to thee again, would eat mutton on Fridays. He's now past it; yet (and I say 't to thee) he would mouth with a beggar, though she smelt brown bread and garlic. Say that I said so. Farewell. [Exit.]

Duke. No might nor greatness in mortality

Can censure scape; back-wounding calumny
The whitest virtue strikes. What king so strong
Can tie the gall up in the slanderous tongue?
But who comes here?

Enter ESCALUS, PROVOST, and [Officers, with] Bawd [MISTRESS OVERDONE].

Escal. Go; away with her to prison!

Mrs. Ov. Good my lord, be good to me; your honour is accounted a merciful man. Good my lord!

Escal. Double and treble admonition, and still forfeit in the same kind! This would make mercy swear and play the tyrant.

Prov. A bawd of eleven years' continuance, may it please your honour.

Mrs. Ov. My lord, this is one Lucio's information against me. Mistress Kate Keepdown was with child by him in the Duke's time. He promis'd her marriage. His child is a year and a quarter old, come Philip and Jacob. I have kept it myself, and see how he goes about to abuse me!

Escal. That fellow is a fellow of much license; let him be call'd before us. Away with her to prison! Go to; no more words. [Exit Officers with Mistress Ov.] Provost, my brother Angelo will not be alter'd; Claudio must die to-morrow. Let him be furnish'd [320 with divines, and have all charitable preparation.

If my brother wrought by my pity, it should not be so with him.

Prov. So please you, this friar hath been with him, and advis'd him for the entertainment of death. 226

Escal. Good even, good father.

Duke. Bliss and goodness on you!

Escal. Of whence are you?

Duke. Not of this country, though my chance is now 230

To use it for my time. I am a brother
Of gracious order, late come from the See
In special business from his Holiness.

Escal. What news abroad i' the world? 234

Duke. None, but that there is so great a fever on goodness, that the dissolution of it must cure it. Novelty is only in request; and it is as dangerous to be aged in any kind of course, as it is virtuous to be constant in any undertaking. There is scarce truth enough alive to make societies secure; but security [240 enough to make fellowships accurst. Much upon this riddle runs the wisdom of the world.
This news is old enough, yet it is every day's news. I pray you, sir, of what disposition was the Duke? 246

Escal. One that, above all other strifes, contended especially to know himself.

Duke. What pleasure was he given to? 248

Escal. Rather rejoicing to see another merry, than merry at anything which profess'd to make him rejoice; a gentleman of all temperance. But leave we him to his events, with a prayer they may prove prosperous; and let me desire to know how you find Claudio prepar'd.
I am made to understand that you have lent him visitation. 256

Duke. He professes to have received no sinister measure from his judge, but most willingly humbles himself to the determination of justice; yet had he framed to himself, by the instruction of his frailty, many deceiving promises of life, which I by my good leisure have discredited to him, and now is he resolv'd to die. 262

Escal. You have paid the heavens your function, and the prisoner the very debt of your calling. I have labour'd for the poor gentleman to the extremest shore of my modesty; but my brother justice have I found so severe, that he hath forc'd me to tell him he is indeed Justice. 268

Duke. If his own life answer the straitness of his proceeding, it shall become him well;
wherein if he chance to fail, he hath sentenc'd himself.

Escal. I am going to visit the prisoner. Fare
you well. 273

Duke. Peace be with you!

[Exeunt Escalus and Provost.]

He who the sword of heaven will bear

Should be as holy as severe;

Pattern in himself to know,

Grace to stand, and virtue go;

More nor less to others paying

Than by self-offences weighing. 280

Shame to him whose cruel striking
Kills for faults of his own liking!
Twice treble shame on Angelo,
To weed my vice and let his grow!
O, what may man within him hide, 285
Though angel on the outward side!
How may likeness made in crimes,
Making practice on the times,
To draw with idle spiders' strings
Most ponderous and substantial things! 290
Craft against vice I must apply.
With Angelo to-night shall lie
His old betrothed but despised;
So disguise shall, by the disguised,
Pay with falsehood false exacting, 295
And perform an old contracting. [Exit.]

ACT IV

SCENE I. [The moated grange at St. Luke's.]

Enter MARIANA, and Boy singing.

SONG.

Take, O, take those lips away,
That so sweetly were forsworn;
And those eyes, the break of day,
Lights that do mislead the morn;
But my kisses bring again, bring again;
Seals of love, but seal'd in vain, seal'd in vain. 5

Enter DUKE [disguised as before].

Mari. Break off thy song, and haste thee quick away.

Here comes a man of comfort, whose advice
Hath often still'd my brawling discontent. [Exit Boy.]

I cry you mercy, sir; and well could wish 10
You had not found me here so musical.
Let me excuse me, and believe me so,
My mirth it much displeas'd, but pleas'd my
woe.

Duke. 'Tis good; though music oft hath such a charm 14

To make bad good, and good provoke to harm.
I pray you, tell me, hath anybody inquir'd for me here to-day? Much upon this time have
I promis'd here to meet.

Mari. You have not been inquir'd after. I have sat here all day. 20

Enter ISABELLA.

Duke. I do constantly believe you. The time is come even now. I shall crave your forbearance a little. May be I will call upon you anon, for some advantage to yourself.

Mari. I am always bound to you. [Exit. 25

Duke. Very well met, and well come.

What is the news from this good deputy?

Isab. He hath a garden circummur'd with brick,

Whose western side is with a vineyard back'd,
And to that vineyard is a planced gate, 30
That makes his opening with this bigger key.
This other doth command a little door
Which from the vineyard to the garden leads;
There have I made my promise

Upon the heavy middle of the night 35
To call upon him.

Duke. But shall you on your knowledge find this way?

Isab. I have ta'en a due and wary note upon 't.

With whispering and most guilty diligence,
In action all of precept, he did show me 40
The way twice o'er.

Duke. Are there no other tokens
Between you 'greed concerning her observance?

Isab. No, none, but only a repair i' the dark;

And that I have possess'd him my most stay

Can be but brief; for I have made him know 45
I have a servant comes with me along,

That stays upon me, whose persuasion is
I come about my brother.

Duke. 'T is well borne up.
I have not yet made known to Mariana

A word of this. What, ho! within! come forth!

Re-enter MARIANA.

I pray you, be acquainted with this maid; 51
She comes to do you good.

Isab. I do desire the like.

Duke. Do you persuade yourself that I respect you?

Mari. Good friar, I know you do, and have found it.

Duke. Take, then, this your companion by the hand, 55

Who hath a story ready for your ear.

I shall attend your leisure; but make haste;
The vaporous night approaches.

Mari. Will 't please you walk aside?
[Exeunt [Mariana and Isabella].]

Duke. O place and greatness! millions of false eyes 60

Are stuck upon thee. Volumes of report Run with these false and most contrarious quests

Upon thy doings; thousand escapes of wit

Make thee the father of their idle dream
And rack thee in their fancies.

Re-enter MARIANA and ISABELLA.

Welcome, how agreed?

Isab. She'll take the enterprise upon her, father, 66

If you advise it.

Duke. It is not my consent,
But my entreaty too.

Isab. Little have you to say
When you depart from him, but, soft and low,

"Remember now my brother."

Mari. Fear me not. 70

Duke. Nor, gentle daughter, fear you not at all.

He is your husband on a pre-contract;
To bring you thus together, 't is no sin,

Sith that the justice of your title to him
Doth flourish the deceit. Come, let us go. 75

Our corn 's to reap, for yet our tilth 's to sow.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [A room in the prison.]

Enter PROVOST and Clown [POMPEY].

Prov. Come hither, sirrah. Can you cut off a man's head?

Pom. If the man be a bachelor, sir, I can; but if he be a married man, he 's his wife's head, and I can never cut off a woman's head. 5

Prov. Come, sir, leave me your snatches, and yield me a direct answer. To-morrow morning are to die Claudio and Barnardine. Here is in our prison a common executioner, who in his office lacks a helper. If you will take it on you 10 to assist him, it shall redeem you from your gyves; if not, you shall have your full time of imprisonment, and your deliverance with an unpitied whipping, for you have been a notorious bawd. 15

Pom. Sir, I have been an unlawful bawd time out of mind; but yet I will be content to be a lawful hangman. I would be glad to receive some instruction from my fellow partner.

Prov. What, ho! Abhorson! Where's Abhorson, there? 21

Enter ABHORSON.

Abhor. Do you call, sir?

Prov. Sirrah, here 's a fellow will help you to-morrow in your execution. If you think it meet, compound with him by the year, and let him abide here with you; if not, use him 25 for the present and dismiss him. He cannot plead his estimation with you; he hath been a bawd.

Abhor. A bawd, sir? Fie upon him! he will discredit our mystery. 30

Prov. Go to, sir; you weigh equally. A feather will turn the scale. [Exit.]

Pom. Pray, sir, by your good favour,—for surely, sir, a good favour you have, but that you have a hanging look,—do you call, sir, your occupation a mystery? 36

Abhor. Ay, sir; a mystery.

Pom. Paining, sir, I have heard say, is a mystery; and your whores, sir, being members of my occupation, using painting, do prove my occupation a mystery; but what mystery there should be in hanging, if I should be hang'd, I cannot imagine. 43

Abhor. Sir, it is a mystery.

Pom. Proof?

Abhor. Every true man's apparel fits your thief. If it be too little for your thief, your true man thinks it big enough; if it be too big for your thief, your thief thinks it little enough; so every true man's apparel fits your thief. 50

Re-enter PROVOST.

Prov. Are you agreed?

Pom. Sir, I will serve him, for I do find your hangman is a more penitent trade than your bawd; he doth oftener ask forgiveness. 54

Prov. You, sirrah, provide your block and your axe to-morrow four o'clock.

Abhor. Come on, bawd, I will instruct thee in my trade. Follow. 58

Pom. I do desire to learn, sir; and I hope,

if you have occasion to use me for your own turn, you shall find me yare; for truly, sir, for your kindness I owe you a good turn. [Exit.]

Prov. Call hither Barnardine and Claudio.

[Exit Abhorson.]
The one has my pity; not a jot the other, ⁶⁴
Being a murderer, though he were my brother.

Enter CLAUDIO.

Look, here's the warrant, Claudio, for thy death.

'Tis now dead midnight, and by eight to-morrow

Thou must be made immortal. Where's Barnardine?

Claud. As fast lock'd up in sleep as guiltless labour

When it lies starkly in the traveller's bones. ⁷⁰
He will not wake.

Prov. Who can do good on him?

Well, go, prepare yourself. [Knocking within.]

But, hark, what noise?

Heaven give your spirits comfort! [Exit Claudio.] By and by.

I hope it is some pardon or reprieve
For the most gentle Claudio.

Enter DUKE [disguised as before].

Welcome, father.

Duke. The best and wholesomest spirits of the night ⁷⁶

Envelop you, good Provost! Who call'd here of late?

Prov. None, since the curfew rung.

Duke. Not Isabel?

Prov. No.

Duke. They will, then, ere't be long.

Prov. What comfort is for Claudio? ⁸⁰

Duke. There's some in hope.

Prov. It is a bitter deputy.

Duke. Not so, not so; his life is parallel'd
Even with the stroke and line of his great justice.

He doth with holy abstinence subdue
That in himself which he spurs on his power ⁸⁵
To qualify in others. Were he meal'd with that

Which he corrects, then were he tyrannous;
But this being so, he's just.

[Knocking within.]

Now are they come.

[Exit Provost.]

This is a gentle Provost: seldom when
The steeld gaoler is the friend of men. ⁹⁰

[Knocking within.]
How now! what noise? That spirit's possess'd with haste

That wounds the unsisting postern with these strokes.

[Re-enter PROVOST.]

Prov. There he must stay until the officer
Arise to let him in. He is call'd up.

Duke. Have you no countermand for Claudio yet, ■

But he must die to-morrow?

Prov. None, sir, none.

Duke. As near the dawning, Provost, as it is,

You shall hear more ere morning.

Prov. Happily

You something know, yet I believe there comes
No countermand; no such example have we. ¹⁰⁰
Besides, upon the very siege of justice
Lord Angelo hath to the public ear
Profess'd the contrary.

Enter a MESSENGER.

This is his lordship's man.

[Duke.] And here comes Claudio's pardon.

Mes. [Giving a paper.] My lord hath sent ¹⁰⁵
you this note; and by me this further charge, that you swerve not from the smallest article of it, neither in time, matter, or other circumstance.
Good morrow; for, as I take it, it is almost day.

Prov. I shall obey him. [Exit Messenger.] ¹¹⁰

Duke. [Aside.] This is his pardon, purchas'd
by such sin

For which the pardoner himself is in.
Hence hath offence his quick celerity,
When it is borne in high authority.
When vice makes mercy, mercy's so extended,
That for the fault's love is the offender
friended. ¹¹⁶

Now, sir, what news?

Prov. I told you. Lord Angelo, belike thinking me remiss in mine office, awakens me with this unwonted putting-on; methinks strangely, for he hath not us'd it before. ¹²¹

Duke. Pray you, let's hear.

[Prov. Reads] the letter.

"Whatsoever you may hear to the contrary,
let Claudio be executed by four of the clock;
and in the afternoon Barnardine. For my better satisfaction, let me have Claudio's head ¹²⁶ sent me by five. Let this be duly performed, with a thought that more depends on it than we must yet deliver. Thus fail not to do your office, as you will answer it at your peril." ¹³⁰
What say you to this, sir?

Duke. What is that Barnardine who is to be executed in the afternoon?

Prov. A Bohemian born, but here nurs'd up and bred; one that is a prisoner nine years old. ¹³⁵

Duke. How came it that the absent Duke had not either deliver'd him to his liberty or executed him? I have heard it was ever his manner to do so. ¹³⁹

Prov. His friends still wrought reprieves for him; and, indeed, his fact, till now in the government of Lord Angelo, came not to an undoubtful proof.

Duke. It is now apparent? ¹⁴⁴

Prov. Most manifest, and not denied by himself.

Duke. Hath he borne himself penitently in prison? How seems he to be touch'd? ¹⁴⁸

Prov. A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully but as a drunken sleep; careless, reckless, and fearless of what's past, present,
or to come; insensible of mortality, and desperately mortal.

Duke. He wants advice. 154

Prov. He will hear none. He hath evermore had the liberty of the prison; give him leave to escape hence, he would not; drunk many times a day, if not many days entirely drunk. We have very oft awak'd him, as if to carry him to execution, and show'd him a seeming warrant for it; it hath not moved him at all. 161

Duke. More of him anon. There is written in your brow, Provost, honesty and constancy. If I read it not truly, my ancient skill beguiles me; but, in the boldness of my cunning, I will lay myself in hazard. Claudio, whom here 165 you have warrant to execute, is no greater forfeit to the law than Angelo who hath sentenc'd him. To make you understand this in a manifested effect, I crave but four days' respite; for the which you are to do me both a present and a dangerous courtesy. 172

Prov. Pray, sir, in what?

Duke. In the delaying death.

Prov. Alack, how may I do it, having the hour limited, and an express command, under penalty, to deliver his head in the view of Angelo? I may make my case as Claudio's, to cross this in the smallest. 179

Duke. By the vow of mine order I warrant you, if my instructions may be your guide. Let this Barnardine be this morning executed, and his head borne to Angelo.

Prov. Angelo hath seen them both, and will discover the favour. 185

Duke. O, death's a great disguiser, and you may add to it. Shave the head, and tie the beard; and say it was the desire of the penitent to be so bar'd before his death. You know the course is common. If anything fall to you upon this, more than thanks and good fortune, by the saint whom I profess, I will plead against it with my life. 193

Prov. Pardon me, good father; it is against my oath.

Duke. Were you sworn to the Duke, or to the deputy? 197

Prov. To him, and to his substitutes.

Duke. You will think you have made no offence, if the Duke avouch the justice of your dealing?

Prov. But what likelihood is in that? 202

Duke. Not a resemblance, but a certainty. Yet since I see you fearful, that neither my coat, integrity, nor persuasion can with ease attempt you, I will go further than I meant, to pluck all fears out of you. Look you, sir, here is the hand and seal of the Duke. You know the character, I doubt not; and the signet is not strange to you. 206

Prov. I know them both.

Duke. The contents of this is the return of the Duke. You shall anon over-read it at your pleasure; where you shall find, within these two days he will be here. This is a thing that Angelo knows not; for he this very day receives letters of strange tenour, perchance 215 of the Duke's death, perchance entering into some monastery, but, by chance, nothing of what is here writ. Look, the unfolding star calls up the shepherd. Put not yourself into amazement how these things should be. All 220 difficulties are but easy when they are known. Call your executioner, and off with Barnardine's head. I will give him a present shirt and advise him for a better place. Yet you are amaz'd, but this shall absolutely resolve you. Come away; it is almost clear dawn. 226

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [Another room in the same.]

Enter Clown [POMPEY].

Pom. I am as well acquainted here as I was in our house of profession. One would think it were Mistress Overdone's own house, for here be many of her old customers. First, here's young Master Rash. He's in for a commodity of brown paper and old ginger, nine-score 5 and seventeen pounds; of which he made five marks, ready money. Marry, then ginger was not much in request, for the old women were all dead. Then is there here one Master Caper, at the suit of Master Three-pile the mer- 10 cer, for some four suits of peach-colour'd satin, which now peaches him a beggar. Then have we here young Dizzy, and young Master Deep-vow, and Master Copper-spur, and Master Starve-lackey the rapier and dagger man, 15 and young Drop-heir that killed lusty Pudding, and Master Forthlight the tilter, and brave Master Shooty the great traveller, and wild Half-can that stabb'd Pots, and, I think, forty more; all great doers in our trade, and are now "for the Lord's sake," 21

Enter ABHORSON.

Abhor. Sirrah, bring Barnardine hither.

Pom. Master Barnardine! You must rise and be hang'd, Master Barnardine!

Abhor. What, ho, Barnardine! 25

Bar. [Within.] A pox o' your throats! Who makes that noise there? What are you?

Pom. Your friends, sir; the hangman. You must be so good, sir, to rise and be put to death.

Bar. [Within.] Away, you rogue, away! I am sleepy. 31

Abhor. Tell him he must awake, and that quickly too.

Pom. Pray, Master Barnardine, awake till you are executed, and sleep afterwards. 35

Abhor. Go in to him, and fetch him out.

Pom. He is coming, sir, he is coming. I hear his straw rustle.

Enter BARNARDINE.

Abhor. Is the axe upon the block, sirrah?

Pom. Very ready, sir. 40

Bar. How now, Abhorson? What's the news with you?

Abhor. Truly, sir, I would desire you to clap into your prayers; for, look you, the warrant's come. 45

Bar. You rogue, I have been drinking all night; I am not fitted for 't.

Pom. O, the better, sir; for he that drinks all night, and is hanged betimes in the morning, may sleep the sounder all the next day. 66

Enter DUKE [disguised as before].

Abhor. Look you, sir; here comes your ghostly father. Do we jest now, think you?

Duke. Sir, induced by my charity, and hearing how hastily you are to depart, I am come to advise you, comfort you, and pray with you.

Bar. Friar, not I. I have been drinking [66] hard all night, and I will have more time to prepare me, or they shall beat out my brains with billets. I will not consent to die this day, that's certain.

Duke. O, sir, you must; and therefore I beseech you 60

Look forward on the journey you shall go.

Bar. I swear I will not die to-day for any man's persuasion.

Duke. But hear you, 64

Bar. Not a word. If you have anything to say to me, come to my ward; for thence will not I to-day. [Exit.]

Re-enter PROVOST.

Duke. Unfit to live or die, O gravel heart! After him, fellows; bring him to the block.

[Exeunt Abhorson and Pompey.]

Prov. Now sir, how do you find the prisoner? 70

Duke. A creature unprepar'd, unmeet for death;

And to transport him in the mind he is Were damnable.

Prov. Here in the prison, father, There died this morning of a cruel fever One Ragozine, a most notorious pirate, 75
A man of Claudio's years; his beard and head Just of his colour. What if we do omit This reprobate till he were well inclin'd, And satisfy the deputy with the visage Of Ragozine, more like to Claudio? 80

Duke. O, 't is an accident that Heaven provides!

Dispatch it presently. The hour draws on Prefix'd by Angelo. See this be done, And sent according to command, whiles I Persuade this rude wretch willingly to die. 85

Prov. This shall be done, good father, presently.

But Barnardine must die this afternoon; And how shall we continue Claudio, To save me from the danger that might come If he were known alive?

Duke. Let this be done. 90
Put them in secret holds, both Barnardine And Claudio.

Ere twice the sun hath made his journal greeting

To the under generation, you shall find Your safety manifested.

Prov. I am your free dependant. 95

Duke. Quick, dispatch, and send the head to Angelo. [Exit Provost.]

Now will I write letters to Angelo, —
The Provost, he shall bear them, — whose contents

Shall witness to him I am near at home, And that, by great injunctions, I am bound 100
To enter publicly. Him I'll desire To meet me at the consecrated fount A league below the city; and from thence, By cold gradation and well-balance'd form, We shall proceed with Angelo. 105

Re-enter PROVOST.

Prov. Here is the head; I'll carry it myself.

Duke. Convenient is it. Make a swift return; For I would commune with you of such things That want no ear but yours.

Prov. I'll make all speed. [Exit.]

Isab. (Within.) Peace, ho, be here! 110

Duke. The tongue of Isabel. She's come to know

If yet her brother's pardon be come hither.

But I will keep her ignorant of her good,

To make her heavenly comforts of despair, When it is least expected.

Enter ISABELLA.

Isab. Ho, by your leave!

Duke. Good morning to you, fair and gracious daughter. 116

Isab. The better, given me by so holy a man. Hath yet the deputy sent my brother's pardon?

Duke. He hath releas'd him, Isabel, from the world.

His head is off and sent to Angelo. 120

Isab. Nay, but it is not so.

Duke. It is no other. Show your wisdom, daughter,

In your close patience.

Isab. O, I will to him and pluck out his eyes!

Duke. You shall not be admitted to his sight. 125

Isab. Unhappy Claudio! Wretched Isabel! Injurious world! Most damned Angelo!

Duke. This nor hurts him nor profits you a jot.

Forbear it therefore; give your cause to heaven.

Mark what I say, which you shall find 130

By every syllable a faithful verity.

The Duke comes home to-morrow; — nay, dry your eyes; —

One of our covent, and his confessor, Gives me this instance. Already he hath carried

Notice to Escalus and Angelo, 135

Who do prepare to meet him at the gates,

There to give up their power. If you can, pace your wisdom

In that good path that I would wish it go,

And you shall have your bosom on this wretch,

Grace of the Duke, revenges to your heart, 140
And general honour.

Isab. I am directed by you.

Duke. This letter, then, to Friar Peter give; 'T is that he sent me of the Duke's return.

Say, by this token, I desire his company At Mariana's house to-night. Her cause and yours 145

I'll perfect him withal, and he shall bring you Before the Duke, and to the head of Angelo

Accuse him home and home. For my poor self,
I am combined by a sacred vow
And shall be absent. Wend you with this letter. 180

Command these fretting waters from your eyes
With a light heart. Trust not my holy order,
If I pervert your course. Who's here?

Enter LUCIO.

Lucio. Good even. Friar, where's the Provost? 185

Duke. Not within, sir.

Lucio. O pretty Isabella, I am pale at mine heart to see thine eyes so red. Thou must be patient. I am fain to dine and sup with water and bran; I dare not for my head fill my belly; one fruitful meal would set me to't. 190
But they say the Duke will be here to-morrow.
By my troth, Isabel, I lov'd thy brother. If the old fantastical Duke of dark corners had been at home, he had lived. [Exit Isabella.] 195

Duke. Sir, the Duke is marvellous little beholding to your reports; but the best is, he lives not in them.

Lucio. Friar, thou knowest not the Duke so well as I do. He's a better woodman than thou tak'st him for. 171

Duke. Well, you'll answer this one day.
Fare ye well.

Lucio. Nay, tarry; I'll go along with thee.
I can tell thee pretty tales of the Duke. 175

Duke. You have told me too many of him already, sir, if they be true; if not true, none were enough.

Lucio. I was once before him for getting a wench with child. 180

Duke. Did you such a thing?

Lucio. Yes, marry, did I; but I was fain to forswear it. They would else have married me to the rotten medlar. 184

Duke. Sir, your company is fairer than honest. Rest you well.

Lucio. By my troth, I'll go with thee to the lane's end. If bawdy talk offend you, we'll have very little of it. Nay, friar, I am a kind of burr; I shall stick. [Exeunt.] 190

SCENE IV. [A room in Angelo's house.]

Enter ANGELO and ESCALUS.

Escal. Every letter he hath writ hath dis-vouch'd other.

Ang. In most uneven and distracted manner. His actions show much like to madness; pray Heaven his wisdom be not tainted! And why meet him at the gates, and redeliver our authorities there? 7

Escal. I guess not.

Ang. And why should we proclaim it in an hour before his entering, that if any crave redress of injustice, they should exhibit their petitions in the street? 13

Escal. He shows his reason for that: to have a dispatch of complaints, and to deliver us from devices hereafter, which shall then have no power to stand against us. 16

Ang. Well, I beseech you, let it be proclaim'd betimes i' the morn. I'll call you at your house. Give notice to such men of sort and suit as are to meet him. 20

Escal. I shall, sir. Fare you well.

[Exit Escalus.]

Ang. Good night.

This deed unshapes me quite, makes me un-
pregnant

And dull to all proceedings. A deflow'ed
maid!

And by an eminent body that enforce'd 25
The law against it! But that her tender shame
Will not proclaim against her maiden loss,
How might she tongue me! Yet reason dares her no;

For my authority bears a credent bulk,
That no particular scandal once can touch 30
But it confounds the breather. He should have liv'd,

Save that his riotous youth, with dangerous sense,
Might in the times to come have ta'en revenge,
By so receiving a dishonour'd life
With ransom of such shame. Would yet he had lived! 35

Alack, when once our grace we have forgot, Nothing goes right; we would, and we would not. [Exit.]

SCENE V. [Fields without the town.]

Enter DUKE [in his own habit,] and FRIAR PETER.

Duke. These letters at fit time deliver me.

[Giving letters.]

The Provost knows our purpose and our plot.
The matter being afoot, keep your instruction,
And hold you ever to our special drift,
Though sometimes you do blench from this to 5
that,

As cause doth minister. Go call at Flavius'
house,

And tell him where I stay. Give the like notice
To Valentinus, Rowland, and to Crassus,
And bid them bring the trumpets to the gate.
But send me Flavius first.

Fri. P. It shall be speeded well.
[Exit.]

Enter VARRIUS.

Duke. I thank thee, Varrius; thou hast made good haste: 11

Come, we will walk. There's other of our friends

Will greet us here anon, my gentle Varrius.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. [Street near the city gate.]

Enter ISABELLA and MARIANA.

Isab. To speak so indirectly I am loath.
I would say the truth; but to accuse him so,
That is your part. Yet I am advis'd to do it;
He says, to veil full purpose.

Mari. Be rul'd by him.

Isab. Besides, he tells me that, if peradventure 5

He speak against me on the adverse side,
I should not think it strange; for 't is a physic
That 's bitter to sweet end.

Enter FRIAR PETER.

Mari. I would Friar Peter —

Isab. O, peace! the friar is come.

Fri. P. Come, I have found you out a stand most fit,

Where you may have such vantage on the Duke,

He shall not pass you. Twice have the trumpets sounded,

The generous and gravest citizens

Have hent the gates, and very near upon ¹⁴

The Duke is entering; therefore, hence, away!
[Exeunt.]

ACT V

SCENE I. [The city gate.]

Enter DUKE, VARRIUS, Lords, ANGELO, ESCA-LUS, LUCIO, [Provost, Officers, and] Citizens, at several doors.

Duke. My very worthy cousin, fairly met!
Our old and faithful friend, we are glad to see
you.

Ang. } Happy return be to your royal Grace!
Escal. }

Duke. Many and hearty thankings to you both.

We have made inquiry of you, and we hear ⁵
Such goodness of your justice, that our soul
Cannot but yield you forth to public thanks,
Forerunning more requital.

Ang. You make my bonds still greater.

Duke. O, your desert speaks loud; and I should wrong it,

To lock it in the wards of covert bosom, ¹⁰
When it deserves, with characters of brass,
A fortified residence 'gainst the tooth of time
And rasure of oblivion. Give me your hand,
And let the subject see, to make them know
That outward courtesies would fain proclaim Favours that keep within. Come, Escalus, ¹⁶
You must walk by us on our other hand;
And good supporters are you.

Enter FRIAR PETER and ISABELLA.

Fri. P. Now is your time. Speak loud and kneel before him.

Isab. Justice, O royal Duke! Vail your regard ²⁰

Upon a wrong'd, I would fain have said, a maid!

O worthy Prince, dishonour not your eye

By throwing it on any other object

Till you have heard me in my true complaint

And given me justice, justice, justice, justice! ²⁵

Duke. Relate your wrongs. In what? By whom? Be brief.

Here is Lord Angelo shall give you justice:

Reveal yourself to him.

Isab. O worthy Duke,

You bid me seek redemption of the devil.

Hear me yourself; for that which I must speak

Must either punish me, not being believ'd, ³¹
Or wring redress from you. Hear me, O hear me, here!

Ang. My lord, her wits, I fear me, are not firm.

She hath been a suitor to me for her brother,

Cut off by course of justice, —

Isab. By course of justice!

Ang. And she will speak most bitterly and strange, ³⁶

Isab. Most strange, but yet most truly, will
I speak.

That Angelo's forsworn, is it not strange?

That Angelo's a murderer, is 't not strange?

That Angelo is an adulterous thief, ⁴⁰

An hypocrite, a virgin-violator,

Is it not strange and strange?

Duke. Nay, it is ten times strange.

Isab. It is not truer he is Angelo

Than this is all as true as it is strange.

Nay, it is ten times true; for truth is truth ⁴⁵
To the end of reckoning.

Duke. Away with her! Poor soul,

She speaks this in the infirmity of sense.

Isab. O Prince, I conjure thee, as thou believ'st

There is another comfort than this world,
That thou neglect me not, with that opinion ⁵⁰

That I am touch'd with madness! Make not impossible

That which but seems unlike. 'T is not impossible

But one, the wicked'st caitiff on the ground,
May seem as shy, as grave, as just, as absolute ⁵⁵

As Angelo. Even so may Angelo,
In all his dressings, characts, titles, forms,

Be an arch-villain. Believe it, royal Prince!

If he be less, he's nothing; but he's more,
Had I more name for badness.

Duke. By mine honesty,

If she be mad, — as I believe no other, — ⁶⁰

Her madness hath the oddest frame of sense,
Such a dependency of thing on thing,

As e'er I heard in madness.

Isab. O gracious Duke,

Harp not on that, nor do not banish reason
For inequality; but let your reason serve ⁶⁵

To make the truth appear where it seems hid,
And hide the false seems true.

Duke. Many that are not mad

Have, sure, more lack of reason. What would you say?

Isab. I am the sister of one Claudio
Condemn'd upon the act of fornication ⁷⁰

To lose his head; condemn'd by Angelo.
I, in probation of a sisterhood,

Was sent to by my brother; one Lucio
As then the messenger, —

Lucio. That's I, an't like your Grace.

I came to her from Claudio, and desir'd her ⁷⁵
To try her gracious fortune with Lord Angelo
For her poor brother's pardon.

Isab. That's he indeed.

Duke. You were not bid to speak.

Lucio. No, my good lord;

Nor wish'd to hold my peace.

Duke. I wish you now, then.

Pray you, take note of it; and when you have
A business for yourself, pray Heaven you then Be perfect.

Lucio. I warrant your honour.

Duke. The warrant 's for yourself; take heed
to 't.

Isab. This gentleman told somewhat of my tale, —

Lucio. Right.

Duke. It may be right, but you are i' the wrong

To speak before your time. Proceed.

Isab. I went
To this pernicious caitiff deputy, —

Duke. That's somewhat madly spoken.

Isab. Pardon it;
The phrase is to the matter.

Duke. Mended again. The matter; proceed.

Isab. In brief, to set the needless process by,
How I persuaded, how I pray'd, and kneel'd,

How he refell'd me, and how I repli'd, —
For this was of much length, — the vile conclusion

I now begin with grief and shame to utter.
He would not, but by gift of my chaste body
To his concupiscible intemperate lust,

Release my brother; and, after much debate-
ment,

My sisterly remorse confutes mine honour,
And I did yield to him; but the next morn
betimes,

His purpose surfeiting, he sends a warrant
For my poor brother's head.

Duke. This is most likely!
Isab. O, that it were as like as it is true!

Duke. By heaven, fond wretch, thou know'st not what thou speak'st,

Or else thou art suborn'd against his honour
In hateful practice. First, his integrity Stands without blemish. Next, it imports no reason

That with such vehemency he should pursue Faults proper to himself. If he had so offended,

He would have weigh'd thy brother by himself,
And not have cut him off. Some one hath set you on.

Confess the truth, and say by whose advice
Thou cam'st here to complain.

Isab. And is this all?
Then, O you blessed ministers above,

Keep me in patience, and with ripened time
Unfold the evil which is here wrapt up
In countenance! Heaven shield your Grace from woe,

As I, thus wrong'd, hence unbeliev'd go!
Duke. I know you'd fain be gone. An officer!

To prison with her! Shall we thus permit
A blasting and a scandalous breath to fall
On him so near us? This needs must be a practice.

Who knew of your intent and coming hither?
Isab. One that I would were here, Friar Lodowick,

Duke. A ghostly father, belike. Who knows that Lodowick?

Lucio. My lord, I know him; 't is a meddling
friar.

I do not like the man. Had he been lay, my
lord,

For certain words he spake against your Grace
In your retirement, I had swing'd him soudly.

Duke. Words against me! This's a good friar, belike!

And to set on this wretched woman here
Against our substitute! Let this friar be found.

Lucio. But yesternight, my lord, she and that friar,

I saw them at the prison. A saucy friar,
A very scurvy fellow.

Fri. P. Blessed be your royal Grace!
I have stood by, my lord, and I have heard
Your royal ear abus'd. First, hath this woman
Most wrongfully accus'd your substitute,

Who is as free from touch or soil with her
As she from one ungot.

Duke. We did believe no less.
Know you that Friar Lodowick that she speaks
of?

Fri. P. I know him for a man divine and holy;

Not scurvy, nor a temporary meddler,
As he's reported by this gentleman;

And, on my trust, a man that never yet
Did, as he vouches, misreport your Grace.

Lucio. My lord, most villainously; believe it.

Fri. P. Well, he in time may come to clear himself;

But at this instant he is sick, my lord,
Of a strange fever. Upon his mere request,
Being come to knowledge that there was complaint

Intended 'gainst Lord Angelo, came I hither,
To speak, as from his mouth, what he doth
know

Is true and false; and what he with his oath
And all probation will make up full clear, Whensoever he's convented. First, for this woman,

To justify this worthy nobleman,
So vulgarly and personally accus'd,
Her shall you hear disproved to her eyes,
Till she herself confess it.

Duke. Good friar, let's hear it.
[Isabella is carried off guarded.]

Do you not smile at this, Lord Angelo?
O heaven, the vanity of wretched fools!

Give us some seats. Come, cousin Angelo;
In this I'll be impartial. Be you judge
Of your own cause. Is this the witness, friar?

Enter MARIANA [veiled].

First, let her show her face, and after speak.

Mari. Pardon, my lord; I will not show my face

Until my husband bid me.

Duke. What, are you married?

Mari. No, my lord.

Duke. Are you a maid?

Mari. No, my lord.

Duke. A widow, then?

Mari. Neither, my lord.

Duke. Why, you are nothing then: neither maid, widow, nor wife?

Lucio. My lord, she may be a punk; for many of them are neither maid, widow, nor wife. 180

Duke. Silence that fellow. I would he had some cause

To prattle for himself.

Lucio. Well, my lord.

Mari. My lord, I do confess I ne'er was married;

And I confess besides I am no maid. 185

I have known my husband; yet my husband

Knows not that ever he knew me.

Lucio. He was drunk then, my lord; it can be no better.

Duke. For the benefit of silence, would thou wert so too! 191

Lucio. Well, my lord.

Duke. This is no witness for Lord Angelo.

Mari. Now I come to 't, my lord.

She that accuses him of fornication, 195

In self-same manner doth accuse my husband,

And charges him, my lord, with such a time

When I'll depose I had him in mine arms

With all the effect of love.

Ang. Charges she more than me?

Mari. Not that I know.

Duke. No? You say your husband. 201

Mari. Why, just, my lord, and that is Angelo,

Who thinks he knows that he ne'er knew my body,

But knows he thinks that he knows Isabel's.

Ang. This is a strange abuse. Let's see thy face. 205

Mari. My husband bids me; now I will unmask. [Unveiling.]

This is that face, thou cruel Angelo,

Which once thou swor'st was worth the looking

on;

This is the hand which, with a vow'd contract,

Was fast belock'd in thine; this is the body

That took away the match from Isabel, 211

And did supply thee at thy garden-house

In her imagin'd person.

Duke. Know you this woman?

Lucio. Carnally, she says.

Duke. Sirrah, no more!

Lucio. Enough, my lord. 215

Ang. My lord, I must confess I know this woman;

And five years since there was some speech of marriage

Betwixt myself and her; which was broke off,

Partly for that her promised proportions

Came short of composition, but in chief 220

For that her reputation was disvalued

In levity: since which time of five years

I never spake with her, saw her, nor heard from her,

Upon my faith and honour.

Mari. Noble Prince,

As there comes light from heaven and words

from breath, 225

As there is sense in truth and truth in virtue,

I am affianc'd this man's wife as strongly
As words could make up vows; and, my good
lord,

But Tuesday night last gone in 's garden-house

He knew me as a wife. As this is true, 230

Let me in safety raise me from my knees;

Or else for ever be confix'd here,

A marble monument!

Ang.

I did but smile till now.

Now, good my lord, give me the scope of justice.

My patience here is touch'd. I do perceive 235

These poor informal women are no more

But instruments of some more mightier member

That sets them on. Let me have way, my lord,
To find this practice out.

Duke.

Ay, with my heart;

And punish them unto your height of pleasure. 240

Thou foolish friar, and thou pernicious woman,

Compact with her that's gone, think'st thou thy oaths,

Though they would swear down each particular saint,

Were testimonies against his worth and credit
That's seal'd in approbation? You, Lord

Escalus, 245

Sit with my cousin. Lend him your kind pains

To find out this abuse, whence 't is deriv'd.

There is another friar that set them on;

Let him be sent for.

Fri. P. Would he were here, my lord, for he indeed 250

Hath set the women on to this complaint.

Your provost knows the place where he abides,
And he may fetch him.

Duke.

Go, do it instantly.

[Exit Provost.]

And you, my noble and well-warranted cousin,

Whom it concerns to hear this matter forth, 255

Do with your injuries as seems you best,

In any chastisement. I for a while will leave
you;

But stir not you till you have well determin'd
Upon these slanderers.

Escal. My lord, we'll do it thoroughly. 260

[Exit Duke.]

Signior Lucio, did not you say you knew that Friar Lodowick to be a dishonest person?

Lucio. Cucullus non facit monachum: honest in nothing but in his clothes; and one that hath spoke most villanous speeches of the Duke. 265

Escal. We shall entreat you to abide here till he come and enforce them against him.
We shall find this friar a notable fellow.

Lucio. As any in Vienna, on my word. 269

Escal. Call that same Isabel here once again;
I would speak with her. [Exit an attendant.]

Pray you, my lord, give me leave to question;
you shall see how I'll handle her.

Lucio. Not better than he, by her own report.

Escal. Say you? 275

Lucio. Marry, sir, I think, if you handled her privately, she would sooner confess. Perchance, publicly, she'll be asham'd.

Re-enter [Officers with] ISABELLA; and Provost with the DUKE [in his friar's habit].

Escal. I will go darkly to work with her.

Lucio. That's the way, for women are light at midnight. 281

Escal. Come on, mistress. Here's a gentleman denies all that you have said.

Lucio. My lord, here comes the rascal I spoke of; here with the Provost. 285

Escal. In very good time. Speak not you to him till we call upon you.

Lucio. Mum.

Escal. Come, sir, did you set these women on to slander Lord Angelo? They have confess'd you did. 291

Duke. 'T is false.

Escal. How! know you where you are?

Duke. Respect to your great place! and let the devil

Be sometime honour'd for his burning throne! Where is the Duke? 'T is he should hear me speak. 296

Escal. The Duke's in us; and we will hear you speak.

Look you speak justly.

Duke. Boldly, at least. But, O, poor souls, Come you to seek the lamb here of the fox? 300
Good night to your redress! Is the Duke gone? Then is your cause gone too. The Duke's unjust

Thus to retort your manifest appeal,

And put your trial in the villain's mouth Which here you come to accuse. 305

Lucio. This is the rascal; this is he I spoke of.

Escal. Why, thou unreverend and unhallowed friar,

Is't not enough thou hast suborn'd these women

To accuse this worthy man, but, in foul mouth And in the witness of his proper ear, 310

To call him villain, and then to glance from him To the Duke himself, to tax him with injustice? Take him hence; to the rack with him! We'll touse you

Joint by joint, but we will know his purpose.

What, "unjust"!

Duke. Be not so hot. The Duke 315

Dare no more stretch this finger of mine than he Dare rack his own. His subject am I not,

Nor here provincial. My business in this state

Made me a looker on here in Vienna,

Where I have seen corruption boil and bubble

Till it o'er-run the stew; laws for all faults, 321

But faults so countenanc'd, that the strong statutes

Stand like the forfeits in a barber's shop,

As much in mock as mark.

Escal. Slander to the state! Away with him to prison! 325

Ang. What can you vouch against him, Signior Lucio?

Is this the man that you did tell us of?

Lucio. 'T is he, my lord. Come hither, good-man bald-pate. Do you know me? 329

Duke. I remember you, sir, by the sound of your voice. I met you at the prison, in the absence of the Duke.

Lucio. O, did you so? And do you remember what you said of the Duke?

Duke. Most notably, sir. 335

Lucio. Do you so, sir? And was the Duke a fleshmonger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?

Duke. You must, sir, change persons with me, ere you make that my report. You, indeed, spoke so of him, and much more, much worse. 341

Lucio. O thou damnable fellow! Did not I pluck thee by the nose for thy speeches?

Duke. I protest I love the Duke as I love myself.

Ang. Hark, how the villain would close now, after his treasonable abuses! 347

Escal. Such a fellow is not to be talk'd withal. Away with him to prison! Where is the Provost? Away with him to prison! Lay bolts enough upon him. Let him speak no more. Away with those giglots too, and with the other confederate companion! 353

[The Provost lays hands on the Duke.]

Duke. Stay, sir; stay awhile.

Ang. What, resists he? Help him, Lucio.

Lucio. Come, sir; come, sir; come, sir; foh, sir! Why, you bald-pated, lying rascal, you must be hooded, must you? Show your knave's visage, with a pox to you! Show your sheep-biting face, and be hang'd an hour! Will't not off? [Pulls off the friar's hood.] 360

Duke. Thou art the first knave that e'er mad'st a duke.

First Provost, let me bail these gentle three.

[To Lucio.] Sneak not away, sir; for the friar and you Must have a word anon. Lay hold on him.

Lucio. This may prove worse than hanging.

Duke. [To Escalus.] What you have spoke I pardon. Sit you down; 366

We'll borrow place of him. Sir, [taking Angelo's seat] by your leave.

Hast thou or word, or wit, or impudence,

That yet can do thee office? If thou hast,

Rely upon it till my tale be heard, 370

And hold no longer out.

Ang. O my dread lord,

I should be guiltier than my guiltiness,

To think I can be undiscernible,

When I perceive your Grace, like power divine,

Hath look'd upon my passes. Then, good Prince, 375

No longer session hold upon my shame,

But let my trial be mine own confession.

Immediate sentence, then, and sequent death

Is all the grace I beg.

Duke. Come hither, Mariana.

Say, wast thou e'er contracted to this woman?

Ang. I was, my lord. 381

Duke. Go take her hence, and marry her instantly.

Do you the office, friar; which consummate,

Return him here again. Go with him, Provost.

[Exeunt [Angelo, Mariana, Friar Peter, and Provost].]

Escal. My lord, I am more amaz'd at his dishonour 385
Than at the strangeness of it.

Duke. Come hither, Isabel.
Your friar is now your prince. As I was then Advertising and holy to your business,
Not changing heart with habit, I am still Attorney'd at your service.

Isab. O, give me pardon, 390
That I, your vassal, have employ'd and pain'd
Your unknown sovereignty!

Duke. You are pardon'd, Isabel;
And now, dear maid, be you as free to us.
Your brother's death, I know, sits at your heart;

And you may marvel why I obscur'd myself,
Labouring to save his life, and would not rather 395

Make rash remonstrance of my hidden power
Than let him so be lost. O most kind maid,
Which I did think with slower foot came on, 400
That brain'd my purpose. But, peace be with him!

That life is better life, past fearing death,
Than that which lives to fear. Make it your comfort,
So happy is your brother.

Re-enter ANGELO, MARIANA, FRIAR PETER, and PROVOST.

Isab. I do, my lord.
Duke. For this new-married man approaching here, 405

Whose salt imagination yet hath wrong'd
Your well defended honour, you must pardon
For Mariana's sake; but as he adjudg'd your brother,—

Being criminal, in double violation
Of sacred chastity and of promise-breach 410
Thereon dependent, for your brother's life,—
The very mercy of the law cries out
Most audible, even from his proper tongue,
"An Angelo for Claudio, death for death!"
Haste still pays haste, and leisure answers 415
leisure;

Like doth quit like, and Measure still for Meas-
sure.

Then, Angelo, thy fault's thus manifested;
Which, though thou wouldst deny, denies thee
vantage.

We do condemn thee to the very block
Where Claudio stoop'd to death, and with like haste. 420

Away with him!

Mari. O my most gracious lord,
I hope you will not mock me with a husband.

Duke. It is your husband mock'd you with a husband.

Consenting to the safeguard of your honour,
I thought your marriage fit; else imputation, 425
For that he knew you, might reproach your life
And choke your good to come. For his possessions,

Although by confiscation they are ours,
We do instate and widow you withal,
To buy you a better husband.

Mari. O my dear lord,
I crave no other, nor no better man. 431

Duke. Never crave him; we are definitive.

Mari. Gentle my liege,— [Kneeling.]

Duke. You do but lose your labour.

Away with him to death! [To Lucio.] Now,
sir, to you.

Mari. O my good lord! Sweet Isabel, take my part! 435

Lend me your knees, and all my life to come
I'll lend you all my life to do you service.

Duke. Against all sense you do importune
her.

Should she kneel down in mercy of this fact,
Her brother's ghost his paved bed would break,
And take her hence in horror.

Mari. Isabel, 441
Sweet Isabel, do yet but kneel by me.

Hold up your hands, say nothing; I'll speak all.
They say, best men are moulded out of faults,
And, for the most, become much more the better
For being a little bad; so may my husband. 445
O Isabel, will you not lend a knee?

Duke. He dies for Claudio's death.

Isab. [Kneeling.] Most bounteous sir,
Look, if it please you, on this man condemn'd,
As if my brother liv'd. I partly think 450

A due sincerity governed his deeds,
Till he did look on me. Since it is so,
Let him not die. My brother had but justice,
In that he did the thing for which he died;
For Angelo, 455

His act did not o'ertake his bad intent,
And must be buried but as an intent
That perish'd by the way. Thoughts are no subjects;

Intent, but merely thoughts.

Mari. Merely, my lord.

Duke. Your suit's unprofitable; stand up, I
say. 460

I have bethought me of another fault.
Provost, how came it Claudio was beheaded
At an unusual hour?

Prov. It was commanded so.

Duke. Had you a special warrant for the deed?

Prov. No, my good lord; it was by private message. 465

Duke. For which I do discharge you of your office:

Give up your keys.

Prov. Pardon me, noble lord.
I thought it was a fault, but knew it not;

Yet did repent me, after more advice.
For testimony whereof, one in the prison, 470

That should by private order else have died,
I have reserv'd alive.

Duke. What's he?

Prov. His name is Barnardine.

Duke. I would thou hadst done so by Claudio.
Go fetch him hither; let me look upon him.

[Exit Provost.]

Escal. I am sorry, one so learned and so wise 475

As you, Lord Angelo, have still appear'd,
Should slip so grossly, both in the heat of blood,
And lack of temper'd judgement afterward.

Ang. I am sorry that such sorrow I procure ;
And so deep sticks it in my penitent heart 430
That I crave death more willingly than mercy.
'T is my deserving, and I do entreat it.

Re-enter PROVOST, with BARNARDINE, CLAUDIO
[muffled], and JULIET.

Duke. Which is that Barnardine ?

Prov. This, my lord.

Duke. There was a friar told me of this man.
Sirrah, thou art said to have a stubborn soul, 435
That apprehends no further than this world,
And squar'st thy life according. Thou 'rt condemn'd ;

But, for those earthly faults, I quit them all ;
And pray thee take this mercy to provide
For better times to come. Friar, advise him ; 440
I leave him to your hand. What muffl'd fellow's that ?

Prov. This is another prisoner that I sav'd,
Who should have died when Claudio lost his
head ;

As like almost to Claudio as himself.

Duke. [To Isabella.] [Unmuffles Claudio.]
If he be like your 405
brother, for his sake

Is he pardon'd ; and, for your lovely sake —
Give me your hand and say you will be mine —
He is my brother too. But fitter time for
that.

By this Lord Angelo perceives he's safe ;
Methinks I see a quickening in his eye. 500
Well, Angelo, your evil quits you well.

Look that you love your wife ; her worth worth
yours.

I find an apt remission in myself ;
And yet here's one in place I cannot pardon.

[To Lucio.] You, sirrah, that knew me for a fool, a coward, 505

One all of luxury, an ass, a madman,
Wherein have I so deserv'd of you,
That you extol me thus ? 508

Lucio. Faith, my lord, I spoke it but according to the trick. If you will hang me for it, you may ; but I had rather it would please you I might be whipp'd. 512

Duke. Whipp'd first, sir, and hang'd after.
Proclaim it, Provost, round about the city,
Is any woman wrong'd by this lewd fellow, 515
As I have heard him swear himself there's one Whom he begot with child, let her appear.
And he shall marry her. The nuptial finish'd,
Let him be whipp'd and hang'd. 510

Lucio. I beseech your Highness do not marry me to a whore. Your Highness said even now,
I made you a duke ; good my lord, do not recompense me in making me a cuckold.

Duke. Upon mine honour, thou shalt marry
her.

Thy slanders I forgive ; and therewithal 525
Remit thy other forfeits. Take him to prison ;
And see our pleasure herein executed.

Lucio. Marrying a punk, my lord, is pressing to death, whipping, and hanging.

Duke. Slandering a prince deserves it. 530
[Exeunt Officers with Lucio.]

She, Claudio, that you wrong'd, look you restore.

Joy to you, Mariana ! Love her, Angelo !
I have confess'd her and I know her virtue.
Thanks, good friend Escalus, for thy much goodness ;

There's more behind that is more gratefully. 535
Thanks, Provost, for thy care and secrecy ;
We shall employ thee in a worthier place.

Forgive him, Angelo, that brought you home
The head of Ragozine for Claudio's ;
The offence pardons itself. Dear Isabel, 540

I have a motion much imports your good ;
Whereto if you'll a willing ear incline,
What's mine is yours and what is yours is mine.
So, bring us to our palace, where we'll show What's yet behind, that's meet you all should know. [Exeunt.] 545

PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE

PERICLES is first mentioned in an entry to Edward Blount in the Stationers' Register, May 20, 1608. Blount does not seem to have issued the play, but in the following year a pirated quarto was published with Shakespeare's name on the title-page, and this was reprinted in 1609, 1611, 1619, 1630, and 1635. It was not included in the First or the Second Folio, but appeared with six other additional plays, all of which were spurious, in the second impression of the Third Folio in 1664, the text following that of the Sixth Quarto. The text of the First Quarto is the original authority for all succeeding editions, and, though very corrupt, is here followed, with many corrections from later editors, especially Malone. Owing, however, to the doubtful authenticity of much of the play, it has been thought advisable to be more than usually conservative in the treatment of the text.

The story of Apollonius of Tyre, of which the play is a dramatized version, is one of the most widely diffused themes in fiction. The earliest extant form is a Latin prose Historia, supposed to have been compiled from Greek sources about the fifth century, and found in many MSS., the earliest belonging to the ninth or tenth century. The versions used in the play are that of Gower in his Confessio Amantis, book viii, and that of Laurence Twine in his Patterne of Painful Adventures (Stationers' Register, 1576); but the diffusion of the story throughout all Europe makes it possible that details from other versions may have reached the authors.

The chief features appearing for the first time in the play are the substitution of a tournament for the ball game in which the hero distinguishes himself at Pentapolis; the playful trickery of Simonides in the scene where the marriage is arranged; the details of the scenes in the brothel; and the omission of the revenges of the hero upon the bawds and the treacherous foster-parents of Marina. Only the last of these changes occurs in the part generally ascribed to Shakespeare.

The absence of Pericles from the first two Folios, the inequality of workmanship, and the differences in metrical style in the play as we have it, account for the general opinion that it is only in part Shakespeare's. The parts most generally suspected are Acts i and ii, Scenes ii, v, and vi of Act iv, and all the Choruses spoken by Gower. The remaining parts are almost unanimously attributed to Shakespeare. There is, however, no general agreement as to the manner in which these elements came to be united. Some have held that Shakespeare revised an older play, rewriting the later acts; while the more recent tendency is to regard Pericles as the completion by two minor authors of a play on Marina which Shakespeare had left unfinished. But the occurrence even in the earlier acts of passages and phrases with a Shakespearean ring points to the more subtle and, judging by modern practice, more usual method of collaboration, by which joint authors each discuss and retouch the whole play.

It is widely accepted that the author mainly responsible for Acts i and ii and the Choruses was that George Wilkins who, in 1608, published a novel, "The Painful Adventures of Pericles Prince of Tyre. Being the true History of the Play of Pericles, as it was lately presented by the worthy and ancient poet Iohn Gower." While there is nothing unlikely in this, it can hardly be regarded as absolutely proved. Still less certain is the conjecture that the prose scenes in Act iv are the work of W. Rowley, elsewhere a collaborator with Wilkins. Indeed, the evidence against the Shakespearean authorship of these scenes is by no means complete, and it cannot be denied that without them the conception of the character and spirit of Marina is much less definite. The absence of allusion to these scenes in the dialogue after the meeting of Pericles and Marina is the most significant point in favor of the theory of a third author. It is to be noted that the Choruses are not all in the same class. The first three and that occurring in v. ii. are in eight-syllabled verse, and the earlier ones have occasional archaisms to fit them to Gower. Those in Act iv and the beginning and end of Act v are in ten-syllabled verse, and are somewhat less crude in style. All this points, as before indicated, to a much less absolute division of parts among the collaborators than is usually made out.

ACT I

Enter GOWER.

[Before the palace of Antioch. Heads and skulls of men over the gate.]

Gow. To sing a song that old was sung,
 From ashes ancient Gower is come,
 Assuming man's infirmities,
 To glad your ear, and please your eyes.
 It hath been sung at festivals,
 On ember-eves and holidays;
 And lords and ladies in their lives
 Have read it for restoratives.
 The purchase is to make men glorious;
Et bonum quo antiquius, eo melius.
 If you, born in these latter times,
 When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes,
 And that to hear an old man sing
 May to your wishes pleasure bring,
 I life would wish, and that I might
 Waste it for you, like taper-light.
 This Antioch, then, Antiochus the Great
 Built up, this city, for his chiefest seat;
 The fairest in all Syria,
 I tell you what mine authors say.
 This king unto him took a fere,
 Who died and left a female heir,
 So buxom, blithe, and full of face,
 As heaven had lent her all his grace;
 With whom the father liking took,
 And her to incest did provoke,—
 Bad child; worse father! to entice his own
 To evil should be done by none.
 But custom what they did begin
 Was with long use account'd no sin.
 The beauty of this sinful dame
 Made many princes thither frame
 To seek her as a bed-fellow,
 In marriage-pleasures play-fellow;
 Which to prevent he made a law

To keep her still and men in awe,
 That whoso ask'd her for his wife,
 His riddle told not, lost his life;
 So for her many a wight did die,
 As yon grim looks do testify.
 What now ensues, to the judgement of your eye
 I give, my cause who best can justify. [Exit.]

[SCENE I. Antioch. A room in the palace.]

Enter ANTIOCHUS, PRINCE PERICLES, and followers.

Ant. Young Prince of Tyre, you have at large received the danger of the task you undertake.

Per. I have, Antiochus, and, with a soul Embold'n'd with the glory of her praise, Think death no hazard in this enterprise.

Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride [Music.]

For embracements even of Jove himself;
 At whose conception, till Lucina reign'd,
 Nature this dowry gave to glad her presence,
 The senate-house of planets all did sit,
 To knit in her their best perfections.

Enter the DAUGHTER of Antiochus.

Per. See where she comes, apparelled like the spring,
 Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
 Of every virtue gives renown to men!
 Her face the book of praises, where is read
 Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence Sorrow were ever raz'd, and testy wrath
 Could never be her mild companion.
 You gods that made me man, and sway in love,
 That have inflam'd desire in my breast
 To taste the fruit of yon celestial tree
 Or die in the adventure, be my helps,
 As I am son and servant to your will,
 To compass such a boundless happiness!

Ant. Prince Pericles, — 25

Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.

Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,

With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd,

For death-like dragons here affright thee hard.

Her face, like heaven, enticeth thee to view 30

Her countless glory, which desert must gain,

And which, without desert, because thine eye

Presumes to reach, all the whole heap must die.

Yon sometimes famous princes, like thyself,

Drawn by report, adventurous by desire, 35

Tell thee, with speechless tongues and semblance pale,

That without covering, save yon field of stars,

Here they stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's wars;

And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist

For going on death's net, whom none resist. 40

Per. Antiochus, I thank thee, who hath taught

My frail mortality to know itself,

And by those fearful objects to prepare

This body, like to them, to what I must;

For death rememb'red should be like a mirror, 45

Who tells us life's but breath, to trust it error.

I'll make my will then, and, as sick men do

Who know the world, see heaven, but, feeling

woe,

Gripe not at earthly joys as erst they did;

So I bequeath a happy peace to you 50

And all good men, as every prince should do;

My riches to the earth from whence they came;

But my unspotted fire of love to you.

[To the Princess.]

Thus ready for the way of life or death,

I wait the sharpest blow, Antiochus. 55

[Ant.] Scorning advice, read the conclusion,

then,

Which read and not expounded, 't is decreed,

As these before thee, thou thyself shalt bleed.

Daugh. Of all 'say'd yet, mayst thou prove prosperous!

Of all 'say'd yet I wish thee happiness! 60

Per. Like a bold champion, I assume the lists,

Nor ask advice of any other thought

But faithfulness and courage.

THE RIDDLE.

I am no viper, yet I feed

On mother's flesh which did me breed. 65

I sought a husband, in which labour

I found that kindness in a father.

He's father, son, and husband mild;

I mother, wife, and yet his child.

How they may be, and yet in two, 70

As you will live, resolve it you.

Sharp physic is the last; but, O you powers

That gives heaven countless eyes to view men's acts,

Why cloud they not their sights perpetually, 74

If this be true, which makes me pale to read it?

Fair glass of light, I lov'd you, and could still,

Were not this glorious casket stor'd with ill.

But I must tell you, now my thoughts revolt;

For he's no man on whom perfections wait 75

That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate.

You are a fair viol, and your sense the strings;

Who, finger'd to make man his lawful music,

Would draw heaven down, and all the gods, to hearken;

But being play'd upon before your time,

Hell only daneth at so harsh a chime. 85

Good sooth, I care not for you.

Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy life,

For that's an article within our law,

As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expir'd.

Either expound now, or receive your sentence.

Per. Great king, 91

Few love to hear the sins they love to act;

'T would braid yourself too near for me to tell

it.

Who has a book of all that monarchs do,

He's more secure to keep it shut than shown;

For vice repeated is like the wandering wind, 95

Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself;

And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,

The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear

To stop the air would hurt them. The blind

mole casts

Copp'd hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is thron'd

By man's oppression; and the poor worm doth die for 't.

Kings are earth's gods; in vice their law's their

will;

And if Jove stray, who dare say Jove doth ill?

It is enough you know; and it is fit, 105

What being more known grows worse, to smother it.

All love the womb that their first being bred,

Then give my tongue like leave to love my

head.

Ant. [Aside.] Heaven, that I had thy head!

He has found the meaning.

But I will gloze with him. — Young Prince of

Tyre, 110

Though by the tenour of our strict edict,

Your exposition misinterpreting,

We might proceed to cancel off your days;

Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree

As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise. 115

Forty days longer we do respite you;

If by which time our secret be undone,

This mercy shows we'll joy in such a son;

And until then your entertain shall be

As doth befit our honour and your worth. 120

[Exeunt all but Pericles.]

Per. How courtesy would seem to cover sin,

When what is done is like an hypocrite,

The which is good in nothing but in sight!

If it be true that I interpret false,

Then were it certain you were not so bad 125

As with foul incest to abuse your soul;

Where now you're both a father and a son,

By your untimely claspings with your child,

Which pleasures fits a husband, not a father;

And she an eater of her mother's flesh, 130

By the defiling of her parent's bed;

And both like serpents are, who though they feed

On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.

Antioch, farewell ! for wisdom sees those men
 Blush not in actions blacker than the night ¹³⁵
 Will shun no course to keep them from the light.
 One sin, I know, another doth provoke ;
 Murder 's as near to lust as flame to smoke ;
 Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
 Ay, and the targets to put off the shame ; ¹⁴⁰
 Then, lest my life be cropp'd to keep you clear,
 By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear.

[Exit.]

Re-enter ANTIOCHUS.

Ant. He hath found the meaning,
 For which we mean to have his head.
 He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy, ¹⁴⁵
 Nor tell the world Antiochus doth sin
 In such a loathed manner ;
 And therefore instantly this prince must die,
 For by his fall my honour must keep high.
 Who attends us there ?

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. Doth your Highness call ?

Ant. Thaliard, ¹⁵¹
 You are of our chamber, and our mind partakes

Her private actions to your secrecy ;
 And for your faithfulness we will advance you.
 Thaliard, behold, here 's poison, and here 's gold ; ¹⁵⁵

We hate the Prince of Tyre, and thou must kill him.

It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
 Because we bid it. Say, is it done ?

Thal. My lord,
 'Tis done.

Ant. Enough. ¹⁶⁰

Enter a MESSENGER.

Let your breath cool yourself, telling your haste.

Mes. My lord, Prince Pericles is fled. [Exit.]

Ant. As thou
 Wilt live, fly after ; and like an arrow shot
 From a well-experienc'd archer hits the mark
 His eye doth level at, so thou ne'er return ¹⁶⁵
 Unless thou say Prince Pericles is dead.

Thal. My lord,
 If I can get him within my pistol's length,
 I'll make him sure enough ; so farewell to
 your Highness.

Ant. Thaliard, adieu ! [Exit Thal.] Till
 Pericles be dead, ¹⁷⁰
 My heart can lend no succour to my head.

[Exit.]

[SCENE II. Tyre. A room in the palace.]

Enter PERICLES.

Per. [To Lords without.] Let none disturb us.
 — Why should this change of thoughts,
 The sad companion, dull-ey'd Melancholy,
 Be my so us'd a guest as not an hour
 In the day's glorious walk or peaceful night,
 The tomb where grief should sleep, can breed me quiet ? ⁵

Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes
 shun them ;

And danger, which I fear'd, is at Antioch,
 Whose arm seems far too short to hit me here.
 Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,
 Nor yet the other's distance comfort me. ¹⁰
 Then it is thus : the passions of the mind,
 That have their first conception by mis-dread,
 Have after-nourishment and life by care ;
 And what was first but fear what might be
 done,

Grows elder now and cares it be not done. ¹⁵
 And so with me. The great Antiochus,
 'Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
 Since he's so great can make his will his act,
 Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence ;

Nor boots it me to say I honour him, ²⁰
 If he suspect I may dishonour him ;
 And what may make him blush in being known,
 He'll stop the course by which it might be known.

With hostile forces he'll o'erspread the land,
 And with the ostent of war will look so huge, ²⁵
 Amazement shall drive courage from the state ;
 Our men be vanquish'd ere they do resist,
 And subjects punish'd that ne'er thought offence :

Which care of them, not pity of myself —
 Who am no more but as the tops of trees, ³⁰
 Which fence the roots they grow by and defend
 them —

Makes both my body pine and soul to languish,
 And punish that before that he would punish.

Enter [HELICANUS, with other] LORDS.

1. Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast !

2. Lord. And keep your mind, till you return to us,

Peaceful and comfortable !

Hel. Peace, peace, and give experience tongue.

They do abuse the King that flatter him,
 For flattery is the bellows blows up sin,
 The thing the which is flattered, but a spark, ⁴⁰
 To which that blast gives heat and stronger glowing ;

Whereas reproof, obedient and in order,
 Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err.
 When Signior Sooth here does proclaim a peace,
 He flatters you, makes war upon your life. ⁴⁵
 Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please ;
 I cannot be much lower than my knees.

Per. All leave us else ; but let your cares o'erlook

What shipping and what lading 's in our haven,
 And then return to us. [Exeunt Lords.] Hel-canus, thou ⁵⁰

Hast mov'd us. What seest thou in our looks ?
 Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.

Per. If there be such a dart in princes' frowns,

How durst thy tongue move anger to our face ?
 Hel. How dares the plants look up to heaven, from whence ⁵⁵

They have their nourishment ?

Per. Thou know'st I have power
To take thy life from thee.

Hel. [Kneeling.] I have ground the axe myself;

Do you but strike the blow.

Per. Rise, prithee, rise.
Sit down. Thou art no flatterer.

I than thee for it; and heaven forbid
That kings should let their ears hear their faults hid!

Fit counsellor and servant for a prince,
Who by thy wisdom makes a prince thy servant,
What wouldst thou have me do?

Hel. To bear with patience
Such griefs as you yourself do lay upon yourself.

Per. Thou speak'st like a physician, Helicanus,

That ministers a potion unto me
That thou wouldst tremble to receive thyself.
Attend me, then. I went to Antioch, Where, as thou know'st, against the face of
death,

I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propagate,

Are arms to princes and bring joys to subjects.
Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder;
The rest—hark in thine ear—as black as incest;

Which by my knowledge found, the sinful
father

Seem'd not to strike, but smooth. But thou know'st this,

'Tis time to fear when tyrants seem to kiss.
Which fear so grew in me, I hither fled,

Under the covering of a careful night,
Who seem'd my good protector; and, being
here,

Bethought me what was past, what might succeed.

I knew him tyrannous, and tyrants' fears
Decrease not, but grow faster than the years;

And should he doubt it, as no doubt he doth,
That I should open to the listening air

How many worthy princes' bloods were shed
To keep his bed of blackness unalaid ope,

To lop that doubt, he'll fill this land with
arms,

And make pretence of wrong that I have done
him;

When all for mine (if I may call) offence
Must feel war's blow, who spares not innocence:

Which love to all, of which thyself art one,
Who now reprov'st me for it,—

Hel. Alas, sir!
Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks,

Musings into my mind, with thousand doubts
How I might stop this tempest ere it came;

And finding little comfort to relieve them,
I thought it princely charity to grieve them.

Hel. Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak,

Freely will I speak. Antiochus you fear;
And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant,

Who either by public war or private treason

Will take away your life.

Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while,
Till that his rage and anger be forgot,

Or till the Destinies do cut his thread of life.
Your rule direct to any; if to me,

Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be.
Per. I do not doubt thy faith;

But should he wrong my liberties in my absence?

Hel. We'll mingle our bloods together in the earth,

From whence we had our being and our birth.
Per. Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tarsus

Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee;
And by whose letters I'll dispose myself.

The care I had and have of subjects' good
On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.

I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath;

Who shuns not to break one will sure crack
both;

But in our orbs we'll live so round and safe,
That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince,

Thou show'st a subject's shine, I a true prince.
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE III. Tyre. An ante-chamber in the palace.]

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this the court.
Here must I kill King Pericles; and if I do it not, I am sure to be hang'd at home. 'Tis dangerous. Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that, being bid to ask what he would of the King, desired he [s] might know none of his secrets. Now do I see he had some reason for 't; for if a king bid a man be a villain, he's bound by the indenture of his oath to be one. Hush! here comes the lords of Tyre.

Enter HELICANUS and ESCANES, with other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,

Further to question me of your king's departure.
His seal'd commission, left in trust with me,

Doth speak sufficiently he's gone to travel.
Thal. [Aside.] How! the King gone!

Hel. If further yet you will be satisfied,
Why, as it were unlicens'd of your loves,

He would depart, I'll give some light unto you.
Being at Antioch—

Thal. [Aside.] What from Antioch?
Hel. Royal Antiochus—on what cause I know not—

Took some displeasure at him; at least he judg'd so;

And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd,

To show his sorrow, he'd correct himself;
So puts himself unto the shipman's toil,

With whom each minute threatens life or death.
Thal. [Aside.] Well, I perceive

I shall not be hang'd now, although I would.

But since he's gone, the King's ears it must please;

He scap'd the land, to perish at the sea.

I'll present myself. Peace to the lords of Tyre!

Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome. 31

Thal. From him I come

With message unto princely Pericles;

But since my landing I have understood

Your lord has betook himself to unknown travels, 35

My message must return from whence it came.

Hel. We have no reason to desire it,

Commended to our master, not to us;

Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire, 39

As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. Tarsus. A room in the Governor's house.]

Enter CLEON, the Governor of Tarsus, with [DIONYZA,] his wife, and others.

Cle. My Dionyza, shall we rest us here,

And by relating tales of others' griefs,

See if 't will teach us to forget our own?

Dio. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it;

For who digs hills because they do aspire. 5

Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher.

O my distressed lord, even such our griefs are.

Here they're but felt, and seen with mischief's eyes,

But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher rise.

Cle. O Dionyza, 10

Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it,

Or can conceal his hunger till he famish?

Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep

Our woes into the air; our eyes do weep,

Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim them louder; 15

That, if heaven slumber while their creatures want,

They may awake their helps to comfort them.

I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years,

And, wanting breath to speak, help me with tears.

Dio. I'll do my best, sir. 20

Cle. This Tarsus, o'er which I have the government,

A city on whom Plenty held full hand,

For Riches strew'd herself even in the streets;

Whose towers bore heads so high they kiss'd the clouds,

And strangers ne'er beheld but wond'ring at; 25

Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd,

Like one another's glass to trim them by.

Their tables were stor'd full, to glad the sight,

And not so much to feed on as delight.

All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great, 30

The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dio. O, 't is too true.

Cle. But see what heaven can do! By this our change,

These mouths, who but of late, earth, sea, and air

Were all too little to content and please, 35
Although they gave their creatures in abundance,

As houses are defil'd for want of use,

They are now starved for want of exercise.

Those palates who, not yet two summers younger,

Must have inventions to delight the taste, 40

Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it.

Those mothers who, to nuzzle up their babes,

Thought nought too curious, are ready now

To eat those little darlings whom they lov'd.

So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and wife 45

Draw lots who first shall die to lengthen life.

Here stands a lord, and there a lady weeping.

Here many sink, yet those which see them fall

Have scarce strength left to give them burial.

Is not this true? 50

Dio. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness it.

Cle. O, let those cities that of Plenty's cup

And her prosperities so largely taste,

With their superfluous riots, hear these tears!

The misery of Tarsus may be theirs. 55

Enter a LORD.

Lord. Where's the Lord Governor?

Cle. Here.

Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st in haste,

For comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have descried, upon our neighbouring shore, 60

A portly sail of ships make hitherward.

Cle. I thought as much.

One sorrow never comes but brings an heir,

That may succeed as his inheritor;

And so in ours. Some neighbouring nation, 65

Taking advantage of our misery,

Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their power,

To beat us down, the which are down already;

And make a conquest of unhappy me,

Whereas no glory's got to overcome. 70

Lord. That's the least fear; for, by the semblance

Of their white flags display'd, they bring us peace,

And come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cle. Thou speak'st like him's untutor'd to repeat,

"Who makes the fairest show means most deceit." 75

But bring they what they will and what they can,

What need we fear?

The ground's the lowest, and we are half way there.

Go tell their general we attend him here,

To know for what he comes, and whence he comes, 80

And what he craves.

Lord. I go, my lord.

[Exit.]

Cle. Welcome is peace, if he on peace consist;

If wars, we are unable to resist.

Enter PERICLES with Attendants.

Per. Lord Governor, for so we hear you are,

Let not our ships and number of our men
Be like a beacon fir'd to amaze your eyes.
We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
And seen the desolation of your streets,
Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears,
But to relieve them of their heavy load;
And these our ships, you happily may think
Are like the Trojan horse was stuff'd within
With bloody veins, expecting overthrow,
Are stor'd with corn to make your needy bread,
And give them life whom hunger starv'd half
dead.

All. The gods of Greece protect you!

And we'll pray for you.

Per. Arise, I pray you, rise.
We do not look for reverence, but for love,
And harbourage for ourself, our ships, and
men.

Cle. The which when any shall not gratify,
Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves,
The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils!
Till when,—the which I hope shall ne'er be seen,—

Your Grace is welcome to our town and us.

Per. Which welcome we'll accept; feast here a while,
Until our stars that frown lend us a smile.

[Exeunt.]

[ACT II]

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Here have you seen a mighty king
His child, I wis, to incest bring;
A better prince and benign lord,
That will prove awful both in deed and word.
Be quiet then as men should be,
Till he hath pass'd necessity.
I'll show you those in troubles reign,
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation,
To whom I give my benison,
Is still at Tarsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he spoken can;
And, to remember what he does,
Build his statue to make him glorious.
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?

DUMB SHOW.

*Enter at one door Pericles talking with Cleon;
all the train with them. Enter at another door a Gentleman, with a letter to Pericles; Pericles shows the letter to Cleon; gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him. Exit
Pericles at one door, and Cleon at another.*

Good Helicane, that stay'd at home,
Not to eat honey like a drone
From others' labours; for though he strive
To killen bad, keep good alive,

And to fulfil his prince's desire,
Sends word of all that haps in Tyre;
How Thaliard came full bent with sin
And had intent to murder him;
And that in Tarsus was not best
Longer for him to make his rest.
He, doing so, put forth to seas,
Where when men been, there's seldom ease.
For now the wind begins to blow;
Thunder above and deeps below
Makes such unquiet, that the ship
Should house him safe is wreck'd and split;
And he, good prince, having all lost,
By waves from coast to coast is tost.
All perishen of man, of pelf,
Ne aught escapen but himself;
Till Fortune, tir'd with doing bad,
Threw him ashore, to give him glad;
And here he comes. What shall be next,
Pardon old Gower,—this longs the text.

[Exit.]

[SCENE I. Pentapolis. An open place by the sea-side.]

Enter PERICLES, wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of
heaven!
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember earthly
man
Is but a substance that must yield to you;
And I, as fits my nature, do obey you.
Alas, the seas hath cast me on the rocks,
Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me
breath
Nothing to think on but ensuing death.
Let it suffice the greatness of your powers
To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes;
And having thrown him from your watery grave,
Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three FISHERMEN.

1. Fish. What, ho, Pilch!
2. Fish. Ha, come and bring away the nets!
1. Fish. What, Patch-breech, I say!
3. Fish. What say you, master?
1. Fish. Look how thou stirr'st now! Come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wanon.
3. Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us even
now.
1. Fish. Alas, poor souls, it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.
3. Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much when I saw the porpoise how he boun'd and tumbled?
They say they're half fish, half flesh.
A plague on them, they ne'er come but I look to be wash'd. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.
1. Fish. Why, as men do a-land; the great ones eat up the little ones. I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale; 'a plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devour them all at a mouthful. Such whales have I heard on o' the land, who never leave gaping till they swallow'd the whole parish, church, steeple, bells, and all. 38

Per. [Aside.] A pretty moral.

3. Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry.

2. Fish. Why, man? 42

3. Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too; and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left, till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish, up again. But if the good King Simonides were of my mind, — 48

Per. [Aside.] Simonides!

3. Fish. We would purge the land of these drones, that rob the bee of her honey. 51

Per. [Aside.] How from the finny subject of the sea

These fishers tell the infirmities of men; And from their watery empire recollect All that may men approve or men detect! 55
Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

2. Fish. Honest! good fellow, what's that? If it be a day fits you, search out of the calendar, and nobody look after it.

Per. May see the sea hath cast upon your coast — 60

2. Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea to cast thee in our way!

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind,

In that vast tennis-court, hath made the ball For them to play upon, entreats you pity him. 65
He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

1. Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? Here's them in our country of Greece gets more with begging than we can do with working.

2. Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes, then?

Per. I never practis'd it. 71

2. Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve, sure; for here's nothing to be got now-a-days, unless thou canst fish for 't.

Per. What I have been I have forgot to know, But what I am, want teaches me to think on, — 76

A man throng'd up with cold. My veins are chill,

And have no more of life than may suffice To give my tongue that heat to ask your help; Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead, For that I am a man, pray see me buried. 81

1. Fish. Die, goth-a? Now gods forbid 't, an I have a gown here! Come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and, moreo'er, puddings and flap-jacks, and thou shalt be welcome. 87

Per. I thank you, sir.

2. Fish. Hark you, my friend. You said you could not beg? 90

Per. I did but crave.

2. Fish. But crave! Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipp'd, then? 94

2. Fish. O, not all, my friend, not all; for if all your beggars were whipp'd, I would wish no better office than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.

[Exit with Third Fisherman.]

Per. [Aside.] How well this honest mirth becomes their labour! 99

1. Fish. Hark you, sir, do you know where ye are?

Per. Not well.

1. Fish. Why, I'll tell you. This is called Pentapolis, and our king the good Simonides. 104

Per. The good Simonides, do you call him?

1. Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves so to be call'd for his peaceable reign and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore? 111

1. Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey. And I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birthday; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world to joust and tourney for her love. 118

Per. Were my fortunes equal to my desires, I could wish to make one there.

1. Fish. O, sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for — his wife's soul. 121

Re-enter SECOND and THIRD FISHERMEN, drawing up a net.

2. Fish. Help, master, help! here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law; 't will hardly come out. Ha! bots on 't, 'tis come at last, and 'tis turned to a rusty armour. 128

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you, let me see it.

Thanks, Fortune, yet, that, after all thy crosses, Thou giv'st me somewhat to repair myself; And though it was mine own, part of my heritage,

Which my dead father did bequeath to me, 130
With this strict charge, even as he left his life, "Keep it, my Pericles; it hath been a shield 'Twixt me and death," — and pointed to this brace —

"For that it sav'd me, keep it. In like necessity —

The which the gods protect thee from! — may 't defend thee." 135

It kept where I kept, I so dearly lov'd it; Till the rough seas, that spares not any man, Took it in rage, though calm'd have given 't again.

I thank thee for 't. My shipwreck now's no ill, Since I have here my father's gift in 's will. 140

1. Fish. What mean you, sir?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth,

For it was sometime target to a king. I know it by this mark. He lov'd me dearly, And for his sake I wish the having of it; 145
And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's court,

Where with it I may appear a gentleman;
And if that ever my low fortune's better, 148
I'll pay your bounties; till then rest your debtor.

1. Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.

1. Fish. Why, do 'e take it, and the gods give thee good on't! 168

2. Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend; 't was we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters. There are certain condolements, certain vails. I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had them.

Per. Believe 't, I will. 169

By your furtherance I am clothed in steel;
And, spite of all the rapture of the sea,
This jewel holds his building on my arm.
Unto thy value I will mount myself
Upon a courser, whose delightful steps
Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread. 165
Only, my friend, I yet am unprovided
Of a pair of bases.

2. Fish. We'll sure provide. Thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair; and I'll bring thee to the court myself. 170

Per. Then honour be but equal to my will,
This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. The same. A public way or platform leading to the lists. A pavilion by the side of it for the reception of the King, Princess, Lords, etc.]

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, [LORDS] and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

1. Lord. They are, my liege;
And stay your coming to present themselves.

Sim. Return them, we are ready; and our daughter,
In honour of whose birth these triumphs are, 5
Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat
For men to see, and seeing wonder at.

[Exit a Lord.]

Thai. It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express

My commendations great, whose merit's less.

Sim. It's fit it should be so, for princes are
A model which heaven makes like to itself. 11
As jewels lose their glory if neglected,
So princes their renowns if not respected.

'T is now your honour, daughter, to interpret
The labour of each knight in his device. 15

Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

The First Knight passes by [and his Squire presents his shield to the Princess].

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?

Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father;

And the device he bears upon his shield
Is a black Ethiop reaching at the sun; 20
The word, "Lux tua vita mihi."

Sim. He loves you well that holds his life of you.

The Second Knight [passes by].

Who is the second that presents himself?

Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father;
And the device he bears upon his shield 25
Is an armed knight that's conquered by a lady;

The motto thus, in Spanish, "Piu por dulzura que por fuerza."

The Third Knight [passes by].

Sim. And what's the third?

Thai. The third of Antioch;
And his device, a wreath of chivalry;
The word, "Me pompæ prorexit apex." 30

The Fourth Knight [passes by].

Sim. What is the fourth?

Thai. A burning torch that's turned upside down;

The word, "Quod me alit, me extinguit."

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,

Which can as well inflame as it can kill. 35

The Fifth Knight [passes by].

Thai. The fifth, an hand environed with clouds,

Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried;

The motto thus, "Sic spectanda fides."

The Sixth Knight [Pericles, passes by].

Sim. And what's

The sixth and last, the which the knight himself 40

With such a graceful courtesies delivered?

Thai. He seems to be a stranger; but his present is

A withered branch, that's only green at top;

The motto, "In hac spe vivo."

Sim. A pretty moral. 45

From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

1. Lord. He had need mean better than his outward show

Can any way speak in his just commend;

For by his rusty outside he appears 50
To have practis'd more the whipstock than the lance.

2. Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes

To an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.

3. Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust

Until this day, to scour it in the dust. 55

Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan

The outward habit by the inward man.

But stay, the knights are coming. We will withdraw

Into the gallery. [Exeunt.]

[Great shouts within, and all cry,
"The mean knight!"

[SCENE III. The same. A hall of state: a banquet prepared.]

Enter SIMONIDES, [THAISA, MARSHAL, Lords, Attendants] and KNIGHTS, from tilting.

Sim. Knights,
To say you're welcome were superfluous.
To place upon the volume of your deeds,
As in a title-page, your worth in arms,
Were more than you expect, or more than's fit,
Since every worth in show commends itself. 6
Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast.
You are princes and my guests.

Thai. But you, my knight and guest;
To whom this wreath of victory I give, 10
And crown you king of this day's happiness.

Per. 'T is more by fortune, lady, than my merit.

Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is yours;

And here, I hope, is none that envies it.
In framing an artist, Art hath thus decreed, 15
To make some good, but others to exceed;
And you are her labour'd scholar. Come, queen o' the feast, —

For, daughter, so you are, — here take your place.

Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honour'd much by good Simonides. 20

Sim. Your presence glads our days. Honour we love;

For who hates honour hates the gods above.

Marshal. Sir, yonder is your place.

Per. Some other is more fit.

1. Knight. Contend not, sir; for we are gentlemen

That neither in our hearts nor outward eyes 25
Envy the great nor shall the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous knights.

Sim. Sit, sir, sit.

[Aside.] By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts,

These cates resist me, he not thought upon.

Thai. [Aside.] By Juno, that is queen of marriage, 30

All viands that I eat do seem unsavoury,
Wishing him my meat. — Sure, he's a gallant gentleman.

Sim. He's but a country gentleman,
Has done no more than other knights have done,

Has broken a staff or so; so let it pass. 35

Thai. [Aside.] To me he seems like diamond to glass.

Per. [Aside.] Yon king's to me like to my father's picture,

Which tells me in that glory once he was;
Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne,

And he the sun, for them to reverence; 40

None that beheld him, but, like lesser lights,
Did veil their crowns to his supremacy;

Where now his son's like a glow-worm in the night,

The which hath fire in darkness, none in light;
Whereby I see that Time's the king of men, 45

He's both their parent, and he is their grave,

And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

Sim. What, are you merry, knights?

Knights. Who can be other in this royal presence?

Sim. Here, with a cup that's stor'd unto the brim, — 50

As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips,
We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your Grace.

Sim. Yet pause a while;
Yon knight doth sit too melancholy,

As if the entertainment in our court 55
Had not a show might countervail his worth.

Note it not you, Thaisa?

Thai. What is it

To me, my father?

Sim. O, attend, my daughter.

Princes in this should live like gods above,
Who freely give to every one that come 60

To honour them;
And princes not doing so are like to gnats,

Which make a sound, but kill'd are wond' red at.
Therefore to make his entrance more sweet,

Here, say we drink this standing-bowl of wine 65
to him.

Thai. Alas, my father, it befits not me

Unto a stranger knight to be so bold.

He may my proffer take for an offence,
Since men take women's gifts for impudence.

Sim. How! 70

Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.

Thai. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, he could not please me better.

Sim. And furthermore tell him, we desire to know of him,

Of whence he is, his name, and parentage.

Thai. The King my father, sir, has drunk to you. 75

Per. I thank him.

Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.

Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.

Thai. And further he desires to know of you,
Of whence you are, your name, and parentage.

Per. A gentleman of Tyre; my name, Pericles; 81

My education been in arts and arms;
Who, looking for adventures in the world,

Was by the rough seas reft of ships and men,
And after shipwreck driven upon this shore. 85

Thai. He thanks your Grace; names himself Pericles,

A gentleman of Tyre,
Who only by misfortune of the seas

Bereft of ships and men, cast on this shore.

Sim. Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune,
And will awake him from his melancholy. 91

Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
And waste the time, which looks for other revels.

Even in your armours, as you are address'd,
Will very well become a soldier's dance, 95

I will not have excuse, with saying this
Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads,

Since they love men in arms as well as beds.
[They dance.]

So, this was well ask'd, 't was so well perform'd.

Come, sir, 100
Here is a lady that wants breathing too;
And I have heard you knights of Tyre
Are excellent in making ladies trip;
And that their measures are as excellent.

Per. In those that practice them they are,
my lord. 105

Sim. O, that's as much as you would be denied

Of your fair courtesy. [They dance.]

Unclasp, unclasp:
Thanks, gentlemen, to all; all have done well,
[To Per.] But you the best. Pages and lights, to conduct

These knights unto their several lodgings! [To Per.] Yours, sir, 110

We have given order to be next our own.

Per. I am at your Grace's pleasure.

[Sim.] Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
And that's the mark I know you level at;
Therefore each one betake him to his rest. 115
To-morrow all for speeding do their best.

[Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. Tyre. A room in the Governor's house.]

Enter HELICANUS and ESCANES.

Hel. No, Escanes, know this of me,
Antiochus from incest lived not free;
For which, the most high gods not minding
longer

To withhold the vengeance that they had in store,

Due to this heinous capital offence, 5
Even in the height and pride of all his glory,
When he was seated in a chariot
Of an inestimable value, and his daughter with

him,
A fire from heaven came and shrivell'd up
Their bodies, even to loathing; for they so stunk, 10

That all those eyes ador'd them ere their fall
Scorn now their hand should give them burial.
Esca. 'T was very strange.

Hel. And yet but justice; for though
This king were great, his greatness was no guard
To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward. 15

Esca. 'T is very true.

Enter two or three LORDS.

1. Lord. See, not a man in private conference
Or council has respect with him but he.

2. Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof.

3. Lord. And curs'd be he that will not second it. 20

1. Lord. Follow me, then. Lord Helicane, a
word.

Hel. With me? and welcome. Happy day,
my lords.

1. Lord. Know that our griefs are risen to the top,
And now at length they overflow their banks.

Hel. Your griefs! For what? Wrong not your prince you love. 25

1. Lord. Wrong not yourself, then, noble
Helicane;

But if the Prince do live, let us salute him,
Or know what ground's made happy by his
breath.

If in the world he live, we'll seek him out;
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there; 30
And be resolv'd he lives to govern us,
Or dead, give's cause to mourn his funeral,
And leave us to our free election.

2. Lord. Whose death's indeed the strongest in our censure;

And knowing this kingdom is without a
head, 35

Like goodly buildings left without a roof
Soon fall to ruin, — your noble self,
That best know how to rule and how to reign,
We thus submit unto, — our sovereign.

All. Live, noble Helicane! 40

Hel. By honour's cause, forbear your suffrages.

If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear.
Take I your wish, I leap into the seas,
Where's hourly trouble for a minute's ease.
A twelvemonth longer, let me entreat you to 45
Forbear the absence of your king;
If in which time expir'd, he not return,
I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.

But if I cannot win you to this love,
Go search like nobles, like noble subjects, 50
And in your search spend your adventurous
worth;

Whom if you find, and win unto return,
You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.

1. Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield;

And since Lord Helicane enjoineth thus, 55
We with our travels will endeavour us.

Hel. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands.

When peers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands.
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE V. Pentapolis. A room in the palace.]

Enter SIMONIDES, reading of a letter, at one door: the KNIGHTS meet him.

1. Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.

Sim. Knights, from my daughter this I let you know,

That for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake

A married life.
Her reason to herself is only known, 5

Which from her by no means can I get.

2. Knight. May we not get access to her, my
lord?

Sim. Faith, by no means; she hath so strictly tied

Her to her chamber, that't is impossible.
One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery; 10

This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vowed,
And on her virgin honour will not break it.

3. Knight. Loath to bid farewell, we take our leaves. [Exeunt Knights.]

Sim. So,
They are well dispatch'd; now to my daughter's letter. 15

She tells me here, she'll wed the stranger knight,

Or never more to view nor day nor light.

'T is well, mistress; your choice agrees with mine.

I like that well. Nay, how absolute she's in't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no! 20

Well, I do commend her choice;

And will no longer have it be delayed.

Soft! here he comes. I must dissemble it.

Enter PERICLES.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides!

Sim. To you as much, sir! I am beholding to you 25

For your sweet music this last night. I do

Protest my ears were never better fed

With such delightful pleasing harmony.

Per. It is your Grace's pleasure to commend;
Not my desert.

Sim. Sir, you are Music's master. 30

Per. The worst of all her scholars; my good lord.

Sim. Let me ask you one thing:

What do you think of my daughter, sir?

Per. A most virtuous princess.

Sim. And she is fair too, is she not? 35

Per. As a fair day in summer; wondrous fair.

Sim. Sir, my daughter thinks very well of you;

Ay, so well, that you must be her master,
And she will be your scholar; therefore look to it.

Per. I am unworthy for her schoolmaster. 40

Sim. She thinks not so; peruse this writing else.

Per. [Aside.] What's here?

A letter, that she loves the knight of Tyre!

'T is the King's subtilty to have my life,

O, seek not to entrap me, gracious lord, 45

A stranger and distressed gentleman,

That never aim'd so high to love your daughter,

But bent all offices to honour her.

Sim. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou art

A villain. 50

Per. By the gods, I have not.

Never did thought of mine levy offence;

Nor never did my actions yet commence

A deed might gain her love or your displeasure.

Sim. Traitor, thou liest.

Per. Traitor!

Sim. Ay, traitor.

Per. Even in his throat—unless it be the King— 55

That calls me traitor, I return the lie.

Sim. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.

Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,

That never relish'd of a base descent. 61

I came unto your court for honour's cause,
And not to be a rebel to her state;

And he that otherwise accounts of me,
This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy.

Sim. No?

Here comes my daughter, she can witness it. 65

Enter THAISA.

Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,

Resolve your angry father, if my tongue

Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe

To any syllable that made love to you. 70

Thai. Why, sir, say if you had,

Who takes offence at that would make me glad?

Sim. Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory?

[Aside.] I am glad on't with all my heart. —

I'll tame you; I'll bring you in subjection. 75

Will you, not having my consent,

Bestow your love and your affections

Upon a stranger? [aside] who, for aught I know,

May be, nor can I think the contrary,

As great in blood as I myself. — 80

Therefore hear you, mistress: either frame

Your will to mine, — and you, sir, hear you,

Either be rul'd by me, — or I will make you —
Man and wife.

Nay, come, your hands and lips must seal it
too; 85

And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy;

And for a further grief, — God give you joy!

What, are you both pleas'd?

Thai. Yes, if you love me, sir.

Per. Even as my life my blood that fosters it.

Sim. What, are you both agreed? 90

Both. Yes, if't please your Majesty.

Sim. It pleaseth me so well, that I will see you wed;

And then with what haste you can, get you to bed. [Exeunt.]

[ACT III]

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Now sleep y-slaked hath the rout.

No din but snores the house about,

Made louder by the o'er-fed breast

Of this most pompous marriage-feast.

The cat, with eyne of burning coal,

Now couches 'fore the mouse's hole;

And crickets sing at the oven's mouth,

Are the blither for their drouth.

Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,

Where, by the loss of maidenhead, 10

A babe is moulded. Be attent,

And time that is so briefly spent

With your fine fancies quaintly eche.

What's dumb in show I'll plain with speech.

[DUMB SHOW.]

Enter Pericles and Simonides, at one door, with Attendants. A Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives Pericles a letter. Pericles shows it Simonides; the Lords kneel to him. Then enter Thaisa with child, with Lychorida a nurse. The King shows her the letter; she rejoices. She and Pericles take leave of her father, and depart with Lychorida and their attendants. Then exeunt Simonides and the rest].

By many a dern and painful perch,
Of Pericles the careful search,
By the four opposing coigns
Which the world together joins,
Is made with all due diligence
That horse and sail and high expense
Can stead the quest. At last from Tyre,
Fame answering the most strange inquire,
To the court of King Simonides
Are letters brought, the tenour these:
Antiochus and his daughter dead,
The men of Tyrus on the head
Of Helicanus would set on
The crown of Tyre, but he will none.
The mutiny he there hastes 't oppress;
Says to 'em, if King Pericles
Come not home in twice six moons,
He, obedient to their dooms,
Will take the crown. The sum of this,
Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Y-ravished the regions round,
And every one with claps can sound,
"Our heir-apparent is a king!
Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing?"
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre:
His queen with child makes her desire—
Which who shall cross?—along to go.
Omit we all their dole and woe.
Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
And so to sea. Their vessel shakes
On Neptune's billow; half the flood
Hath their keel cut. But fortune's mood
Varies again. The grisled north
Disgorges such a tempest forth,
That, as a duck for life that dives,
So up and down the poor ship drives.
The lady shrieks, and well-a-need
Does fall in travail with her fear;
And what ensues in this fell storm
Shall for itself itself perform.
I will relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey,
Which might not what by me is told.
In your imagination hold
This stage the ship, upon whose deck
The sea-tost Pericles appears to speak.

[SCENE I.]

Enter PERICLES, on shipboard.

Per. Thou god of this great vast, rebuke
these surges,
Which wash both heaven and hell; and thou,
that hast
Upon the winds command, bind them in brass,
Having call'd them from the deep! O, still Thy deafening, dreadful thunders; gently quench
Thy nimble, sulphurous flashes! O, how, Lychorida,

How does my queen? Thou storm, venomously
Wilt thou spit all thyself? The seaman's whistle
Is as a whisper in the ears of death,
Unheard. Lychorida!—Lucina, O
Divinest patroness, and midwife gentle
To those that cry by night, convey thy deity Aboard our dancing boat; make swift the pangs
Of my queen's travails!

Enter Lychorida [with an Infant].

Now, Lychorida!

Lyc. Here is a thing too young for such a place,
Who, if it had conceit, would die, as I Am like to do. Take in your arms this piece
Of your dead queen.

Per. How, how, Lychorida?

Lyc. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.

Here's all that is left living of your queen,
A little daughter. For the sake of it,
Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. O you gods!
Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And snatch them straight away? We here below

Recall not what we give, and therein may Use honour with you.

Lyc. Patience, good sir,

Even for this charge.

Per. Now, mild may be thy life!
For a more blustrous birth had never babe.
Quiet and gentle thy conditions! for
Thou art the rudest welcome to this world That ever was prince's child. Happy what follows!

Thou hast as chiding a nativity
As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make,
To herald thee from the womb. Even at the first

Thy loss is more than can thy portage quit,
With all thou canst find here. Now, the good gods

Throw their best eyes upon 't!

Enter two SAILORS.

1. Sail. What courage, sir? God save you!
Per. Courage enough. I do not fear the flaw;

It hath done to me the worst. Yet, for the love
Of this poor infant, this fresh-new sea-farer, I would it would be quiet.

1. Sail. Slack the bolins there! Thou wilt not, wilt thou? Blow, and split thyself.

2. Sail. But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not.

1. Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard.
The sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be clear'd of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition.

1. Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it hath been still observed; and we are strong in custom. Therefore briefly yield her; for she must overboard straight.

Per. As you think meet. Most wretched
queen!

Lyc. Here she lies, sir.

Per. A terrible childbed hast thou had, my dear;

No light, no fire. The unfriendly elements
Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time
To give thee hallow'd to thy grave, but straight
Must cast thee, scarcely coffin'd, in the ooze; ⁶¹
Where, for a monument upon thy bones,
And aye-remaining lamps, the belching whale,
And humming water must o'erwhelm thy corpse,

Lying with simple shells. O Lychorida, ⁶⁵
Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper,
My casket and my jewels; and bid Nicander
Bring me the satin coffin. Lay the babe
Upon the pillow. Hie thee, whiles I say
A priestly farewell to her. Suddenly, woman. ⁷⁰

[Exit Lychorida.]

2. Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caulk'd and bitum'd ready.

Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say what coast
is this?

2. Sail. We are near Tarsus.

Per. Thither, gentle mariner, ⁷⁵
Alter thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach it?

2. Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease.

Per. O, make for Tarsus!

There will I visit Cleon, for the babe
Cannot hold out to Tyros. There I'll leave it ⁸⁰
At careful nursing. Go thy ways, good mariner.

I'll bring the body presently. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE II. Ephesus. A room in Cerimon's
house.]

Enter CERIMON, with a SERVANT [and some Persons who have been shipwrecked].

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Enter PHILEMON.

Phil. Doth my lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men.

'T has been a turbulent and stormy night.

Serv. I have been in many; but such a night ⁸
as this,

Till now, I ne'er endured.

Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return.

There's nothing can be minist'ed to nature
That can recover him. [To Philemon.] Give this to the 'pothecary,
And tell me how it works.

[Exeunt all but Cerimon.]

Enter two GENTLEMEN.

1. Gent. Good morrow. ¹⁰

2. Gent. Good morrow to your lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen,

Why do you stir so early?

1. Gent. Sir,

Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea,
Shook as the earth did quake; ¹⁵
The very principals did seem to rend,
And all to topple. Pure surprise and fear
Made me to quit the house.

2. Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so early;

'T is not our husbandry.

Cer. O, you say well. ²⁰

1. Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having

Rich tire about you, should at these early hours

Shake off the golden slumber of repose.

'T is most strange,
Nature should be so conversant with pain, ²⁵
Being thereto not compelled.

Cer. I hold it ever

Virtue and cunning were endowments greater Than nobleness and riches. Careless heirs
May the two latter darken and expend,
But immortality attends the former, ³⁰
Making a man a god. 'T is known, I ever
Have studied physic, through which secret art,
By turning o'er authorities, I have,
Together with my practice, made familiar
To me and to my aid the blest infusions ³⁵
That dwells in vegetives, in metals, stones;
And I can speak of the disturbances
That Nature works, and of her cures; which doth give me

A more content in course of true delight
Than to be thirsty after tottering honour, ⁴⁰
Or tie my pleasure up in silken bags,
To please the fool and Death.

2. Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus poured forth

Your charity, and hundreds call themselves
Your creatures, who by you have been restored; ⁴⁵

And not your knowledge, your personal pain, but even

Your purse, still open, hath built Lord Cerimon

Such strong renown as time shall ne'er decay.

Enter two or three [SERVANTS] with a chest.

1. Serv. So; lift there.

Cer. What is that?

1. Serv. Sir, even now
Did the sea toss up upon our shore this chest. ⁵⁰

'T is of some wreck.

Cer. Set't down, let's look upon't.

2. Gent. 'T is like a coffin, sir.

Cer. Whate'er it be,

'T is wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight.
If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with gold,
'T is a good constraint of fortune it belches upon us. ⁵⁵

2. Gent. 'T is so, my lord.

Cer. How close 't is caulk'd and bitum'd!
Did the sea cast it up?

1. Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, sir,
As toss'd it upon shore.

Cer. Wrench it open.

Soft! it smells most sweetly in my sense. ⁶⁰

2. Gent. A delicate odour.

Cer. As ever hit my nostril. So, up with
it.

O you most potent gods! what's here? A corse!

1. Gent. Most strange

Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; balm'd and entreaused ⁶⁵

With full bags of spices! A passport too!
Apollo, perfect me in the characters!

[Reads from a scroll.]

"Here I give to understand,
If e'er this coffin drives a-land,
I, King Pericles, have lost ⁷⁰
This queen, worth all our mundane cost.
Who finds her, give her burying.
She was the daughter of a king.
Besides this treasure for a fee,
The gods requite his charity!" ⁷⁵

If thou liv'st, Pericles, thou hast a heart
That even cracks for woe! This chanc'd to-night.

2. Gent. Most likely, sir.

Cer. Nay, certainly to-night;
For look how fresh she looks! They were too rough

That threw her in the sea. Make a fire within.
Fetch hither all my boxes in my closet. ⁸¹

[Exit a Servant.]

Death may usurp on nature many hours,
And yet the fire of life kindle again
The o'erpress'd spirits. I heard of an Egyptian
That had nine hours lien dead, ⁸⁵
Who was by good appliance recovered.

Re-enter one [with boxes,] napkins, and fire.

Well said, well said. — The fire and cloths.
The rough and woeful music that we have,
Cause it to sound, beseech you.
The vial once more. How thou stirr'st, thou block! ⁹⁰

The music there! I pray you, give her air.
Gentlemen,
This queen will live. Nature awakes; a warmth
Breathes out of her. She hath not been entranc'd

Above five hours. See how she gins to blow ⁹⁵
Into life's flower again!

1. Gent. The heavens

Through you increase our wonder and set up
Your fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive; behold,
Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels
Which Pericles hath lost, ¹⁰⁰
Begin to part their fringes of bright gold;
The diamonds of a most praised water
Doth appear, to make the world twice rich.

Live,
And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature,

Rare as you seem to be. [She moves.]

Thai. O dear Diana, ¹⁰⁵
Where am I? Where's my lord? What world
is this?

2. Gent. Is not this strange?

1. Gent. Most rare.

Cer. Hush, my gentle neighbours!
Lend me your hands. To the next chamber bear her.

Get linen. Now this matter must be look'd to,
For her relapse is mortal. Come, come; ¹¹⁰
And Æsculapius guide us!

[They carry her away. Exeunt omnes.]

[SCENE III. Tarsus. A room in Cleon's house.]

Enter PERICLES, CLEON, DIONYZA [and LYCHORIDA, with MARINA in her arms].

Per. Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs be gone.

My twelve months are expir'd, and Tyrus stands

In a litigious peace. You, and your lady,
Take from my heart all thankfulness! The gods

Make up the rest upon you! ⁵

Cle. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt you mortally,
Yet glance full wanderingly on us.

Dion. O your sweet queen!

That the strict fates had pleas'd you had brought her hither,

To have bless'd mine eyes with her!

Per. We cannot but obey
The powers above us. Could I rage and roar ¹⁰

As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end
Must be as 'tis. My gentle babe Marina, whom,

For she was born at sea, I have named so, here

I charge your charity withal, leaving her
The infant of your care; beseeching you ¹⁵

To give her princely training, that she may be

Manner'd as she is born.

Cle. Fear not, my lord, but think
Your Grace, that fed my country with your corn,

For which the people's prayers still fall upon you,

Must in your child be thought on. If neglect ²⁰

Should therein make me vile, the common body,

By you reliev'd, would force me to my duty;
But if to that my nature need a spur,

The gods revenge it upon me and mine,
To the end of generation!

Per. I believe you. ²⁵
Your honour and your goodness teach me to 't, Without your vows. Till she be married,

madam,

By bright Diana, whom we honour, all
Unscissor'd shall this hair of mine remain,

Though I show ill in 't. So I take my leave. ³⁰
Good madam, make me blessed in your care
In bringing up my child.

Dion. I have one myself,
Who shall not be more dear to my respect

Than yours, my lord.

Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers.
Cle. We'll bring your Grace e'en to the edge ³⁵

o' the shore,
Then give you up to the mask'd Neptune and

The gentlest winds of heaven.

Per. I will embrace
Your offer. Come, dearest madam. O, no tears,

Lychorida, no tears.
Look to your little mistress, on whose grace ⁴⁰

You may depend hereafter. Come, my lord. [Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV. Ephesus. A room in Cerimon's house.]

Enter CERIMON and THAJSA.

Cer. Madam, this letter and some certain jewels

Lay with you in your coffer, which are
At your command. Know you the character?

Thai. It is my lord's.
That I was shipp'd at sea, I well remember, 5
Even on my eaning time; but whether there
Delivered, by the holy gods,
I cannot rightly say. But since King Peri-
cles,

My wedded lord, I ne'er shall see again,
A vestal livery will I take me to, 10
And never more have joy.

Cer. Madam, if this you purpose as ye speak,
Diana's temple is not distant far,
Where you may abide till your date expire.
Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine 15
Shall there attend you.

Thai. My recompense is thanks, that's all;
Yet my good will is great, though the gift small. [Exeunt.]

[ACT IV]

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre,
Welcom'd and settled to his own desire.
His woful queen we leave at Ephesus,
Unto Diana there as a votaress.
Now to Marina bend your mind, 5
Whom our fast-growing scene must find
At Tarsus, and by Cleon train'd
In music, letters; who hath gain'd
Of education all the grace,
Which makes her both the heart and place. 10
Of general wonder. But, alack,
That monster Envy, oft the wrack
Of earned praise, Marina's life
Seeks to take off by treason's knife.
And in this kind hath our Cleon 15
One daughter, and a wench full grown,
Even ripe for marriage-rite. This maid
Hight Philoten; and it is said
For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be: 20
Be't when she weav'd the sleided silk
With fingers long, small, white as milk;
Or when she would with sharp needle wound
The cambric, which she made more sound
By hurting it; or when to the lute 25
She sung, and made the night-bird mute,
That still records with moan; or when
She would with rich and constant pen
Vail to her mistress Dian; still
This Philoten contends in skill 30
With absolute Marina: so
With the dove of Paphos might the crow
Vie feathers white. Marina gets
All praises, which are paid as debts,
And not as given. This so darks 35
In Philoten all graceful marks,
That Cleon's wife, with envy rare,
A present murderer does prepare

For good Marina, that her daughter
Might stand peerless by this slaughter. 40
The sooner her vile thoughts to stead,
Lychorida, our nurse, is dead;
And cursed Dionyza hath
The pregnant instrument of wrath
Prest for this blow. The unborn event 45
I do commend to your content;
Only I carry winged time
Post on the lame feet of my rhyme;
Which never could I so convey,
Unless your thoughts went on my way. 50
Dionyza does appear,
With Leonine, a murderer. [Exit.]

[SCENE I. Tarsus. An open place near the sea-shore.]

Enter DIONYZA with LEONINE.

Dion. Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to do't.

'T is but a blow, which never shall be known.
Thou canst not do a thing in the world so soon,
To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience,

Which is but cold, inflaming love i' thy bosom, 5
Inflame too nicely; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be
A soldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I will do't; but yet she is a goodly creature.

Dion. The fitter, then, the gods should have her. Here she comes weeping for her only mistress' death. Thou art resolv'd?

Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter MARINA, with a basket of flowers.

Mar. No, I will rob Tellus of her weed,
To strew thy green with flowers. The yellows, 15
blues,

The purple violets and marigolds
Shall as a carpet hang upon thy grave
While summer-days doth last. Ay me! poor
maid,

Born in a tempest, when my mother died,
This world to me is like a lasting storm, 20
Whirling me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina! why do you keep alone?

How chance my daughter is not with you? Do not

Consume your blood with sorrowing; you have A nurse of me. Lord, how your favour's
chang'd 25

With this unprofitable woe!

Come, give me your flowers. Near the sea margin

Walk with Leonine; the air is quick there,
And it pierces and sharpens the stomach.
Come,

Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with
her. 30

Mar. No, I pray you;

I'll not bereave you of your servant.

Dion. Come, come;
I love the King your father, and yourself,
With more than foreign heart. We every day

Expect him here. When he shall come and find

Our paragon to all reports thus blasted,
He will repent the breadth of his great voyage;

Blame both my lord and me, that we have taken

No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you,
Walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve
That excellent complexion, which did steal
The eyes of young and old. Care not for me;
I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go;

But yet I have no desire to it.

Dion. Come, come, I know 't is good for you.

Walk half an hour, Leonine, at the least.

Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, madam.

Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while.

Pray, walk softly, do not heat your blood.
What! I must have a care of you.

Mar. My thanks, sweet madam,
[Exit Dionysa.]

Is this wind westerly that blows?

Leon. South-west.

Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.

Leon. Was 't so?

Mar. My father, as nurse says, did never fear,
But cried "Good seamen!" to the sailors,
galling

His kingly hands, haling ropes;

And, clasping to the mast, endured a sea
That almost burst the deck,—

Leon. When was this?

Mar. When I was born;

Never was waves nor wind more violent;—

And from the ladder-tackle washes off
A canvas-climber. "Ha!" says one, "wilt
out?"

And with a dropping industry they skip
From stem to stern. The boatswain whistles,
and

The master calls, and trebles their confusion.

Leon. Come, say your prayers.

Mar. What mean you?

Leon. If you require a little space for prayer,
I grant it. Pray, but be not tedious;

For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn
To do my work with haste.

Mar. Why will you kill me?

Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd?

Now, as I can remember, by my troth,
I never did her hurt in all my life.

I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn
To any living creature. Believe me, la,

I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly,
Aye, trod upon a worm against my will,

But I wept for it. How have I offended,
Wherein my death might yield her any profit,

Or my life imply her any danger?

Leon. My commission

Is not to reason of the deed, but do 't.

Mar. You will not do 't for all the world, I hope.

You are well favoured, and your looks foreshow
You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately,
When you caught hurt in parting two that fought;

Good sooth, it show'd well in you. Do so now.
Your lady seeks my life; come you between,
And save poor me, the weaker.

Leon.

And will dispatch.

I am sworn,

Enter PIRATES.

1. Pirate. Hold, villain! [Leonine runs away.]

2. Pirate. A prize! a prize!

3. Pirate. Half-part, mates, half-part.
Come, let's have her aboard suddenly.

[Exeunt [Pirates with Marina].

Re-enter LEONINE.

Leon. These roguing thieves serve the great pirate Valdes,

And they have seized Marina. Let her go!
There's no hope she will return. I'll swear she's dead,

And thrown into the sea. But I'll see further.
Perhaps they will but please themselves upon
her,

Not carry her aboard. If she remain,
Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain.

[Exit.

[SCENE II. Mytilene. A room in a brothel.]

Enter PANDAR, BAWD, and BOULT.

Pand. Boul't!

Boul't. Sir?

Pand. Search the market narrowly; Mytilene is full of gallants. We lost too much money this mart by being too wenchless.

Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and they with continual action are even as good as rotten.

Pand. Therefore let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be us'd in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Bawd. Thou say'st true. 'T is not our bringing up of poor bastards,—as I think, I have brought up some eleven,—

Boul't. Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?

Bawd. What else, man? The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden.

Pand. Thou sayest true; they're too unwholesome, o' conscience. The poor Transylvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage.

Boul't. Ay, she quickly poop'd him; she made him roast-meat for worms. But I'll go search the market.

Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bawd. Why to give over, I pray you? Is it a shame to get when we are old?

Pand. O, our credit comes not in like the commodity, nor the commodity wages not with the danger; therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 't were not amiss to keep our door hatch'd. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving over.

Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we! Ay, and better too. We offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it's no calling. But here comes Boul't.

Re-enter BOULT, with the PIRATES and MARINA.

Boul't. Come your ways, my masters. You say she's a virgin?

1. Pirate. O, sir, we doubt it not.

Boul't. Master, I have gone through for this piece, you see. If you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Bawd. Boul't, has she any qualities?

Boul't. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes. There's no further necessity of qualities can make her be refus'd.

Bawd. What's her price, Boul't?

Boul't. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters, you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in. Instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment.

[Exeunt Pandar and Pirates.]

Bawd. Boul't, take you the marks of her, the colour of her hair, complexion, height, her age, with warrant of her virginity; and cry, "He that will give most shall have her first." Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.

Boul't. Performance shall follow.

[Exit.]

Mar. Alack that Leonine was so slack, so slow!

He should have struck, not spoke; or that these pirates,

Not enough barbarous, had not o'erboard thrown me

For to seek my mother!

Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuse them not.

Bawd. You are light into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault

To scape his hands where I was like to die.

Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes, indeed shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well; you shall have the difference of all complexions. What! do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman?

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Bawd. Marry, whip thee, gosling. I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you're a young foolish sapling, and must be bow'd as I would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me!

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men stir you up. Boul't's return'd.

[Re-enter BOULT.]

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market?

Boul't. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs; I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Bawd. And I prithee tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boul't. Faith, they listened to me as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so wat'red, that he went to bed to her very description.

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boul't. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers i' the hams?

Bawd. Who, Monsieur Veroles?

Boul't. Ay, he; he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Bawd. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hither; here he does but repair it. I know he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boul't. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign.

Bawd. [To Mar.] Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully which you commit willingly; despise profit where you have most gain. To weep that you live as ye do makes pity in your lovers; seldom but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boul't. O, take her home, mistress, take her home. These blushes of hers must be quench'd with some present practice.

[Bawd.] Thou say'st true, i' faith, so they must; for your bride goes to that with shame which is her way to go with warrant.

Boul't. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargain'd for the joint,— Bawd. Thou mayst cut a morsel off the spit?

Boul't. I may so.

Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boul't. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be chang'd yet.

Bawd. Boul't, spend thou that in the town. Report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When Nature fram'd this piece, she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boul't. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels as my giving out her beauty stir up the lowly-inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bawd. Come your ways; follow me. 158

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep.

Diana, aid my purpose!

Bawd. What have we to do with Diana?

Pray you, will you go with us? [Exeunt. 163

[SCENE III. Tarsus. A room in Cleon's house.]

Enter CLEON and DIONYZA.

Dion. Why, are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Cle. O Dionyzza, such a piece of slaughter
The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon!

Dion. I think
You'll turn a child again.

Cle. Were I chief lord of all this spacious
world, 5

I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady,
Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess
To equal any single crown o' the earth
I' the justice of compare! O villain Leoneine!
Whom thou hast poisoned too. 10

If thou hadst drunk to him, 't had been a kindness

Becoming well thy fact. What canst thou say
When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion. That she is dead. Nurses are not the fates,

To foster it, nor ever to preserve. 15
She died at night; I'll say so. Who can cross
it?

Unless you play the pious innocent,
And for an honest attribute cry out
She died by foul play.

Cle. O, go to. Well, well, 19
Of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods
Do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those that thinks
The petty wrens of Tarsus will fly hence,
And open this to Pericles. I do shame
To think of what a noble strain you are, 24
And of how coward a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding
Who ever but his approbation added,
Though not his prime consent, he did not flow
From honourable sources.

Dion. Be it so, then.
Yet none does know, but you, how she came
dead,

Nor none can know, Leoneine being gone. 30
She did disdain my child, and stood between Her and her fortunes. None would look on
her,

But cast their gazes on Marina's face;
Whilst ours was blurted at and held a Malkin
Not worth the time of day. It pierc'd me thorough; 35

And though you call my course unnatural,
You not your child well loving, yet I find
It greets me as an enterprise of kindness
Perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cle. Heavens forgive it!

Dion. And as for Pericles, 44
What should he say? We wept after her hearse,
And yet we mourn. Her monument
Is almost finished, and her epitaphs
In glittering golden characters express
A general praise to her, and care in us 45
At whose expense 't is done.

Cle. Thou art like the harpy,
Which, to betray, dost, with thine angel's face,
Seize with thine eagle's talons.

Dion. You are like one that superstitiously Do swear to the gods that winter kills the flies; 50

But yet I know you'll do as I advise.
[Exeunt.]

[SCENE IV.]

[Enter GOWER, before the monument of Marina at Tarsus.]

Gow. Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short;

Sail seas in cockles, have an wish but for 't;
Making, to take your imagination,
From bourn to bourn, region to region.
By you being pardoned, we commit no crime 5
To use one language in each several clime
Where our scenes seems to live. I do beseech
you

To learn of me, who stand i' the gaps to teach
you,

The stages of our story. Pericles

Is now again thwarting the wayward seas, 10
Attended on by many a lord and knight,
To see his daughter, all his life's delight.

Old Helicanus goes along. Behind
Is left to govern it, you bear in mind,

Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late 15
Advanc'd in time to great and high estate.

Well-sailing ships and bounteous winds have brought

This king to Tarsus — think his pilot thought;
So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow
on —

To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone.
Like motes and shadows see them move a
while; 21

Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

[DUMB SHOW.]

Enter Pericles, at one door, with all his train:
Cleon and Dionyzza, at the other. Cleon shows Pericles the tomb; whereat Pericles makes lamentation; puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs. [Then exeunt Cleon and Dionyzza.]

See how belief may suffer by foul show!
This borrowed passion stands for true old woe;
And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd, 25
With sighs shot through, and biggest tears
o'er-shower'd,

Leaves Tarsus and again embarks. He swears
Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs.

He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He bears
A tempest, which his mortal vessel tears, 30

And yet he rides it out. Now please you wit

The epitaph is for Marina writ
By wicked Dionyza.

[Reads the inscription on Marina's monument.]

"The fairest, sweet'st, and best lies here,
Who wither'd in her spring of year. 35
She was of Tyrus the King's daughter,
On whom foul death hath made this slaughter.

Marina was she call'd; and at her birth,
Thetis, being proud, swallowed some part o'
the earth:

Therefore the earth, fearing to be o'erflow'd, 40
Hath Thetis' birth-child on the heavens bestowed;

Wherefore she does, and swears she'll never stint,

Make raging battery upon shores of flint."

No visor does become black villainy
So well as soft and tender flattery. 45

Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,
And bear his courses to be ordered

By Lady Fortune; while our scene must play
His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day

In her unholy service. Patience, then, 50
And think you now are all in Mytilene. [Exit.]

[SCENE V. Mytilene. A street before the brothel.]

Enter [from the brothel] two GENTLEMEN.

1. Gent. Did you ever hear the like?

2. Gent. No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.

1. Gent. But to have divinity preach'd there!
Did you ever dream of such a thing? 5

2. Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy-houses. Shall's go hear the vestals sing?

1. Gent. I'll do anything now that is virtuous; but I am out of the road of rutting for ever. [Exeunt. 10]

[SCENE VI. The same. A room in the brothel.]

Enter PANDAR, BAWD, and BOULT.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her she had ne'er come here. 2

Bawd. Fie, fie upon her! she's able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation.
We must either get her ravished, or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master reasons, her prayers, her knees; that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her. 10

Boult. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disfurnish us of all our cavaliers, and make our swearers priests.

Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me! 15

Bawd. Faith, there's no way to be rid on't but by the way to the pox. Here comes the Lord Lysimachus disguised.

Boult. We should have both lord and lown, if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers. 21

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now! How a dozen of virginities?
Bawd. Now, the gods to-bless your honour!
Boult. I am glad to see your honour in good health. 25

Lys. You may so; 't is the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now, wholesome iniquity! have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon?

Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would — but there never came her like in Mytilene. 31

Lys. If she'd do the deeds of darkness, thou wouldst say.

Bawd. Your honour knows what 't is to say well enough. 35

Lys. Well, call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed, if she had but —

Lys. What, prithee? 40

Boult. O, sir, I can be modest. [Exit.]

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd, no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk; never pluck'd yet, I can assure you. 45

[Re-enter BOULT with MARINA.]

Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you. Leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave a word, and I'll have done presently. 51

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Bawd. [Aside to Marina.] First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man.

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him. 55

Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that, I know not. 61

Bawd. Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive. 65

Lys. Ha' you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not pac'd yet; you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together. Go thy ways. 71

[Exeunt Bawd, Pandar, and Boult.]

Lys. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. Why, I cannot name 't but I shall offend.
75

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade.
Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession?

Mar. E'er since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to 't so young? Were you a gamester at five or at seven? 81

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale. ⁸⁴

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into 't? I hear say you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place. ⁸⁸

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal? ⁹¹

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O, you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place, come, come. ⁹⁸

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now;

If put upon you, make the judgement good

That thought you worthy of it. ¹⁰¹

Lys. How 's this? how 's this? Some more; be sage.

Mar. For me,

That am a maid, though most ungente fortune

Have plac'd me in this sty, where, since I came,

Diseases have been sold dearer than physie, ¹⁰⁵
O, that the gods

Would set me free from this unhallowed place,
Though they did change me to the meanest bird
That flies i' the purer air!

Lys. I did not think

Thou couldst have spoke so well; ne'er dream'd thou couldst. ¹¹⁰

Had I brought hither a corrupted mind,
Thy speech had altered it. Hold, here's gold for thee.

Persever in that clear way thou goest,
And the gods strengthen thee!

Mar. The good gods preserve you!

Lys. For me, be you thoughten ¹¹⁵

That I came with no ill intent; for to me
The very doors and windows savour vilely.

Fare thee well. Thou art a piece of virtue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been noble.

Hold, here's more gold for thee. ¹²⁰

A curse upon him, die he like a thief,
That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost
Hear from me, it shall be for thy good.

[Re-enter BOULT.]

Boult. I beseech your honour, one piece for me. ¹²⁵

Lys. Avaunt, thou damned doorkeeper!
Your house, but for this virgin that doth prop
it,

Would sink and overwhelm you. Away! ¹²⁸ [Exit.]

Boult. How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel.
Come your ways. ¹³⁴

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it. Come your ways. We'll have no more gentlemen driven away. Come your ways, I say.

Re-enter BAWD.

Bawd. How now! what's the matter? ¹⁴⁰

Boult. Worse and worse, mistress; she has here spoken holy words to the Lord Lysimachus.

Bawd. O abominable!

Boult. He makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods. ¹⁴⁵

Bawd. Marry, hang her up for ever!

Boult. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball; saying his prayers too. ¹⁴⁹

Bawd. Boult, take her away; use her at thy pleasure. Crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

Boult. An if she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods! ¹⁵⁵

Bawd. She conjures; away with her! Would she had never come within my doors! Marry, hang you! She's born to undo us. Will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry, come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays! [Exit.] ¹⁶⁰

Boult. Come, mistress; come your ways with me.

Mar. Whither wilt thou have me?

Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold so dear. ¹⁶⁵

Mar. Prithee, tell me one thing first.

Boult. Come now, your one thing.

Mar. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?

Boult. Why, I could wish him to be my master, or rather, my mistress. ¹⁷⁰

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou art, Since they do better thee in their command. Thou hold'st a place, for which the pained'st fiend

Of hell would not in reputation change.

Thou art the damned doorkeeper to every ¹⁷⁵

Coistrel that comes inquiring for his Tib.

To the choleric fisting of every rogue

Thy ear is liable; thy food is such

As hath been belch'd on by infected lungs. ¹⁷⁹

Boult. What would you have me do? Go to the wars, would you, where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

Mar. Do anything but this thou dost. Empty ¹⁸⁵

Old receptacles, or common sewers, of filth; Serve by indenture to the common hangman.

Any of these ways are yet better than this;

For what thou professest, a baboon, could he speak,

Would own a name too dear. O, that the gods

Would safely deliver me from this place! ¹⁹¹

Here, here's gold for thee.

If that thy master would gain by me,

Proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance,
With other virtues, which I'll keep from boast;
And I will undertake all these to teach. 196
I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak of?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again. 200

And prostitute me to the basest groom

That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee. If I can place thee, I will.

Mar. But amongst honest women. 205

Boult. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress hath bought you, there's no going but by their consent. Therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come, I'll do for thee what I can; come your ways. 212

[Exeunt.]

ACT V

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Marina thus the brothel scapes, and chances

Into an honest house, our story says.

She sings like one immortal, and she dances

As goddess-like to her admired lays.

Deep clerks she dumbs; and with her needl composes 5

Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry,

That even her art sisters the natural roses.

Her inkle, silk, twin with the rubied cherry,

That pupils lacks she none of noble race,

Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain 10

She gives the curs'd bawd. Here we her place;

And to her father turn our thoughts again,
Where we left him, on the sea. We there him lost;

Whence, driven before the winds, he is arriv'd
Here where his daughter dwells; and on this coast 15

Suppose him now at anchor. The city striv'd
God Neptune's annual feast to keep; from whence

Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies,

His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense;

And to him in his barge with fervour hies. 20

In your supposing once more put your sight.

Of heavy Pericles think this his bark,

Where what is done in action, more, if might,

Shall be discover'd. Please you, sit and hark. 25

[Exit.]

[SCENE I. On board Pericles' ship, off Mytilene. A close pavilion on deck, with a curtain before it: Pericles within it, reclined on a couch. A barge lying beside the Tyrian vessel.]

Enter two SAILORS [one belonging to the Tyrian vessel, the other to the barge]; to them HELICANUS.

[Tyr. Sail.] [To the Sailor of Mytilene.] Where is Lord Helicanus? He can resolve you.

O, here he is.

Sir, there's a barge put off from Mytilene,

And in it is Lysimachus the governor,

Who craves to come aboard. What is your will? 5

Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen.

[Tyr. Sail.] Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter two or three GENTLEMEN.

1. Gent. Doth your lordship call?

Hel. Gentlemen, there's some of worth would come aboard;

I pray, greet him fairly. 10

[The Gentlemen and the two Sailors descend, and go on board the barge.]

Enter LYSIMACHUS [and LORDS; with the Gentlemen and the two Sailors].

[Tyr. Sail.] Sir,
This is the man that can, in aught you would, resolve you.

Lys. Hail, reverend sir! The gods preserve you!

Hel. And you, sir, to outlive the age I am, 15
And die as I would do.

Lys. You wish me well.
Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs,

Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us,
I made to it, to know of whence you are.

Hel. First, what is your place? 20

Lys. I am the governor of this place you lie before.

Hel. Sir,
Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the King;

A man who for this three months hath not spoken

To any one, nor taken sustenance 25
But to prorogue his grief.

Lys. Upon what ground is his distemperature?

Hel. 'T would be too tedious to repeat;
But the main grief springs from the loss

Of a beloved daughter and a wife. 30

Lys. May we not see him?

Hel. You may;
But bootless is your sight. He will not speak to any.

[Lys.] Yet let me obtain my wish. 35

[Hel.] Behold him. [Pericles discovered.]

This was a goodly person
Till the disaster that, one mortal night,
Drove him to this.

Lys. Sir king, all hail! The gods preserve you!

Hail, royal sir! 40

Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak to you.

1. Lord. Sir,
We have a maid in Mytilene, I durst wager,
Would win some words of him.

Lys. 'T is well bethought.
She questionless with her sweet harmony 45
And other chosen attractions, would allure,
And make a battery through his deafen'd parts,

Which now are midway stopp'd.
 She is all happy as the fairest of all,
 And, [with] her fellow maids, [is] now upon 50
 The leafy shelter that abuts against
 The island's side.

[Whispers a Lord, who goes off in the barge of Lysimachus.]

Hel. Sure, all's effectless; yet nothing we'll omit
 That bears recovery's name. But, since your kindness
 We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech 55
 you

That for our gold we may provision have,
 Wherein we are not destitute for want,
 But weary for the staleness.

Lys. O, sir, a courtesy
 Which if we should deny, the most just God
 For every graff would send a caterpillar, 60
 And so infect our province. Yet once more Let me entreat to know at large the cause
 Of your king's sorrow.

Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it to you.
 But, see, I am prevented.

[Re-enter, from the barge, Lord, with MARINA, and a young Lady.]

Lys. O, here's
 The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair
 one! 65

—Is't not a goodly presence?

Hel. She's a gallant lady.
Lys. She's such a one, that, were I well assur'd

Came of a gentle kind and noble stock,
 I'd wish no better choice, and think me rarely wed.

Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty 70
 Expect even here, where is a kingly patient.
 If that thy prosperous and artificial feat
 Can draw him but to answer thee in aught,
 Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
 As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use 75
 My utmost skill in his recovery,
 Provided
 That none but I and my companion maid
 Be suffered to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her; 80
 And the gods make her prosperous!
 [Marina sings.]

Lys. Mark'd he your music?

Mar. No, nor look'd on us.

Lys. See, she will speak to him.

Mar. Hail, sir! my lord, lend ear.

Per. Hum, ha! [Pushing her back.]

Mar. I am a maid, 85
 My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,
 But have been gaz'd on like a comet. She speaks,

My lord, that, may be, hath endur'd a grief
 Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd.
 Though wayward fortune did malign my state, 90

My derivation was from ancestors.
 Who stood equivalent with mighty kings;
 But time hath rooted out my parentage,

And to the world and awkward casualties
 Bound me in servitude. [Aside.] I will desist; 95

But there is something glows upon my cheek,
 And whispers in mine ear, "Go not till he speak."

Per. My fortunes — parentage — good parentage —

To equal mine! Was it not thus? What say
 you?

Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage, 100

You would not do me violence.

Per. I do think so. Pray you, turn your eyes upon me.

You are like something that — What country-
 woman?

Here of these shores?

Mar. No, nor of any shores;
 Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am 105
 No other than I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping.

My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a
 one

My daughter might have been. My queen's square brows;

Her stature to an inch; as wand-like straight; 110

As silver-voic'd; her eyes as jewel-like

And cas'd as richly; in pace another Juno;

Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry,

The more she gives them speech. Where do you live?

Mar. Where I am but a stranger. From the deck 115

You may discern the place.

Per. Where were you bred?
 And how achiev'd you these endowments,
 which

You make more rich to owe?

Mar. If I should tell my history, it would seem

Like lies disdain'd in the reporting.

Per. Prithee, speak.
 Falseness cannot come from thee; for thou look'st 121

Modest as Justice, and thou seem'st a palace
 For the crown'd Truth to dwell in. I will believe thee,

And make [my] senses credit thy relation
 To points that seem impossible; for thou look'st Like one I lov'd indeed. What were thy friends? 125

Didst thou not say, when I did push thee back —
 Which was when I perceiv'd thee — that thou cam'st

From good descending?

Mar. So indeed I did.

Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou said'st 130

Thou hadst been toss'd from wrong to injury,
 And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine,

If both were opened.

Mar. Some such thing

I said, and said no more but what my thoughts
Did warrant me was likely.

Per. Tell thy story; 135
If thine considered prove the thousandth part
Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I
Have suffered like a girl. Yet thou dost look Like Patience gazing on kings' graves, and smiling

Extremity out of act. What were thy friends?
How lost thou [them?] Thy name, my most kind virgin? 141

Recount, I do beseech thee. Come, sit by me.

Mar. My name is Marina.

Per. O, I am mock'd,
And thou by some incensed god sent hither
To make the world to laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, good sir,
Or here I'll cease.

Per. Nay, I'll be patient. 146
Thou little know'st how thou dost startle me,
To call thyself Marina.

Mar. The name
Was given me by one that had some power, 150
My father, and a king.

Per. How! a king's daughter?
And call'd Marina?

Mar. You said you would believe me;
But, not to be a troubler of your peace,
I will end here.

Per. But are you flesh and blood?
Have you a working pulse, and are no fairy?
Motion? Well; speak on. Where were you born? 156

And wherefore call'd Marina?

Mar. Call'd Marina
For I was born at sea.

Per. At sea! What mother?

Mar. My mother was the daughter of a king,
Who died the minute I was born, 160
As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft Delivered weeping.

Per. O, stop there a little!
[Aside.] This is the rarest dream that e'er dull
sleep

Did mock sad fools withal. This cannot be;
My daughter's buried. Well, where were you bred? 165

I'll hear you more, to the bottom of your story,

And never interrupt you.

Mar. You scorn. Believe me, 't were best I did give o'er.

Per. I will believe you by the syllable
Of what you shall deliver. Yet, give me leave,
How came you in these parts? Where were you
bred? 171

Mar. The King my father did in Tarsus leave
me;

Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife,
Did seek to murder me; and having wooed
A villain to attempt it, who having drawn to
do 't, 175

A crew of pirates came and rescued me;
Brought me to Mytilene. But, good sir,
Whither will you have me? Why do you weep?

It may be,
You think me an impostor. No, good faith;

I am the daughter to King Pericles, 184
If good King Pericles be.

[Per.] Ho, Helicanus!

Hel. Calls my lord?

Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,
Most wise in general; tell me, if thou canst, 186
What this maid is, or what is like to be,
That thus hath made me weep?

Hel. I know not; but Here is the regent, sir, of Mytilene
Speaks nobly of her.

Lys. She never would tell
Her parentage. Being demanded that, 190
She would sit still and weep.

Per. O Helicanus, strike me, honoured sir;
Give me a gash, put me to present pain;
Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me
O'erbear the shores of my mortality, 195
And drown me with their sweetness. O, come
hither,

Thou that beget'st him that did thee beget;
Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tarsus,
And found at sea again! O Helicanus,
Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods as loud
As thunder threatens us. This is Marina. 201 What was thy mother's name? Tell me but
that,

For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. First, sir, I pray,
What is your title? 205

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre; but tell me now
My drown'd queen's name, as in the rest you
said

Thou hast been godlike perfect,
The heir of kingdoms and another like
To Pericles thy father. 210

Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter than
To say my mother's name was Thaisa?
Thaisa was my mother, who did end
The minute I began.

Per. Now, blessing on thee! Rise, thou art
my child. 215

Give me fresh garments. Mine own, Helicanus;
She is not dead at Tarsus, as she should have
been,

By savage Cleon. She shall tell thee all;
When thou shalt kneel, and justify in knowledge

She is thy very princess. Who is this? 220

Hel. Sir, 't is the governor of Mytilene,
Who, hearing of your melancholy state,
Did come to see you.

Per. I embrace you.
Give me my robes. I am wild in my beholding.
O heavens bless my girl! But, hark, what
music? 225

Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him
O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt, How sure you are my daughter. But, what
music?

Hel. My lord, I hear none.

Per. None! 230
The music of the spheres! List, my Marina.

Lys. It is not good to cross him; give him
way.

Per. Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear? 235

Lys. Music, my lord ? I hear.

Per. Most heavenly music !

It nips me unto listening, and thick slumber ²³⁵
Hangs upon mine eyes. Let me rest. [Sleeps.]

Lys. A pillow for his head.

So, leave him all. Well, my companion friends,
If this but answer to my just belief,
I'll well remember you. ²⁴⁰

[Exeunt all but Pericles.]

DIANA [appears to Pericles as in a vision.]

Dia. My temple stands in Ephesus ; hie thee
thither,

And do upon mine altar sacrifice.

There, when my maiden priests are met together,

Before the people all,

Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife. ²⁴⁵

To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's, call
And give them repetition to the life.

Or perform my bidding, or thou liv'st in woe ;

Do it, and happy, by my silver bow.

Awake, and tell thy dream. [Disappears.] ²⁵⁰

Per. Celestial Dian, goddess argentine,
I will obey thee. Helicanus !

[Re-enter HELICANUS, LYSIMACHUS, and MARINA.]

Hel. Sir ?

Per. My purpose was for Tarsus, there to strike

The inhospitable Cleon ; but I am

For other service first. Toward Ephesus ²⁵⁵

Turn our blown sails ; erefoons I'll tell thee
why.

[To Lysimachus.] Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore,

And give you gold for such provision

As our intents will need ?

Lys. Sir, ²⁶⁰

With all my heart ; and, when you come ashore,
I have another suit.

Per. You shall prevail,
Were it to woo my daughter ; for it seems
You have been noble towards her.

Lys. Sir, lend me your arm.

Per. Come, my Marina. [Exeunt.] ²⁶⁵

[SCENE II. Enter GOWER, before the temple of Diana at Ephesus.]

Gow. Now our sands are almost run ;

More a little, and then dumb.

This, my last boon, give me,

For such kindness must relieve me,

That you aptly will suppose ⁵

What pageantry, what feats, what shows,

What minstrelsy, and pretty din,

The regent made in Mytilene

To greet the King. So he thrived,

That he is promis'd to be wived ¹⁰

To fair Marina, but in no wise

Till he had done his sacrifice,

As Dian bade ; whereto being bound,

The interim, pray you, all confound.

In feather'd briefness sails are fill'd, ¹⁵

And wishes fall out as they're will'd.

At Ephesus the temple see,

Our king and all his company.

That he can hither come so soon,

Is by your fancy's thankful doom. [Exit.] ²⁰

[SCENE III. The temple of Diana at Ephesus ; THAISA standing near the altar, as high priestess ; a number of Virgins on each side ; CERIMON and other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending.]

Enter PERICLES, with his train : LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, MARINA, and a Lady.

Per. Hail, Dian ! to perform thy just command,

I here confess myself the King of Tyre ;

Who, frighted from my country, did wed

At Pentapolis the fair Thaisa.

At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth ⁵

A maid-child call'd Marina ; who, O goddess,

Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tarsus

Was nurs'd with Cleon ; who at fourteen years

He sought to murder ; but her better stars

Brought her to Mytilene, 'gainst whose shore ¹⁰ Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard

us,
Where, by her own most clear remembrance,

she
Made known herself my daughter.

Thai. Voice and favour !

You are, you are — O royal Pericles ! [Faints.]

Per. What means the nun ? She dies ! Help, gentlemen ! ¹⁵

Cer. Noble sir,

If you have told Diana's altar true,

This is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no.

I threw her overboard with these very arms.

Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant you.

Per. 'T is most certain.

Cer. Look to the lady ; O, she's but overjoy'd. ²¹

Early in blustering morn this lady was Thrown upon this shore. I op'd the coffin,

Found there rich jewels ; recovered her, and plac'd her

Here in Diana's temple.

Per. May we see them ? ²⁵

Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house,

Whither I invite you. Look, Thaisa is Recovered.

Thai. O, let me look !

If he be none of mine, my sanctity

Will to my sense bend no licentious ear, ³⁰

But curb it, spite of seeing. O, my lord,

Are you not Pericles ? Like him you spake,
Like him you are ! Did you not name a tempest,

A birth, and death ?

Per. The voice of dead Thaisa !

Thai. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead ³⁵

And drown'd.

Per. Immortal Dian !

Thai. Now I know you better.

When we with tears parted Pentapolis,
The King my father gave you such a ring.

[Shows a ring.]

Per. This, this. No more, you gods! Your present kindness ⁴⁰
Makes my past miseries sports. You shall do
well,

That on the touching of her lips I may Melt and no more be seen. O, come, be buried
A second time within these arms.

Mar. My heart
Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom. ⁴⁵

[Kneels to Thaisa.]

Per. Look, who kneels here! Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa;

Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina
For she was yielded there.

Thai. Blest, and mine own!

Hel. Hail, madam, and my queen!

Thai. I know you not.

Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre, ⁵⁰

I left behind an ancient substitute.
Can you remember what I call'd the man?

I have nam'd him oft.

Thai. 'T was Helicanus then.

Per. Still confirmation!

Embrace him, dear Thaisa; this is he. ⁵⁵

Now do I long to hear how you were found,

How possibly preserv'd, and who to thank,

Besides the gods, for this great miracle.

Thai. Lord Cerimon, my lord; this man, Through whom the gods have shown their power; that can ⁶⁰

From first to last resolve you.

Per. Reverend sir,

The gods can have no mortal officer

More like a god than you. Will you deliver

How this dead queen re-lives?

Cer. I will, my lord.

Beseech you, first go with me to my house, ⁶⁵

Where shall be shown you all was found with

her,

How she came plac'd here in the temple;

No needful thing omitted.

Per. Pure Dian, bless thee for thy vision! I
Will offer night-oblations to thee. Thaisa, ⁷⁰
This prince, the fair-betrothed of your daughter,
Shall marry her at Pentapolis. And now,
This ornament

Makes me look dismal will I clip to form:
And what this fourteen years no razor
touch'd, ⁷⁵

To grace thy marriage-day, I'll beautify.

Thai. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, sir,

My father's dead.

Per. Heavens make a star of him! Yet
there, my queen,

We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves ⁸⁰

Will in that kingdom spend our following days.

Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.

Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay

To hear the rest untold. Sir, lead 's the way.

[Exeunt.]

[Enter GOWER.]

Gow. In Antiochus and his daughter you have heard ⁸⁵

Of monstrous lust the due and just reward.

In Pericles, his queen and daughter, seen,

Although assail'd with fortune fierce and keen,

Virtue preserv'd from fell destruction's blast,

Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at ⁹⁰

last.

In Helicanus may you well descry

A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty.

In reverend Cerimon there well appears

The worth that learned charity aye wears.

For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame ⁹⁵

Had spread their cursed deed, and honour'd

name

Of Pericles, to rage the city turn,

That him and his they in his palace burn;

The gods for murder seemed so content

To punish them; although not done, but ¹⁰⁰

meant.

So, on your patience evermore attending,

New joy wait on you! Here our play has ending. [Exit.]

CYMBELINE

CYMBELINE first appeared in print in the Folio of 1623, and there is no evidence of any previous attempt at publication. The text, which presents many difficulties, has been edited on the basis of this original, with the assistance, as usual, of the results of later editors.

For the date of production the later limit is the death in 1611 of Simon Forman, who records in his "Booke of Plaies" a performance of Cymbeline witnessed by him. The entry is undated, but the records of performances of Winter's Tale and Macbeth, between which it occurs, belong respectively to May 15, 1611, and April 20, 1610. The metrical tests point to the years 1609-1611, and we may with some assurance regard 1610 as coming within a year of the date of composition.

Of authentic history in Cymbeline there is very little beyond the fact of the existence, about the beginning of the Christian era, of a British king, Cunobelinus. The pseudo-historical element Shakespeare derived from Holinshed, whose narrative is here chiefly legendary. The Chronicle represents Cymbeline as having been brought up in Rome and knighted by Augustus Cæsar, and as the father of two sons, Guiderius and Arviragus. Conflicting stories are reported about the payment of tribute to Rome, but Holinshed puts stress on the friendship existing between Cymbeline and the Emperor, and makes the refusal of tribute come from Guiderius after his father's death. The references to previous conflicts between Rome and Britain are derived from the Chronicle. The account of the battle in the fifth act, and of the saving of the day by Belarius and the two princes, is based on Holinshed's story of a fight between the Danes and the Scots, in which the fleeing Scots were rallied in a lane by a husbandman and his two sons.

The romantic element in the plot belongs to a very widely diffused type of story. It is found repeatedly in French romance and drama, and occurs also in Italian, German, Scandinavian, Gaelic, and other literatures. In most versions there persist the characteristic features of the wager, the repulse of the villain, the deceptive tokens, the attempt of the husband or lover to punish the supposed infidelity by death, the wanderings of the heroine in disguise, the final reconciliation, and the confession of the villain. Shakespeare's version approaches most closely that of Boccaccio in the ninth novel of the second day of the Decameron, which he may have known in a lost English translation or in one of the current French editions. The English version which appears in Westward for Smelts cannot be proved to have been printed before 1620; and its author may himself have been indebted to Shakespeare, or both may have borrowed from an English source now lost.

A number of subsidiary sources have been suggested. The early anonymous play of The Rare Triumphs of Love and Fortune (printed 1589) has resemblances to our play, especially in the rôles of Imogen, Posthumus, Cloten, and Belarius, and the heroine is named Fidelia. The relation of the Queen to her son and Imogen recalls the familiar stepmother motive of Germanic folk-lore, and, with the episode in the cave, more specifically the fairy-tale of Little Snow-white. But from whatever sources Shakespeare drew these various details, the interweaving and the atmosphere are his own, and all the wealth of poetry and characterization which gives the drama its charm.

If Pericles be set aside as primarily a dramatized tale of adventure, Cymbeline is the first of that group of so-called "dramatic romances" with which Shakespeare closed his career. The difficulty of fixing a certain chronology prevents us from stating with assurance the relation of these plays to the somewhat similar group produced about the same time by Beaumont and Fletcher; but a close relation between the present play and the Philaster of these authors is beyond question, the balance of evidence favoring the younger authors as inventors of the type.

Doubt has been cast upon the authenticity of several passages in the play, especially the vision of Posthumus in v. iv. The device itself is paralleled by the spectacular elements in The Tempest and Winter's Tale; but the inferior quality of such verses as 30-92 lends color to the belief that the scene was at least expanded by another hand than Shakespeare's.

QUEEN, wife to Cymbeline.

IMOGEN, daughter to Cymbeline by a former Queen.

HELEN, a lady attending on Imogen.

Lords, Ladies, Roman Senators, Tribunes, a Soothsayer, a Dutchman, a Spaniard, Musicians, Officers, Captains, Soldiers, Messengers, and other Attendants.

SCENE: Britain; Rome.]

ACT I

SCENE I. [Britain. The garden of Cymbeline's palace.]

Enter two GENTLEMEN.

1. Gent. You do not meet a man but frowns.
Our bloods

No more obey the heavens than our courtiers
Still seem as does the King.

2. Gent. But what's the matter?

1. Gent. His daughter, and the heir of 's kingdom, whom

He purpos'd to his wife's sole son — a widow
That late he married — hath reffer'd herself Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She's wedded,

Her husband banish'd, she imprison'd; all
Is outward sorrow; though I think the King
Be touch'd at very heart.

2. Gent. None but the King?

1. Gent. He that hath lost her too; so is the Queen,

That most desir'd the match: but not a courtier,

Although they wear their faces to the bent
Of the King's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

2. Gent. And why so?

1. Gent. He that hath miss'd the Princess is a thing

Too bad for bad report; and he that hath
her —

I mean, that married her, alack, good man!
And therefore banish'd — is a creature such
As, to seek through the regions of the earth
For one his like, there would be something failing

In him that should compare. I do not think

So fair an outward and such stuff within Endows a man but he.

2. Gent. You speak him far.

1. Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself,

Crush him together rather than unfold

His measure duly.

2. Gent. What's his name and birth?

1. Gent. I cannot delve him to the root. His father

Was call'd Sicilius, who did gain his honour
Against the Romans with Cassibelan,

But had his titles by Tenantius whom

He serv'd with glory and admir'd success,

So gain'd the sur-addition Leonatus;

And had, besides this gentleman in question,

Two other sons, who in the wars o' the time

Died with their swords in hand; for which their father,

Then old and fond of issue, took such sorrow

That he quit being, and his gentle lady,

Big of this gentleman our theme, deceas'd

As he was born. The King he takes the babe

To his protection, calls him Posthumus Leonatus,

Breeds him and makes him of his bed-chamber,
Puts to him all the learnings that his time

Could make him the receiver of; which he took,

As we do air, fast as 't was minist' red,

And in 's spring became a harvest; liv'd in court —

Which rare it is to do — most prais'd, most
lov'd,

A sample to the youngest, to the more mature
A glass that feated them, and to the graver

A child that guided dotards; to his mistress,

For whom he now is banish'd, — her own price Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue;

By her election may be truly read
What kind of man he is.

2. Gent. I honour him
Even out of your report. But, pray you, tell
me, 65

Is she sole child to the King?

1. Gent. His only child.
He had two sons, — if this be worth your hear-
ing,

Mark it — the eldest of them at three years old,
I' the swathing-clothes the other, from their nursery

Were stolen, and to this hour no guess in knowledge 60

Which way they went.

2. Gent. How long is this ago?

1. Gent. Some twenty years.

2. Gent. That a king's children should be so convey'd,

So slackly guarded, and the search so slow,
That could not trace them!

1. Gent. Howsoe'er 't is strange, 65
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,
Yet is it true, sir.

2. Gent. I do well believe you.

1. Gent. We must forbear; here comes the gentleman,

The Queen, and Princess. [Exeunt.]

Enter the QUEEN, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN.

Queen. No, be assur'd you shall not find me,
daughter, 70

After the slander of most stepmothers,
Evil-ey'd unto you. You're my prisoner, but
Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys
That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus,

So soon as I can win the offended King, 75
I will be known your advocate. Marry, yet

The fire of rage is in him, and 't were good
You lean'd to his sentence with what patience

Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your Highness,
I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril.
I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying 81
The pangs of barr'd affections, though the King

Hath charg'd you should not speak together. [Exit.]

Imo. O
Dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant Can tickle where she wounds! My dearest husband, 85

I something fear my father's wrath; but nothing —

Always reserv'd my holy duty — what
His rage can do on me. You must be gone;
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes, not comforted to live, 90
But that there is this jewel in the world
That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress!

O lady, weep no more, lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man. I will remain 95
The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth.
My residence in Rome at one Philario's,
Who to my father was a friend, to me
Known but by letter; thither write, my queen,
And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send, 100

Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter QUEEN.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you.
If the King come, I shall incur I know not
How much of his displeasure. [Aside.] Yet
I'll move him

To walk this way. I never do him wrong
But he does buy my injuries, to be friends; 105
Pays dear for my offences. [Exit.]

Post. Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,
The loathness to depart would grow. Adieu!

Imo. Nay, stay a little;
Were you but riding forth to air yourself, 110
Such parting were too petty. Look here, love;
This diamond was my mother's. Take it, heart;
But keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.

Post. How, how! another?
You gentle gods, give me but this I have, 115
And cere up my embracements from a next
With bonds of death! [Putting on the ring.]
Remain, remain thou here

While sense can keep it on. And, sweetest, fairest,

As I my poor self did exchange for you,
To your so infinite loss, so in our trifles 120
I still win of you; for my sake wear this.
It is a manacle of love; I'll place it
Upon this fairest prisoner.

[Putting a bracelet upon her arm.]

Imo. O the gods!

When shall we see again?

Enter CYMBELINE and Lords.

Post. Alack, the King!
Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! Hence, from my sight! 125

If after this command thou fraught the court
With thy unworthiness, thou diest. Away!
Thou 'rt poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you!
And bless the good remainders of the court!
I am gone. [Exit.]

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death 130
More sharp than this is.

Cym. O dishoyal thing,
That shouldst repair my youth, thou heap'st
A year's age on me.

Imo. I beseech you, sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation.
I am senseless of your wrath; a touch more rare 135

Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym. Past grace? obedience?
Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace.

Cym. That mightst have had the sole son of my queen!

Imo. O blest, that I might not! I chose an eagle,

And did avoid a puttock.

140

Cym. Thou took'st a beggar; wouldst have made my throne

A seat for baseness.

Imo. No; I rather added

A lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vile one!

Imo.

Sir,

It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus.

You bred him as my playfellow, and he is 145

A man worth any woman; overbuys me

Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. What, art thou mad?

Imo. Almost, sir; heaven restore me! Would I were

A neat-herd's daughter, and my Leonatus

Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Re-enter QUEEN.

Cym. Thou foolish thing!

— They were again together; you have done

151

Not after our command. Away with her,

And pen her up.

Queen. Beseech your patience. Peace,

Dear lady daughter, peace! Sweet sovereign,

Leave us to ourselves; and make yourself some comfort

155

Out of your best advice.

Cym. Nay, let her languish

A drop of blood a day; and, being aged,

Die of this folly!

[Exeunt [Cymbeline and Lords].]

Enter PISANIO.

Queen. Fie! you must give way.

Here is your servant. How now, sir! What news?

159

Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.

Queen. Ha!

No harm, I trust, is done?

Pis. There might have been,

But that my master rather play'd than fought

And had no help of anger. They were parted

By gentlemen at hand.

Queen. I am very glad on 't.

Imo. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part 165

To draw upon an exile. O brave sir!

I would they were in Afric both together;

Myself by with a needle, that I might prick

The goer-back. Why came you from your master?

Pis. On his command. He would not suffer me

170

To bring him to the haven; left these notes

Of what commands I should be subject to,

When 't pleas'd you to employ me.

Queen. This hath been

Your faithful servant. I dare lay mine honour

He will remain so.

Pis. I humbly thank your Highness. 175

Queen. Pray, walk a while.

Imo. About some half-hour hence,

I pray you, speak with me; you shall at least Go see my lord aboard. For this time leave me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE [II. The same. A public place.]

Enter CLOTEN and two LORDS.

1. Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt; the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice. Where air comes out, air comes in; there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it. Have I hurt him?

2. Lord. [Aside.] No, faith; not so much as his patience.

1. Lord. Hurt him! His body's a passable carcass, if he be not hurt; it is a throughfare for steel, if he be not hurt.

2. Lord. [Aside.] His steel was in debt; it went o' the backside the town.

Clo. The villain would not stand me.

2. Lord. [Aside.] No; but he fled forward still, toward your face.

1. Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own; but he added to your having, gave you some ground.

20

2. Lord. [Aside.] As many inches as you have oceans. Puppies!

Clo. I would they had not come between us.

2. Lord. [Aside.] So would I, till you had measur'd how long a fool you were upon the ground.

26

Clo. And that she should love this fellow and refuse me!

2. Lord. [Aside.] If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damn'd.

30

1. Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together. She's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2. Lord. [Aside.] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.

35

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done!

2. Lord. [Aside.] I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.

Clo. You'll go with us?

40

1. Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

2. Lord. Well, my lord. [Exeunt.]

SCENE [III. A room in Cymbeline's palace.]

Enter IMOGEN and PISANIO.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores o' the haven,

And question'dst every sail. If he should write And I not have it, 't were a paper lost,

As offer'd mercy is. What was the last That he spake to thee?

Pis. It was his queen, his queen!

Imo. Then wav'd his handkerchief?

Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen! happier therein than I! And that was all?

Pis. No, madam; for so long As he could make me with this eye or ear

Distinguish him from others, he did keep 10
The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,
Still waving, as the fits and stirs of 's mind
Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,
How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou shouldst have made him
As little as a crow, or less, ere left 15
To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.
Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings;
crack'd them, but

To look upon him, till the diminution
Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle;
Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from 20
The smallness of a gnat to air, and then
Have turn'd mine eye and wept. But, good
Pisanio,

When shall we hear from him?
Pis. Be assured, madam,
With his next vantage. 24

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had Most pretty things to say. Ere I could tell him
How I would think on him at certain hours
Such thoughts and such, or I could make him
swear

The shes of Italy should not betray Mine interest and his honour, or have charg'd
him, 30

At the ninth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,

To encounter me with orisons, for then
I am in heaven for him; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss which I had set Betwixt two charming words, comes in my
father 35

And like the tyrannous breathing of the north
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a LADY.

Lady. The Queen, madam,
Desires your Highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them dispatch'd.

I will attend the Queen.
Pis. Madam, I shall. 40
[Exeunt.]

SCENE [IV. Rome. Philario's house.]

Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO, a FRENCHMAN, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain. He was then of a crescent note, expected to prove so worthy as since he hath been allowed the name of; but I could then have look'd on him without the help of admiration, though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side and I to peruse him by items. 7

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnish'd than now he is with that which makes him both without and within.

French. I have seen him in France. We had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he. 13

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, wherein he must be weighed rather by her value than his own, words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And then his banishment. 18

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce under her colours are wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgement, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without less quality. But how comes it he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Phi. His father and I were soldiers to- 25 gether; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life.

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Here comes the Briton. Let him be so entertained amongst you as suits with gentlemen of your knowing to a stranger of his quality. 30
— I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman, whom I commend to you as a noble friend of mine. How worthy he is I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing. 35

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay and yet pay still. 40

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness.
I was glad I did atone my countryman and you. It had been pity you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature. 45

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller; rather shunn'd to go even with what I heard than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences; but upon my mended judgement — if I offend [not] to say it is mended — my quarrel was not altogether slight. 51

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords, and by such two that would by all likelihood have confounded one the other, or have fallen both. 55

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think; 't was a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us 60 fell in praise of our country-mistresses; this gentleman at that time vouching — and upon warrant of bloody affirmation — his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant, qualified, and less attemptable than any the rarest of our ladies in France. 65

Iach. That lady is not now living, or this gentleman's opinion by this worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her 'fore ours of Italy. 71

Post. Being so far provok'd as I was in France, I would abate her nothing, though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend. 74

Iach. As fair and as good — a kind of hand-in-hand comparison — had been something too fair and too good for any lady in Britain. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours outlustres many I have beheld, I could not [but] believe she excelled many. But I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady. ⁸²

Post. I praise'd her as I rated her; so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagon'd mistress is dead, or she's outpriz'd by a trifle. ⁸³

Post. You are mistaken. The one may be sold, or given, or if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift; the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep. ⁸⁵

Iach. You may wear her in title yours; but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen too; so your brace of unprizable estimations, the one is but frail and the other casual. A cunning thief, or a that-way-accomplish'd courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last. ¹⁰²

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplish'd a courtier to convince the honour of my mistress, if, in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail. I do nothing doubt you have store of thieves; notwithstanding, I fear not my ring. ¹⁰⁸

Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first. ¹¹²

Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your fair mistress, make her go back, even to the yielding, had I admittance, and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no. ¹¹⁷

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring; which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something. But I make my wager rather against your confidence than her reputation; and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world. ¹²³

Post. You are a great deal abus'd in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not you sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A repulse; though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more, — a punishment too. ¹²⁹

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this; it came in too suddenly. Let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

Iach. Would I had put my estate and my neighbour's on the approbation of what I have spoke!

Post. What lady would you choose to assail? ¹³⁶

Iach. Yours, whom in constancy you think stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers which you imagine so reserv'd. ¹⁴⁰

Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it. My ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are afraid, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting. But I see you have some religion in you, that you fear. ¹⁴⁹

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue; you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches, and would undergo what's spoken, I swear. ¹⁵³

Post. Will you? I shall but lend my diamond till your return. Let there be covenants drawn between's. My mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking. I dare you to this match; here's my ring.

Phi. I will have it no lay. ¹⁵⁹

Iach. By the gods, it is one. If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoy'd the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too. If I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours; provided I have your commendation for my more free entertainment. ¹⁶⁷

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us. Only, thus far you shall answer: if you make your voyage upon her and give me directly to understand you have prevail'd, I am no further your enemy; she is not worth our debate. If she remain un-seduc'd, you not making it appear otherwise, for your ill opinion and the assault you have made to her chastity you shall answer me with your sword. ¹⁷⁶

Iach. Your hand; a covenant. We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold and starve. I will fetch my gold and have our two wagers recorded. ¹⁸¹

Post. Agreed.

[Exeunt Posthumus and Iachimo.]

French. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.]

SCENE [V. Britain. A room in Cymbeline's palace.]

Enter QUEEN, LADIES, and CORNELIUS.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers;

Make haste. Who has the note of them?

1. Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Dispatch. [Exeunt Ladies.]

Now, master doctor, have you brought those drugs?

Cor. Pleaseth your Highness, ay. Here they are, madam. [Presenting a small box.]

But I beseech your Grace, without offence, — My conscience bids me ask — wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds,

Which are the movers of a languishing death,
But though slow, deadly.

Queen. I wonder, doctor, 10
Thou ask'st me such a question. Have I not Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me
how

To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yea, so
That our great king himself doth woo me oft
For my confections? Having thus far proceeded, — 15

Unless thou think'st me devilish — is't not meet

That I did amplify my judgement in Other conclusions? I will try the forces
Of these thy compounds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging, — but none human — 20

To try the vigour of them and apply
Allayments to their act, and by them gather
Their several virtues and effects.

Cor. Your Highness
Shall from this practice but make hard your heart.

Besides, the seeing these effects will be 25
Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O, content thee.

Enter PISANIO.

[Aside.] Here comes a flattering rascal; upon
him

Will I first work. He's for his master,
And enemy to my son. How now, Pisanio!
Doctor, your service for this time is ended; 30
Take your own way.

Cor. [Aside.] I do suspect you, madam;
But you shall do no harm.

Queen. [To Pisanio.] Hark thee, a word.

Cor. [Aside.] I do not like her. She doth think she has

Strange ling'ring poisons. I do know her spirit,
And will not trust one of her malice with 35
A drug of such damn'd nature. Those she has
Will stupefy and dull the sense a while,
Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats and dogs,

Then afterward up higher; but there is
No danger in what show of death it makes, 40
More than the locking-up the spirits a time,
To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd
With a most false effect; and I the truer,
So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, doctor,
Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave. 45

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think in time

She will not quench and let instructions enter
Where folly now possesses? Do thou work.
When thou shalt bring me word she loves my
son,

I'll tell thee on the instant thou art then 50
As great as is thy master, — greater, for
His fortunes all lie speechless and his name
Is at last gasp. Return he cannot, nor Continue where he is. To shift his being

Is to exchange one misery with another, 55
And every day that comes comes to decay
A day's work in him. What shalt thou expect,
To be depend on a thing that leans,
Who cannot be new built, nor has no friends
So much as but to prop him? [*The Queen drops
the box: Pisanio takes it up.*]

Thou tak'st up
Thou know'st not what; but take it for thy labour. 61

It is a thing I made, which hath the King
Five times redeem'd from death. I do not know
What is more cordial. Nay, I prithee, take it;
It is an earnest of a further good 65
That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how
The case stands with her; do't as from thyself.
Think what a chance thou changest on, but think

Thou hast thy mistress still; to boot, my son,
Who shall take notice of thee. I'll move the King 70

To any shape of thy preferment such
As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly,
That set thee on to this desert, am bound
To load thy merit richly. Call my women.
Think on my words. [Exit Pisanio.]

A sly and constant knave,
Not to be shak'd; the agent for his master 75
And the remembrancer of her to hold
The hand-fast to her lord. I have given him
that

Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her
Of liegers for her sweet, and which she after, 80
Except she bend her humour, shall be assur'd
To taste of too.

Re-enter PISANIO and Ladies.

So, so; well done, well done.
The violets, cowslips, and the primroses,
Bear to my closet. Fare thee well, Pisanio;
Think on my words.

[Exeunt Queen and Ladies.]
Pis. And shall do; 85
But when to my good lord I prove untrue,
I'll choke myself. There's all I'll do for you.
[Exit.]

SCENE [VI. The same. Another room in the palace.]

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false;
A foolish suitor to a wedded lady,
That hath her husband banish'd; — O, that husband!

My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated
Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stolen, 90
As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable
Is the desire that's glorious. Blessed be those,
How mean soe'er, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons comfort. Who may this be?
Fie!

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome, 95
Comes from my lord with letters.
Iach. Change you, madam?

The worthy Leonatus is in safety
And greets your Highness dearly.

Imo. [Presents a letter.]
You're kindly welcome. Thanks, good sir;

Iach. [Aside.] All of her that is out of door
most rich! 15

If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone, the Arabian bird, and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend!
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot!
Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight; 20
Rather, directly fly.

Imo. (Reads.) "—He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust — LEONATUS." 25
So far I read aloud —
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by the rest — and take it thankfully.

You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
Have words to bid you, and shall find it so 30
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.
What, are men mad? Hath nature given them
eyes

To see this vaulted arch, and the rich crop
Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery orbs above and the twinn'd stones 35
Upon the number'd beach, and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious 'Twixt fair and foul?

Imo. What makes your admiration?
Iach. It cannot be i' the eye, for apes and monkeys

'Twixt two such shes would chatter this way
and 40
Contemn with mows the other; nor i' the
judgement,

For idiots in this case of favour would
Be wisely definite; nor i' the appetite;
Sluttery to such neat excellence oppos'd
Should make desire vomit emptiness, 45
Not so allur'd to feed.

Imo. What is the matter, trow?

Iach. The cloyed will, —
That satiate yet unsatisf'd desire, that tub Both fill'd and running, — ravening first the lamb,

Longs after for the garbage.

Imo. What, dear sir,
Thus raps you? Are you well? 51

Iach. Thanks, madam; well. [To Pisanio.]
Beseech you, sir, desire
My man's abode where I did leave him. He Is strange and peevish.

Pis. I was going, sir,
To give him welcome. [Exit. 55

Imo. Continues well my lord? His health, beseech you?

Iach. Well, madam.

Imo. Is he dispos'd to mirth? I hope he is.

Iach. Exceeding pleasant; none a stranger
there

So merry and so gamesome. He is call'd 60
The Briton reveller.

Imo. When he was here,
He did incline to sadness, and oft-times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his companion, one
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much
loves 65

A Gallian girl at home. He furnaces
The thick sighs from him, whiles the jolly Briton —

Your lord, I mean — laughs from 's free lungs, cries "O,
Can my sides hold, to think that man, who knows

By history, report, or his own proof, 70
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
But must be, will his free hours languish for Assured bondage?"

Imo. Will my lord say so?
Iach. Ay, madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter.

It is a recreation to be by 75
And hear him mock the Frenchman. But, heavens know,
Some men are much to blame.

Imo. Not he, I hope.

Iach. Not he; but yet heaven's bounty towards him might
Be used more thankfully. In himself, 't is much;

In you — which I account his — beyond all talents. 80

Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

Imo. What do you pity, sir?

Iach. Two creatures heartily.

Imo. Am I one, sir?
You look on me; what wreck discern you in
me

Deserves your pity?

Iach. Lamentable! What, 85
To hide me from the radiant sun, and solace
I' the dungeon by a snuff!

Imo. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Iach. That others do, 90
I was about to say, enjoy your — But
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to speak on 't.

Imo. You do seem to know Something of me, or what concerns me: pray
you, —

Since doubting things go ill often hurts more 95
Than to be sure they do; for certainties
Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing.
The remedy then born — discover to me
What both you spur and stop.

Iach. Had I this cheek
To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch, 100

Whose every touch, would force the feeler's soul

To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here; should I, damn'd then,
Slaver with lips as common as the stairs 105

That mount the Capitol; join gripes with hands

Made hard with hourly falsehood — falsehood, as

With labour; then lie peeping in an eye
Base and illustrious as the smoky light
That's fed with stinking tallow: it were fit ¹¹⁰
That all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.

Imo. My lord, I fear,
Has forgot Britain.

Iach. And himself. Not I,
Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The beggary of his change; but 't is your graces ¹¹⁵

That from my mutest conscience to my tongue
Charms this report out.

Imo. Let me hear no more.
Iach. O dearest soul! your cause doth strike my heart

With pity, that doth make me sick. A lady
So fair, and fasten'd to an empery ¹²⁰
Would make the great'st king double, — to be partner'd

With tomboys hir'd with that self-exhibition
Which your own coffers yield! with diseases'd ventures

That play with all infirmities for gold
Which rottenness can lend nature! such boil'd stuff ¹²⁵

As well might poison poison! Be reveng'd;
Or she that bore you was no queen, and you
Recoil from your great stock

Imo. Reveng'd!
How should I be reveng'd? If this be true, —
As I have such a heart that both mine ears ¹³⁰
Must not in haste abuse — if it be true,
How should I be reveng'd?

Iach. Should he make me
Live, like Diana's priest, betwixt cold sheets,
Whiles he is vaulting variable ramps,
In your despite, upon your purse? Revenge
it. ¹³⁵

I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure,
More noble than that runagate to your bed,
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close as sure.

Imo. What, ho, Pisanio!
Iach. Let me my service tender on your lips. ¹⁴⁰

Imo. Away! I do condemn mine ears that have
So long attended thee. If thou wert honourable,

Thou woudst have told this tale for virtue,
not

For such an end thou seek'st, — as base as strange.

Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far ¹⁴⁵
From thy report as thou from honour, and Solicit'st here a lady that disdains

Thee and the devil alike. What ho, Pisanio!
The King my father shall be made acquainted
Of thy assault. If he shall think it fit ¹⁵⁰

A saucy stranger in his court to mart
As in a Romish stew, and to expound
His beastly mind to us, he hath a court

He little cares for and a daughter who
He not respects at all. What, ho, Pisanio! ¹⁵⁵
Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may say.

The credit that thy lady hath of thee
Deserves thy trust, and thy most perfect goodness

Her assur'd credit. Blessed live you long
A lady to the worthiest sir that ever ¹⁶⁰
Country call'd his! and you his mistress, only For the most worthiest fit! Give me your pardon.

I have spoke this, to know if your affiance
Were deeply rooted, and shall make your lord,
That which he is, new o'er; and he is one ¹⁶⁵
The truest manner'd, such a holy witch
That he enchants societies into him;
Half all men's hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends.
Iach. He sits 'mongst men like a descended god:

He hath a kind of honour sets him off, ¹⁷⁰
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
Most mighty princess, that I have adventur'd
To try your taking of a false report; which

hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgement

In the election of a sir so rare, ¹⁷⁵
Which you know cannot err. The love I bear
him

Made me to fan you thus; but the gods made
you,

Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your pardon.
Imo. All's well, sir. Take my power i' the court for yours.

Iach. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot ¹⁸⁰

To entreat your Grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord, myself, and other noble friends,
Are partners in the business.

Imo. Pray, what is 't?
Iach. Some dozen Romans of us and your lord — ¹⁸⁵

The best feather of our wing — have mingled sums

To buy a present for the Emperor;
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done
In France. 'T is plate of rare device, and jewels
Of rich and exquisite form, their values great; ¹⁹⁰

And I am something curious, being strange,
To have them in safe stowage. May it please
you

To take them in protection?

Imo. Willingly;
And pawn mine honour for their safety. Since My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them ¹⁹⁵

In my bedchamber.

Iach. They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men. I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night;
I must aboard to-morrow.

Imo. O, no, no.
Iach. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my word ²⁰⁰

By lengthening my return. From Gallia
I cross'd the seas on purpose and on promise
To see your Grace.

Imo. I thank you for your pains :
But not away to-morrow !

Iach. O, I must, madam ;
Therefore I shall beseech you, if you please 205
To greet your lord with writing ; do 't to-night.
I have outstod my time ; which is material
To the tender of our present.

Imo. I will write.
Send your trunk to me ; it shall safe be kept,
And truly yielded you. You 're very welcome. [Exeunt. 210]

ACT II

SCENE I. [Britain. Before Cymbeline's palace.]Enter CLOTEN and two LORDS.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck !
When I kiss'd the jack, upon an up-cast to be hit away ! I had a hundred pound on 't ; and then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing, as if I borrowed mine oaths of him and might not spend them at my pleasure. •

1. Lord. What got he by that ? You have broke his pate with your bowl.

2. Lord. [Aside.] If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out. 10

Clo. When a gentleman is dispos'd to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths,
ha ?

2. Lord. No, my lord ; [aside] nor crop the ears of them. 15

Clo. Whoreson dog ! I give him satisfaction ?
Would he had been one of my rank !

2. Lord. [Aside.] To have smelt like a fool. 18

Clo. I am not vex'd more at anything in the earth ; a pox on 't ! I had rather not be so noble as I am. They dare not fight with me, because of the Queen my mother. Every Jack-slave hath his bellyful of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match. 24

2. Lord. [Aside.] You are cock and capon too ; and you crow, cock, with your comb on.

Clo. Sayest thou ?
2. Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to. 30

Clo. No, I know that ; but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2. Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Clo. Why, so I say.

1. Lord. Did you hear of a stranger that 's come to court to-night ? 36

Clo. A stranger, and I not know on 't !

2. Lord. [Aside.] He 's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not.

1. Lord. There 's an Italian come ; and, 't is thought, one of Leonatus' friends. 41

Clo. Leonatus ! a banish'd rascal ; and he 's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger ?

1. Lord. One of your lordship's pages. 46

Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him ? Is there no derogation in 't ?

2. Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think. 49

2. Lord. [Aside.] You are a fool granted ; therefore your issues, being foolish, do not derogate.

Clo. Come, I 'll go see this Italian. What I have lost to-day at bowls I 'll win to-night of him. Come, go. 55

2. Lord. I 'll attend your lordship.

[Exeunt (Cloten and First Lord).
That such a crafty devil as is his mother
Should yield the world this ass ! A woman that Bears all down with her brain ; and this her son

Cannot take two from twenty, for his heart, 60
And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess,
Thou divine Imogen, what thou endure'st,
Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd,
A mother hourly coining plots, a wooer
More hateful than the foul expulsion is 65
Of thy dear husband ! Then that horrid act
Of the divorce he 'd make ! The heavens hold firm

The walls of thy dear honour, keep unshak'd
That temple, thy fair mind, that thou mayst stand,
To enjoy thy banish'd lord and this great land ! [Exit. 70]

SCENE II. [Imogen's bedchamber in Cymbeline's palace : a trunk in one corner of it.]IMOGEN in bed [reading] ; a LADY [attending]

Imo. Who 's there ? My woman Helen ?

Lady. Please you, madam. 75

Imo. What hour is it ?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours then. Mine eyes are weak.

Fold down the leaf where I have left. To bed.

Take not away the taper, leave it burning ; •
And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock,
I prithee, call me. Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly. [Exit Lady.]

To your protection I commend me, gods.
From fairies and the tempters of the night

Guard me, beseech ye. 10

[Sleeps. Iachimo comes from the trunk.

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'erlabour'd sense

Repairs itself by rest. Our Tarquin thus
Did softly press the rushes, ere he waken'd
The chastity he wounded. Cytherea !

How bravely thou becom'st thy bed, fresh lily, 15

And whiter than the sheets ! That I might touch !

But kiss one kiss ! Rubies unparagon'd,
How dearly they do 't ! 'T is her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus. The flame o' the taper

Bows toward her, and would under-peep her lids 20

To see the enclosed lights, now canopied
Under these windows white and azure, lac'd

With blue of heaven's own tinct. But my design,
To note the chamber. I will write all down :
Such and such pictures ; there the window ;
such

The adornment of her bed ; the arras ; figures,
Why, such and such ; and the contents o' the story.

Ah, but some natural notes about her body,
Above ten thousand meaner moveables
Would testify, to enrich mine inventory. 30
O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her !
And be her sense but as a monument,
Thus in a chapel lying ! Come off, come off !

[Taking off her bracelet.]

As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard !
'T is mine ; and this will witness outwardly, 35
As strongly as the conscience does within,
To the madding of her lord. On her left breast
A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops
I' the bottom of a cowslip. Here's a voucher, Stronger than ever law could make ; this secret 40

Will force him think I have pick'd the lock and ta'en

The treasure of her honour. No more. To what end ?

Why should I write this down, that's riveted, Screw'd to my memory ? She hath been reading
late

The tale of Tereus ; here the leaf's turn'd
down 45

Where Philomel gave up. I have enough.
To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it.
Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that dawning

May bare the raven's eye ! I lodge in fear ;
Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here.

[Clock strikes.]

One, two three ; time, time ! 51
[Goes into the trunk.]

SCENE III. [An ante-chamber adjoining Imogen's apartments.]

Enter CLOTEN and LORDS.

1. Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turn'd up ace.

Clo. It would make any man cold to lose. 4

1. Lord. But not every man patient after the noble temper of your lordship. You are most hot and furious when you win.

Clo. Winning will put any man into courage. If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough. It's almost morning, is it not ? 10

1. Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come. I am advised to give her music o' mornings ; they say it will penetrate. 14

Enter Musicians.

Come on ; tune. If you can penetrate her with your fingering, so ; we'll try with tongue too.
If none will do, let her remain ; but I'll never give o'er. First, a very excellent good-conceited thing ; after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it ; and then let her consider. 20

SONG.

Hark, hark ! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phœbus gins arise

His steeds to water at those springs

On chalic'd flowers that lies ;

And winking Mary-buds begin 25

To ope their golden eyes ;

With every thing that pretty is,

My lady sweet, arise,

Arise, arise. 30

[Clo.] So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better ; if it do not, it is a vice in her ears, which horse-hairs and calves'-guts, nor the voice of unpaved eunuch to boot, can never amend. 35

[Exeunt Musicians.]

Enter CYMBELINE and QUEEN.

2. Lord. Here comes the King.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late, for that's the reason I was up so early. He cannot choose but take this service I have done fatherly.
— Good morrow to your Majesty and to my gracious mother ! 41

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern
daughter ?

Will she not forth ?

Clo. I have assail'd her with musics, but she vouchsafes no notice. 45

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new ;
She hath not yet forgot him. Some more time
Must wear the print of his remembrance on't,
And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the King,
Who lets go by no vantages that may 50

Prefer you to his daughter. Frame yourself
To orderly soliciting, and be friended

With aptness of the season ; make denials

Increase your services ; so seem as if

You were inspir'd to do those duties which 55

You tender to her, that you in all obey her,

Save when command to your dismissal tends,
And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless ! not so.

[Enter a MESSENGER.]

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome ;

The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy fellow, 60

Albeit he comes on angry purpose now ;

But that's no fault of his. We must receive
him

According to the honour of his sender ;

And towards himself, his goodness foreshadowed on
us,

We must extend our notice. Our dear son, 65

When you have given good morning to your mistress,

Attend the Queen and us ; we shall have need

To employ you towards this Roman. Come, our queen. [Exeunt [all but Cloten].]

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her ; if not,
 Let her lie still and dream. [Knocks.] By your leave, ho ! 70
 I know her women are about her ; what
 If I do line one of their hands ? 'Tis gold
 Which buys admittance ; oft it doth ; yea, and makes Diana's rangers false themselves, yield up
 Their deer to the stand o' the stealer ; and 't is gold 75
 Which makes the true man kill'd and saves the thief,
 Nay, sometime hangs both thief and true man.
 What
 Can it not do and undo ? I will make
 One of her women lawyer to me, for
 I yet not understand the case myself. 80
 By your leave. [Knocks.]

Enter a LADY.

Lady. Who's there that knocks ?
Clo. A gentleman.
Lady. No more ?
Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.
Lady. That's more
 Than some, whose tailors are as dear as yours,
 Can justly boast of. What's your lordship's pleasure ? 85
Clo. Your lady's person. Is she ready ?
Lady. Ay,
 To keep her chamber.
Clo. There is gold for you ;
 Sell me your good report.
Lady. How ! my good name ? Or to report of you
 What I shall think is good ? — The Princess ! 90

Enter IMOGEN.

Clo. Good morrow, fairest. Sister, your sweet hand. [Exit Lady.]
Imo. Good morrow, sir. You lay out too much pains
 For purchasing but trouble. The thanks I give
 Is telling you that I am poor of thanks
 And scarce can spare them.
Clo. Still, I swear I love you.
Imo. If you but said so, 't were as deep with me. 95
 If you swear still, your recompense is still
 That I regard it not.
Clo. This is no answer.
Imo. But that you shall not say I yield being silent,
 I would not speak. I pray you, spare me.
 Faith, 100
 I shall unfold equal discourtesy
 To your best kindness. One of your great knowing
 Should learn, being taught, forbearance.
Clo. To leave you in your madness, 't were my sin.
 I will not. 105
Imo. Fools are not mad folks.
Clo. Do you call me fool ?
Imo. As I am mad, I do.
 If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad ;

That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir,
 You put me to forget a lady's manners, 110
 By being so verbal ; and learn now, for all,
 That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce,
 By the very truth of it, I care not for you,
 And am so near the lack of charity
 To accuse myself I hate you ; which I had rather 115
 You felt than make 't my boast.
Clo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For The contract you pretend with that base wretch,
 One bred of alms and foster'd with cold dishes,
 With scraps o' the court, it is no contract,
 none ; 120
 And though it be allowed in meaner parties —
 Yet who than he more mean ? — to knit their souls —

On whom there is no more dependency
 But brats and beggary, — in self-figur'd knot,
 Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by 125
 The consequence o' the crown, and must not foil
 The precious note of it with a base slave,
 A hiding for a livery, a squire's cloth,
 A pantler, not so eminent.

Imo. Profane fellow !
 Wert thou the son of Jupiter and no more 130
 But what thou art besides, thou wert too base
 To be his groom. Thou wert dignified enough,
 Even to the point of envy, if 't were made
 Comparative for your virtues, to be styl'd 134
 The under-hangman of his kingdom, and hated
 For being preferr'd so well.

Clo. The south-fog rot him !
Imo. He never can meet more mischance than come
 To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest garment
 That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer
 In my respect than all the hairs above thee, 140
 Were they all made such men. How now ?
 [Missing the bracelet.] Pisanio !

Enter PISANIO.

Clo. "His garment !" Now the devil —
Imo. To Dorothy my woman hie thee presently —
Clo. "His garment !" 145
Imo. I am sprited with a fool, Frighted, and ang'r'd worse. Go bid my wo-
 man
 Search for a jewel that too casually Hath left mine arm. It was thy master's.
 Shrew me,
 If I would lose it for a revenue
 Of any king's in Europe. I do think
 I saw 't this morning ; confident I am 150
 Last night 't was on mine arm ; I kiss'd it.
 I hope it be not gone to tell my lord
 That I kiss aught but he.

Pis. 'T will not be lost.
Imo. I hope so ; go and search.
 [Exit Pisanio.]
Clo. You have abus'd me,
 "His meanest garment !" 155

Imo. Ay, I said so, sir. 155
 If you will make 't an action, call witness to 't.
Clo. I will inform your father.
Imo. Your mother too.
 She's my good lady, and will conceive, I hope,
 But the worst of me. So, I leave you, sir,
 To the worst of discontent. [Exit.
Clo. I'll be reveng'd.
 "His meanest garment!" Well. [Exit. 161

SCENE IV. [Rome. Philario's house.]

Enter POSTHUMUS and PHILARIO.

Post. Fear it not, sir. I would I were so sure
 To win the King as I am bold her honour
 Will remain hers.

Phi. What means do you make to him?
Post. Not any, but abide the change of time,
 Quake in the present winter's state, and wish
 That warmer days would come. In these fear'd hopes, 6

I barely gratify your love; they failing,
 I must die much your debtor.

Phi. Your very goodness and your company
 O'erpay all I can do. By this, your king 10
 Hath heard of great Augustus. Caius Lucius
 Will do's commission throughly; and I think He'll grant the tribute, send the arrearages,
 Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
 Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe, 15
 Statist though I am none, nor like to be,
 That this will prove a war; and you shall hear

The legion now in Gallia sooner landed
 In our not-fearing Britain than have tidings
 Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen 20
 Are men more order'd than when Julius Cæsar Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage

Worthy his frowning at. Their discipline,
 Now wing-led with their courages, will make known

To their approvers they are people such 25
 That mend upon the world.

Enter IACHIMO.

Phi. See! Iachimo!

Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land;

And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
 To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, sir.
Post. I hope the briefness of your answer made 30

The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady
 Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon.

Post. And therewithal the best; or let her beauty

Look through a casement to allure false hearts
 And be false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you. 35

Post. Their tenour good, I trust.

Iach. 'T is very like.

[Phi.] Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court
 When you were there?

Iach. He was expected then,
 But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet.
 Sparkles this stone as it was wont, or is 't not 40
 Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I have lost it,
 I should have lost the worth of it in gold.

I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy
 A second night of such sweet shortness which
 Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won. 45

Post. The stone's too hard to come by.

Iach. Not a whit,

Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir,
 Your loss your sport. I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must,
 If you keep covenant. Had I not brought 50
 The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
 We were to question farther; but I now
 Profess myself the winner of her honour,
 Together with your ring; and not the wronger
 Of her or you, having proceeded but 55
 By both your wills.

Post. If you can make 't apparent
 That you have tasted her in bed, my hand
 And ring is yours; if not, the foul opinion
 You had of her pure honour gains or loses
 Your sword or mine, or masterless leaves both 60
 To who shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my circumstances,
 Being so near the truth as I will make them,
 Must first induce you to believe; whose strength
 I will confirm with oath, which, I doubt not, You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find 65

You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Iach. First, her bedchamber, —
 Where, I confess, I slept not, but profess Had that was well worth watching—it was hang'd

With tapestry of silk and silver; the story
 Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman, 70
 And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
 The press of boats or pride; a piece of work
 So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
 In workmanship and value; which I wonder'd
 Could be so rarely and exactly wrought, 75
 Since the true life on 't was —

Post. This is true;
 And this you might have heard of here, by me,
 Or by some other.

Iach. More particulars
 Must justify my knowledge.

Post. So they must,
 Or do your honour injury.

Iach. The chimney 80
 Is south the chamber, and the chimney-piece
 Chaste Dian bathing. Never saw I figures
 So likely to report themselves. The cutter
 Was as another Nature, dumb; outwent her,
 Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing 85
 Which you might from relation likewise reap,
 Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Iach. The roof o' the chamber

With golden cherubins is fretted. Her andirons —

I had forgot them — were two winking Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely ⁹⁰
Depending on their brands.

Post. This is her honour!
Let it be granted you have seen all this — and praise

Be given to your remembrance — the description

Of what is in her chamber nothing saves

The wager you have laid.

Iach. Then, if you can, ⁹⁵
[Showing the bracelet.]

Be pale. I beg but leave to air this jewel; see!
And now 't is up again. It must be married
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

Post. Jove!
Once more let me behold it. Is it that
Which I left with her?

Iach. Sir — I thank her — that.
She stripp'd it from her arm. I see her yet, ¹⁰¹
Her pretty action did outsell her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too. She gave it me, and said

She priz'd it once.

Post. May be she pluck'd it off
To send it me.

Iach. She writes so to you, doth she?
Post. O, no, no, no! 't is true. Here, take this too; ¹⁰⁶ [Gives the ring.]

It is a basilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on 't. Let there be no honour
Where there is beauty; truth, where semblance; love,

Where there's another man. The vows of women ¹¹⁰

Of no more bondage be, to where they are
made,

Than they are to their virtues, which is nothing.

O, above measure false!

Phi. Have patience, sir,
And take your ring again; 't is not yet won. ¹¹⁵
It may be probable she lost it; or Who knows if one of her women, being corrupted,

Hath stolen it from her?

Post. Very true;
And so, I hope, he came by 't. Back my ring.
Render to me some corporal sign about her,
More evident than this; for this was stolen. ¹²⁰

Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears.

'T is true, — nay, keep the ring — 't is true. I am sure

She would not lose it. Her attendants are All sworn and honourable. They induced to steal it! ¹²⁵

And by a stranger! No, he hath enjoy'd her.
The cognizance of her incontinency
Is this. She hath bought the name of whore thus dearly.

There, take thy hire; and all the fiends of hell
Divide themselves between you!

Phi. Sir, be patient.

This is not strong enough to be believ'd ¹²¹
Of one persuaded well of —

Post. Never talk on 't;
She hath been colted by him.

Iach. If you seek
For further satisfying, under her breast —
Worthy the pressing — lies a mole, right proud ¹³⁶

Of that most delicate lodging. By my life,
I kiss'd it; and it gave me present hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember

This stain upon her?

Post. Ay, and it doth confirm Another stain, as big as hell can hold, ¹⁴⁰
Were there no more but it.

Iach. Will you hear more?
Post. Spare your arithmetic; never count
the turns;

Once, and a million!

Iach. I'll be sworn —
Post. No swearing.

If you will swear you have not done 't, you lie;
And I will kill thee, if thou dost deny ¹⁴⁵
Thou'st made me cuckold.

Iach. I'll deny nothing.
Post. O, that I had her here, to tear her limbmeal!

I will go there and do 't, if the court, before
Her father. I'll do something — ¹⁵⁰ [Exit.

Phi. Quite besides
The government of patience! You have won.

Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath

He hath against himself.

Iach. With all my heart.
[Exit.

[SCENE V. Another room in Philario's house.]

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women

Must be half-workers? We are all bastards;
And that most venerable man which I Did call my father, was I know not where When I was stamp'd. Some coiner with his tools ⁵

Made me a counterfeit; yet my mother seem'd
The Dian of that time. So doth my wife
The nonpareil of this. O, vengeance, vengeance!

Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd
And pray'd me oft forbearance; did it with ¹⁰
A pudency so rosy the sweet view on 't Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her

As chaste as unsunn'd snow. O, all the devils!
This yellow Iachimo, in an hour, — was 't
not? —

Or less, — at first? — perchance he spoke not,
but, ¹⁵

Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one,
Cried "O!" and mounted; found no opposition

But what he look'd for should oppose and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find

 out
 The woman's part in me! For there's no motion 20
 That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
 It is the woman's part; be it lying, note it,
 The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers;
 Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenges,
 hers;
 Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain, 25
 Nice longing, slanders, mutability,
 All faults that may be nam'd, nay, that hell
 knows,
 Why, hers, in part or all; but rather, all.
 For even to vice
 They are not constant, but are changing still 30
 One vice, but of a minute old, for one Not half so old as that. I'll write against
 them,
 Detest them, curse them; yet 't is greater skill
 In a true hate, to pray they have their will.
 The very devils cannot plague them better. 35
 [Exit.]

ACT III

SCENE I. [Britain. A hall in Cymbeline's
 palace.]

Enter in state, CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, and Lords at one door, and at another, CAIUS LUCIUS and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Cæsar
 with us?

Luc. When Julius Cæsar, whose remembrance yet

Lives in men's eyes and will to ears and tongues
 Be theme and hearing ever, was in this Britain
 And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle, — 5
 Famous in Cæsar's praises, no whit less
 Than in his feats deserving it — for him
 And his succession granted Rome a tribute, Yearly three thousand pounds, which by thee lately
 Is left untender'd.

Queen. And, to kill the marvel, 10
 Shall be so ever.

Olo. There be many Cæsars,
 Ere such another Julius. Britain is A world by itself; and we will nothing pay
 For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity
 Which then they had to take from 's, to resume 15

We have again. Remember, sir, my liege,
 The kings your ancestors, together with
 The natural bravery of your isle, which stands
 As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in
 With rocks unscalable and roaring waters, 20
 With sands that will not bear your enemies' boats,

But suck them up to the topmast. A kind of conquest

Cæsar made here, but made not here his brag
 Of "Came and saw and overcame." With shame—

The first that ever touch'd him — he was carried 25
 From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping—

Poor ignorant baubles! — on our terrible seas,
 Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd

As easily 'gainst our rocks; for joy whereof
 The famed Cassibelan, who was once at point— 30

O giglot fortune! — to master Cæsar's sword,
 Made Lud's town with rejoicing fires bright
 And Britons strut with courage. 33

Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid. Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no more such Cæsars. Other of them may have crook'd noses, but to owe such straight arms, none. 35

Cym. Son, let your mother end. 36

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan. I do not say I am one, but I have a hand. Why tribute? Why should we pay tribute? If Cæsar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now. 40

Cym. You must know,
 Till the injurious Romans did extort
 This tribute from us, we were free. Cæsar's ambition,
 Which swell'd so much that it did almost stretch 45

The sides of the world, against all colour here
 Did put the yoke upon 's; which to shake off
 Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
 Ourselves to be. We do say then to Cæsar,
 Our ancestor was that Mulmutius which 55
 Ordain'd our laws, whose use the sword of Cæsar

Hath too much mangled; whose repair and franchise
 Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed, Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulmutius made our laws,

Who was the first of Britain which did put 60
 His brows within a golden crown and call'd
 Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
 That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar — Cæsar, that hath more kings his servants than Thyself domestic officers — thine enemy. 65
 Receive it from me, then: War and confusion
 In Cæsar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee;
 I look

For fury not to be resisted. Thus defied,
 I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius.
 Thy Cæsar knighted me; my youth I spent 70
 Much under him; of him I gather'd honour,
 Which he to seek of me again, perforce,
 Behoves me keep at utterance. I am perfect
 That the Pannonians and Dalmatians for Their liberties are now in arms, a precedent
 Which not to read would show the Britons
 cold. 75

So Cæsar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak.

Clo. His Majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day or two, or longer. If you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle; if you beat us out of it, it is yours; if you fall in the adventure, our crowns shall fare the better for you; and there's an end. 54

Luc. So, sir.

Cym. I know your master's pleasure and he mine:

All the remain is "Welcome!" [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [Another room in the palace.]

Enter PISANIO, reading of a letter.

Pis. How! of adultery? Wherefore write you not

What monster's her accuser? Leonatus!
O master! what a strange infection
Is fall'n into thy ear! What false Italian,
As poisonous-tongu'd as handed, hath prevail'd
On thy too ready hearing? Disloyal? No! 6
She's punish'd for her truth, and undergoes,
More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults
As would take in some virtue. O my master!
Thy mind to her is now as low as were 10
Thy fortunes. How! that I should murder
her?

Upon the love and truth and vows which I Have made to thy command? I, her? Her blood?

If it be so to do good service, never Let me be counted serviceable. How look I, 15
That I should seem to lack humanity
So much as this fact comes to? [Reading.]

"Do't; the letter

That I have sent her, by her own command
Shall give thee opportunity." O damn'd paper!
Black as the ink that's on thee! Senseless bauble, 20

Art thou a fedary for this act, and look'st
So virgin-like without? Lo, here she comes.

Enter IMOGEN.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Imo. How now, Pisanio!

Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord.

Imo. Who? Thy lord? That is my lord,
Leonatus! 25

O, learn'd indeed were that astronomer
That knew the stars as I his characters;
He'd lay the future open. You good gods,
That what is here contain'd relish of love, 30
Of my lord's health, of his content, — yet not
That we two are asunder; let that grieve him:
Some griefs are medicinal; that is one of
them,

For it doth physic love: of his content,
All but in that! Good wax, thy leave. Blest be
You bees that make these locks of counsel!
Lovers 35

And men in dangerous bonds pray not alike;
Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young Cupid's tables. Good news,
gods! 39

[Reads.] "Justice, and your father's wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would even renew me with your eyes. Take notice that I am in Cambria, at Milford-Haven; what your own love will out of this advise you, follow. So he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his vow, and your increasing in love

LEONATUS POSTHUMUS." 49

O, for a horse with wings! Hear'st thou, Pisanio?

He is at Milford-Haven. Read, and tell me how far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs May plod it in a week, why may not I Glide thither in a day? Then, true Pisanio, — Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st, — 55

O, let me bate, — but not like me — yet long'st,
But in a fainter kind; — O, not like me,
For mine's beyond beyond — say, and speak thick, —

Love's counsellor should fill the bores of hearing, 59

To the smothering of the sense — how far it is
To this same blessed Milford; and by the way
Tell me how Wales was made so happy as
To inherit such a haven; but first of all,
How we may steal from hence, and for the gap
That we shall make in time, from our hence-going 65

And our return, to excuse. But first, how get hence?

Why should excuse be born or ere begot?
We'll talk of that hereafter. Prithee, speak,
How many score of miles may we well ride
'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score 'twixt sun and sun,
Madam, 's enough for you, and too much too. 71

Imo. Why, one that rode to 's execution,
man,

Could never go so slow. I have heard of riding wagers,

Where horses have been nimbler than the sands
That run i' the clock's behalf. But this is fool-
ery. 75

Go bid my woman feign a sickness, say
She'll home to her father; and provide me presently

A riding-suit, no costlier than would fit

A franklin's housewife.

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man, nor here, nor
there, 80

Nor what ensues, but have a fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I prithee;
Do as I bid thee. There's no more to say.
Accessible is none but Milford way. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [Wales: a mountainous country with a cave.]

Enter [from the cave] BELARIUS; GUIDERIUS and ARVIRAGUS [following].

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such
Whose roof's as low as ours! Stoop, boys; this gate
Instructs you how to adore the heavens and bows you

To a morning's holy office. The gates of monarchs
Are arch'd so high that giants may jet through
And keep their impious turbans on, without Good morrow to the sun. Hail, thou fair
heaven!

We house i' the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
As prouder livers do.

Gui. Hail, heaven!
Arr. Hail, heaven!

Bel. Now for our mountain sport. Up to yond hill!
Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats.
Consider,

When you above perceive me like a crow,
That it is place which lessens and sets off;
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you

Of courts of princes, of the tricks in war;
This service is not service, so being done,
But being so allowed. To apprehend thus,
Draws us a profit from all things we see;
And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O, this life
Is nobler than attending for a check,
Richer than doing nothing for a bribe,
Prouder than rustling in unpaid-for silk.
Such gains the cap of him that makes him
fine,

Yet keeps his book uncross'd. No life to ours.

Gui. Out of your proof you speak; we, poor unfledg'd,
Have never wing'd from view o' the nest, nor know not

What air's from home. Haply this life is best,
If quiet life be best; sweeter to you
That have a sharper known; well correspond-
ing

With your stiff age; but unto us it is
A cell of ignorance, travelling a-bed,
A prison of a debtor that not dares
To stride a limit.

Arr. What should we speak of
When we are old as you? When we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how,
In this our pinching cave, shall we discourse
The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing.

We are beastly; subtle as the fox for prey,
Like warlike as the wolf for what we eat.
Our valour is to chase what flies. Our cage
We make a choir, as doth the prison'd bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak!
Did you but know the city's usuries
And felt them knowingly; the art o' the court,
As hard to leave as keep; whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slipp'ry that
The fear's as bad as falling; the toil o' the
war,

A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I' the name of fame and honour; which dies i'
the search,

And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph
As record of fair act; nay, many times,
Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse,

Must curtsy at the censure; — O boys, this story

The world may read in me. My body's mark'd
With Roman swords, and my report was once
First with the best of note. Cymbeline lov'd
me,

And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off. Then was I as a tree Whose boughs did bend with fruit; but in one
night,

A storm or robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,

And left me bare to weather.

Gui. Uncertain favour!

Bel. My fault being nothing — as I have told you oft —

But that two villains, whose false oaths prevail'd

Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline
I was confederate with the Romans; so
Followed my banishment, and this twenty years
This rock and these demesnes have been my
world,

Where I have liv'd at honest freedom, paid
More pious debts to heaven than in all
The fore-end of my time. But up to the mountains!

This is not hunters' language. He that strikes
The venison first shall be the lord o' the feast;
To him the other two shall minister;

And we will fear no poison, which attends
In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys.

[Exeunt [Guilderius and Arviragus].]

How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature!

These boys know little they are sons to the King,

Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.

They think they are mine; and, though train'd up thus meanly,

I' the cave wherein they bow, their thoughts
do hit

The roofs of palaces, and nature prompts them
In simple and low things to prince it much

Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,
The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, who

The King his father call'd Guilderius, — Jove!
When on my three-foot stool I sit and tell

The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly
out

Into my story; say, "Thus mine enemy fell,
And thus I set my foot on 's neck;" even then

The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats,

Strains his young nerves and puts himself in posture

That acts my words. The younger brother,
Cadwal,

Once Arviragus, in as like a figure,
Strikes life into my speech and shows much

more

His own conceiving. — Hark, the game is rousd! —

O Cymbeline! heaven and my conscience knows
Thou didst unjustly banish me; whereon,
At three and two years old, I stole these babes;

Thinking to bar thee of succession, as Thou rett'st me of my lands. Euriphile, Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,
And every day do honour to her grave. 105
Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,
They take for natural father. — The game is up.
[Exit.]

SCENE IV. [Country near Milford-Haven.]

Enter PISANIO and IMOGEN.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse, the place
Was near at hand. Ne'er long'd my mother so
To see me first, as I have now. Pisanio! man!
Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind,
That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh
From the inward of thee? One, but painted
thus,

Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
Beyond self-explication. Put thyself
Into a haviour of less fear, ere wildness Vanquish my staid senses. What's the matter? 10

Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with
A look untender? If 't be summer news,
Smile to 't before; if winterly, thou need'st
But keep that countenance still. My husband's hand!

That drug-damn'd Italy hath out-craftied him,
And he's at some hard point. Speak, man!
Thy tongue 16

May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you, read;
And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
The most disdain'd of fortune. 20

Imo. (Reads.) "Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof lies bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises, but from proof as strong as my grief and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part thou, Pisanio, must act for [25 me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life. I shall give thee opportunity at Milford-Haven. She hath my letter for the purpose; where, if thou fear to strike and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pander to her dishonour and equally to me disloyal." 33

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword?

The paper
Hath cut her throat already. No, 'tis slander, Whose edge is sharper than the sword, whose
tongue 36

Outvenoms all the worms of Nile, whose breath
Rides on the posting winds and doth belie
All corners of the world. Kings, queens, and states,

Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave 40
This viperous slander enters. What cheer,
madam?

Imo. False to his bed! What! is it to be false

To lie in watch there and to think on him;

To weep 'twixt clock and clock; if sleep charge
nature,

To break it with a fearful dream of him 45
And cry myself awake? That's false to 's bed, is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady!

Imo. I false! Thy conscience witness! —
Iachimo,

Thou didst accuse him of incontinency;
Thou then look'dst like a villain; now methinks 50

Thy favour's his good enough. Some jay of Italy Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd
him!

Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion;
And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls,
I must be ripp'd. — To pieces with me! — O, 55
Men's vows are women's traitors! All good seeming,

By thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought
Put on for villainy; not born where 't grows,
But worn a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men, being heard like false Æneas, 60

Were in his time thought false, and Sinon's
weeping

Did scandal many a holy tear, took pity
From most true wretchedness; so thou, Posthu-
mus,

Wilt lay the heaven on all proper men;
Goodly and gallant shall be false and perjurd 65
From thy great fail. — Come, fellow, be thou honest!

Do thou thy master's bidding. When thou see'st him,

A little witness my obedience. Look!
I draw the sword myself. Take it, and hit

The innocent mansion of my love, my heart. 70
Fear not; 't is empty of all things but grief.

Thy master is not there, who was indeed
The riches of it. Do his bidding; strike.

Thou mayst be valiant in a better cause, 75
But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument!
Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die;
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art

No servant of thy master's. Against self-slaughter

There is a prohibition so divine
That cravens my weak hand. Come, here's my heart, 80

(Something's afore 't, — soft, soft! we'll no defence.)

Obedient as the scabbard. What is here?

The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus,
All turn'd to heresy? Away, away,

Corruptors of my faith! you shall no more 85
Be stomachers to my heart. Thus may poor
fools

Believe false teachers. Though those that are betray'd

Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.

And thou, Posthumus, [thou] that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the King my father, 90

And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness; and I grieve myself
To think, when thou shalt be disedg'd by her
That now thou tirest on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me. Prithce, dispatch!
The lamb entreats the butcher. Where's thy knife?

Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady,
Since I receiv'd command to do this business
I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do 't, and to bed then.

Pis. I'll wake mine eye-balls [out] first.

Imo. Wherefore then
Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many miles with a pretence? This place?
Mine action and thine own? Our horses'
labour?

The time inviting thee? The perturb'd court,
For my being absent? whereunto I never Purpose return. Why hast thou gone so far,
To be unbent when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
The elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time
To lose so bad employment; in the which I have consider'd of a course. Good lady,
Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak.
I have heard I am a strumpet, and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater
wound,

Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.
Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.

Imo. Most like;
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither;
But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be
But that my master is abus'd.
Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Imo. Some Roman courtesan.

Pis. No, on my life.
I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody sign of it; for 't is commanded
I should do so. You shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.

Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? Where bide?
How live?

Or in my life what comfort, when I am
Dead to my husband?

Pis. If you 'll back to the court —
Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado
With that harsh, [nothing] noble, simple nothing,

That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.

Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.

Imo. Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day,
night,

Are they not but in Britain? I' the world's volume

Our Britain seems as of it, but not in 't;
In a great pool a swan's nest. Prithce, think There's lives out of Britain.

Pis. I am most glad
You think of other place. The ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow. Now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is, and but disguise
That which, to appear itself, must not yet be
But by self-danger, you should tread a course Pretty and full of view; yea, haply, near
The residence of Posthumus; so nigh at least
That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear
As truly as he moves.

Imo. O, for such means,
Though peril to my modesty, not death on 't,
I would adventure.

Pis. Well, then, here's the point.
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience; fear and niceness —
The handmaids of all women, or, more truly, Woman it pretty self — into a waggish cour-
age;

Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrelous as the weasel; nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it — but, O, the harder heart!
Alack, no remedy! — to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan, and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.

Imo. Nay, be brief.
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.

Pis. First, make yourself but like one.
Fore-thinking this, I have already fit —
'T is in my cloak-bag — doublet, hat, hose, all That answer to them. Would you in their serving,

And with what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, 'fore noble
Lucius

Present yourself, desire his service; tell him
Wherein you're happy, — which will make him
know

If that his head have ear in music, — doubtless

With joy he will embrace you, for he's honourable,
And doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad,

You have me, rich; and I will never fail
Beginning nor supplyment.

Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Prithce, away.
There's more to be consider'd; but we'll even

All that good time will give us. This attempt

I am soldier to, and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I prithce.

Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short
farewell,
Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of

Your carriage from the court. My noble mistress,
Here is a box; — I had it from the Queen; —
What's in 't is precious: If you are sick at sea,
Or stomach-qualm'd at land, a dram of this
Will drive away distemper. To some shade,
And fit you to your manhood. May the gods
Direct you to the best!

Imo. Amen! I thank thee.
[Exeunt [severally].]

SCENE V. [A room in Cymbeline's palace.]

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, LUCIUS, Lords [and ATTENDANTS].

Cym. Thus far; and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal sir.
My emperor hath wrote, I must from hence;
And am right sorry that I must report ye
My master's enemy.

Cym. Our subjects, sir,
Will not endure his yoke; and for ourself
To show less sovereignty than they, must needs
Appear unkinglike.

Luc. So, sir. I desire of you
A conduct over-land to Milford-Haven.

Madam, all joy befall your Grace, and you!

Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office;

The due of honour in no point omit.

So farewell, noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord.
Clo. Receive it friendly; but from this time
forth

I wear it as your enemy.

Luc. Sir, the event
Is yet to name the winner. Fare you well.

Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords,

Till he have cross'd the Severn. Happiness!

[Exeunt Lucius and Lords.]

Queen. He goes hence frowning; but it honours us

That we have given him cause.

Clo. 'Tis all the better;
Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the Emperor

How it goes here. It fits us therefore ripely
Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness.
The powers that he already hath in Gallia
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves

His war for Britain.

Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business,
But must be look'd to speedily and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen, Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd

Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day. She looks us like
A thing more made of malice than of duty;
We have noted it. Call her before us, for
We have been too slight in surffance.

[Exit an attendant.]

Queen.

Royal sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd
Hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord,
'Tis time must do. Beseech your Majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her; she's a lady
So tender of rebukes that words are strokes
And strokes death to her.

Re-enter ATTENDANT.

Cym. Where is she, sir? How Can her contempt be answer'd?

Atten. Please you, sir,
Her chambers are all lock'd; and there's no
answer

That will be given to the loudest noise we make.

Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her,
She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close,
Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you,
Which daily she was bound to proffer. This She wish'd me to make known; but our great court

Made me to blame in memory.

Cym. Her doors lock'd? Which
Not seen of late? Grant, heavens, that which I fear

Prove false!

[Exit.]

Queen. Son, I say, follow the King.

Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant,

I have not seen these two days.

[Exit.]

Queen [to attendant]. Go, look after Pisanio, thou, that stands so for Posthumus!
He hath a drug of mine; I pray his absence
Proceed by swallowing that, for he believes
It is a thing most precious. But for her,
Where is she gone? Haply, despair hath seiz'd
her,
Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown

To her desir'd Posthumus. Gone she is
To death or to dishonour; and my end
Can make good use of either. She being down,
I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter CLOTEN.

How now, my son!

Clo. 'Tis certain she is fled.
Go in and cheer the King. He rages; none
Dare come about him.

Queen. [Aside.] All the better. May
This night forestall him of the coming day!

[Exit.]

Clo. I love and hate her; for she's fair and royal,

And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite

Than lady, ladies, woman; from every one
The best she hath, and she, of all compounded, Outsells them all. I love her therefore; but Disdaining me and throwing favours on

The low Posthumus slanders so her judgement
That what's else rare is chok'd; and in that point

I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed,
To be reveng'd upon her. For when fools Shall—

Enter PISANIO.

Who is here? What, are you packing, sirrah? Come hither. Ah, you precious pandar! Villain,

Where is thy lady? In a word; or else Thou art straightway with the fiends.

Pis. O, good my lord!

Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter, I will not ask again. Close villain, I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus, From whose so many weights of baseness cannot

A dram of worth be drawn?

Pis. Alas, my lord, How can she be with him? When was she miss'd?

He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer. No further halting. Satisfy me home What is become of her.

Pis. O, my all-worthy lord!

Clo. All-worthy villain! Discover where thy mistress is at once, At the next word. No more of worthy lord! Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then, sir, This paper is the history of my knowledge Touching her flight. [Presenting a letter.]

Clo. Let's see 't. I will pursue her Even to Augustus' throne.

Pis. [Aside.] Or this, or perish. She's far enough; and what he learns by this May prove his travel, not her danger.

Clo. Hum! Pis. [Aside.] I'll write to my lord she's dead. O Imogen, Safe mayst thou wander, safe return again!

Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know 't. Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments wherein I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry, that is, what villainy soe'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly, I would think thee an honest man. Thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand; here's my purse. Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither. Let it be thy first service;

Pis. I shall, my lord.

[Exit.]

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven! — I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember 't anon; — even there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee. I would these garments were come. She said upon a time — the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart — that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her, — first kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt, — he on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body; and when my lust hath dined, — which, as I say, to vex her I will execute in the clothes that she so prais'd, — to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despis'd me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter PISANIO [with the clothes].

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Clo. How long is 't since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee; the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee. My revenge is now at Milford; would I had wings to follow it! Come, and be true.

Pis. Thou bid'st me to my loss; for true to thee

Were to prove false, which I will never be, To him that is most true. To Milford go, And find not her whom thou pursuest. Flow, flow, You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed

Be cross'd with slowness; labour be his need!

[Exit.]

SCENE VI. [Wales. Before the cave of Belarius.]

Enter IMOGEN, alone [in boy's clothes].

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one. I have tir'd myself, and for two nights together Have made the ground my bed. I should be sick,

But that my resolution helps me. Milford, When from the mountain-top Pisanio show'd thee,

Thou wast within a ken. O Jove! I think Foundations fly the wretched; such, I mean, Where they should be reliev'd. Two beggars told me

I could not miss my way: will poor folks lie, That have afflictions on them, knowing 't is A punishment or trial? Yes; no wonder, When rich ones scarce tell true. To lapse in fulness

Is sorer than to lie for need; and falsehood

Is worse in kings than beggars. My dear lord !
Thou art one o' the false ones. Now I think on
thee, 15

My hunger's gone ; but even before, I was
At point to sink for food. But what is this ?
Here is a path to 't. 'T is some savage hold.
I were best not call ; I dare not call ; yet famine,

Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant. 30

Plenty and peace breeds cowards ; hardness ever
Of hardness is mother. Ho ! who's here ?
If anything that's civil, speak ; if savage, Take or lend. Ho ! No answer ? Then I'll enter.

Best draw my sword ; and if mine enemy 25
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on 't.

Such a foe, good heavens ! [Exit [to the cave].]

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRA-GUS.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman and

Are master of the feast. Cadwal and I Will play the cook and servant ; 't is our match. 30

The sweat of industry would dry and die,
But for the end it works to. Come ; our stomachs

Will make what's homely savoury ; weariness

Can snore upon the flint, when resty sloth Finds the down pillow hard. Now peace be here, ■

Poor house, that keep'st thyself !

Gui. I am thoroughly weary.

Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.

Gui. There is cold meat i' the cave ; we'll browse on that,

Whilst that we have kill'd be cook'd.

Bel. [Looking into the cave.] Stay ; come not in.
But that it eats our victuals, I should think 41
Here were a fairy.

Gui. What's the matter, sir ?

Bel. By Jupiter, an angel ! or, if not,
An earthly paragon ! Behold divineness
No elder than a boy ! 45

Re-enter IMOGEN.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not.
Before I enter'd here I call'd, and thought
To have begg'd or bought what I have took.

Good troth,
I have stolen nought, nor would not, though I had found

Gold strew'd i' the floor. Here's money for my meat. 50

I would have left it on the board so soon
As I had made my meal, and parted with Prayers for the provider.

Gui. Money, youth ?

Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt !
As 't is no better reckon'd, but of those 55
Who worship dirty gods.

Imo. I see you're angry.

Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died had I not made it.

Bel. Whither bound ?

Imo. To Milford-Haven.

Bel. What's your name ? 60

Imo. Fidele, sir. I have a kinsman who Is bound for Italy ; he embark'd at Milford ;
To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,

I am fall'n in this offence.

Bel. Prithee, fair youth,
Think us no churls, nor measure our good minds
By this rude place we live in. Well encoun-ter'd ! 65

'T is almost night : you shall have better cheer
Ere you depart ; and thanks to stay and eat it.
Boys, bid him welcome.

Gui. Were you a woman, youth,
I should woo hard but be your groom. In honesty, 70

I bid for you as I'd buy.

Arv. I'll make 't my comfort
He is a man ; I'll love him as my brother ;
And such a welcome as I'd give to him
After long absence, such is yours. Most welcome !

Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends.

Imo. 'Mongst friends,
If brothers. [Aside.] Would it had been so,
that they 75

Had been my father's sons ! Then had my prize
Been less, and so more equal ballasting
To thee, Posthumus.

Bel. He wrings at some distress.

Gui. Would I could free 't !

Arv. Or I, whate'er it be, 80
What pain it cost, what danger. Gods !

Bel. Hark, boys. [Whispering.]

Imo. Great men,
That had a court no bigger than this cave,
That did attend themselves and had the virtue Which their own conscience seal'd them, laying
by 85

That nothing-gift of differing multitudes,
Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me,
gods !

I'd change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus false.

Bel. It shall be so.
Boys, we'll go dress our hunt. Fair youth, come in. 90

Discourse is heavy, fasting ; when we have supp'd,

We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,

So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gui. Pray, draw near.

Arv. The night to the owl and morn to the lark less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, sir. 95

Arv. I pray, draw near. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. [Rome. A public place.]

Enter two Roman SENATORS and TRIBUNES.

1. Sen. This is the tenour of the Emperor's writ :

That since the common men are now in action

'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians,
And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against
The fallen-off Britons, that we do incite
The gentry to this business. He creates
Lucius proconsul; and to you the tribunes,
For this immediate levy, he commends
His absolute commission. Long live Cæsar! 10

1. Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces? Ay.

2. Sen.

1. Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?

1. Sen.

With those legions
Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy

Must be supplyant. The words of your commission

Will tie you to the numbers and the time 15
Of their dispatch.

1. Tri. We will discharge our duty.
[Exeunt.]

ACT IV

SCENE I. [Wales. Near the cave of Belarius.]

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapp'd it truly.
How fit his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by a man that made the tailor, not be fit too? the rather—saving reverence of the word—for 'tis said a woman's fitness comes by fits. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself—for it is not vain-glory for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber—I mean, the lines of my body are as well drawn as his; no 10 less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions; yet this imperceivable thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is! Post- 15 humus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off; thy mistress enforced; thy garments cut to pieces before her face: and all this done, spurn her home to her father; who may haply be a 20 little angry for my so rough usage; but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe. Out, sword, and to a sore purpose! Fortune, put them into my hand! 25
This is the very description of their meeting-place; and the fellow dares not deceive me.

[Exit.]

SCENE II. [Before the cave of Belarius.]

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, and IMOGEN, from the cave.

Bel. [To Imogen.] You are not well. Remain here in the cave;

We'll come to you after hunting.

Arv. [To Imogen.] Brother, stay here.
Are we not brothers?

Imo. So man and man should be;

But clay and clay differs in dignity,
Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.

Gui. Go you to hunting; I'll abide with
him.

Imo. So sick I am not, yet I am not well;
But not so citizen a wanton as

To seem to die ere sick. So please you, leave
me;

Stick to your journal course. The breach of custom 10

Is breach of all. I am ill, but your being by me
Cannot amend me; society is no comfort

To one not sociable. I am not very sick, Since I can reason of it. Pray you, trust me
here.

I'll rob none but myself; and let me die, 15
Stealing so poorly.

Gui. I love thee; I have spoke it;
How much the quantity, the weight as much,
As I do love my father.

Bel. What! how! how!

Arv. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me
In my good brother's fault. I know not why 20

I love this youth; and I have heard you say, Love's reason's without reason. The bier at door,

And a demand who is't shall die, I'd say
My father, not this youth.

Bel. [Aside.] O noble strain!
O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness! 25
Cowards father cowards and base things sire base:

Nature hath meal and bran, contempt and
grace.

I'm not their father; yet who this should be,
Doth miracle itself, lov'd before me.—

'T is the ninth hour o' the morn.

Arv. Brother, farewell. 30

Imo. I wish ye sport.

Arv. You health. So please you, sir.

Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures.
Gods, what lies I have heard!

Our courtiers say all 's savage but at court;
Experience, O, thou disprov'st report!

The imperious seas breed monsters; for the dish 35

Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.

I am sick still, heart-sick. Pisanio,

I'll now taste of thy drug. [Swallows some.]

Gui. I could not stir him.

He said he was gentle, but unfortunate;

Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest. 40

Arv. Thus did he answer me; yet said, hereafter

I might know more.

Bel. To the field, to the field!
We'll leave you for this time. Go in and rest.

Arv. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray, be not sick,
For you must be our housewife.

Imo. Well or ill, 45

I am bound to you. [Exit [to the cave].]

Bel. And shalt be ever.

This youth, howe'er distress'd, appears he hath had

Good ancestors.

Arv. How angel-like he sings!

Gui. But his neat cookery! He cut our roots
In characters,
And sauc'd our broths, as Juno had been sick⁵⁰
And he her dieter.

Arv. Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh
Was that it was, for not being such a smile;
The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly
From so divine a temple, to commix⁵⁵
With winds that sailors rail at.

Gui. I do note
That grief and patience, rooted in him both,
Mingle their spurs together.

Arv. Grow, patience!
And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine
His perishing root with the increasing vine!⁶⁰

Bel. It is great morning. Come, away!—
Who's there?

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I cannot find those runagates; that villain
Hath mock'd me. I am faint.

Bel. Those runagates!
Means he not us? I partly know him. 'Tis Cloten, the son o' the Queen. I fear some ambush.⁶⁵

I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know 't is he. We are held as outlaws; hence!

Gui. He is but one. You and my brother search

What companies are near. Pray you, away;
Let me alone with him.

[Exeunt Belarius and Arviragus.]

Clo. Soft! What are you⁷⁰
That fly me thus? Some villain mountaineers?
I have heard of such. What slave art thou?

Gui. A thing
More slavish did I ne'er than answering
A slave without a knock.

Clo. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, a villain. Yield thee, thief.⁷⁵

Gui. To who? To thee? What art thou?
Have not I

An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?
Thy words, I grant, are bigger; for I wear
not⁷⁸

My dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art,
Why I should yield to thee.

Clo. Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothes?

Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
Who is thy grandfather. He made those clothes,

Which, as it seems, make thee.

Clo. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.

Gui. Hence, then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool;⁸⁵

I am loath to beat thee.

Clo. Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.

Gui. What's thy name?
Clo. Cloten, thou villain.

Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy
name,

I cannot tremble at it. Were it Toad, or Adder, Spider,⁹⁴
'T would move me sooner.

Clo. To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know
I am son to the Queen.

Gui. I am sorry for 't; not seeming
So worthy as thy birth.

Clo. Art not afeard?

Gui. Those that I reverence those I fear, the wise.⁹⁵

At fools I laugh, not fear them.
Clo. Die the death!

When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads.
Yield, rustic mountaineer.¹⁰⁰

[Fight and exeunt.]

Re-enter BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. No company's abroad?

Arv. None in the world. You did mistake him, sure.

Bel. I cannot tell,—long is it since I saw
him.

But time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of favour

Which then he wore. The snatches in his voice,¹⁰⁵

And burst of speaking, were as his. I am absolute

'T was very Cloten.

Arv. In this place we left them.
I wish my brother make good time with him,
You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension¹¹⁰
Of roaring terrors; for the defect of judgement
Is oft the cease of fear.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS [with Cloten's head].

But, see, thy brother.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool, an empty purse;
There was no money in 't. Not Hercules Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none.¹¹⁵

Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?
Gui. I am perfect what: out off one Cloten's
head.

Son to the Queen, after his own report;
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer, and swore
With his own single hand he'd take us in,¹²⁰
Displace our heads where—thank the gods!—
they grow,

And set them on Lud's town.

Bel. We are all undone.
Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose,

But that he swore to take, our lives? The law¹²⁵

Protects not us; then why should we be tender
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us,
Play judge and executioner all himself,
For we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul 130
Can we set eye on; but in all safe reason
He must have some attendants. Though his humour

Was nothing but mutation, ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse, not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have rav'd 135
To bring him here alone; although perhaps
It may be heard at court that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make some stronger head; the which he hearing —

As it is like him — might break out, and
swear 140

He'd fetch us in; yet is 't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking, Or they so suffering. Then on good ground we
fear,

If we do fear this body hath a tail
More perilous than the head.

Arv. Let ordinance 145
Come as the gods foresay it; howsoever,
My brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day; the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.

Gui. With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en 150
His head from him. I'll throw 't into the creek

Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes he's the Queen's son, Cloten.
That's all I reckon. [Exit.]

Bel. I fear 't will be reveng'd.
Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done 't!
though valour 155

Becomes thee well enough.

Arv. Would I had done 't,
So the revenge alone pursu'd me! Polydore,
I love thee brotherly, but envy much Thou hast robb'd me of this deed. I would revenges,

That possible strength might meet, would seek us through 160

And put us to our answer.

Bel. Well, 't is done.
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger Where there's no profit. I prithee, to our rock;

You and Fidele play the cooks. I'll stay
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him 165
To dinner presently.

Arv. Poor sick Fidele!
I'll willingly to him. To gain his colour
I'd let a parish of such Clotens blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit.]

Bel. O thou goddess,
Thou divine Nature, how thyself thou blas-zon'st 170

In these two princely boys! They are as gentle
As zephyrs blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough,
Their royal blood enchain'd, as the rud'st wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine, 175
And make him stoop to the vale. 'T is wonder
That an invisible instinct should frame them

To royalty unlearn'd, honour untaught,
Civility not seen from other, valour
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop 180
As if it had been sow'd. Yet still it's strange
What Cloten's being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS.

Gui. Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream,
In embassy to his mother. His body's hostage 185

For his return. [Solemn music.]

Bel. My ingenious instrument!
Hark, Polydore, it sounds! But what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark!

Gui. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence even now.
Gui. What does he mean? Since death of my dear'st mother 190

It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing and lamenting toys
Is jollity for ages and grief for boys.
Is Cadwal mad?

Re-enter ARVIRAGUS, with IMOGEN [as] dead, bearing her in his arms.

Bel. Look, here he comes, 195
And brings the dire occasion in his arms
Of what we blame him for.

Arv. The bird is dead
That we have made so much on. I had rather Have skipp'd from sixteen years of age to sixty,

To have turn'd my leaping-time into a crutch, 200

Than have seen this.

Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily!
My brother wears thee not the one half so
well

As when thou grew'st thyself.

Bel. O melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find
The ooze, to show what coast thy sluggish care 205

Might easiliest harbour in? Thou blessed thing!

Jove knows what man thou might'st have made; but I,
Thou diedst, a most rare boy, of melancholy.
How found you him?

Arv. Stark, as you see;
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber, 210

Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at; his right cheek

Reposing on a cushion.

Gui. Where?
Arv. O' the floor,

His arms thus leagu'd. I thought he slept, and put My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose rudeness

Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gui. Why, he but sleeps!
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed. 215

With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
And worms will not come to thee.

Arv. With fairest flowers
Whilst summer lasts and I live here, Fidele, I'll sweeten thy sad grave. Thou shalt not lack

The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose, nor

The azur'd harebell, like thy veins, no, nor
The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander,
Out-sweet'ned not thy breath. The ruddock would,

With charitable bill, — O bill, sore shaming
Those rich-left heirs that let their fathers lie
Without a monument! — bring thee all this;
Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flowers are
none,

To winter-ground thy corse.

Gui. Prithee, have done;
And do not play in wench-like words with
that

Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt. To the grave!

Arv. Say, where shall's lay him?

Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother.

Arv. Be't so;
And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground,

As once our mother; use like note and words,
Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal,
I cannot sing. I'll weep, and word it with
thee;

For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse
Than priests and fanes that lie.

Arv. We'll speak it, then.

Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less;
for Cloten

Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys;
And though he came our enemy, remember
He was paid for that. Though mean and mighty, rotting

Together, have one dust, yet reverence,
That angel of the world, doth make distinction

Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was princely;

And though you took his life, as being our foe,
Yet bury him as a prince.

Gui. Pray you, fetch him hither.
Thersites' body is as good as Ajax',
When neither are alive.

Arv. If you'll go fetch him,
We'll say our song the whilst. Brother, begin.

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east;

My father hath a reason for't.

Arv. 'Tis true.

Gui. Come on then, and remove him.

Arv. So. Begin.

SONG.

Gui. Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages;

Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages.
Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Arv. Fear no more the frown o' the great;
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke.
Care no more to clothe and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak.

The sceptre, learning, physic, must
All follow this, and come to dust.

Gui. Fear no more the lightning-flash,

Arv. Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stone;

Arv. Fear not slander, censure rash;

Arv. Thou hast finish'd joy and moan.

Both. All lovers young, all lovers must Consign to thee, and come to dust.

Gui. No exorciser harm thee!

Arv. Nor no witchcraft charm thee!

Gui. Ghost unlaid forbear thee!

Arv. Nothing ill come near thee!

Both. Quiet consummation have,
And renowned be thy grave!

Re-enter BELARIUS, with the body of Cloten.

Gui. We have done our obsequies. Come, lay him down.

Bel. Here's a few flowers; but 'bout midnight, more.

The herbs that have on them cold dew o' the
night

Are strewings fitt'st for graves. Upon their faces.

You were as flowers, now wither'd; even so
These herblets shall, which we upon you strew.
Come on, away; apart upon our knees.

The ground that gave them first has them
again.

Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.

[Exeunt [Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus].

Imo. [Awaking.] Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven; which is the way?

I thank you. — By yond bush? — Pray, how far thither?

'Ods fattikins! can it be six mile yet?

I have gone all night. Faith, I'll lie down and sleep.

But, soft! no bedfellow! — O gods and goddesses!

[Seeing the body of Cloten.]
These flowers are like the pleasures of the
world;

This bloody man, the care on't. I hope I dream;

For so I thought I was a cave-keeper

And cook to honest creatures. But 'tis not so.
'T was but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,

Which the brain makes of fumes. Our very
eyes

Are sometimes like our judgements, blind.
Good faith,

I tremble still with fear; but if there be
Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity

As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it!
The dream's here still, even when I wake. It is Without me, as within me ; not imagin'd, felt.

A headless man ! The garments of Posthumus !
I know the shape of 's leg ; this is his hand,
His foot Mercurial, his Martial thigh, 310
The brawns of Hercules ; but his Jovial face—Murder in heaven ?—How !—'Tis gone. Pi-
sanio,

All curses madd'd Hecuba gave the Greeks,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee ! Thou,
Conspir'd with that irregular devil, Cloten, 315
Hath here cut off my lord. To write and read
Be henceforth treacherous ! Damn'd Pisanio Hath with his forged letters,—damn'd Pi-sanio—

From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the main-top ! O Posthumus ! alas, 320 Where is thy head ? Where's that ? Ay me !
where's that ?

Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
And left this head on. How should this be ?
Pisanio ?

'Tis he and Cloten. Malice and luere in them
Have laid this woe here. O, 'tis pregnant,
pregnant ! 325

The drug he gave me, which he said was precious

And cordial to me, have I not found it Murd'rous to the senses ? That confirms it home.

This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's. O !
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood, 330
That we the horrid may seem to those Which chance to find us. O, my lord, my lord !
[Falls on the body.]

Enter LUCIUS, CAPTAINS, and a SOOTHSAYER.

1. Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia,

After your will, have cross'd the sea, attending
You here at Milford-Haven with your ships. 335
They are in readiness.

Luc. But what from Rome ?
1. Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the con-finers

And gentlemen of Italy, most willing spirits,
That promise noble service ; and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo, 340
Sienna's brother.

Luc. When expect you them ?

1. Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind.

Luc. This forwardness
Makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers

Be muster'd ; bid the captains look to 't. Now,
sir,

What have you dream'd of late of this war's purpose ? 345

Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision—

I fast and pray'd for their intelligence—thus :
I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd
From the spongy south to this part of the west,
There vanish'd in the sunbeams ; which portends— 350

Unless my sins abuse my divination—
Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so,

And never false. Soft, ho ! what trunk is here Without his top ? The ruin speaks that sometime

It was a worthy building. How ! a page ! 355
Or dead, or sleeping on him ? But dead rather ;
For nature doth abhor to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.
Let's see the boy's face.

1. Cap. He's alive, my lord.

Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body.
Young one, 360

Inform us of thy fortunes, for it seems
They crave to be demanded. Who is this Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow ? Or who was he

That, otherwise than noble nature did, Hath alter'd that good picture ? What's thy interest 365

In this sad wreck ? How came it ? Who is it ?
What art thou ?

Imo. I am nothing : or if not,
Nothing to be better. This was my
master,

A very valiant Briton and a good,
That here by mountaineers lies slain. Alas ! 370
There is no more such masters. I may wander
From east to occident, cry out for service,
Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

Luc. 'Lack, good youth !
Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining than 375

Thy master in bleeding. Say his name, good friend.

Imo. Richard du Champ. [Aside.] If I do lie and do

No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope
They'll pardon it.—Say you, sir ?

Luc. Thy name ?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same ; 380

Thy name well fits thy faith, thy faith thy name.

Wilt take thy chance with me ? I will not say
Thou shalt be so well master'd, but, be sure,
No less belov'd. The Roman Emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner 385
Than thine own worth prefer thee. Go with me.

Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first, an't please the gods,

I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pickaxes can dig ; and when
With wild-wood leaves and weeds I ha' strew'd his grave, 390

And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep and sigh ;
And leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth ;
And rather father thee than master thee. 395

My friends,
The boy hath taught us manly duties. Let us
Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partisans
A grave. Come, arm him. Boy, he is pre-ferr'd 400

By thee to us, and he shall be interr'd
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes.
Some falls are means the happier to arise.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [A room in Cymbeline's palace.]

Enter CYMBELINE, LORDS, PISANIO [and Attendants.]

Cym. Again; and bring me word how 'tis with her. [Exit an attendant.]

A fever with the absence of her son,
A madness, of which her life's in danger.
Heavens,

How deeply you at once do touch me! Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone; my
queen

Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful wars point at me; her son gone,
So needful for this present: it strikes me, past
The hope of comfort. But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from
thee

By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours;
I humbly set it at your will; but, for my mistress,

I nothing know where she remains, why gone,
Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your Highness,

Hold me your loyal servant.

1. Lord. Good my liege,
The day that she was missing he was here.
I dare be bound he's true and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally. For Cloten,
There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will, no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time is troublesome.
[To Pisanio.] We'll slip you for a season; but our jealousy
Does yet depend.

1. Lord. So please your Majesty,
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast, with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent.

Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and
queen!

I am amaz'd with matter.

1. Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can affront no less Than what you hear of. Come more, for more you're ready;

The want is but to put those powers in motion
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you. Let's withdraw,
And meet the time as it seeks us. We fear not What can from Italy annoy us; but We grieve at chances here. Away!

[Exeunt [all but Pisanio].]

Pis. I heard no letter from my master since

I wrote him Imogen was slain. 'Tis strange.
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
To yield me often tidings; neither know I
What is betid to Cloten; but remain
Perplex'd in all. The heavens still must work.

Wherein I am false I am honest; not true, to be true.

These present wars shall find I love my country, Even to the note o' the King, or I'll fall in
them.

All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd.
Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer'd. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. [Wales. Before the cave of Belarius.]

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it

From action and adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us? This way, the Romans
Must or for Britons slay us, or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons,
We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us.
To the King's party there's no going. Newness
Of Cloten's death—we being not known, not muster'd

Among the bands—may drive us to a render
Where we have liv'd, and so extort from 's
that

Which we have done, whose answer would be death

Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt
In such a time nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.

Arv. It is not likely
That when they hear the Roman horses neigh, Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their
eyes

And ears so cloy'd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are.

Bel. O, I am known
Of many in the army. Many years,
Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him

From my remembrance. And, besides, the King

Hath not deserv'd my service nor your loves,
Who find in my exile the want of breeding,
The certainty of this hard life; aye hopeless
To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd,
But to be still hot Summer's tanlings and
The shrinking slaves of Winter.

Gui. Than be so
Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army.
I and my brother are not known; yourself
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
Cannot be question'd.

Arv. By this sun that shines,
I'll thither. What thing is it that I never Did see man die! scarce ever look'd on blood,
But that of coward hares, hot goats, and veni-
son!

Never bestrid a horse, save one that had

A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel
Nor iron on his heel! I am asham'd 40
To look upon the holy sun, to have
The benefit of his blest beams, remaining
So long a poor unknown.

Gui. By heavens, I'll go.
If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave,
I'll take the better care; but if you will not, 45
The hazard therefore due fall on me by
The hands of Romans!

Arr. So say I; amen.
Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you set
So slight a valuation, should reserve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, 50 boys!

If in your country wars you chance to die,
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie.
Lead, lead! [Aside.] The time seems long;
their blood thinks scorn
Till it fly out and show them princes born.
[Exeunt.]

ACT V

SCENE I. [Britain. The Roman camp.]

Enter POSTHUMUS [with a bloody handkerchief].

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee, for
I wish'd
Thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married ones,
If each of you should take this course, how many
Must murder wives much better than themselves

For wrying but a little! O Pisanio!
Every good servant does not all commands;
No bond but to do just ones. Gods! if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never

Had liv'd to put on this; so had you saved
The noble Imogen to repent, and struck 10 Me, wretch, more worth your vengeance. But,
alack,

You snatch some hence for little faults; that's
love,

To have them fall no more: you some permit
To second ills with ills, each elder worse,
And make them dread it, to the doers' thrift.
But Imogen is your own; do your best wills, 15
And make me blest to obey! I am brought hither

Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom. 'T is enough
That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress;
peace! 20

I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good heavens,

Hear patiently my purpose: I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant; so I'll fight Against the part I come with; so I'll die 25
For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life
Is every breath a death; and thus, unknown,
Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril
Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know
More valour in me than my habits show. 30

Gods, put the strength o' the Leonati in me!
To shame the guise o' the world, I will begin
The fashion, less without and more within.
[Exit.]

SCENE II. [Field of battle between the British and Roman camps.]

*Enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and the Roman Army at one door; and the Briton Army at another;
LEONATUS POSTHUMUS following, like a poor soldier. They march over and go out. Then enter again, in skirmish, IACHIMO and POST-HUMUS: he vanquisheth and disarmeth IACH-IMO, and then leaves him.*

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom
Takes off my manhood. I have belied a lady,
The Princess of this country, and the air on't Revengefully enfeebles me; or could this earl,
A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me?
In my profession? Knighthoods and honours, borne

As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn.
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is that we scarce are men and you are gods. 16
[Exit.]

*The battle continues; the Britons fly; CYMBE-
LINE is taken; then enter, to his rescue, BELA-RIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.*

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground;
The lane is guarded. Nothing routs us but
The villainy of our fears.

Gui. } Stand, stand, and fight!
Arr. }

*Re-enter POSTHUMUS, and seconds the Britons.
They rescue CYMBELINE, and exeunt. Then re-enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and IMOGEN.*

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself;

For friends kill friends, and the disorder's
such 15

As war were hoodwink'd.

Iach. 'T is their fresh supplies.
Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely. Or betimes
Let's reinforce, or fly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. [Another part of the field.]

Enter POSTHUMUS and a Briton LORD.

Lord. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?

Post. I did;
Though you, it seems, come from the fiers.

Lord. I did.
Post. No blame be to you, sir, for all was lost,

But that the heavens fought; the King himself
Of his wings destitute, the army broken,
And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying 5
Through a strait lane; the enemy full-hearted, Lolling the tongue with slaught'ring, having work

More plentiful than tools to do 't, struck down
Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling 10

Merely through fear; that the straight pass was damm'd

With dead men hurt behind, and cowards living

To die with length'ned shame.

Lord. Where was this lane?

Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;

Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier, 15

An honest one, I warrant; who deserv'd

So long a breeding as his white beard came to,

In doing this for 's country. Athwart the lane,

He, with two striplings — lads more like to run

The country base than to commit such slaughter, 20

With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer

Than those for preservation cas'd, or shame, —

Made good the passage; cried to those that fled,

"Our Britain's harts die flying, not our men.

To darkness fleet souls that fly backwards.

Stand! 25

Or we are Romans and will give you that

Like beasts which you shun beastly, and may save

But to look back in frown. Stand, stand!"

These three,

Three thousand confident, in act as many —

For three performers are the file when all 30

The rest do nothing — with this word "Stand,

stand!"

Accommodated by the place, more charming

With their own nobleness, which could have turn'd

A distaff to a lance, gilded pale looks.

Part shame, part spirit renew'd; that some,

turn'd coward 35

But by example — O, a sin in war,

Damn'd in the first beginners! — gan to look

The way that they did, and to grin like lions

Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began

A stop i' the chaser, a retire, anon 40

A rout, confusion thick. Forthwith they fly

Chickens, the way which they stoop'd eagles;

slaves,

The strides they victors made: and now our cowards,

Like fragments in hard voyages, became

The life o' the need. Having found the backdoor open 45

Of the unguarded hearts, heavens, how they wound!

Some slain before; some dying; some their friends

O'er-borne i' the former wave; ten, chas'd by
one,

Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty.

Those that would die or ere resist are grown 50

The mortal bugs o' the field.

Lord. This was strange chance.

A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys!

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it; you are made

Rather to wonder at the things you hear

Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon 't, 55

And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:

"Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,

Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bane."

Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.

Post. Lack, to what end?

Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend; 60

For if he'll do as he is made to do,

I know he'll quickly fly my friendship too.

You have put me into rhyme.

Lord. Farewell; you're angry.

[Exit.]

Post. Still going? This is a lord! O noble misery,

To be i' the field, and ask "what news?" of me!

To-day how many would have given their honours 65

To have sav'd their carcases! took heel to do 't,

And yet died too! I, in mine own owe charm'd,

Could not find Death where I did hear him
groan,

Nor feel him where he struck. Being an ugly monster, 70

'Tis strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft
beds,

Sweet words; or hath moe ministers than we

That draw his knives i' the war. Well, I will find him;

For being now a favourer to the Briton,

No more a Briton, I have resum'd again 75

The part I came in. Fight I will no more,

But yield me to the veriest hind that shall

Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer he Britons must take. For me, my ransom's

death. 80

On either side I come to spend my breath;

Which neither here I'll keep nor bear again,

But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two [British] CAPTAINS and Soldiers.

1. Cap. Great Jupiter be prais'd! Lucius is taken.

'Tis thought the old man and his sons were angels. 85

2. Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly
habit,

That gave the affront with them.

1. Cap. So 'tis reported;

But none of 'em can be found. Stand! who's
there? 90

Post. A Roman,

Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds

Had answer'd him.

2. Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!

A leg of Rome shall not return to tell

What crows have peck'd them here. He brags his service

As if he were of note. Bring him to the King.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arvi-ragus, Pisanio [Soldiers, Attendants] and Roman Captives. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Gaoler. [Then exeunt omnes.]

SCENE IV. [A British prison.]Enter POSTHUMUS and two GAOLERS.

1. Gaol. You shall not now be stolen, you have locks upon you;
So graze as you find pasture.

2. Gaol. Ay, or a stomach.
[Exeunt Gaolers.]

Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art a way,

I think, to liberty; yet am I better
Than one that 's sick o' the gout; since he had rather

Groan so in perpetuity than be cur'd
By the sure physician, Death, who is the key
To unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art fetter'd

More than my shanks and wrists. You good gods, give me

The penitent instrument to pick that bolt, 10
Then, free for ever! Is 't enough I am sorry?

So children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent,

I cannot do it better than in gyves,
Desir'd more than constrain'd; to satisfy, 15

If of my freedom 't is the main part, take
No stricter render of me than my all.

I know you are more clement than vile men,
Who of their broken debtors take a third,

A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again 20
On their abatement. That 's not my desire.

For Imogen's dear life take mine; and though
'T is not so dear, yet 't is a life; you coin'd it.

'Tween man and man they weigh not every stamp;

Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake; 25

You rather mine, being yours; and so, great powers,

If you will take this audit, take this life,
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!

I 'll speak to thee in silence. [Sleeps.]

Solemn music. Enter, as in an apparition, SICILIUS LEONATUS, father to Posthumus, an old man, attired like a warrior; leading in his hand an ancient matron, his wife, and mother to Posthumus, with music before them. Then, after other music, follow the two young LEONATI, brothers to Posthumus, with wounds as they died in the wars. They circle Posthumus round, as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, show 30
Thy spite on mortal flies:

With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries

Rates and revenges.

Hath my poor boy done aught but well, 35
Whose face I never saw?

I died whilst in the womb he stay'd

Attending Nature's law;

Whose father then, as men report

Thou orphans' father art, 40

Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vexing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid,
But took me in my throes;
That from me was Posthumus ript, 45
Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity!

Sici. Great Nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserv'd the praise o' the world, 50
As great Sicilius' heir.

1. Bro. When once he was mature for man,
In Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel,
Or fruitful object be 55
In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity?

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd,
To be exil'd, and thrown
From Leonati seat, and cast 60
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain 65
With needless jealousy;
And to become the geek and scorn
O' the other's villainy?

2. Bro. For this from stiller seats we came,
Our parents and us twain,
That striking in our country's cause
Fell bravely and were slain,
Our fealty and Tenantius' right
With honour to maintain.

1. Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath
To Cymbeline perform'd.
Then, Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd
The graces for his merits due,
Being all to dolours turn'd? 70

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out;
No longer exercise
Upon a valiant race thy harsh
And potent injuries.

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good, 75
Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help;
Or we poor ghosts will cry
To the shining synod of the rest
Against thy deity. 80

Both Bro. Help, Jupiter; or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

JUPITER descends in thunder and lightning, sitting upon an eagle: he throws a thunderbolt. The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region low, Offend our hearing; hush! How dare you ghosts

Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt, you know, ⁹⁵
 Sky-planted batters all rebelling coasts?
 Poor shadows of Elysium, hence, and rest Upon your never-withering banks of flowers.

Be not with mortal accidents oppress;
 No care of yours it is; you know 't is ours. ¹⁰⁰
 Whom best I love I cross; to make my gift,
 The more delay'd, delighted. Be content;
 Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift.
 His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.
 Our jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in ¹⁰⁵
 Our temple was he married. Rise, and fade.
 He shall be lord of Lady Imogen,
 And happier much by his affliction made.
 This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein
 Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine. ¹¹⁰
 And so, away! No farther with your din
 Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.
 Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline.

[Ascends.]

Sici. He came in thunder; his celestial
 breath
 Was sulphurous to smell. The holy eagle ¹¹⁵ Stoop'd, as to foot us. His ascension is More sweet than our blest fields. His royal bird
 Prunes the immortal wing and cloys his beak,
 As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks, Jupiter!

Sici. The marble pavement closes, he is enter'd ¹²⁰
 His radiant roof. Away! and, to be blest,
 Let us with care perform his great behest.

[The Ghosts vanish.]

Post. [Waking.] Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire, and begot

A father to me, and thou hast created
 A mother and two brothers; but, O scorn! ¹²⁵ Gone! they went hence so soon as they were born.

And so I am awake. Poor wretches that depend
 On greatness' favour dream as I have done,
 Wake and find nothing. But, alas, I swerve.
 Many dream not to find, neither deserve, ¹³⁰
 And yet are steep'd in favours; so am I,
 That have this golden chance and know not
 why.

What fairies haunt this ground? A book? O
 rare one! ¹³⁵

Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment
 Nobler than that it covers! Let thy effects
 So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers,
 As good as promise!

(Reads.) "Whenas a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopp'd branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate and flourish in peace and plenty." ¹⁴⁵

'T is still a dream, or else such stuff as mad-
 men

Tongue and brain not; either both or nothing;
 Or senseless speaking or a speaking such
 As sense cannot untie. Be what it is,

The action of my life is like it, which- ¹⁵⁰
 I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter GAOLER.

Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for death?

Post. Over-roasted rather; ready long ago.

Gaol. Hanging is the word, sir. If you be ready for that, you are well cook'd. ¹⁵⁵

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.

Gaol. A heavy reckoning for you, sir. But the comfort is, you shall be called to no ¹⁶⁰ more payments, fear no more tavern-bills, which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth. You come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink; sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are ¹⁶⁵ paid too much; purse and brain both empty;
 the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness. O, of this contradiction you shall now be quit. O, the charity of a penny cord! It sums up thou- ¹⁷⁰ sands in a trice. You have no true debtor and creditor but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge. Your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters; so the acquittance follows.

Post. I am merrier to die than thou art to live. ¹⁷⁵

Gaol. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the toothache; but a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his officer; for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes, indeed do I, fellow. ¹⁸⁰

Gaol. Your Death has eyes in 's head then; I have not seen him so pictur'd. You must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or to take upon yourself that which I am sure you do not know, or jump the after inquiry on your own peril; and how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think you'll never return to tell one. ¹⁸⁵

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going, but such as wink and will not use them. ¹⁹⁰

Gaol. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness! I am sure hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the King. ²⁰⁰

Post. Thou bring'st good news; I am call'd to be made free.

Gaol. I'll be hang'd then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler;
 no bolts for the dead. ²⁰⁵

[Exeunt all but the Gaoler.]

Gaol. Unless a man would marry a gallows and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman;
 and there be some of them too that die ²¹⁰ against their wills. So should I, if I were one.
 I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good. O, there were desolation of gaolers and gallowses! I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a ferment in 't. [Exit. 215]

SCENE V. [Cymbeline's tent.]

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, Lords [Officers, and Attendants].

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart That the poor soldier that so richly fought, Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast

Stepp'd before targes of proof, cannot be found. 5

He shall be happy that can find him, if Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw Such noble fury in so poor a thing; Such precious deeds in one that promis'd nought But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him?

Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living, 11

But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am The heir of his reward; [to Belarius, Guidarius, and Arviragus] which I will add To you, the liver, heart and brain of Britain, By whom I grant she lives. 'Tis now the time To ask of whence you are. Report it.

Bel. Sir, 16 In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen. Further to boast were neither true nor modest, Unless I add, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees. Arise my knights o' the battle. I create you 20 Companions to our person and will fit you With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter CORNELIUS and LADIES.

There's business in these faces. Why so sadly Greet you our victory? You look like Romans, And not o' the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great King! To sour your happiness, I must report 25 The Queen is dead.

Cym. Who worse than a physician Would this report become? But I consider, By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death Will seize the doctor too. How ended she? 30

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life,

Which, being cruel to the world, concluded Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd I will report, so please you. These her women Can trip me, if I err; who with wet cheeks 35 Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Prithee, say. Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you; only Affected greatness got by you, not you; Married your royalty, was wife to your place, Abhor'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this; 40

And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love

With much integrity, she did confess Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life, 45 But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend! Who is't can read a woman? Is there more?

Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess she had

For you a mortal mineral, which, being took, 50 Should by the minute feed on life, and ling'ring By inches waste you; in which time she purpos'd,

By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'ercome you with her show, and, in time, When she had fitted you with her craft, to work 55

Her son into the adoption of the crown; But, failing of her end by his strange absence,

Grew shameless-desperate; open'd, in despite Of heaven and men; her purposes; repented The evils she hatch'd were not effected; so 60 Despairing died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women? Lad. We did, so please your Highness.

Cym. Mine eyes Were not in fault, for she was beautiful; Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my heart,

That thought her like her seeming. It had been vicious 65 To have mistrusted her; yet, O my daughter! That it was folly in me, thou mayst say, And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!

Enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, [the SOOTHSAYER] and other Roman Prisoners [guarded]; POSTHUMUS behind, and IMOGEN.

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute; that The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss 70

Of many a bold one, whose kinsmen have made suit

That their good souls may be appeas'd with slaughter

Of you their captives, which ourself have granted.

So think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war. The day 75

Was yours by accident. Had it gone with us, We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd

Our prisoners with the sword. But since the gods

Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives May be call'd ransom, let it come. Sufficeeth 80

A Roman, with a Roman's heart can suffer. Augustus lives to think on't; and so much

For my peculiar care. This one thing only I will entreat: my boy, a Briton born,

Let him be ransom'd. Never master had 85 A page so kind, so duteous, diligent,

So tender over his occasions, true,
So feat, so nurse-like. Let his virtue join
With my request, which I'll make bold your Highness

Cannot deny. He hath done no Briton harm, 90
Though he have serv'd a Roman. Save him,
sir,
And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him;
His favour is familiar to me. Boy,
Thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,
And art mine own. I know not why, wherefore, 95
To say "Live, boy." Ne'er thank thy master;
live,

And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty and thy state, I'll give it,
Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner, 99
The noblest ta'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your Highness.
Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad;

And yet I know thou wilt.

Imo. No, no, alack,
There's other work in hand. I see a thing
Bitter to me as death; your life, good master,
Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me, 105
He leaves me, scorns me. Briefly die their joys

That place them on the truth of girls and boys.
Why stands he so perplex'd?

Cym. What wouldst thou, boy?
I love thee more and more; think more and
more

What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on? Speak, 110

Wilt have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?

Imo. He is a Roman, no more kin to me Than I to your Highness; who, being born your vassal,

Am something nearer.

Cym. Wherefore ey'st him so?

Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please 115

To give me hearing.

Cym. Ay, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cym. Thou'rt my good youth, my page;
I'll be thy master. Walk with me; speak freely.

[Cymbeline and Imogen talk apart.]

Bel. Is not this boy, reviv'd from death,—

Arv. One sand another
Not more resembles,—that sweet rosy lad 121

Who died, and was Fidele? What think you?
Gui. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace! see further. He eyes us not; forbear;

Creatures may be alike. Were 't he, I am sure 125

He would have spoke to us.

Gui. But we saw him dead.

Bel. Be silent; let's see further.

Pis. [Aside.] It is my mistress.

Since she is living, let the time run on
To good or bad.

[Cymbeline and Imogen come forward.]

Cym. Come, stand thou by our side;
Make thy demand aloud. [To Iachimo.] Sir,
step you forth; 130

Give answer to this boy, and do it freely;
Or, by our greatness and the grace of it,
Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood. On, speak to him.

Imo. My boon is, that this gentleman may render 135

Of whom he had this ring.

Post. [Aside.] What's that to him?

Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say
How came it yours?

Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken
that

Which, to be spoke, would torture thee.

Cym. How! me?

Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter
that 141

Which torments me to conceal. By villainy
I got this ring. 'T was Leonatus' jewel, Whom thou didst banish; and—which more may grieve thee,

As it doth me—a nobler sir ne'er liv'd 145

'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more,
my lord?

Cym. All that belongs to this.

Iach. That paragon, thy daughter,—
For whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits

Quail to remember,—Give me leave; I faint.

Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength. 150

I had rather thou shouldst live while Nature will Than die ere I hear more. Strive, man, and speak.

Iach. Upon a time,—unhappy was the clock
That struck the hour!—it was in Rome,— accurs'd

The mansion where!—'t was at a feast,—
O, would 155

Our viands had been poison'd, or at least
Those which I heav'd to head!—the good

Posthumus—

What should I say? He was too good to be Where ill men were; and was the best of all Amongst the rar'st of good ones,—sitting sadly, 160

Hearing us praise our loves of Italy

For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast
Of him that best could speak, for feature, lam-
ing

The shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Minerva,
Postures beyond brief nature, for condition, 165

A shop of all the qualities that man
Loves woman for, besides that hook of wiving,
Fairness which strikes the eye—

Cym. I stand on fire:
Come to the matter.

Iach. All too soon I shall,
Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly. This

Posthumus, 170

Most like a noble lord in love and one
That had a royal lover, took his hint;
And, not dispraising whom we praise'd,—
therein

He was as calm as virtue,—he began His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being made, 175

And then a mind put in 't, either our brags
Were crack'd of kitchen-trulls, or his description

Proy'd us unspeaking sots.

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.
Post. Your daughter's chastity—there it begins.

He spake of her, as Dian had hot dreams, 180
And she alone were cold; whereat I, wretch, Made scruple of his praise; and wager'd with
him

Pieces of gold 'gainst this which then he wore
Upon his honour'd finger, to attain

In suit the place of 's bed and win this ring 185
By hers and mine adultery. He, true knight,
No less of her honour confident

Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;
And would so, had it been a carbuncle
Of Phœbus' wheel, and might so safely, had
it 190

Been all the worth of 's car. Away to Britain
Post I in this design. Well may you, sir,
Remember me at court, where I was taught
Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
'Twixt amorous and villanous. Being thus quench'd 195

Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
Gan in your duller Britain operate

Most vilely; for my vantage, excellent;
And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,
That I return'd with singular proof enough 200

To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet,—

O cunning, how I got it!—nay, some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not 205
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,
I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon—
Methinks, I see him now—

Post. [Advancing.] Ay, so thou dost,
Italian fiend! Ay me, most credulous fool, 210

Egregious murderer, thief, anything
That's due to all the villains past, in being,
To come! O, give me cord, or knife, or poison,
Some upright justicer! Thou, King, send out
For torturers ingenious; it is I 215

That all the abhorred things o' the earth amend
By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
That kill'd thy daughter:—villain-like, I
lie—

That caused a lesser villain than myself,
A sacrilegious thief, to do 't. The temple 220
Of Virtue was she; yea, and she herself.
Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set
The dogs o' the street to bay me; every villain

Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus; and
Be villainy less than 't was! O Imogen! 225

My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen, Imogen, Imogen!

Imo. Peace, my lord; hear, hear—

Post. Shall's have a play of this? Thou scornful page,

There lie thy part. [Striking her; she falls.]

Pis. O, gentlemen, help

Mine and your mistress! O, my Lord Posthu-
mus! 230

You need kill'd Imogen till now. Help, help!
Mine honour'd lady!

Cym. Does the world go round?

Post. How comes these staggers on me?

Pis. Wake, my mistress!

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me

To death with mortal joy.

Pis. How fares my mistress?

Imo. O, get thee from my sight; 235

Thougav'st me poison. Dangerous fellow, hence!
Breathe not where princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen!

Pis. Lady,

The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if 240

That box I gave you was not thought by me
A precious thing. I had it from the Queen.

Cym. New matter still?

Imo. It poison'd me.

Cor. O gods!

I left out one thing which the Queen confess'd,
Which must approve thee honest. "If Pisano

Have," said she, "given his mistress that confection 245

Which I gave him for cordial, she is serv'd

As I would serve a rat."

Cym. What's this, Cornelius?

Cor. The Queen, sir, very oft importun'd me
To temper poisons for her, still pretending 250

The satisfaction of her knowledge only
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs,

Of no esteem. I, dreading that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her

A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease 255

The present power of life, but in short time

All offices of nature should again

Do their due functions. Have you ta'en of it?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. My boys,

There was our error.

Gui. This is, sure, Fidele. 260

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you?

Think that you are upon a lock, and now

Throw me again. [Embracing him.]

Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul,
Till the tree die!

Cym. How now, my flesh, my child!

What, mak'st thou me a dullard in this act?

Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo. [Kneeling.] Your blessing, sir. 265

Bel. [To Guiderius and Arviragus.] Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;

You had a motive for 't.

Cym. My tears that fall

Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,

Thy mother's dead.

Imo. I am sorry for 't, my lord.
Cym. O, she was naught; and long of her it was 271
 That we meet here so strangely; but her son
 Is gone, we know not how nor where.
Pis. My lord,
 Now fear is from me, I'll speak troth. Lord
 Cloten,
 Upon my lady's missing, came to me 275
 With his sword drawn; foam'd at the mouth,
 And swore,
 If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
 It was my instant death. By accident,
 I had a feigned letter of my master's
 Then in my pocket, which directed him 280
 To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
 Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
 Which he enforc'd from me, away he posts
 With unchaste purpose and with oath to violate
 My lady's honour. What became of him 285
 I further know not.
Gui. Let me end the story:
 I slew him there.
Cym. Marry, the gods forfend!
 I would not thy good deeds should from my lips
 Pluck a hard sentence. Prithee, valiant youth,
 Deny 't again.
Gui. I have spoke it, and I did it. 290
Cym. He was a prince.
Gui. A most incivil one. The wrongs he did
 me
 Were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke
 me
 With language that would make me spurn the
 sea,
 If it could so roar to me. I cut off 's head; 295
 And am right glad he is not standing here
 To tell this tale of mine.
Cym. I am sorry for thee.
 By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our law. Thou 'rt dead.
Imo. That headless man
 I thought had been my lord.
Cym. Bind the offender, 300
 And take him from our presence.
Bel. Stay, sir King;
 This man is better than the man he slew,
 As well descended as thyself; and hath
 More of these merited than a band of Clotens Had ever scar for. [To the Guard.] Let his arms alone; 305
 They were not born for bondage.
Cym. Why, old soldier,
 Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for,
 By tasting of our wrath? How of descent
 As good as we?
Arv. In that he spake too far.
Cym. And thou shalt die for 't.
Bel. We will die all three
 But I will prove that two on 's are as good 311
 As I have given out him. My sons, I must
 For mine own part unfold a dangerous speech,
 Though, haply, well for you.
Arv. Your danger 's ours.
Gui. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it then, by leave.
 Thou hadst, great King, a subject who 316
 Was call'd Belarius.
Cym. What of him? He is
 A banish'd traitor.
Bel. He it is that hath Assum'd this age, indeed a banish'd man;
 I know not how a traitor.
Cym. Take him hence. 320
 The whole world shall not save him.
Bel. Not too hot.
 First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
 And let it be confiscate all so soon
 As I have receiv'd it.
Cym. Nursing of my sons!
Bel. I am too blunt and saucy; here 's my knee. 325
 Ere I arise, I will prefer my sons;
 Then spare not the old father. Mighty sir,
 These two young gentlemen, that call me
 father
 And think they are my sons, are none of mine;
 They are the issue of your loins, my liege, 330
 And blood of your begetting.
Cym. How! my issue!
Bel. So sure as you your father's, I, old Morgan,
 Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd.
 Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment
 Itself, and all my treason; that I suffer'd 335
 Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes—
 For such and so they are—these twenty years
 Have I train'd up. Those arts they have as I Could put into them; my breeding was, sir, as Your Highness knows. Their nurse, Euri-phile, 340
 Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children.
 Upon my banishment I mov'd her to 't,
 Having receiv'd the punishment before,
 For that which I did then. Beaten for loyalty
 Excited me to treason. Their dear loss, 345
 The more of you 't was felt, the more it shap'd Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious
 sir,
 Here are your sons again; and I must lose
 Two of the sweet'st companions in the world.
 The benediction of these covering heavens 350
 Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy
 To inlay heaven with stars.
Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st.
 The service that you three have done is more
 Unlike than this thou tell'st. I lost my children;
 If these be they, I know not how to wish 355
 A pair of worthier sons.
Bel. Be pleas'd awhile.
 This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
 Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius;
 This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus,
 Your younger princely son. He, sir, was lapp'd 360
 In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand
 Of his queen mother, which for more probation
 I can with ease produce.
Cym. Guiderius had,

Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star;
It was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he, 365
Who hath upon him still that natural stamp.
It was wise Nature's end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.

Cym. O, what, am I
A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother Rejoic'd deliverance more. Blest pray you
be, 370

That, after this strange starting from your orbs,
You may reign in them now! O Imogen,
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo. No, my lord;
I have got two worlds by 't. O my gentle brothers,

Have we thus met? O, never say hereafter 375
But I am truest speaker. You call'd me brother,

When I was but your sister; I you brothers,
When ye were so indeed.

Cym. Did you e'er meet?
Arv. Ay, my good lord.

Gwi. And at first meeting lov'd;
Continu'd so, until we thought he died. 380
Cor. By the Queen's dram she swallow'd.

Cym. O rare instinct!
When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgement

Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in. Where, how liv'd you?

And when came you to serve our Roman
captive? 385

How parted with your brothers? How first met
them?

Why fled you from the court? and whither?
These

And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded;

And all the other by-dependencies, 390
From chance to chance; but nor the time nor place

Will serve our long inter'gatories. See,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen,
And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye
On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting 395
Each object with a joy; the counterchange
Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.
[To Belarius.] Thou art my brother; so we'll hold these ever.

Imo. You are my father too, and did relieve
me, 400

To see this gracious season.

Cym. All o'erjoy'd,
Save these in bonds. Let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. My good master,
I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!
Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought, 405

He would have well becom'd this place, and grac'd

The thankings of a king.

Post. I am, sir,
The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeching; 't was a fitment for
The purpose I then follow'd. That I was he, 410 Speak, Iachimo. I had you down and might Have made you finish.

Iach. [Kneeling.] I am down again;
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, beseech
you,

Which I so often owe; but your ring first, 415
And here the bracelet of the truest princess
That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me.
The power that I have on you is to spare you,
The malice towards you to forgive you. Live,
And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd!
We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law; 421
Pardon's the word to all.

Arv. You help us, sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother;
Joy'd are we that you are.

Post. Your servant, Princes. Good my lord of Rome, 425
Call forth your soothsayer. As I slept, methought

Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back'd,
Appear'd to me, with other spritely shows
Of mine own kindred. When I wak'd, I found
This label on my bosom, whose containing 430
Is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no collection of it. Let him show
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philarmonus!
Sooth. Here, my good lord.

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning. 434
[Sooth.] (Reads.) "Whenas a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embrac'd by a piece of tender air;
and when from a stately cedar shall be lopp'd branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate and flourish in peace and plenty." 442

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being leo-natus, doth import so much. 445
[To Cymbeline.] The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,

Which we call mollis aer; and mollis aer
We term it mulier; which mulier I divine
Is this most constant wife, who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle, 450
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about
With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.
Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee; and thy lopp'd branches point
Thy two sons forth; who, by Belarius stolen, 455
For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd,
To the majestic cedar join'd, whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well;
My peace we will begin. And, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Cæsar, 460

And to the Roman empire, promising
 To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
 We were dissuaded by our wicked queen;
 Whom heavens, in justice, both on her and
 hers,
 Have laid most heavy hand. 465

Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do
 tune

The harmony of this peace. The vision
 Which I made known to Lucius, ere the stroke
 Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
 Is full accomplish'd; for the Roman eagle, 470
 From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
 Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the sun
 So vanish'd; which foreshow'd our princely eagle,

The imperial Cæsar, should again unite
 His favour with the radiant Cymbeline, 475
 Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Laud we the gods;
 And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils

From our bless'd altars. Publish we this peace
 To all our subjects. Set we forward. Let
 A Roman and a British ensign wave 480 Friendly together. So through Lud's town march;

And in the temple of great Jupiter
 Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with feasts.
 Set on there! Never was a war did cease, Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace. [Exeunt. 485

THE WINTER'S TALE

THE later limit for the date of The Winter's Tale is fixed by an entry in Simon Forman's "Booke of Plaies," according to which he witnessed a performance of the drama at the Globe Theatre on May 15, 1611. An earlier limit is plausibly suggested by the theory that the dance of twelve satyrs in iv. iv. 331-352, three of whom had "danced before the king," was borrowed from the anti-masque in Jonson's Masque of Oberon, performed at court, January 1, 1611. The metrical and stylistic features, as well as the atmosphere and method of treatment, are quite in harmony with this late date, so that there is no reason for doubting that the play was written in the early part of 1611.

No quarto was published, nor is the title found in the Stationers' Register before 1623. The earliest edition is that in the First Folio, in which it is the last of the Comedies. On this, which is unusually accurate, the present text is based.

The source of the plot is Robert Greene's Pandosto: the Triumph of Time, later known as The History of Dorastus and Fawnia. This euphuistic romance, modelled on Lyly and Sidney, was printed in 1588, and was popular enough to run through fourteen editions. Several features of the story have been found both in fiction and in history, but no certain original of Greene's tale has been identified.

The most important change made by Shakespeare in the plot is in saving the life of Hermione, who, as Bellaria in Greene's tale, had died of grief over the death of her son. But a number of minor differences are worth noting. Bohemia and Sicily are interchanged, Greene's Pandosto (Leontes) being King of Bohemia, and Egistus (Polixenes) King of Sicily. Fawnia (Perdita) is put to sea in a cock-boat instead of being exposed on a desert shore. The proposal to consult the oracle comes from the queen in Greene, from Leontes in Shakespeare; yet Pandosto accepts the answer of the oracle at once, while Leontes denies its truth until brought to his senses by the death of his son and the swooning of Hermione. On the whole, the jealousy of Leontes is more perverse and fatuous in Shakespeare than in his source. The Clown is substituted by the dramatist for the shepherd's wife of the novel. The wooing of Fawnia is given at great length by Greene, and the situation is complicated by Egistus's wish to marry his son to a princess of Denmark. In his flight from his father's court, Dorastus (Florizel) has the assistance of a servant, Capnio, whom Shakespeare discards, but whose functions in the plot are divided between Camillo and Autolycus. When the prince arrives at the court of Pandosto, he conceals his identity, and is thrown into prison while the king makes love to Fawnia. This unpleasant incident of the courtship of the unrecognized daughter by her father Shakespeare omits, keeping Leontes faithful to the memory of Hermione. This, of course, makes possible the happy ending of the first plot, and renders unnecessary the depression and suicide of Pandosto with which Greene closes his narrative.

The device of bringing an apparent statue to life, which Shakespeare inserted into the story, is found not infrequently in earlier fiction; but neither that form of it which occurs in Lope de Vega's El Marmol de Felisardo, nor that in the play of The Trial of Chivalry (printed, 1605), is sufficiently close to be regarded as a source.

The characters of Antigonus, Paulina, Emilia, Mopsa, Dorcas, the Clown, and Autolycus are all of Shakespeare's invention. For the last, and for his song in iv. iii. 1 ff. hints may have been derived from Tom Beggar in Robert Wilson's Three Ladies of London (1584), though this does not seem to have been hitherto suggested.

But this enumeration of changes in detail fails to indicate the nature of the transformation wrought by Shakespeare on his material. The superb dignity of Hermione which almost lifts her above pity, the plain-spoken loyalty of Paulina, the peculiar poetic charm of the pastoral scenes of which Perdita is the centre, the humor of the rogue and the rustics, the elements, in short, which make the play delightful, are all Shakespeare's. To Greene belongs the credit of framing an interesting romantic story, the improbabilities and surprises of which Shakespeare seems to have taken no pains to abate, but which, on the contrary, he capped by devising a closing situation, theatrically effective, indeed, but more defiant of likelihood than anything in his source.

ACT I

SCENE I. [Sicilia. Ante-chamber in the palace of Leontes.]

Enter CAMILLO and ARCHIDAMUS.

Arch. If you shall chance, Camillo, to visit Bohemia on the like occasion whereon my services are now on foot, you shall see, as I have said, great difference betwixt our Bohemia and your Sicilia.

Cam. I think, this coming summer, the King of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the visitation which he justly owes him.

Arch. Wherein our entertainment shall shame us we will be justified in our loves; for indeed—

Cam. Beseech you,—

Arch. Verily, I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge. We cannot with such magnificence—in so rare—I know not what to say. We will give you sleepy drinks, that your senses, unintelligent of our insufficiency, may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

Cam. You pay a great deal too dear for what's given freely.

Arch. Believe me, I speak as my understanding instructs me and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

Cam. Sicilia cannot show himself over-kind to Bohemia. They were train'd together in their childhoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection, which cannot choose but branch now. Since their more mature dignities and royal necessities made separation of their society, their encounters, though not personal, hath been royally attorneyed with interchange of gifts, letters, loving embassies; that they have seem'd to be together, though absent; shook hands, as over a vast; and embrac'd, as it were, from the ends of opposed winds. The heavens continue their loves!

Arch. I think there is not in the world either malice or matter to alter it. You have an unspeakable comfort of your young prince Mamilius. It is a gentleman of the greatest promise that ever came into my note.

Cam. I very well agree with you in the hopes of him. It is a gallant child; one that indeed physics the subject, makes old hearts fresh. They that went on crutches ere he was born desire yet their life to see him a man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die?

Cam. Yes; if there were no other excuse why they should desire to live.

Arch. If the King had no son, they would desire to live on crutches till he had one.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. [A room of state in the same.]

Enter LEONTES, HERMIONE, MAMILLIUS, POLIXENES, CAMILLO [and Attendants].

Pol. Nine changes of the watery star hath been

The shepherd's note since we have left our throne

Without a burden; time as long again

Would be fill'd up, my brother, with our thanks,

And yet we should, for perpetuity,

Go hence in debt; and therefore, like a cipher,

Yet standing in rich place, I multiply

With one "We thank you" many thousands moe

That go before it.

Leon. Stay your thanks a while.

And pay them when you part.

Pol. Sir, that's to-morrow.

I am question'd by my fears, of what may chance 11

Or breed upon our absence; that may blow
No sneaping winds at home, to make us say,
"This is put forth too truly." Besides, I have stay'd

To tire your Royalty.

Leon. We are tougher, brother,
Than you can put us to 't.

Pol. No longer stay. 15

Leon. One seven-night longer.

Pol. Very sooth, to-morrow.

Leon. We'll part the time between 's then;
and in that

I'll no gainsaying.

Pol. Press me not, beseech you, so.
There is no tongue that moves, none, none i'
the world, 20

So soon as yours could win me. So it should
now,

Were there necessity in your request, although
'T were needful I deni'd it. My affairs

Do even drag me homeward; which to hinder
Were in your love a whip to me; my stay 25

To you a charge and trouble. To save both,
Farewell, our brother.

Leon. Tongue-tied our Queen? Speak you.
Her. I had thought, sir, to have held my peace until

You had drawn oaths from him not to stay.

You, sir,
Charge him too coldly. Tell him, you are sure 30

All in Bohemia's well; this satisfaction
The by-gone day proclaim'd. Say this to him,
He's beat from his best ward.

Leon. Well said, Hermione.

Her. To tell, he longs to see his son, were strong;

But let him say so then, and let him go; 35
But let him swear so, and he shall not stay;
We'll thwack him hence with distaffs.

Yet of your royal presence I'll adventure
The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia

You take my lord, I'll give him my commission 40

To let him there a month behind the gest
Prefix'd for 's parting; yet, good deed, Leontes,
I love thee not a jar o' the clock behind

What lady she her lord. You'll stay?

Pol. No, madam.

Her. Nay, but you will?

Pol. I may not, verily.

Her. Verily! 45

You put me off with limber vows; but I,
Though you would seek to unsphere the stars
with oaths,

Should yet say, "Sir, no going." Verily,

You shall not go; a lady's "Verily" 's 50

As potent as a lord's. Will you go yet?

Force me to keep you as a prisoner,

Not like a guest; so you shall pay your fees

When you depart, and save your thanks. How say you?

My prisoner or my guest? By your dread

"Verily," 55

One of them you shall be.

Pol. Your guest, then, madam.
To be your prisoner should import offending,
Which is for me less easy to commit
Than you to punish.

Her. Not your gaoler, then,
But your kind hostess. Come, I'll question
you 60

Of my lord's tricks and yours when you were boys.

You were pretty lordings then?

Pol. We were, fair Queen,
Two lads that thought there was no more behind

But such a day to-morrow as to-day,
And to be boy eternal.

Her. Was not my lord 65

The verier wag o' the two?

Pol. We were as twinn'd lambs that did frisk i' the sun,

And bleat the one at the other. What we chang'd

Was innocence for innocence; we knew not
The doctrine of ill-doing, no, nor dream'd 70

That any did. Had we pursu'd that life,
And our weak spirits ne'er been higher rear'd

With stronger blood, we should have answer'd
Heaven

Boldly, "Not guilty"; the imposition clear'd Hereditary ours.

Her. By this we gather 75

You have tripp'd since.

Pol. O my most sacred lady!

Temptations have since then been born to 's;
for

In those unfledg'd days was my wife a girl;
Your precious self had then not cross'd the eyes
Of my young play-fellow.

Her. Grace to boot! 80

Of this make no conclusion, lest you say
Your Queen and I are devils. Yet go on;

The offences we have made you do we'll answer,

If you first sinn'd with us, and that with us
You did continue fault, and that you slipp'd 85

With any but with us.

Leon. Is he won yet?

Her. He'll stay, my lord.

Leon. At my request he would not.
Hermione, my dearest, thou never spok'st
To better purpose.

Her. Never?

Leon. Never, but once.
Her. What! have I twice said well? When was 't before? 90

I prithee tell me; cram's with praise, and make's

As fat as tame things. One good deed dying tongueless

Slaughters a thousand waiting upon that.
Our praises are our wages; you may ride 's

With one soft kiss a thousand furlongs ere 95

With spur we heat an acre. But to the goal:
My last good deed was to entreat his stay;

What was my first? It has an elder sister,
Or I mistake you. O, would her name were Grace!

But once before I spoke to the purpose;
when? 100

Nay, let me have 't; I long.

Leon. Why, that was when Three crabbed months had sour'd themselves to death,

Ere I could make thee open thy white hand
And clasp thyself my love; then didst thou utter,

"I am yours for ever."

Her. 'T is grace indeed. 105
Why, lo you now, I have spoke to the purpose twice:

The one for ever earn'd a royal husband;
The other for some while a friend.

[Gives her hand to Polixenes.]

Leon. [Aside.] Too hot, too hot!
To mingle friendship far is mingling bloods.

I have tremor cordis on me; my heart dances, 110

But not for joy; not joy. This entertainment
May a free face put on, derive a liberty
From heartiness, from bounty, fertile bosom,
And well become the agent; 't may, I grant;
But to be paddling palms and pinching fingers, 115

As now they are, and making practis'd smiles,
As in a looking-glass; and then to sigh, as 't were

The mort o' the deer;—O, that is entertainment

My bosom likes not, nor my brows! Mamillius,
Art thou my boy?

Mam. Ay, my good lord.

Leon. I fecks!
Why, that's my bawcock. What, hast smutch'd thy nose? 121

They say it is a copy out of mine. Come, captain,

We must be neat; not neat, but cleanly, captain:

And yet the steer, the heifer, and the calf
Are all call'd neat.—Still virginaling 125
Upon his palm!—How now, you wanton calf!
Art thou my calf?

Mam. Yes, if you will, my lord.

Leon. Thou want'st a rough pash and the shoots that I have,

To be full like me; yet they say we are Almost as like as eggs; women say so, 130

That will say anything. But were they false
As o'er-dy'd blacks, as wind, as waters, false
As dice are to be wish'd by one that fixes
No bourn 'twixt his and mine, yet were it true
To say this boy were like me. Come, sir page, 135 Look on me with your welkin eye. Sweet villain!

Most dear'st! my collop! Can thy dam?—
may 't be?—

Affection! thy intention stabs the centre.
Thou dost make possible things not so held, Communicat'st with dreams;—how can this
be?— 140

With what's unreal thou coactive art,
And fellow'st nothing. Then 't is very credent Thou mayst co-join with something; and thou dost,

And that beyond commission, and I find it,
And that to the infection of my brains 145
And hardening of my brows.

Pol. What means Sicilia?

Her. He something seems unsettled.

Pol. How, my lord!

Leon. What cheer? How is 't with you, best brother?

Her. You look
As if you held a brow of much distraction.

Are you mov'd, my lord?

Leon. No, in good earnest.
How sometimes nature will betray its folly, 151

Its tenderness, and make itself a pastime
To harder bosoms! Looking on the lines
Of my boy's face, methoughts I did recoil Twenty-three years, and saw myself un-breec'h'd 155

In my green velvet coat, my dagger muzzl'd,
Lest it should bite its master, and so prove,
As ornaments oft do, too dangerous.

How like, methought, I then was to this kernel,
This squash, this gentleman. Mine honest
friend, 160

Will you take eggs for money?

Mam. No, my lord, I'll fight.

Leon. You will! Why, happy man be 's dole! My brother,

Are you so fond of your young prince as we Do seem to be of ours?

Pol. If at home, sir, 165

He's all my exercise, my mirth, my matter,
Now my sworn friend and then mine enemy,
My parasite, my soldier, statesman, all.
He makes a July's day short as December,
And with his varying childness cures in me 170
Thoughts that would thicken my blood.

Leon. So stands this squire
Offic'd with me. We two will walk, my lord,
And leave you to your graver steps. Hermione,
How thou lov'st us, show in our brother's welcome;

Let what is dear in Sicily be cheap. 175

Next to thyself and my young rover, he's Apparent to my heart.

Her. If you would seek us,
We are yours i' the garden. Shall 's attend you
there?

Leon. To your own bents dispose you; you'll be found,

Be you beneath the sky. [Aside.] I am angling
now, 180

Though you perceive me not how I give line.
Go to, go to!

How she holds up the neb, the bill to him!

And arms her with the boldness of a wife
To her allowing husband!

[Exeunt Polixenes, Hermione, and attendants.]

Gone already! 185
Inch-thick, knee-deep, o'er head and ears a fork'd one!

Go, play, boy, play. Thy mother plays, and I
Play too, but so disgrac'd a part, whose issue
Will hiss me to my grave; contempt and clamour
Will be my knell. Go, play, boy, play. There have been, 190

Or I am much deceiv'd, cuckolds ere now ;
And many a man there is, even at this present,
Now while I speak this, holds his wife by the ^{arm,}

That little thinks she has been sluic'd in 's absence

And his pond fish'd by his next neighbour,
^{by}

Sir Smile, his neighbour. Nay, there 's comfort in 't

Whiles other men have gates, and those gates open'd,

As mine, against their will. Should all despair
That have revolted wives, the tenth of mankind

Would hang themselves. Physic for 't there is none. 200

It is a bawdy planet, that will strike
Where 't is predominant ; and 't is powerful,
think it,

From east, west, north, and south. Be it concluded,

No barricado for a belly ; know 't ;
It will let in and out the enemy 205

With bag and baggage. Many thousand on 's Have the disease, and feel 't not. How now, boy !

Mam. I am like you, they say.

Leon. Why, that 's some comfort.
What, Camillo there ?

Cam. Ay, my good lord. 210

Leon. Go play, Mamillius ; thou 'rt an honest man. [Exeunt Mamillius.]

Camillo, this great sir will yet stay longer.

Cam. You had much ado to make his anchor hold.

When you cast out, it still came home.

Leon. Didst note it ?

Cam. He would not stay at your petitions ;
made 215

His business more material.

Leon. Didst perceive it ?
[Aside.] They 're here with me already, whispering, rounding,

" Sicilia is a so-forth," 'T is far gone,
When I shall gust it last. How came 't, Camillo,

That he did stay ?

Cam. At the good Queen's entreaty.

Leon. At the Queen's be 't ; " good " should be pertinent ; 221

But, so it is, it is not. Was this taken
By any understanding pate but thine ?

For thy conceit is soaking, — will draw in More than the common blocks. Not noted, is 't, 225

But of the finer natures ? By some severals
Of head-piece extraordinary ? Lower messes

Perchance are to this business purblind ? Say.

Cam. Business, my lord ! I think most understand

Bohemia stays here longer.

Leon. Ha !

Cam. Stays here longer. 231

Leon. Ay, but why ?

Cam. To satisfy your Highness and the entreaties

Of our most gracious mistress.

Leon.

Satisfy !

The entreaties of your mistress ! Satisfy !

Let that suffice. I have trusted thee, Camillo, 235

With all the nearest things to my heart, as well
My chamber-councils, wherein, priest-like,
thou

Hast cleans'd my bosom, I from thee departed
Thy penitent reform'd ; but we have been

Deceiv'd in thy integrity, deceiv'd 240
In that which seems so.

Cam.

Be it forbid, my lord !

Leon. To bide upon 't, thou art not honest, or,

If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a coward,
Which boxes honesty behind, restraining

From course requir'd ; or else thou must be counted 245

A servant grafted in my serious trust

And therein negligent ; or else a fool

That seest a game play'd home, the rich stake drawn.

And tak'st it all for jest.

Cam.

My gracious lord,

I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful ; 250
In every one of these no man is free

But that his negligence, his folly, fear,
Among the infinite doings of the world,

Sometime puts forth. In your affairs, my lord,
If ever I were wilful-negligent, 255

It was my folly ; if industriously

I play'd the fool, it was my negligence,

Not weighing well the end ; if ever fearful

To do a thing, where I the issue doubted,
Whereof the execution did cry out 260

Against the non-performance, 't was a fear
Which oft infects the wisest : these, my lord,

Are such allow'd infirmities that honesty
Is never free of. But, beseech your Grace,

Be plainer with me ; let me know my trespass 265

By its own visage. If I then deny it,

'T is none of mine.

Leon.

Ha ! not you seen, Camillo, —
But that 's past doubt, you have, or your eye-glass

Is thicker than a cuckold's horn, — or heard, —
For to a vision so apparent rumour 270

Cannot be mute, — or thought, — for cogitation

Resides not in that man that does not think, —
My wife is slippery ? If thou wilt confess,

Or else be impudently negative,
To have nor eyes nor ears nor thought, then

say 275

My wife 's a hobby-horse, — deserves a name
As rank as any flax-wench that puts to

Before her troth-plight : say 't and justify 't.

Cam. I would not be a stander-by to hear
My sovereign mistress clouded so, without 280

My present vengeance taken. Shrew my heart,
You never spoke what did become you less

Than this ; which to reiterate were sin

As deep as that, though true.

Leon.

Is whispering nothing ?

Is leaning cheek to cheek ? Is meeting noses ?
Kissing with inside lip ? stopping the career 285

Of laughter with a sigh? — a note infallible
Of breaking honesty; — horsing foot on foot?
Skulking in corners? wishing-clocks more swift?

Hours, minutes? noon, midnight? and all eyes
Blind with the pin-and-web but theirs, theirs only, 291

That would unseen be wicked? Is this nothing?

Why, then the world and all that's in 't is
nothing;

The covering sky is nothing; Bohemia nothing;
My wife is nothing; nor nothing have these nothings, 295

If this be nothing.

Cam. Good my lord, be cur'd
Of this disease'd opinion; and betimes;
For 't is most dangerous.

Leon. Say it be, 't is true.

Cam. No, no, my lord.

Leon. It is; you lie, you lie!

I say thou liest, Camillo, and I hate thee, 300
Pronounce thee a gross lout, a mindless slave,
Or else a hovering temporizer, that
Canst with thine eyes at once see good and evil,
Inclining to them both. Were my wife's liver
Infected as her life, she would not live 305
The running of one glass.

Cam. Who does infect her?
Leon. Why, he that wears her like her medal, hanging

About his neck, Bohemia; who, if I
Had servants true about me, that bare eyes
To see alike mine honour as their profits, 310
Their own particular thrifts, they would do
that

Which should undo more doing; ay, and thou,
His cup-bearer, — whom I from meaner form Have bench'd and rear'd to worship, who mayst see

Plainly as heaven sees earth and earth sees
heaven, 315

How I am gall'd, — mightst bespice a cup,
To give mine enemy a lasting wink;
Which draught to me were cordial.

Cam. Sir, my lord,
I could do this, and that with no rash potion,
But with a lingering dram that should not work 320

Maliciously like poison; but I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dread mistress,
So sovereignly being honourable.
I have lov'd thee, —

Leon. Make that thy question, and go rot!
Dost think I am so muddy, so unsettled, 325
To appoint myself in this vexation, sully
The purity and whiteness of my sheets,
Which to preserve is sleep, which being spotted
Is goads, thorns, nettles, tails of wasps,
Give scandal to the blood o' the Prince my son,
Who I do think is mine and love as mine, 331
Without ripe moving to 't? Would I do this?
Could man so blench?

Cam. I must believe you, sir;
I do; and will fetch off Bohemia for 't;
Provided that, when he's removed, your High-
ness 335

Will take again your queen as yours at first,
Even for your son's sake; and thereby for-sealing

The injury of tongues in courts and kingdoms
Known and allied to yours.

Leon. Thou dost advise me
Even so as I mine own course have set down.
I'll give no blemish to her honour, none. 341

Cam. My lord,
Go then; and with a countenance as clear
As friendship wears at feasts, keep with Bohemia

And with your queen. I am his cupbearer: 345
If from me he have wholesome beverage,
Account me not your servant.

Leon. This is all.
Do 't and thou hast the one half of my heart;
Do 't not, thou split'st thine own.

Cam. I'll do 't, my lord.

Leon. I will seem friendly, as thou hast advis'd me. [Exit. 350

Cam. O miserable lady! But, for me,
What case stand I in? I must be the poisoner
Of good Polixenes; and my ground to do 't
Is the obedience to a master, one
Who in rebellion with himself will have 355
All that are his so too. To do this deed, Promotion follows. If I could find example
Of thousands that had struck anointed kings
And flourish'd after, I'd not do 't; but since Nor brass nor stone nor parchment bears not
one, 360

Let villainy itself forswear 't. I must Forsake the court. To do 't, or no, is certain
To me a break-neck. Happy star reign now!
Here comes Bohemia.

Re-enter POLIXENES.

Pol. This is strange; methinks
My favour here begins to warp. Not speak! 365
Good day, Camillo.

Cam. Hail, most royal sir!

Pol. What is the news i' the court?

Cam. None rare, my lord.

Pol. The King hath on him such a countenance

As he had lost some province and a region
Lov'd as he loves himself. Even now I met
him 370

With customary compliment; when he,
Waiting his eyes to the contrary and falling
A lip of much contempt, speeds from me, and
So leaves me to consider what is breeding
That changeth thus his manners. 375

Cam. I dare not know, my lord.

Pol. How! dare not! Do not. Do you know, and dare not?

Be intelligent to me: 't is thereabouts;
For, to yourself, what you do know, you must,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good Camillo,
Your chang'd complexions are to me a mirror
Which shows me mine chang'd too; for I must be 385

A party in this alteration, finding Myself thus alter'd with 't.

Cam. There is a sickness
Which puts some of us in distemper, but 390

I cannot name the disease; and it is caught
Of you that yet are well.

Pol. How! caught of me!
Make me not sighted like the basilisk.
I have look'd on thousands, who have sped the better

By my regard, but kill'd none so. Camillo,—
As you are certainly a gentleman, thereto 391
Clerk-like experienc'd, which no less adorns
Our gentry than our parents' noble names,
In whose success we are gentle,—I beseech you,
If you know aught which does behove my knowledge 395

Thereof to be inform'd, imprison 't not
In ignorant concealment.

Cam. I may not answer.

Pol. A sickness caught of me, and yet I
well!

I must be answer'd. Dost thou hear, Camillo?
I conjure thee, by all the parts of man 400
Which honour does acknowledge, whereof the least

Is not this suit of mine, that thou declare
That incidence thou dost guess of harm
Is creeping toward me; how far off, how near;
Which way to be prevented, if to be; 405
If not, how best to bear it.

Cam. Sir, I will tell you,
Since I am charg'd in honour and by him
That I think honourable; therefore mark my counsel,

Which must be even as swiftly follow'd as I mean to utter it, or both yourself and me 410
Cry lost, and so good night!

Pol. On, good Camillo.

Cam. I am appointed him to murder you.

Pol. By whom, Camillo?

Cam. By the King.

Pol. For what?

Cam. He thinks, nay, with all confidence he swears,

As he had seen 't or been an instrument 415
To vice you to 't, that you have touch'd his queen

Forbiddenly.

Pol. O, then my best blood turn
To an infected jelly, and my name
Be yok'd with his that did betray the Best!
Turn then my freshest reputation to 420
A savour that may strike the dullest nostril
Where I arrive, and my approach be shunn'd, Nay, hated too, worse than the great'st infection

That e'er was heard or read!

Cam. Swear his thought over
By each particular star in heaven and 425
By all their influences, you may as well
Forbid the sea for to obey the moon
As or by oath remove or counsel shake
The fabric of his folly, whose foundation
Is pil'd upon his faith and will continue 430
The standing of his body.

Pol. How should this grow?

Cam. I know not; but I am sure 'tis safer to

Avoid what's grown than question how 'tis
born.

If therefore you dare trust my honesty,
That lies enclosed in this trunk which you 435
Shall bear along impawn'd, away to-night!
Your followers I will whisper to the business,
And will by twos and threes at several posterns Clear them o' the city. For myself, I'll put My fortunes to your service, which are here 440
By this discovery lost. Be not uncertain;
For, by the honour of my parents, I Have utt'rd truth, which if you seek to prove,

I dare not stand by; nor shall you be safer
Than one condemn'd by the King's own mouth, thereon 445

His execution sworn.

Pol. I do believe thee;
I saw his heart in 's face. Give me thy hand.
Be pilot to me, and thy places shall Still neighbour mine. My ships are ready and
My people did expect my hence departure 450
Two days ago. This jealousy
Is for a precious creature. As she's rare,
Must it be great; and as his person's mighty,
Must it be violent; and as he does conceive
He is dishonour'd by a man which ever 455
Profess'd to him, why, his revenges must
In that be made more bitter. Fear o'ershades
me.

Good expedition be my friend, and comfort
The gracious queen;—part of his theme, but nothing

Of his ill-ta'en suspicion! Come, Camillo; 460
I will respect thee as a father if Thou bear'st my life off hence. Let us avoid.

Cam. It is in mine authority to command
The keys of all the posterns. Please your Highness

To take the urgent hour. Come, sir, away. 465
[Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I. [Sicilia. A room in the palace.]

Enter HERMIONE, MAMILLIUS, and LADIES.

Her. Take the boy to you; he so troubles
me,

'T is past enduring.

[Lady. Come, my gracious lord,
Shall I be your playfellow?

Mam. No, I'll none of you.

[Lady. Why, my sweet lord?

Mam. You'll kiss me hard and speak to me as if 5

I were a baby still. — I love you better.

Lady. And why so, my lord?

Mam. Not for because Your brows are blacker; yet black brows, they say,

Become some women best, so that there be not Too much hair there, but in a semicircle, 10
Or a half-moon made with a pen.

Lady. Who taught this?

Mam. I learnt it out of women's faces. Pray
now

What colour are your eyebrows?

[Lady. Blue, my lord

Mam. Nay, that's a mock. I have seen a lady's nose

That has been blue, but not her eyebrows.

[Lady. Hark ye; The Queen your mother rounds apace. We shall Present our services to a fine new prince

One of these days; and then you'd wanton
with us,

If we would have you.

2. Lady. She is spread of late Into a goodly bulk. Good time encounter
her!

Her. What wisdom stirs amongst you?
Come, sir, now
I am for you again. Pray you, sit by us,
And tell's a tale.

Mam. Merry or sad shall't be?

Her. As merry as you will.

Mam. A sad tale's best for winter. I have
one
Of sprites and goblins.

Her. Let's have that, good sir.
Come on, sit down; come on, and do your best

To fright me with your sprites; you're powerful at it.

Mam. There was a man—

Her. Nay, come, sit down; then on.
Mam. Dwelt by a churchyard. I will tell it softly;

Yond crickets shall not hear it.

Her. Come on, then,
And give't me in mine ear.

[Enter LEONTES, with ANTONIGUS, LORDS, and others.]

Leon. Was he met there? his train? Camillo with him?

[1. Lord. Behind the tuft of pines I met them; never Saw I men scour so on their way. I eyed

Them even to their ships.

Leon. How blest am I
In my just censure, in my true opinion!
Alack, for lesser knowledge! How accurs'd
In being so blest! There may be in the cup
A spider steep'd, and one may drink, depart,
And yet partake no venom, for his knowledge
Is not infected; but if one present

The abhorr'd ingredient to his eye, make known

How he hath drunk, he cracks his gorge, his sides,

With violent hefts. I have drunk, and seen the spider.

Camillo was his help in this, his pander.
There is a plot against my life, my crown.

All's true that is mistrusted. That false
villain

Whom I employ'd was pre-employ'd by him.
He has discover'd my design, and I

Remain a pinch'd thing; yea, a very trick
For them to play at will. How came the posterns

So easily open?

[1. Lord. By his great authority;

Which often hath no less prevail'd than so
On your command.

Leon. I know't too well.
Give me the boy. I am glad you did not nurse
him.

Though he does bear some signs of me, yet you
Have too much blood in him.

Her. What is this? Sport?

Leon. Bear the boy hence; he shall not come about her.

Away with him! and let her sport herself
With that she's big with; for 'tis Polixenes
Has made thee swell thus.

Her. But I'd say he had not,
And I'll be sworn you would believe my saying,
How'er you lean to the wayward.

Leon. You, my lords,
Look on her, mark her well; be but about
To say she is a goodly lady, and

The justice of your hearts will thereto add
'Tis pity she's not honest, honourable.

Praise her but for this her without-door form,
Which on my faith deserves high speech, and
straight

The shrug, the hum or ha, these petty brands
That calumny doth use—O, I am out—
That mercy does, for calumny will sear Virtue itself; these shrugs, these hums and has,

When you have said she's goodly, come between

Ere you can say she's honest: but be't known,
From him that has most cause to grieve it should be,

She's an adulteress.

Her. Should a villain say so,
The most replenish'd villain in the world,
He were as much more villain: you, my lord, so
Do but mistake.

Leon. You have mistook, my lady,
Polixenes for Leontes. O thou thing!

Which I'll not call a creature of thy place,
Lest barbarism, making me the precedent,

Should a like language use to all degrees,
And mannerly distinction leave out

Betwixt the prince and beggar, I have said
She's an adulteress; I have said with whom;

More, she's a traitor, and Camillo is
A fedary with her, and one that knows

What she should shame to know herself
But with her most vile principal, that she's

A bed-swarver, even as bad as those
That vulgar give bold't titles; ay, and privy
To this their late escape.

Her. No, by my life,

Privy to none of this. How will this grieve you,
When you shall come to clearer knowledge,

that
You thus have publish'd me! Gentle, my lord,
You scarce can right me thoroughly then to say

You did mistake.

Leon. No; if I mistake
In those foundations which I build upon,

The centre is not big enough to bear
A school-boy's top. Away with her, to prison!

He who shall speak for her is afar off guilty.
But that he speaks,

Her. ... There's some ill planet reigns ;
I must be patient till the heavens look 106
With an aspect more favourable. Good my lords,
I am not prone to weeping, as our sex
Commonly are, the want of which vain dew
Perchance shall dry your pities ; but I have 110
That honourable grief lodg'd here which burns Worse than tears down. Beseech you all, my lords,
With thoughts so qualified as your charities
Shall best instruct you, measure me ; and so
The King's will be perform'd !

Leon. ... Shall I be heard ?
Her. Who is 't that goes with me ? Beseech
your Highness, 116

My women may be with me ; for you see
My plight requires it. Do not weep, good
fools ;
There is no cause. When you shall know your mistress

Has deserv'd prison, then abound in tears 120
As I come out ; this action I now go on
Is for my better grace. Adieu, my lord.
I never wish'd to see you sorry ; now
I trust I shall. My women, come ; you have
leave.

Leon. Go, do our bidding ; hence ! 125
[Exit Queen guarded, with Ladies.]
[1.] Lord. Beseech your Highness, call the Queen again.

Ant. Be certain what you do, sir, lest your justice
Prove violence ; in the which three great ones suffer,
Yourself, your queen, your son.

[1.] Lord. ... For her, my lord,
I dare my life lay down and will do 't, sir, 130
Please you to accept it, that the Queen is spotless

I' the eyes of Heaven and to you ; I mean,
In this which you accuse her.

Ant. ... If it prove She's otherwise, I'll keep my stables where
I lodge my wife ; I'll go in couples with her ; 135
Than when I feel and see her no farther trust
her ;

For every inch of woman in the world,
Ay, every dram of woman's flesh is false,
If she be.

Leon. ... Hold your peaces.

[1.] Lord. ... Good my lord, —
Ant. It is for you we speak, not for ourselves. 140

You are abus'd, and by some putter-on
That will be damn'd for 't ; would I knew the
villain,

I would land-damn him. Be she honour-flaw'd,
I have three daughters ; the eldest is eleven ;
The second and the third, nine, and some five ;
If this prove true, they'll pay for 't. By mine
honour, 146

I'll geld 'em all ; fourteen they shall not see
To bring false generations. They are co-heirs ;
And I had rather glib myself than they Should not produce fair issue.

Leon. ... Cease ; no more.

You smell this business with a sense as cold 151
As is a dead man's nose ; but I do see 't and feel 't.

As you feel doing thus ; and see withal
The instruments that feel.

Ant. ... If it be so,
We need no grave to bury honesty. 155
There's not a grain of it the face to sweeten
Of the whole dungy earth.

Leon. ... What ! lack I credit ?
[1.] Lord. I had rather you did lack than I,
my lord,
Upon this ground ; and more it would content
me

To have her honour true than your suspicion, 160
Be blam'd for 't how you might.

Leon. ... Why, what need we Commune with you of this, but rather follow
Our forceful instigation ? Our prerogative Calls not your counsels, but our natural goodness

Imparts this ; which if you, or stupefied 165
Or seeming so in skill, cannot or will not Relish a truth like us, inform yourselves
We need no more of your advice. The matter,
The loss, the gain, the ord'ring on 't, is all Properly ours.

Ant. ... And I wish, my liege, 170
You had only in your silent judgement tried
it,

Without more overtur.

Leon. ... How could that be ?
Either thou art most ignorant by age,
Or thou wert born a fool. Camillo's flight,
Added to their familiarity, 175
Which was as gross as ever touch'd conjecture,

That lack'd sight only, nought for approbation

But only seeing, all other circumstances
Made up to the deed, doth push on this proceeding.

Yet, for a greater confirmation, 180
For in an act of this importance 't were Most piteous to be wild, I have dispatch'd in post

To sacred Delphos, to Apollo's temple,
Cleomenes and Dion, whom you know
Of stuff'd sufficiency. Now from the oracle 185
They will bring all ; whose spiritual counsel
had,

I shall stop or spur me. Have I done well ?

[1.] Lord. Well done, my lord.

Leon. Though I am satisf'd and need no
more

Than what I know, yet shall the oracle 190
Give rest to the minds of others, such as he Whose ignorant credulity will not Come up to the truth. So have we thought it good

From our free person she should be confin'd,
Lest that the treachery of the two fled hence 195
Be left her to perform. Come, follow us ;
We are to speak in public, for this business
Will raise us all.

Ant. [Aside.] To laughter, as I take it,
If the good truth were known. [Exeunt. 200

SCENE II. [Outer ward of a prison.]

Enter PAULINA, a Gentleman, and Attendants.

Paul. The keeper of the prison, call to him;
Let him have knowledge who I am.

[Exit Gent.]
Good lady,

No court in Europe is too good for thee;
What dost thou then in prison?

[Re-enter Gentleman, with the GAOLER.]

Now, good sir,

You know me, do you not?

Gaol. For a worthy lady, ⁵
And one who much I honour.

Paul. Pray you then,
Conduct me to the Queen.

Gaol. I may not, madam.
To the contrary I have express commandment.

Paul. Here's ado,
To lock up honesty and honour from ¹⁰
The access of gentle visitors! Is't lawful, pray
you,

To see her women? Any of them? Emilia?

Gaol. So please you, madam,
To put apart these your attendants, I Shall bring Emilia forth.

Paul. I pray now, call her.
Withdraw yourselves.

[Exeunt Gentleman and attendants.]

Gaol. And, madam, ¹⁵
I must be present at your conference.

Paul. Well, be't so, prithee. [Exit Gaoler.]
Here's such ado to make no stain a stain
As passes colouring.

[Re-enter GAOLER, with EMILIA.]

Dear gentlewoman, ²⁰

How fares our gracious lady?

Emil. As well as one so great and so forlorn

May hold together. On her frights and griefs,
Which never tender lady hath borne greater,
She is something before her time deliver'd. ²⁵

Paul. A boy?

Emil. A daughter, and a goodly babe,
Lusty and like to live. The Queen receives Much comfort in't; says, "My poor prisoner,
I am innocent as you."

Paul. I dare be sworn.
These dangerous unsafe lures i' the King, beshrew them! ³⁰

He must be told on't, and he shall. The office
Becomes a woman best; I'll take't upon me.
If I prove honey-mouth'd, let my tongue blister
And never to my red-look'd anger be

The trumpet any more. Pray you, Emilia, ³⁵
Commend my best obedience to the Queen.

If she dares trust me with her little babe,
I'll show't the King and undertake to be
Her advocate to the loud'st. We do not know
How he may soften at the sight o' the child. ⁴⁰
The silence often of pure innocence
Persuades when speaking fails.

Emil. Most worthy madam,
Your honour and your goodness is so evident
That your free undertaking cannot miss

A thriving issue. There is no lady living ⁴⁵
So meet for this great errand. Please your lady-
ship

To visit the next room, I'll presently
Acquaint the Queen of your most noble offer;
Who but to-day hammer'd of this design,
But durst not tempt a minister of honour, ⁵⁰
Lest she should be deni'd.

Paul. Tell her, Emilia,
I'll use that tongue I have. If wit flow from't
As boldness from my bosom, let't not be doubted
I shall do good.

Emil. Now be you blest for it!
I'll to the Queen. Please you, come something nearer. ⁵⁵

Gaol. Madam, if't please the Queen to send the babe,
I know not what I shall incur to pass it,
Having no warrant.

Paul. You need not fear it, sir.
This child was prisoner to the womb and is
By law and process of great Nature thence ⁶⁰
Freed and enfranchis'd, not a party to
The anger of the King nor guilty of,
If any be, the trespass of the Queen.

Gaol. I do believe it.

Paul. Do not you fear. Upon mine honour, I
Will stand betwixt you and danger. [Exeunt. ⁶⁵

SCENE III. [A room in Leontes' palace.]

Enter LEONTES, ANTIGONUS, LORDS, and SER-VANTS.

Leon. Nor night nor day no rest. It is but weakness
To bear the matter thus; mere weakness. If The cause were not in being,—part o' the cause,

She the adulteress; for the harlot king
Is quite beyond mine arm, out of the blank ⁵
And level of my brain, plot-proof; but she
I can hook to me: say that she were gone,
Given to the fire, a moiety of my rest
Might come to me again. Who's there?

[I.] Serv. My lord?

Leon. How does the boy?

[I.] Serv. He took good rest to-night;
'T is hop'd his sickness is discharg'd. ¹¹

Leon. To see his nobleness!
Conceiving the dishonour of his mother,
He straight declin'd, droop'd, took it deeply,
Fasten'd and fix'd the shame on't in himself,
Threw off his spirit, his appetite, his sleep, ¹⁵
And downright languish'd. Leave me solely;
go,

See how he fares. [Exit Serv.] Fie, fie! no thought of him;

The very thought of my revenges that way
Recoil upon me: in himself too mighty, ²⁰
And in his parties, his alliance. Let him be Until a time may serve; for present vengeance,
Take it on her. Camillo and Polixenes
Laugh at me, make their pastime at my sorrow.
They should not laugh if I could reach them,

III

Shall she within my power. ²⁵

Enter PAULINA [with a babe].

[1.] Lord. You must not enter.

Paul. Nay, rather, good my lords, be second to me.

Fear you his tyrannous passion more, alas,
Than the Queen's life? A gracious innocent
soul,

More free than he is jealous.

Ant. That's enough.

[2.] Serv. Madam, he hath not slept to-night;
commanded

None should come at him.

Paul. Not so hot, good sir;

I come to bring him sleep. 'Tis such as you,

That creep like shadows by him and do sigh

At each his needless heavings, such as you

Nourish the cause of his awaking. I

Do come with words as medicinal as true,

Honest as either, to purge him of that humour

That presses him from sleep.

Leon. What noise there, ho?

Paul. No noise, my lord; but needful conference

About some gossips for your Highness.

Leon. How!

Away with that audacious lady! Antigonus,

I charg'd thee that she should not come about
me:

I knew she would.

Ant. I told her so, my lord,

On your displeasure's peril and on mine,

She should not visit you.

Leon. What, canst not rule her?

Paul. From all dishonesty he can. In this,

Unless he take the course that you have done,

Commit me for committing honour, trust it,

He shall not rule me.

Ant. La you now, you hear.

When she will take the rein I let her run;

But she'll not stumble.

Paul. Good my liege, I come;

And, I beseech you, hear me, who professes

Myself your loyal servant, your physician,

Your most obedient counsellor, yet that dares

Less appear so in comforting your evils,

Than such as most seem yours. I say, I come

From your good queen.

Leon. Good queen!

Paul. Good queen, my lord,

Good queen; I say good queen;

And would by combat make her good, so were I

A man, the worst about you.

Leon. Force her hence.

Paul. Let him that makes but trifles of his
eyes

First hand me. On mine own accord I'll off,

But first I'll do my errand. The good queen,

For she is good, hath brought you forth a

daughter;

Here 't is; commends it to your blessing.

[Laying down the child.]

Leon. Out!

A mankind witch! Hence with her, out o'

door!

A most intelligencing bawd!

Paul. Not so.

I am as ignorant in that as you
In so entitling me, and no less honest

Than you are mad; which is enough, I'll warrant,

As this world goes, to pass for honest.

Leon. Traitors!

Will you not push her out? Give her the bastard.

Thou dotard! thou art woman-tir'd, unroosted

By thy dame Partlet here. Take up the bastard;

Take 't up, I say; give 't to thy crone.

Paul. For ever

Unvenerable be thy hands, if thou

Tak'st up the Princess by that forced baseness

Which he has put upon 't!

Leon. He dreads his wife.

Paul. So I would you did; then 't were past

all doubt

You'd call your children yours.

Leon. A nest of traitors!

Ant. I am none, by this good light.

Paul. Nor I, nor any

But one that's here, and that's himself; for

he

The sacred honour of himself, his queen's,

His hopeful son's, his babe's, betrays to slander,

Whose sting is sharper than the sword's, and will not —

For, as the case now stands, it is a curse

He cannot be compell'd to 't — once remove

The root of his opinion, which is rotten

As ever oak or stone was sound.

Leon. A callat

Of boundless tongue, who late hath beat her husband

And now baits me! This brat is none of mine;

It is the issue of Polixenes.

Hence with it, and together with the dam

Commit them to the fire!

Paul. It is yours;

And, might we lay the old proverb to your charge,

So like you, 't is the worse. Behold, my lords,

Although the print be little, the whole matter

And copy of the father, eye, nose, lip,

The trick of 's frown, his forehead, nay, the
